some years later by Rhys ab Meredydd, who was at last captured and executed as a traitor. During the more serious revolt under Owain Glyndwr, the French forces sent to aid him took the castle of Carmarthen.—Carmarthenshire, like the rest of Wales, is almost entirely mountainous. The more level tracts are in the S. and W. parts of the county, where extensive salt marshes exist along the coast, which forms the N. side of Carmarthen Bay. In the N. is an irregular line of hills curving in a direction parallel with the course of the river Teify, the valley of which it separates from that of the Cothy, a branch of the Towy. The highest point in this range is 1168 feet above the level of the sea, and is near New Inn. A shorter range of hills parts the Towy from its chief tributary, the Cothy. The loftiest summit in the county is that called the Carmarthenshire Beacon (Y Van, or Ban Sir Gaer), which has an elevation of 2,596 feet. It forms the principal hill in the chain of the Black Mountains. There are several isolated mountains in the county, among which are Talsarn and Trecastle, which nearly equal in height the Beacon. Much of the scenery in Carmarthenshire is bleak and uninteresting, but along the river courses, and especially that of the Towy, many rich and beautiful landscapes are presented.—The Towy is the chief river of Carmarthenshire. It takes its rise in Cardiganshire and Brecknockshire, and entering this county near the N.E. corner, runs southward to Llandovery and Llandeilovawr. Near Grongar Hill, 3 miles below the latter place, it takes a westerly course to Carmarthen, and thence runs southward, about 8 miles, to Carmarthen Bay. Its entire length is about 65 miles. It receives the waters of numerous tributaries, of which the most important is the Cothy. This stream also rises in Cardiganshire, and runs across the county in a southerly direction, about 25 miles, joining the Towy between Carmarthen and Llandeilovawr. Other feeders of the Towy are the Braen, which falls into it near Llandovery; the Sawddwy, near Llangadock; and the Gwili, near Abergwili. The Teify flows along the north-western border of the county, separating it from Cardiganshire, but does not enter the county. The Tave, which takes its rise in Pembrokeshire, crosses Carmarthenshire from N. to S., passing St. Clare and Laugharne, where it falls into the bay, after a course of nearly 30 miles. The Cowyn joins the Tave at St. Clare, and from that village it becomes navigable. Other small rivers are the Gwendraeth and the Loughor, the latter of which rises in the Black Mountains, divides the counties of Glamorgan and Carmarthen, and enters the bay below Loughor, where it forms a broad shallow estuary, and takes the name of the Burry. Carmarthenshire has no lake of importance. A small one under the Carmarthen Beacon, of remarkably pure water, and another of smaller size on Mynydd-Mawr, are the only ones deserving of notice. They both abound in good fish.—Most of the northern part of this county is occupied by the slate rocks of the Silurian system, which extend as far southward as Carmarthen. The S. part of the county belongs to the great coal-field of South Wales, which is here intersected by a belt of carboniferous limestone. A strip of the old red sandstone occurs N. of the coal district. The limestone is quarried for farming purposes, and at Llangyndeirn a good blue marble, veined with white, is obtained. Iron is found and worked in the neighbourhood of Llanelly, and copper at Kidwelly. There is a lead mine at Nanty-Meryn. The coal found in this district is mostly stone-coal, and contains many interesting fossil plants.—The climate of Carmarthenshire is remarkably mild and pleasant, except on the higher hills. It is, however, damp and rainy. The soil is mostly poor, resting on the slate or coal, except in the river valleys and the rich marshes S. of Carmarthen, the substratum of the latter being limestone. Peat is abundant in the mountains, and forms there the chief fuel. The quantity of wheat grown in the county is small, and a large supply is imported. Barley and oats are grown more extensively, the latter forming the principal crop. The finest pastures are in the Vale of Towy. The cattle and sheep are mostly of the small native breed, with others of the Pembrokeshire, Devonshire, and Herefordshire breeds. South Down sheep are also reared. Butter is made and exported in large quantities. Cheese is also made for local consumption. The methods of agriculture have been improved. The farm-buildings and the dwellings of the labourers are very poor.—For purposes of civil government Carmarthenshire is divided into eight hunds., viz.: Carnwallon, Cathinog, Cayo, Derllys, Elvet, Iskennen, Kidwelly, and Perfedd. It contains 76 pars., of which two, Carmarthen and Llanelly, are boroughs, and the same two, with Kidwelly, Laugharne, Llandeilovawr, Llandovery, Llangadock, and Newcastle-Emlyn, are market towns. Carmarthen is the county town. There are five Poor-law Unions and five County Court districts, the seats of both of which are Carmarthen, Llandeilovawr, Llandovery, Llanelly, and Newcastle-Emlyn. The county is in the South Wales circuit. The assizes are held at Carmarthen, as are the quarter sessions, except at Midsummer, when they are held at Llandeilovawr. Since the Reform Act Carmarthenshire returns two members to parliament, and Carmarthen, with the contributory borough of Llanelly, one. The county election takes place at Carmarthen. The polling places are, besides that town, Llandeilovawr, Llandovery, Newcastle-Emlyn, St. Clear, Llanelly, and Llansawel. The local government is vested in a lord-lieutenant, high sheriff, and a body of about 35 magistrates. Carmarthenshire is included in the home military district. It is in the diocese of St. David's, in the province of Canterbury, and forms an archdeaconry. A small part of the county is in the archdeaconry of Cardigan. The only manufacture carried on in this county is that of coarse cloths and flannels made from the short wool of the native sheep.—Among the remains of antiquity are a stone circle and cromlech at Llanboidy, a very large cromlech, a tumulus, and a great earthwork at Convil, in Elvet; an oval entrenchment in the same neighbourhood; a camp on Grongar Hill; and barrows at Llanfihangel, Newchurch, &c. No traces are found of the two principal Roman roads which crossed this county. The Sarn Helen has been traced between Llanvair and Carmarthen, and many Roman relics have been discovered at the former place. On the banks of the Towy is the Ogofan mine, which, there seems reason to believe, was worked by the Romans for gold. Several monastic houses existed in Carmarthenshire, but most of them have perished entirely. The only remains are those of the abbeys of Whitland and Talley, and the priories of Llanllwny and Carmarthen. Ruins of castles are found at Carmarthen, Kidwelly, Laugharne, Dynevor, Carreg Cennen, Llandovery, Dryslwyn, Llanstephan, and Newcastle-Emlyn.—The county contains many fine seats and residences of the gentry. The principal are—Abergwili, the palace of the Bishop of St. David's; Newton, the seat of Lord Dynevor; Golden Grove, that of Earl Cawdor; Iscoed, that of Sir J. Mansel, Bart.; Edwinsford, of Sir J. Williams, Bart.; Llwyny Wormwood, of Sir R. Williams, Bart.; Dolcothi, Aberglasney, Llanstephan Place, Maesgwynne, Llanelly House.—The county is crossed by the South Wales railway, which enters at Loughor, at the south-eastern corner, and passes by Llanelly and Kidwelly to Carmarthen, and thence by St. Clear and Whitland into Pembrokeshire. The length of that part of the line which is in this county is 3 miles. At Llanelly this line is joined by the Llanelly and Vale of Towy railway, which is at present completed as far as Llandovery. It passes by Pontardulais, Llandeilovawr, and Llangadock. There are railways for conveying the produce of the mines and stone quarries to Llanelly, and a canal from Kidwelly to the same place, 5 miles long, and the only one in the county. Good roads run through all parts of Carmarthenshire. Some of the most important are the following: that from Llandovery down the Vale of Towy, by Llangadock, Llandeilovawr, to Carmarthen, and thence by St. Clear and Whitland Abbey to Haverfordwest, or by Arnoth Castle to Pembroke. This is part of the great road through Oxford, Gloucester, and Brecknock. Another is from Carmarthen, through Kidwelly and Llanelly to Swansea, part of the great road through Bath, Bristol, and Neath. Other roads run from Carmarthen northward to Newcastle-Emlyn and Cardigan, and to Llanfihangel-ar-Arth, Lampeter, and Tregaron.

CARMARY-GRANGE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Massereene, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.E. of Antrim.

CARMEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilkea and Moone, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, not far from Ballitore.

CARMICHAEL, a par. in the upper ward of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. Its post town is Lanark. It is situated in a hilly district on the N. bank of the river Clyde, near the Caledonian railway. This parish, anciently called Kirkmichael, was a possession of the Douglases, and, at a later period, of the Carmichael family, who had their seat here, and of whom was John, third Earl of Hyndford, who was born in 1701, and died in 1767. He was employed on a special mission to the Court of Russia, and appointed Vice-Admiral of Scotland by George III. The highest ground is at Tinto hills, which have an elevation of about 2,320 feet above the level of the sea, and command a prospect of very great extent, from the Bass Rock, in the N.E., to the Solway, in the S.E. On the summit is a cairn. This spot was one of the chief stations of the Trigonometrical Survey of Scotland. Coal and limestone are found here. The par. is in the presb. of Lanark. The minister has a stipend of £225, and is appointed by Sir W. C. Anstruther, Bart., and Sir M. D. Lockhart, Bart. The former baronet has his seat at Carmichael House, the old mansion of the Carmichaels. This par. is about 6 miles in length and 4 in breadth.

CARMUNNOCK, a par. with a vil. of the same name, in the lower ward of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is situated near the border of Renfrewshire, in a hilly, but fertile and well-cultivated country, watered by the small river White Cart, a tributary of the Clyde. Part of the district, with the parish church, was anciently one of the endowments of the abbey of Paisley, to which it was given, about the time of William the Lion, by Henry de Carmanoc. The views from some of the highest points in this neighbourhood are of great extent, embracing portions of 16 counties. The parish contains coal, limestone, and iron in limited quantity. The par. is in the presb. of Glasgow, and in the patron. of the Stirlings of Castlemilk. The minister has a stipend of £153. The principal seat is Cathkin, the residence of H. E. McLea, Esq., situated near the Cathkin hills, from which, though not more than 500 feet high, Arthur's Seat, Edinburgh, Ben Ledi, and the Isle of Arran may be seen. This parish was crossed by a Roman road, of which there are some vestiges. Many sepulchral tumuli, or cairns, are also to be met with.

CARMYLE, a vil. in the par. of Old Monkland, Middle ward of the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Glasgow. It is beautifully situated on the N. bank of the Clyde.

CARMYLIE, a par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles to the S.E. of Forfar. It is situated in a moorland district at the head of the Elliot rivulet, which falls into the sea near Arbroath. The par. contains the vil. of Graystone, and has quarries of good grey slate and flag-stone. The par. is in the presb. of Arbroath, in the gift of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £150. The church is built on the site of an ancient chapel. There is also a Free church. A fair is held on the third Tuesday of April (old style).

CARN, or CARNE, a par. in the bar. of East Offaly, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Kildare. The Carlow branch of the Great Southern and Western railway passes near it. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare. There is no church.

CARN, or CARNE, a par. in the bar. of Forth, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Killinick. It is situated in a flat country on the seacoast, at the S.E. extremity of the island, extending to Carnsore Point, and was the site of a castle erected in the 12th century, of which there are some remains. Here is a coastguard station. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the fisheries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, val. £275, in the gift of the bishop. The church is a very old building. In the vicinity is Castle Palliser, the seat of Sir H. Palliser, Bart.

CARN, a vil. in the par. of Dungiven, bar. of Keenaght, in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland.

CARNABY, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S.W. of Bridlington, its post town. It is situated near the seacoast, and is a station on the Hull, Bridlington, and Scarborough branch of the North-Eastern railway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. with the perpet. cur. of Fraisthorpe annexed, £82, in the patron. of Sir G. Strickland, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There are some charities of trifling value.

CARNAGH, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of New Ross. It lies in a fertile district on the E. side of the river Barrow, and contains some stone-quarries. In the par. is a police station. The living is a rect. united with the vic. of St. Mary, New Ross, in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin. The church is decayed. The chief residence is Carnagh House. There are remains of a Danish fort in the neighbourhood.

CARNAGH, EAST and WEST, hmlts. in the bar. of Athlone, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Athlone. They are seated near the southern extremity of Lough Rea.

CARNAGNOE, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Scarriff. It is near the W. shore of Lough Derg.

CARNALWAY, a par. in the bar. of South Naas, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S. of Naas. It is situated in a fertile country on the N. bank of the river Liffey. The village of Kilcullen Bridge, which was the scene of an engagement during the rebellion of 1798, when the rebels were defeated by General Dundas, is partly in this parish. There is a large tract of bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. £182, in the gift of the bishop and R. Latouche, Esq., alternately. The church is a pretty modern edifice, with a tower and spire. There is a parochial school.

CARNAROSS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Kells, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Kells.

CARNARVON, or CAERNARVON, a market town, port, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the par. of Llanbeblig, hund. of Is-Gorfai, in the co. of Carnarvon, of which it is the chief town. It is 235 miles to the N.W. of London by road, or 240 miles by railway. It is a post town, and is now connected with the Chester and Holyhead, and with the London and North-Western railways, by a branch line of about 9 miles from Bangor. Carnarvon is pleasantly situated on the E. side of the Menai Strait, where the river Seiont falls into it. Close by is the site of the Roman station Segontium, the most important in North Wales, and which was also named Caer Custeint, or "fort of Constantine," and Caer-yn-Arvon, from its situation opposite to Mona, the Isle of Anglesea. Watling Street connected Segontium with Deva (Chester). In the latter part of the 7th century Cadwallon, a brave Welsh prince, fixed his seat at Segontium, which thenceforth continued for two centuries to be the residence of the native princes, till Aberffraw, in Anglesea, succeeded to that distinction. Hugh Lupus is said to have erected a fortress here soon after the Conquest, but the real foundation of the importance of Carnarvon was the erection of a magnificent castle by Edward I. immediately after his conquest of the principality. The work was commenced in 1283, and occupied about 12 years. The materials for this stately pile were partly taken from the ancient Segontium; limestone was obtained from Anglesea, and breccia from the neighbourhood of Bangor. In 1284 the birth of Edward II., the first Prince of Wales, took place at Carnarvon, though not, as the pretty and well-known tradition relates, in the Eagle Tower of the castle, which was not then in existence. The first governor of the new fortress was John de Havering. An insurrection broke out in 1294, in which the Welsh, irritated by the new taxation, and led by Madoc, captured the town and castle of Carnarvon, burnt the former, and put to death the English inhabitants. The castle was closely invested by Owain Glyndwr in 1402, but was successfully defended for Henry IV. by an English and two Welsh captains left in charge of it. During the civil war of the 17th century the castle, at first garrisoned for the king, was several times besieged and taken by each party; at length it was taken and held by the parliamentary forces under General Mytton in 1646. The royalists, under Sir John Owen, made an attempt in 1648 to recover possession of it, but without success.—The town, which stands on a small peninsula running out into the Menai Strait, is defended by strong walls, with numerous circular towers. There were formerly but two entrances, at the E. and W. sides of the town; but several others now communicate with the new town grown up outside the walls. The castle stands on the S. side of the town. The streets, though narrow, are regularly planned, intersecting each other at right angles. The town is well paved and lighted with gas, and contains many well-built houses. For the accommodation of the tourists and visitors who resort to Carnarvon as a watering-place, there are good hotels, reading-rooms, and lodging-houses. There is a pleasant promenade on a terrace extending northward from the castle along the shore of the strait. The town contains a guildhall, county-hall, county-prison, market-house, custom-house, gas and water-works.—The principal business of Carnarvon is the trade connected with the port. The number of vessels belonging to it is about 200, and these are chiefly employed in the coasting trade. Pwllheli, Barmouth, Port Madoc, and Porthdynllaen are subordinate ports. The harbour has been improved by the construction of a good landing-pier. The exports are slates and copper-ore, the former brought from the quarries of Llanllyfni, which are connected with the town by a railroad. Timber, coal, &c., are imported. Many hands are employed in the fisheries, and some in ship-building. A convenient harbour-office was built in 1840. There is a lighthouse on the breakwater at Llanddwyn Point. A brass and iron foundry, of recent establishment, gives employment to some of the people. There is regular communication with Anglesea by steam-ferry. No important manufactures are carried on in the town.—Carnarvon was constituted a free borough by a charter of Edward I. in 1284, and was the first town in Wales to receive that privilege. The government of the borough, which is divided under the Municipal Act into two wards, is vested in a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors; and the style of the corporation is, the "mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the town and borough of Carnarvon." The elective franchise was conferred on the town by Henry VIII., since which time it has returned one member to the imperial parliament. Conway, Criccieth, Nevin, Pwllheli, and Bangor are contributory boroughs to Carnarvon. The revenue of the corporation is about £300 per annum. The Earl of Carnarvon is constable of the castle. Carnarvon is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, the headquarters of the county militia, and a polling-place and place of election for the county. The assizes and quarter sessions are held here.—The living is united to the vic. of Llanbeblig, in the dioc. of Bangor. The parish church of Llanbeblig stands at a short distance from the town. The church of St. Mary is the old garrison chapel. There is also a new English church called Christ Church, which stands near the railway station. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, and Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, in most of which the service is performed in the Welsh language. Besides the British, infant, and ragged schools, there are a model National school, established about 1843, and a training school for Welsh schoolmasters. The town possesses a Museum of Natural History and Antiquities, and a mechanics' institute and reading-rooms. The charitable endowments for the poor produce about £70 per annum.—Portions of the old wall of the Roman city still exist, and numerous interesting relics have been found on its site. Traces also of several forts, or outposts to Segontium, are seen in the neighbourhood. One of these forts, on the banks of the Seiont, is in nearly perfect preservation. A chapel is said to have been founded here by Helena, mother of the Emperor Constantine, and her name is still attached to a well. Segontium covered an area of above six acres, and was oblong in form. The antiquities discovered here are deposited in the Carnarvon Museum. The remains of the noble castle are extensive, and cover a quadrangular space of nearly three acres. The outer walls, from 8 to 10 feet in thickness, are nearly perfect, and have along them 13 towers, or circular bastions, with turrets of five, six, or eight sides. One of the loftiest towers is that called the Eagle Tower. It is a pentagon, surmounted by turrets at three of its angles, and takes its name from the finely sculptured figure of an eagle which adorns it. This tower is entered by the Water Gate. The other and chief entrances to the castle are by a gateway on the N. side, under a tower which has on its front a statue of Edward I., and by Queen Eleanor's Gate, which looks northward, and was defended by four portcullises. The enclosure originally formed two courts. The walls were repaired not many years ago, but the interior buildings are mostly in a state of decay. The ancient pile, however, still forms a grand feature of the scene.—Saturday is the market day. Annual fairs are held on the 15th April, the 3rd June, the 10th July, the 12th August, the 9th September, the 9th October, and the 14th November. A regatta takes place generally in August.

CARNARVONSHIRE, or CAERNARVONSHIRE, a maritime co. of North Wales, occupying the N.W. quarter of the principality, and bounded on the N. by the sea, on the E. by the co. of Denbigh, on the S. by the co. of Merioneth and the bay of Cardigan, and on the W. by the sea and the Menai Strait, by the latter of which it is separated from the Isle of Anglesea. This county is irregular in form, extending in length from Little Orme's Head on the N.E. to Braich-y-Pwll on the S.W. about 55 miles; and in breadth from Bangor or Carnarvon in a south-easterly direction, 22 miles; but the greater part of the county is much narrower. It is nearly 150 miles in circuit, and has a coast-line of above 90 miles. It comprises an area of 579 square miles or about 370,273 acres. The county is situated between 52° 47′ and 53° 22′ N. lat., and between 3° 40′ and 4° 45′ W. long.—Carnarvonshire derives its name from Caer yn Arvon, the ancient British designation for the Roman city of Segontium, and signifying "the fort in the country next Mona" (Anglesea). Its early history is most intimately connected with its physical character, its impenetrable mountain recesses forming an indispensable support to the stout resistance made for centuries by the early occupants of the country to the invading forces of Romans, Saxons, and Normans. It appears probable that this district was part of the territory of the British tribe called the Ordovices, although some inquirers assign it to the Cangi. It was about the year A.D. 58 that the Romans first made their appearance in this quarter, on occasion of the great attack on the Isle of Mona by Suetonius Paulinus, but the district was not conquered till about twenty years later. It was included in that division of the island named Britannia Secunda, and in that district of it called Venedotia. Two military stations were established in the county—Segontium close to the present town of Carnarvon, and Conovium near Conway. The Welsh name of the former is Caer Seiont, that of the latter Caer-Rhun. These stations were connected by a road branching off from Watling Street, and passing through the county of Denbigh. Segontium was also the terminus of the great road alled the Via Occidentalis. After the retirement of the Romans, Segontium was long one of the residences of the princes of North Wales, who had another seat at Deganwy on the river Conway. On the death of Rhodri Mawr (Roderick the Great) about A.D. 880, and the partition of Wales among his three sons, this county, as part of Gwynedd (North Wales), fell to Anarawd, the eldest. It was invaded and wasted in the following century by the princes of South Wales, who were, however, defeated near the Conway by the two reigning princes, Ievav and Iago. About the middle of the 11th century the Saxon chief, Harold, was charged by Edward the Confessor with the conduct of an expedition against North Wales, in which, with the co-operation of his brother Tostig, he acquitted himself with great skill and complete success. Later in the same century invasions were made by the earls of Chester and Shrewsbury. Early in the 13th century King John, intending to take revenge on Llewellyn ap Iorwerth, then Prince of North Wales, led an army into the country; but after suffering greatly from want of supplies, and from the harassing attacks of the Welsh, he had to retire. John was more successful, when shortly afterwards he renewed the attempt, and compelled Llewellyn to accept peace on disadvantageous terms. Henry III. invaded North Wales about 1245, and encamped on the Conway; but after being reduced to great extremities, and losing many of his men, who were killed or captured by the Welsh, he had to withdraw, the only success to compensate for his toils and losses being the fortress of Deganwy, which he succeeded in completely rebuilding. This fortress was subsequently taken and demolished by Prince Llewellyn ap Gruffyd. Edward I. having invaded Wales about 1277, Llewellyn was compelled to make peace with him on very hard terms; and the second invasion by the same monarch about 1283 resulted in the death of Llewellyn, and the entire conquest of the principality. This achievement was celebrated by a grand tournament held at Nevin, and the great castles of Carnarvon and Conway were immediately founded. A formidable insurrection, provoked by a levy of new taxes, broke out in Carnarvonshire about 1294, when the Welsh, led by Madoc, an illegitimate son of Llewellyn, got possession of the town and the castle of Carnarvon, burnt the former, and killed all the English then gathered in great numbers there. The insurrection was suppressed by Edward himself, who recalled the army on the point of embarking for the French war, and marched into Wales. The next important event in the history of the county is the siege of the castle of Carnarvon by Owain Glyndwr at the commencement of the 15th century, and its successful defence for Henry IV. by the Welsh captains to whom, under an English officer, it had been entrusted. This county became the scene of several contests during the civil war in the reign of Charles I., Carnarvon and Conway castles being taken by the parliament.—From the mouth of the Conway, at the north-eastern extremity of the county, the coast-line has a south-westerly direction, with no great irregularity, to Braich-y-Pwll, opposite Bardsey Island, from which point it bends eastward, with several curves, to St. Tudwal's Island, and thence sweeps north-eastward in a bold curve, forming the northern boundary of Cardigan Bay. The principal promontories along the coast are Great Orme's Head, running out several miles to the N.W. at the mouth of the Conway; Penmaen-Mawr, about 3 miles W. of Conway; Yr Eivl, or Rivell, a few miles to the N. of Nevin; Braich-y-Pwll at the south-western extremity of the county, and Penrhyn Dû, near St. Tudwal's Island. Except at these points and near them, the coast is generally low, a narrow tract of comparatively level ground intervening between the mountains and the sea. Along the northern coast are the Lavan Sands, an extensive tract left dry at low water, and supposed to have been formerly an inhabited district. With the exception of Anglesea, the only islands off the coast are Bardsey Island and St. Tudwal's.—Carnarvonshire is almost wholly covered with the vast range of mountains connected with Snowdon, and named from it Snowdonia. It commences on the coast not far from Conway, with the huge headland of Penmaen-Mawr, rising precipitously from the bay of Beaumaris to the height of 1,540 feet, and extends southward with increasing elevation and breadth till it covers the whole county between Denbighshire and the bay of Carnarvon. This range terminates near Nevin, in the lofty irregular mountain mass of Rivell, 1,867 feet above the level of the sea. Snowdonia consists almost entirely of slate-rocks belonging to the Silurian system, and is the principal mountain chain in Wales and in South Britain. The central mountain, from which four main ridges diverge, was named by the Welsh Creigiau 'r Eryri, which has been variously translated "eagle-rocks" and "snow-rocks" (Snowdon, or Snawdun). Its highest point is called Yr Wyddva, i.e. the "conspicuous summit," and rises to the height of 3,571 feet above the level of the sea. Two other peaks approach this in elevation—Carnedd Llewellyn, 3,470 feet in height, and Carnedd Davydd, 3,429 feet. Other remarkable summits are Moel Shabod, 2,878 feet high; Moel Hebog, 2,585 feet; Clawd Goch, Craig Goch, Glider Vawr, and Glider Vechan; Bwlch Mawr, 1,673 feet high; and Gyrn Goch. The heights of Penmaen-Mawr and Rivell have been previously given. Valleys of great depth, and some with very precipitous sides, lie round Snowdon, separating the various ridges. In these valleys or cwms are numerous tarns or mountain lakes, most of them of small size, and formed by the expansion of mountain streams. The principal lakes, or llyns, are those of Cwn, Conway, Llanberris, Ogwen, Cawellyn, and Nanlle. Many of them abound in fish of various species, and are remarkable for the fine scenery surrounding them.—Carnarvonshire has many rivers, but the only one of any importance is the Conway. It takes its rise at Llyn Conway, at the S.E. corner of the county, on the edge of Denbighshire and Merionethshire, and after a short curve, first to the N.E. and then to the N.W., runs in a northerly direction past Llanrwst to Conway, where it falls into the bay of Beaumaris. Its entire length is about 30 miles, throughout the greater part of which it is the boundary of Carnarvonshire and Denbighshire. The Conway is navigable to within a short distance of Llanrwst. It is joined by many tributary streams on both sides, amongst which are the Machno, Llygwy, and the Ledan. The Llygwy rises near the Carnedd Davydd, and passing Capel Curig runs over several ledges of rock, and joins the Conway a little above Llanrwst. Other rivers are the Seiont, which falls into the Menai at Carnarvon; the Ogwen, which falls into the same strait near Bangor; the Gwrfai, the Llyfni, and the Glas-Llyn. The latter rises near the centre of Snowdonia, and runs through some of the most wonderful scenery in Wales. It has a fine fall not far from its source, forms two beautiful lakes, and after a course southward of about 15 miles, passing Beddgelert, falls into the bay of Cardigan, near Tremadoc.—The general characteristic of the scenery of this county is sublimity. But the wild grandeur of the mountains is intermingled with and softened by many a passage of quiet beauty, still lake and shining stream. The shores of the Menai present a succession of diversified and picturesque scenes. Some of the most beautiful landscapes occur in the valley of the Conway. But above all is the view from Yr Wyddfa, the loftiest peak of Snowdon. Besides the vast ridges radiating from it as a centre, with their intervening cwms and llyns, and the greater part of North Wales with Anglesea immediately surrounding them, the view embraces the mountains of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Yorkshire, portions of the Highlands of Scotland, the Irish Sea, with the Isle of Man, and even the mountains of Wicklow. It is seldom, however, that the atmosphere is sufficiently clear for the observing of this magnificent panorama. A large part of Snowdonia belongs to the crown, having been made a royal forest by Edward I. It was disafforested in 1649.—The mineral productions of Carnarvonshire are various and of considerable importance. Slate is the prevailing rock throughout the county, and is quarried to a great extent at Llanberis, Llanlyfni, Nantfrancon, and other places.

It is mostly of a blue colour, and is of very fine quality. Immense quantities are annually consumed in the manufacture of writing slates, both for British and foreign markets. Large slabs are also prepared for roofing, paving, hearth-stones, and chimney-pieces, and a great variety of small articles are made of the best kinds. Basalt, porphyry, quartz, and serpentine are found in the higher regions. Great Orme's Head consists of limestone, which occurs also along the shore of the Menai. Braich-y-Pwll is composed of Old Red sandstone, and this species of rock also appears along the northern coast. The principal metal found in this county is copper, which is worked at Derwendeg, Llanberis, Capel Curig, and Llinian Dinlle, near Beddgelert. Lead ore is abundant in the great mines of Bwlch-haiarn, near Gwydir, where zinc is also found, and there are other lead-mines at Gest, near Penmorva, and Penrhyn Dû. Near Conway is a quarry of millstone. Ochre is obtained near Dolawen.—The climate of Carnarvonshire has the natural characteristics of a mountainous region with a long coast line: cold and rainy, with mists and sudden storms of wind, and snow lying late in the year on the higher grounds, but a milder and drier air in the districts lying along the sea-coast. Of these the driest and most pleasant is the promontory of Lleyn, forming the south-western extremity of the county. The general healthiness of the county is proved, like that of the rest of North Wales, by the common instances of longevity of the inhabitants. It is only a very small part of the surface of Carnarvonshire that is under or capable of cultivation. Tracts of good land occur in the valley of the Conway, on the shore of the Menai, and in Bardsey Island. The most common soils are the wide heathy pastures and peaty flats. Little wheat is grown, the chief crops being oats, barley, and potatoes. Most of the farmers keep great numbers of cattle and sheep, which they pasture on the mountains during the summer. The cattle and sheep are of small and hardy breeds, the latter yielding a short, coarse wool. The golden eagle is occasionally to be seen in the mountains, and seals are found on the coast. Many rare and interesting plants are indigenous. The mountains were formerly to a great extent covered with forests, but there is little woodland in the county now.—Carnarvonshire is divided for purposes of civil jurisdiction into 10 hunds., viz.: those of Commitmaen, Creuddyn, Dinlaenn, Evionydd, Gafflogian, Is-Gorfai, Uchaf, Isaf, Nant-Conway, Uwch-Gorfai. These are divided into about 70 pars. The co. contains one city, Bangor, the seat of a bishopric; one parliamentary borough, Carnarvon, to which five others are contributory—Bangor, Conway, Criccieth, Nevin, and Pwllheli; and 7 market towns, being the above six with the modern town of Tremadoc. Carnarvon is the county town. Bangor, Carnarvon, Conway, and Pwllheli, are seats of Poor-law Unions and heads of County Court districts. Portmadoc is also the head of a County Court district. One member is returned to the imperial parliament by the county, and one by Carnarvon and its contributory boroughs. The election for the county takes place at Carnarvon, and the polling places are Carnarvon, Capel Curig, Conway, and Pwllheli. Carnarvonshire is in the North Wales circuit, and the assizes and quarter sessions are held at Carnarvon. It is in the home military district. The local government is entrusted to a lord-lieutenant, high sheriff, and a body of about 30 magistrates. The co. is almost entirely in the dioc. of Bangor, in the prov. of Canterbury.—Carnarvon has no important manufactures, and but a small proportion of the inhabitants are engaged in trade. Agriculture forms the principal employment of the people; and next to that, mining and quarrying, in which above 5,000 persons are engaged. The herring fishery is carried on along the S.E. coast, between Bardsey Island and Pwllheli.—The antiquities of the county are numerous, but chiefly military. There are several primitive stone circles and cromlechs; the former near Penmorva, at Dwygyfylchi, and on Bwlch Craigwen; the latter near Clynnog, Ystym Cegid, and Cefn Amlwch. Remains of British fortresses exist in several places. The principal are those of Tre'r Ceiri, on the summit of Yr Eifl, Braich-y-Dinas, on Penmaen-Mawr, Dinas Dinorwig, Diganwy, and Castell Caer Lleion. The Roman stations of Segontium and Conovium have already been referred to, as have also the magnificent castles of Carnarvon and Conway, two of the finest in the kingdom. Ruins of other castles are seen at Criccieth, on the S. coast; at Dolbadarn, near Llanberis; at Diganwy, near Great Orme's Head; and at Dolwyddelan. There were five monastic establishments in this county, but few remains of the buildings are left: these are of the abbey in Bardsey Island; of that at Maenan, near Llanrwst; and of the priory at Beddgelert. The most interesting churches are the cathedral of Bangor, and the churches of Clynnog, formerly collegiate, and Llandegai.—The principal seats of the nobility and gentry in Carnarvonshire are the following: Glynllifon Park, the seat of Lord Newborough; Gloddaeth, that of Lord Mostyn; Gwydir Hall, of Lord Gwydir; Nant Hall, of Sir — Williams, Bart.; Penrhyn Castle, of the Hon. Colonel Pennant; Vaenol, Cefn Amlwch, Nanthoran, Maenan, &c.—The Chester and Holyhead railway enters Carnarvonshire near Conway and running along the coast to Bangor, crosses the Menai by the Britannia tubular bridge. A branch line from that point is now constructed to Carnarvon, whence it is continued as far as Nantlle. Another branch is projected from Conway, up the valley of the Conway, to Llanrwst. There are several railroads connecting the great slate quarries with the coast. The principal roads are the following: from Conway along the coast to Bangor and Carnarvon; from Carnarvon, by Dolbadarn Castle and Capel Curig, to Llanrwst; or from Carnarvon, by the coast, to Nevin, and thence south-eastward to Pwllheli; from the same place, by Bettws, under Snowdon to Beddgelert and Tremadoc. The northern part of the county is crossed by the road from Shrewsbury to Holyhead, which enters near Bettws-y-Coed, and runs past Capel Curig north-westward to Bangor, whence it is carried across the Menai suspension bridge into Anglesea.

CARNAUNBEG, a vil. in the bar. of Corcomroe, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Killenora.

CARNBEE, a par. in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 5 miles to the S. of St. Andrew's. It is situated in a hilly district, partly cultivated and partly moorland, and contains Kellie Castle, formerly the seat of the Earls of Kellie, but now belonging to the Earl of Mar. The castle stands in a romantic spot near the lofty hill of trap rock called Kellie Law, which is more than 80 feet high, and was one of the stations selected for the great trigonometrical survey of Scotland. Coal is found in abundance in the parish, and there are also limestone and freestone quarries. The par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's, and in the patron. of Sir R. Anstruther, Bart. The minister has a stipend of £23. The church, which stands on high ground, is of ancient date. There is a Free church at Arncroach. The par. is about 4 miles in length and the same in breadth.

CARNCASTLE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Glenarm, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Larne. It is situated in a fertile country on the coast of the North Channel, and includes the v. of Oldmills. About 5 miles off the coast are the Maidens Rock Lights, and at Ballygally Head is a coast-guard station. Basalt and much limestone and coal are found in the district. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, Connor, and Dromore, val. £667, in the patron. of the bishop. The rect. is attached to the prebend of St. Saviour's, Connor. The church was built about 181 There is also a perpet. cur., worth £96, in the gift of the prebendary. There are two chapels belonging to the Presbyterians, a parochial and other schools. Ballygally was the site of a castle, ruins of which still exist. There are some remains of the old manor-house.

CARNCOED, a par. in the tnshp. of Glynbrochan and par. of Llangirrig, hund. of Llanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 3 miles to the S. of Llanidloes.

CARNDONAGH, or CARN, a vil., or small market wn, in the par. of Donagh, bar. of Inishowen, in the . of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 30 miles to the .E. of Raphoe, and 165 miles to the N. of Dublin. It seated in a mountainous district on the N. coast, at e head of Strabega Bay, on the banks of a small ream which falls into the bay. It has several good reets with well-built houses, and contains a police ation, a dispensary, chapels belonging to the Roman atholics and Presbyterians, and several schools. The rish church is some distance from the town. The chief sidences are Tinnaleague, Fairview, and Bridge Cotge. An old stone cross stands near the church. onday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 21st February, May, August, and November.

CARNEARNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ahoghill, r. of Lower Toome, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of lster, Ireland, not far from Ballymena. It is seated ar the river Bann.

CARNED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandinam, hund. of lanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 6 iles to the N. of Llanidloes. It is in a hilly country, ar the river Severn.

CARNEDDI, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanllechid, hund. Uchaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, not far m Bangor.

CARNEW, a par. and market town, partly in the bar. Shillelagh, in the co. of Wicklow, and partly in the rs. of Gorey and Scarawalsh, in the co. of Wexford, ov. of Leinster, Ireland, 40 miles to the S.W. of Wickw, and 60 miles to the S. of Dublin. It is situated in hilly, but fertile and cultivated country, and contains e vil. of Shillelagh. The town was partially burned 1798, during the rebellion, the insurgents advancing this place after defeating the troops under Colonel Valpole. The town stands in a healthy situation, nd contains some neat residences. Manufactories of bacco and snuff employ some of the workpeople. ranite is found in the parish, and there are quarries of ate and building stone. Petty sessions are held, and a olice force is stationed here. The sessions-house, a retty building, was erected by Earl Fitzwilliam, who ade many improvements in the place. The living a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £548 net, in the atron. of the bishop. The church is a handsome ructure, with a tower and spire, and contains several onuments. The cannon balls fired at the church passed hrough some of the tombstones, which still retain the arks. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here, nd there are several schools. In the village of Shilagh is a very neat church, built chiefly by the late arl Fitzwilliam, whose residence, Coolattin Park, is rtly within the parish. The other chief residences are arnew Castle, Bally Ellis, Bullingate, Tombrean, and onishall. Thursday is the market day. Fairs are eld on the first Thursday after the 12th of February, lay, August, and November, for the sale of horses and ttle, and other fairs on the 1st April, July, and ctober, and the 22nd December.

CARNEY, a vil. in the par. of Drumcliff, and bar. of arbury, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireand, 6 miles to the N. of Sligo. It is seated on the oast of Drumcliff Bay, a small inlet of Sligo Bay, and as a police station and a dispensary.

CARNEY CROSS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Dunkellin, the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not r from Athenry.

CARNFORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Warton, hund. f Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. palatine of ancaster, 7 miles to the N. of Lancaster. It is a tation on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway, and the oint of junction of the Ulverston and Lancaster railay with that line. The Kendal canal passes by this lace. There are charitable bequests for the poor, worth bout £5 a year.

CARNGIWCH, a par. in the hund. of Gafflogian, the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 4 miles to the N. Pwllheli, its post town. It is situated on the banks of e river Erch. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Edern, in the dioc. of Bangor, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Ciwg.

CARN-HULL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Erris, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Belmullet.

CARNIE HILL, a vil. of modern growth in the par. of Auchtergaven, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 8 miles to the N. of Perth.

CARNLOUGH, or CARNALLOCK, a vil. in the par. of Ardclinis, bar. of Glenarm, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N.W. of Glenarm. It is seated in a pleasant spot on the sea-coast, not far from Glenarm Castle, the fine seat of the Earl of Antrim. The village is chiefly inhabited by fishermen, and is resorted to as a watering-place.

CARNMENELLIS, or CARMENELAZE, a vil. in the par. of Wendron, hund. of Kerrier, in the co. of Cornwall, 3 miles to the N. of Helstone. Redruth is its post town. Near the village is Carnmenellis Hill, rising above 800 feet high. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, annexed to the vic.* of Wendron, val. £184, in the patron. of Mrs. Broadley.

CARNMONEY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Belfast, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N. of Belfast. It lies in a fertile and well-cultivated country on the western shore of Belfast Lough, and contains the vils. of Ballyduff, Whiteabbey, and Upper and Lower Whitehouse. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the spinning of flax. The parish contains limestone, which is quarried and exported extensively. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with two others united, £445, in the patron. of the Marquis of Donegal. There are chapels belonging to the Presbyterians and Independents, and several large schools. In the vicinity are several seats of the gentry, and some interesting remains of a monastery, called White Abbey, which stand near the lough.

CARNO, a par. in the hund. of Llanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 9 miles to the W. of Newtown, its post town. It is situated in a hilly and picturesque district, watered by a small stream, a tributary of the Severn, and contains the tnshps. of Derlwyn, Llysyn, and Trowscoed. It is distinguished in the Welsh annals as the scene of two battles, one about the middle of the 10th century, in which the two sons of Edwal Foel, princes of North Wales, defeated the sons of Hywel Dda; and the other about 1080, in which the usurper Trahaern ap Caradoc was defeated by Gruffydd ap Cynan, prince of North Wales, and Rhys ap Tewdwr, prince of South Wales. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £95, in the patron. of Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart. The church, rebuilt in 1807, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Here is said to have been formerly a house of the knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, and Independents have chapels.

CARNOCK, a par., containing a vil. of the same name, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 3 miles to the N.W. of Dunfermline. It is situated in a hilly but fertile, pleasant, and wooded country, and includes the vils. of Cairneyhill and Gowkhall. Coal is very abundant here, and freestone of excellent quality and some ironstone are obtained. A large part of the surface is pasture land. This parish is said to have been the scene of a battle during the Danish invasions, about the middle of the 11th century. A small stream runs through the village. Many of the inhabitants are employed in weaving. The par. is in the presb. of Dunfermline, in the patron. of Stuart of Carnock. The minister has a stipend of £155. A new church was built about 1840, near the ruins of the former one, erected before 1600. A stone cross, of ancient date, with six rounds of steps, formerly stood in the village, and a venerable thorn grew in the centre of it; but the thorn having decayed it was cut down, and the cross itself was removed about 1840. At the Ink Craig of Carnock is a curious flow of water resembling ink, being a mechanical mixture of coal, silex, and clay. This parish was the birthplace of John Erskine, Professor of Law at the University of Edinburgh, and author of the "Institutes of the Law of Scotland," who died in 1767. John Row, Principal of King's College, Aberdeen, son of the Reformer, ministered in the parish church from 1652 to 1661. His tomb is in the churchyard. In this church also ministered Mr. Hog and Thomas Gillespie, the originator of the Relief Body in Scotland, who was deposed by the General Assembly, in 1752, for refusing to induct a minister who was obnoxious to the congregation. There is a Free church in Carnock, and an United Presbyterian church at Cairneyhill. Pitfirran is the seat of Sir Peter Halket, Bart. The par. has an area of about 9 square miles.

CARNOUSTIE, a vil. in the par. of Barry, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles to the S.W. of Arbroath. It is a station on the Dundee and Arbroath railway. The inhabitants are chiefly supported by weaving linen cloth. Besides a chapel of ease, there are churches belonging to the United Presbyterians and the Original Seceders.

CARNTEEL, or CARRENTEEL, a par. in the bar. of Dungannon, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Ballygawley. It is situated in a cultivated district on the banks of the river Blackwater, and contains the market town of Aughnacloy. Carnteel was part of the extensive tract given by James I. to Sir Thomas Ridgway. Part of the parish is mountainous, with bog. Here are beds of good limestone and building stone, which are quarried extensively. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher, of the val. with that of Aghaloo, of £1,443, in the patron. of the archbishop. The parish church was destroyed during the Civil War. The present church, built about 1737, stands in the village of Aughnacloy; it has a tower and spire. There are chapels for Presbyterians, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, and several schools. There is a good mineral spring at Garvey. The principal mansions are Storm Hill, the Bawn, and Millview.

CARNWALLON HUNDRED, one of the 8 hunds. of the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, situated in the southern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Iskennen, on the E. by Glamorganshire, on the S. by the river Burry, and on the W. by the hund. of Kidwelly. It contains the pars. of Llanedy, Llandilly, Llangennech, Llannon, and Pembrey.

CARNWATH, a par. containing the vils. of Carnwath and Wilsontown, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is 12 miles long in a northerly direction, by 8 miles broad. It is a station on the Caledonian railway. The par. is situated in a moorland district on the banks of the Clyde, into which the Dippool, Medwin, and other streams here fall. The manor of Carnwath, raised to a barony about 1430, was held for several centuries by the Somerville family, having been granted to William de Somerville by David I. After several changes of possession, it came to the Dalzells, and from them to the Lockharts, who still hold it. The village consists of one street, with many neat dwellings and a tolbooth, a small ancient edifice, near which stands the cross, inscribed with the names and distances of various places. The surface of the parish rises at one point to the height of 1,200 feet; coal, iron, limestone, and clay are found in abundance at Wilsontown, where a large foundry has existed since 1779. Farming and weaving are the chief occupations of the people. Extensive ruins of Cowdailly Castle exist 1 mile N.W. of the village. The par. is in the presb. of Lanark, in the patron. of Sir N. M'Donold Lockhart, Bart. The minister has a stipend of £250. The church is of modern date, and stands near the site of the old church, portions of which still remain; one part is the burial-place of the Lockharts, and contains a tomb with effigies of one of the Somervilles and his lady. There is a Free church and an United Presbyterian church at Carnwath; also one of the latter at Braehead. Carnwath House is a seat of the Lockharts. Carnwath gives the title of earl to the Dalzells. A weekly market is held on Friday, and fairs in February, April, May, July, August, and October.

CAROGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbister, hund. of Knighton, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 10 miles to the W. of Knighton.

CAROLINE PLACE, a vil. in the par. of St. Martin in the co. of Perth, 5 miles to the N. of Perth.

CARON-UWCH-CLAWDD, or STRATA FLORIDA a chplry. in the par. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, hund. o Penarth, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 5 mile N. of Tregaron, its post town. It includes the vil. Rhydfendigaed. It is chiefly interesting as the site o the famous abbey of Ystrad-Flur, or Strata Flori The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David' val. £80, in the patron. of W. E. Powell, Esq., the lord the manor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Th village is seated in a wild country near the source of th river Teifi and the Roman road called the Sarn Hele The abbey was founded about the middle of the 12th cen tury, for monks of the Cistercian order, by Rhys-ab-Gru fydd. It was burnt down, but restored near the close the following century, and flourished till the Dissolution when it had a revenue of £118, and was given to th Stedmans. The ruins consist of the gateway, in th Saxon style, with parts of the walls and building Caron-Uwch-Clawdd House is the chief residence.

CARON-YS-CLAWDD, a par. in the hund. Penarth, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 7 mil to the N.E. of Lampeter. It is situated on the banks of th river Teifi, and contains the market town of Tregaro the tnshps. of Argoed with Ystrad, Blaen-Aeron, Bla Caron, Crees with Berwyn, Tre-Cefel, Tref-Lynn, a Caron-Uwch-Clawdd. It was in this neighbourhoo that a conflict took place about 1040, between Gruffy ab Llewelyn and Howel, in which the latter was defeat and slain. The par. is of very great extent, comprisin an area of 39,138 acres.

CARPERBY-CUM-THORESBY, a joint tnshp. i the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of West Hang, in the Nort Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the E. of Askrigg

CARR, a hmlt. in the par. of Laughton-en-le-Morth wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.W. of Tickhill.

CARRA BARONY, one of the 9 bars. of the c of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, situated in t middle of the co., and bounded on the N. by Lou Conn and the bar. of Tyrawley; on the E. by th bars. of Gallen and Clanmorris; on the S. by the b of Kilmain, Lough Mask, and the co. of Galway; a on the W. by the bars. of Murrisk, Burrishoole, a Tyrawley. It contains the pars. of Aglish, Ballyhes Ballyovey, Breaghwy, Burriscarra, Drum, Manul Rossee, Tonaghty, and Turlough, with parts of the pa of Ballintober, Islandeady, and Kildacommoge. T bar. extends over an area of about 147,000 acres.

CARRAGH, or CARAGH, a par. in the bar. of Cla in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 mi to the N.W. of Naas. It lies in a fertile and cultivat country on the banks of the river Liffey. The Gra canal passes near it. There are extensive flour-mills Yeomanstown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. with two oth benefices, £149, in the patron. of the archbishop. Th is no church. Donore and Yeomanstown are among t chief residences in the vicinity.

CARRAGHADOO, a hmlt. in the bar. of Dunkell in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, miles to the N.E. of Kinvarra.

CARRAN, a par. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N. Corrofin. A monastery is said to have been erect here by St. Columb. Limestone is abundant in t district, and some copper is found. The living is a v united with that of Noughaval, in the dioc. of Killal Kiltenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh. The chur has long been dilapidated. Columbkill Cottage is one the chief residences.

CARRANROE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ida, in the co Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to t S.E. of Inistioge.

CARRAUN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tireragh, in co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles to N. of Ballina.

CARREDFYNYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanefy und. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 5 miles to the N.W. of Denbigh.

CARREENS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Headford.

CARREGHOVA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llan-y-Mynech, hund. of Chirk, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 5 miles to the E. of Llanfyllin. It is seated on the banks of the river Vyrnwy, not far from Offa's Dyke, and until recently formed part of the co. of Denbigh. The Montgomery canal passes near it. The inhabitants of the village are chiefly employed in the mines and stone-quarries of the neighbourhood.

CARR-END, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bainbridge, par. of Aysgarth, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Askrigg.

CARR-GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Darton, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Barnsley.

CARRHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Belton, wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the N. of. Epworth.

CARRICK, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 11 miles to the N. of Rathangan. It is situated in a fertile country on the banks of the river Boyne, and was the site of a fortress called Carrig Castle, an old seat of the Bermyngams, of which there are some ruins. The parish contains a tract of bog, and quarries of limestone. The living is a vic. forming part of the union of Carbury, or Castle-Carbury, in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare. Among the residences of the gentry are Rahan and Ballindolan.

CARRICK, or CARRICK-ON-SUIR, a par. and market town in the bar. of East Iffa and Offa, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 13 miles to the E. of Clonmel, and 112 miles to the S.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the border of Waterford, in a rich and highly cultivated district in the valley of the Suir, and is a station on the Waterford and Limerick railway. This parish was the site of a castle, founded soon after 1300 by the Butlers, who owned the district as well as Carrick-Beg on the opposite side of the Suir in Waterford. An Augustine priory was established here about 1200 by William de Cantell and his wife, which was given at the Dissolution to the Earl of Ormond. Another castle was built on its site. The town of Carrick-on-Suir has one main street parallel with the river, which runs E. and W., and is crossed by an old bridge of stone, connecting the town with Carrick-Beg. The principal business is the corn and provision trade. The woollen manufacture was once carried on here, but has gradually ceased. There is a good trade in timber, coal, and slate. The Suir was formerly not navigable above Fiddown, except for lighters; but at a considerable outlay improvements have been made, and vessels of 200 tons burthen now approach the town. A new townhall and a new courthouse have been erected. There are also a bridewell, barracks for infantry, and a police station. The Union poorhouse stands to the W. of the town. Quarter and petty sessions are held, the latter fortnightly. The living is a union of the rect. of Kilmurray, and vics. of Carrick and Ardcullum, val. £426 13*s.* 10*d.*, with glebe-house and 8¾ acres of land, Irish. The parish church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There are in the town a large and handsome Roman Catholic chapel, a monastery of the order of Christian Brotherhood, and a convent of the sisters of the order of the Presentation. Connected with these are large schools for boys and girls. Here are also a fever hospital and a dispensary. Carrick-on-Suir is the seat of a Poor-law union. The castle, now partly in ruins, was long the seat of the Ormonds, and it was here that the great Duke of Ormond first received the tidings of the rebellion in 1641. The surrounding country is preeminent for its fertility, and the charm of its varied scenery. Among the seats of the gentry are Tinvane, the residence of H. W. Briscoe, Esq.; Deerpark Lodge, Glen Lodge, The Cottage, &c. Carrick gives the title of earl to a branch of the Butler family. Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on the first Thursday of each month, and also on Whit-Tuesday, the 15th August, and the 10th October.

CARRICK, a par. in the bar. of Fartullagh, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S. of Mullingar. It lies on the S. shore of Lough Ennel. The living is a rect. united with that of Moylisker, in the dioc. of Meath. The principal seats are Carrick House and Rochfort, the latter the residence of Sir F. Hopkins, Bart. In the parish are various remains of antiquity, consisting of forts, a castle, and a church.

CARRICK, or CARRIG, a vil. in the bar. of Bargy, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S. of Taghmon. It is seated near the coast.

CARRICK, or CARRIG, a par. in the bar. of Shelmaliere, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the W. of Wexford, and 3 from Wexford harbour. It is situated in a pleasant country on the S. bank of the river Slaney, which is crossed by a handsome wooden bridge, erected about 1795. On the W. side of the parish are the Forth mountains. Good stone for building purposes is quarried here. In the village stands the Union poorhouse and the Presbyterian manse. The living is an impropriate cur., forming part of the union of St. Patrick's, Wexford, in the dioc. of Ferns. The church has long been decayed, but there is an old churchyard in Belmont Glen. The principal seat is Belmont, in a beautiful spot, commanding fine views of the Slaney and the surrounding country. Other residences are Mount Henry, Alma, Cullentra, and Somerton. Near the river are vestiges of an old castle called Shan-a-Court, some of the material of which was used in building Belmont. Almost on the same spot is a monument in imitation of the ancient round towers, erected in memory of the Wexford men who fell in the Crimean war. Here is also a square tower, part of Barntown Castle, which with the adjacent lands was given by Cromwell to Colonel Le Hunte. In the vicinity are remains of another fortress, called Ferry-Carrig Castle, standing on a rock by the river.

CARRICKANEANE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Slane, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.E. of Slane.

CARRICKART, a vil. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 15 miles to the N. of Letterkenny. It is seated on the S.W. coast of Mulroy Bay.

CARRICKAWINNY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Mohill, in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles from Drumod.

CARRICKBAGGOT, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.E. of Dunleer. The living is a rect. united with that of Rathdrumin, in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher. In the vicinity is Rokeby Hall, the seat of Sir R. Robinson, Bart. The par. contains 826 acres.

CARRICKBEG, a vil. in the par. of Kilmoleran, bar. of Upper Third, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, forming the S. suburb of Carrick-on-Suir. It is situated on the S. bank of the Suir, and is connected with the town of Carrick by an ancient bridge of stone. It is a place of some antiquity, and is said to have been a corporate town. It was the site of a Franciscan monastery, founded in the 14th century by one of the Butlers, earls of Ormond, which existed till the Dissolution. The tower of the conventual church still remains, and is a curiosity of architecture, being square, and increasing in diameter from the base upwards, so as to resemble an inverted pyramid. An elegant archway of the monastery is also preserved, and forms now the entrance to the Roman Catholic chapel. There has not for many years been a Protestant living in the parish of Kilmoleran, which is a very small one. Here is a friary of the Franciscan order, founded about 1822, with a chapel built of stone in the perpendicular style, with a groined roof and a tower. Petty sessions are held, and a police force is stationed here. There is a small courthouse. Annual fairs are held on the 26th January, the 26th February, the 25th March, the 28th April, the 15th June, the 15th July, the 27th September, the 7th November, and the 5th December.

CARRICKBOY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilglass, bar. of Shrule, in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Ardagh. A police station is established here. The principal seat is Richmont.

CARRICK DISTRICT, one of the 3 ancient divs. of the co. of Ayr, Scotland, being that part of the co. which is bounded on the N. by the river Doon. It extends about 32 miles in length from N. to S., and about 20 miles in breadth, and is a wild and hilly country. It comprises the pars. of Ballantrae, Barr, Colmonell, Dailly, Girvan, Kirkmichael, Kirkoswald, Maybole, and Straiton. The highest ground is at Benerara, which rises to the height of 1,440 feet. The principal rivers are the Girvan and the Stinchar, which are both fed by many smaller streams. Carrick gives name to an earldom, which, since the marriage of Robert Bruce with the Countess of Carrick, has belonged to the royal family, and is now held by the Prince of Wales. Its superficial area may be computed at about 300,000 acres.

CARRICKDUFF, a hmlt. in the bar. of Forth, in the co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Clonegall. It is seated near the border of Wexford, on the river Slaney.

CARRICK, EAST and WEST, hmlts. in the bar. of Ross, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, near Lough Corrib.

CARRICKFERGUS, a par. and market town, seaport, and parliamentary borough, forming a co. of itself, locally in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles to the N.E. of Belfast, and 110 miles to the N. of Dublin. It is situated on the north-western shore of Belfast Lough, and is connected with the Belfast and Northern Counties railway by a short branch line.—Carrickfergus ("rock of Fergus") is a town of great antiquity, and the site of a noble castle, founded probably about 1200 by one of the De Courcys, but which soon after came into the possession of the De Lacys. It holds an important place in the history of the country, and has been the scene of many important transactions. Invited by the De Lacys, who had been expelled by the English, Edward Bruce laid siege to the castle in 1315, and took it; but being soon after defeated and killed, the castle was recovered by its former owners. In 1333 this place was taken and held for a short time by the O'Nials. It was burnt by the Scots in 1386, and again partly destroyed in 1400. But the English remained in possession of the castle, and towards the end of the 16th century a stone wall of great strength was built round the town, which was further defended by a moat and seven towers. The town was at that time greatly reduced in population and prosperity, but began to recover itself under the shelter of its new fortifications. Fresh harassments and frequent vicissitudes make up its history during the civil war of the 17th century. Colonel Arthur Chichester was governor of the town when the war broke out. In 1642 the castle was occupied by the Scotch under General Munroe, who held it till 1648, when General Monk succeeded him. After several other changes of possession, it was taken in August, 1689, by Schomberg for William III. The king himself landed here in the following year, on his way to take the command in the campaign terminated by the battle of the Boyne. The quiet of the town was not again disturbed by any occurrences of historical importance until a body of French, under General Thurot, attacked and took possession of it in February, 1760. They retained possession only for a few days. In April, 1778, the adventurer, Paul Jones, in an American vessel, captured a British war-ship off this town.—The town extends about a mile along the lough, and has several good streets, the houses being mostly built of stone. A large part of the walls still stand, but of the four gates only one is left. The trade of the town is of no great importance. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the flax and cotton-mills and in the tanneries; but the fisheries form the principal occupation of the people. A small coasting trade is carried on, coal, iron, and timber being the chief imports, and cattle and grain the exports. The port is subordinate to that of Belfast. The harbour is formed by a small pier. There are a townhall, court-house, market-house, and custom-house. Carrickfergus is a borough by prescription, and is said to have been made a county of itself by King John. The corporation, styled the "mayor, sheriff, burgesses, and commonalty of the town of Carrickfergus," is superseded by a board of commissioners, to whom the local government is entrusted. The borough returned two members to parliament until the Union, since which it has returned one member. The limits of the parliamentary borough are the same as those of the parish and the county of the town. Carrickfergus was formerly the county town of Antrim, but the assizes and other county business have been transferred to Belfast. Quarter and petty sessions are held here, and there are police and coastguard stations. The town is frequented as a watering-place. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, Connor, and Dromore, val. with several other benefices united, £7— in the patron. of the crown. The church, which stands on an elevated spot, is dedicated to St. Nicholas. It is a very old building in the form of a cross, with a tower and spire, erected about 1780, and has a monument of the Chichesters, and a stained east window added in 1800. There is a handsome chapel belonging to the Presbyterians, and others to the Independents, Wesleyans, and Covenanters. There are two free schools, one of which has an endowment; 14 almshouses for old men, endowed by Henry Gill in 1761, and several other charities.—The castle, which is in good preservation, stands on the S. side of the town, on a rock projecting into the sea. The walls are 9 feet thick, and the entrance is between two semicircular towers. The space enclosed consists of an upper and lower yard, in the former of which stands the keep, a square structure 90 feet in height, now serving as an armoury. Here are barracks, and extensive military stores. The magazine is bomb-proof, and the battery consists of about 20 guns. There is a fine prospect from the top of the keep. The site of the old monastery is occupied by the court-house and gaol. Near the town, on the W. side, was formerly the priory of Woodburn, or Goodburn, of which there are no ruins. The Spittal Parks, on the E. side, were the site of an ancient hospital. In the neighbourhood are many tumuli, and several mineral springs.—The town is divided into the Irish and Scotch quarters; the former being the western and the latter the eastern section: these designations arose from circumstances occurring in the 17th century. Carrickfergus was the birthplace of Bishop Tenison. Near the town is Lough Mourne, which lies at an elevation of 556 feet above the level of the sea. The neighbourhood has several hamlets, and many seats of the gentry, among which are Thornfield, Oakfield, Glynn Park, &c. Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 12th May and 1st November.

CARRICKINANE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ida, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, not far from Mullinavat.

CARRICKMACQUIGLEY, a vil. in the par. of Upper Moville, bar. of Inishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.E. of Muff. It lies on the N.W. shore of Lough Foyle, and was made a market town by Charles I. The market has long been disused. There are several seats of the gentry in the neighbourhood.

CARRICKMACROSS, a market town in the par. of Magheross, bar. of Farney, in the co. of Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 25 miles S.E. by S. from Monaghan and 50 miles N.E. by N. from Dublin. Inniskeen, a station of the North-Western railway of Ireland, is about 5 miles distant. The barony of Farney was granted by Queen Elizabeth to the celebrated Earl of Essex, who built a castle, called by his name, close by the town. It was burnt down in the civil war of 1641, and no remains of it now exist. With the exception of lands formerly or still belonging to the church, the whole arony is now equally divided between the Marquis of ath and E. P. Shirley, Esq., M.P., each of whom owns half of the town. The town has one main street, ntaining a number of good shops and private dwellings, d several smaller streets. The old market-house, built out 1747 of part of the remains of the castle, stood in e centre of the main street. It having been partially stroyed by fire some years ago, was finally removed 1861, and a very handsome building erected in its ead, at one side of the main street, at a cost of more an £2,000. The manufacture of brogues, or coarse oes, is carried on, and there is a good general trade ith the surrounding district. There are a tannery and large distillery, which last, however, has not been orking since the year 1859. In the vicinity are quar- es of limestone and freestone. The town contains a ndsome court-house, built in 1844, a small bridewell, branch of the National Bank, fronted entirely with t stone, and a police station. The parish church of agheross originally stood a little out of the town. It as burnt down in 1641, rebuilt in 1682, but on its decay out a century later a new church was built in the town 1791. It is a plain but neat structure, with a tower d well-proportioned spire. A Roman Catholic chapel as built about 1780. It is now (1863) being pulled wn and a very ornamental structure raised in its place. he grammar school, established by Lord Weymouth in 711, has an endowment of £70 per annum. It was built in 1830, and is a flourishing institution. The wn has also National, parochial, and industrial schools, dispensary, and a handsome fever hospital, used like- ise as a general infirmary. Carrickmacross is the seat f a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union house. etty sessions are held every second Friday. There re also quarter sessions. Near the town are Lough Fea astle, a magnificent building, the residence of E. P. hirley, Esq.; Lisanisk, Longfield, Essex Castle (on the te of the old building), Belle Vue, Derryolam Glebe, the ats of resident gentry. Corn markets are held on Wednesday and Saturday, and a general market on hursday. Fairs are held on the 27th May, 10th July, 7th September, 9th November, 10th December, the econd Thursday in August, and each month from anuary to April.

CARRICKMINES, a vil. in the par. of Tully, bar. of Rathdown, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ire- nd, 7 miles to the S. of Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway. This place ad once a castle, of which remains are still to be seen. Annual fairs are held here in January, April, June, and October.

CARRICKMORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Raphoe, in he co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles to he N. of Raphoe. It is seated on the banks of the river Foyle, close to the Londonderry and Enniskillen rail- way.

CARRICK-ON-SHANNON, a market town in the ar. of Kiltoghart, in the bar. and co. of Leitrim, but xtending into the par. of Killukin, bar. of Boyle, in the o. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 32 miles to the S. of Sligo, and 98 miles to the N.W. of Dublin. It is the county town of Leitrim, and is seated n the banks of the Shannon, which is here crossed by a bridge of eleven arches, erected about 1720. Carrick was formerly a borough, under a charter granted by James I., in 1613, and returned two members to the Irish parliament till the Union, when it was disfran- chised. The corporation is extinct. The town consists of one principal street with several lanes, and is neither paved nor well lighted. The trade once carried on here in coarse linen, frieze, flannel, &c., has dwindled away. The corn, butter, and provision trades form the chief business of the place at present. The improvements made in the navigation of the Shannon, and the erection of a quay here have contributed to the benefit of the town. There is a convenient market-place with a mar- ket-house by the river, a handsome court-house, county gaol, county infirmary, barracks, and police station. The town contains the parish church of Kiltoghart, rebuilt about 1830, and chapels for Roman Catholics and Wes- leyan and Primitive Methodists. There are two National schools. Carrick is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union poorhouse. The assizes and quarter sessions for Leitrim are held here in rotation, and petty sessions once a fortnight. The Leitrim Journal, a weekly newspaper, is published here. Thursday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 15th January, the 12th May, the 11th June, and the 21st August.

CARRICK-ON-SUIR. See CARRICK, Tipperary.

CARRICKSHEDOGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Shel- burne, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.E. of New Ross.

CARRIDEN, a par. in the co. of Linlithgow, Scot- land, 2 miles to the N. of Linlithgow. It is situated in a well-cultivated district on the S. side of the Frith of Forth, and includes the vils. of Blackness, Bridgeness, Grangepans, Cuffabouts, and Muirhouses. This place is supposed to have been the eastern termination of the Wall of Antoninus, and to have been the site of one of the forts which occurred at intervals along its length—a fact pro- bably alluded to in its name, which is a corruption of Caereden, signifying "fort on the wing." Various Roman relics were discovered here about the middle of the last century. Sandstone, ironstone, and coal of excellent quality abound, and salt is manufactured at Grangepans, though not so extensively as formerly. The living, val. £300, is in the presb. of Linlithgow, in the patron. of the Duke of Hamilton. The parish church formerly belonged to the abbey of Holyrood, to which it was given, in the 12th century, by one of the De Viponts. There is a Free church at Bo'ness, for the two parishes of Borrows- townness and Carriden. Carriden was the birthplace of the celebrated Colonel Gardiner, who was slain at the battle of Prestonpans, in 1745. The chief mansion is Carriden House.

CARRIG. See CARRICK.

CARRIG, a vil. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Mallow.

CARRIG, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles to the N.E. of Borrisokane.

CARRIGAHOLT, a vil. in the par. and bar. of Mo- yarta, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 15 miles to the W. of Kilrush, and 205 miles from Dublin. It is seated on a small bay, on the N. side of the estuary of the Shannon, and was the site of a fortress belonging to the MacMahons, which was afterwards granted to the O'Briens. It was besieged and taken by General Lud- low during the civil war of the 17th century. The ruins stand on a rock by the bay. The village has a small pier harbour, and the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries and the coasting trade, the latter consisting of the export of corn, provisions, &c. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a dispensary. Near the site of the castle is a modern mansion, named Carrigaholt Castle, the seat of the Burtons, to whom the village belongs.

CARRIGAHORRIG, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Or- mond, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ire- land, 5 miles to the N. of Borrisokane.

CARRIGALINE, a par. in the bars. of Kerricurrihy, Cork, and Kinalea, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, to the S.E. of Cork. It is situated in a pleasant and cultivated country, on the W. side of Cork harbour, and includes the vils. of Carrigaline, 7½ miles, Shombally, 8 miles, and Douglas, 2 miles from Cork. This parish was the site of a castle founded in the reign of King John by De Cogan, and held for many generations by the earls of Desmond. After its forfeiture by them, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and several changes of possession, the estate was sold to Sir R. Boyle, after- wards Earl of Cork. The castle was taken in 1568 by Lord-Deputy Sydney. The parish contains abundance of limestone and some clay slate. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the corn and provision trade, and in the fisheries. There are some extensive flour-mills. The village of Carrigaline contains a police station and a court-house, in which petty sessions are held. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, val. £810 gross, in the patron. of E. H. Lecky, Esq. The church, erected about 1824, on the site of the former edifice, is a handsome stone structure in the perpendicular style, with a good tower and elegant spire. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, parochial and other schools, a dispensary, and a post-office where money orders are issued. The Earl of Shannon is proprietor of the village. Fairs are held here on Easter-Monday, Whit-Monday, the 12th August, and the 8th November.

CARRIGALLEN, a par. in the bar. of the same name, in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Cloone, and 87 miles to the N.W. of Dublin. It is situated in a boggy country, and contains abundance of good limestone. Petty sessions are held, and a police force is stationed in the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, Ardagh, and Elphin, val. £901, in the gift of the bishop. The chief residences are Clooncrick Castle, where the O'Rourkes had their seat; Woodford House, and Killygar House. Monday is the market day. Fairs are held annually on the 5th April, the 7th May, the 9th August, the 8th October, and the 31st December.

CARRIGALLEN BARONY, one of the five bars. of the co. of Leitrim, in the prov. of Connaught, Ireland, situated in the south-eastern part of the co., and bounded on the N.E. by the co. of Cavan, on the S.E. by the co. of Longford, and on the W. by the bars. of Mohill and Leitrim. It contains the pars. of Carrigallen and Oughteragh, with parts of Cloone, Drumreilly, and Fenagh, and extends over an area of about 63,500 acres.

CARRIGALOE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles from Cork.

CARRIGANAFFRIN, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles to the S.W. of Macroom.

CARRIGANS, a vil. in the par. of Killea, bar. of Raphoe, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Londonderry. It is seated on the W. bank of the river Foyle, and is a station on the Dundalk, Enniskillen, and Londonderry railway. Near the village is Dunmore, the seat of R. M'Clintock, Esq.

CARRIGBOG, a hmlt. in the par. of West Carbery, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Bantry. It is seated near the head of Dunmanus Bay.

CARRIGCLUHER, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ibane, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S.E. of Clonakilty. It is seated on the sea-coast.

CARRIGDOWNANE, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S. of Kildorrery. It is situated in a fertile district on the banks of the river Funcheon, a branch of the Blackwater. Limestone is found here in abundance. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, val. £90. The presentation is suspended.

CARRIGEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles to the N.E. of Castle Island.

CARRIGILLIHY, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Carbery, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles E. of Skibbereen. It is seated on the sea-coast.

CARRIGLEAMLEARY, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Mallow. It lies in a cultivated district on the N. side of the river Blackwater, and was the site of a castle, of which there are some picturesque ruins. Limestone is obtained in the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, val. £125, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, erected about 1835, is a small edifice in the perpendicular style. It stands on the site of the old parish church. The principal seat is Carrig Park, which is situated in a pleasant spot near the castle ruins, and commands a beautiful prospect.

CARRIGNAVAR, a vil. in the par. of Dunbulloge, and bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N. of Cork. It was the site of a castle, the seat of Lord Muskerry, remains of which are still seen. There is a Roman Catholic chapel in the village. Carrignavar House is the principal residence.

CARRIGOON, a hmlt. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Mallow and the river Blackwater.

CARRIGPARSON, or WILLESTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Limerick. The Waterford and Limerick railway passes near it. The soil is fertile, and there is a tract of bog. Limestone and basalt are found. The living is a rect. united with the vic. of Caherconlish, in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore. There is no church.

CARRIGROHANE, or KILGROHANMORE, a par. in the bars. of Cork and East Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the W. of Cork. It is situated in a district of rich pasture-land on the banks of the river Lee, and contains the vil. of Ballincollig. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the great powder manufactory at the latter place. The Lee is crossed by a stone bridge. The parish contains abundance of limestone. There are some large flour-mills on the Lee. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, val. with several others, £784, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. The living is held with the precentorship of St. Finbar's, Cork. In the parish are remains of two ancient castles, one of which is at Ballincollig, and was a seat of the Barretts.

CARRIGROHANEBEG, or KILGROHANBEG, a par. in the bar. of East Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the W. of Cork. It is situated in a rich tract of pasture-land on the bank of the Lee, where the Avonbeg falls into it. The scenery along the valley of the Avonbeg is remarkably beautiful. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, val. £131, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is decayed and overgrown with ivy. The chief mansion is Woodside.

CARRIGSHANE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Imokilly, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Middleton, and the north-eastern extremity of Cork harbour.

CARRIGTOHILL, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the W. of Middleton. It lies in a fertile country on the northern shore of Cork harbour, and was the site of a castle and a monastery erected by the Barrys before the 14th century. The castle being threatened by an English force under Sir Walter (then Captain) Raleigh, in 1580, it was demolished by its owner to prevent its falling into their hands. There are some remains both of the castle and the abbey. The parish contains extensive beds of limestone. There is a police station in the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, val. with that of Kilcurfin, united, £307, in the patron. of the bishop and the representatives of John Anderson. The church stands near the site of the old abbey. The principal mansion is Footy House. Fairs are held in the village on the 12th March, the 12th May, the 28th August, the 20th September, and the 8th November.

CARRIGUDROHID, a hmlt. in the bar. of East Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, miles to the E. of Macroom. It is near the river Lee. A fair is held annually on the 24th June.

CARRIGVISTAIL, a vil. in the par. of Templetenny bar. of West Iffa and Offa, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

CARRINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Bowden hund. of Bucklow, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the N. of Altrincham. Manchester is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Irwell. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £37. in the patron. of the Earl of Stamford and Warrington. The church is dedicated to St. George.

CARRINGTON, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, including the vil. of Carrington, or Primrose, miles to the S. of Dalkeith. It is situated in a hill country, on the banks of the South Esk, not far from the southern division of the North British railway. This district was anciently the estate of the Dalhousies, and afterwards of Sir A. Primrose. The workpeople are employed in the neighbouring mines. The surface rises at the Muirfoot hills to the height of 1,860 feet. The living, worth £158, is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and in the patron. of the Earl of Roseberry, a descendant of Sir A. Primrose. The par. is about 4 miles long and 2 broad.

CARRINGTON, a parochial chplry. in the eastern div. of the soke of Bolingbroke, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles to the N. of Boston, its post town. Before 1812, when it was made a parochial chplry., Carrington was part of the par. of Helpringham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val £86, in the gift of trustees.

CARRINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Basford, wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 1 mile to the N. of Nottingham, its post town. It is seated in a beautiful country, near the Midland railway, on which Basford is a station. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. John.

CARR-LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of North Brierley, par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York.

CARROG, a tnshp. in the par. of Corwen, hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 1 mile from Corwen. It is near the river Dee and the Berwyn mountains.

CARRON, a vil. in the par. of Larbert, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles to the N. of Falkirk. It is situated in a pleasant district on the river Carron, which takes its rise in Campsie Fells, and after a course of about 20 miles falls into the Forth at Grangemouth. The banks of this river have, since the time of the Romans, been the scene of many memorable transactions. In the beginning of the 5th century a desperate battle was fought near this place between the Scots and Picts and the Romans. In 1298, Wallace fought the English under Edward I. And in the same locality, near Falkirk, in 1745, Prince Charles Edward defeated the Hanoverian troops. The village is the seat of the well-known Carron Iron Works, one of the largest establishments of the kind in Europe. They were founded in 1760, and are the property of a chartered company. The works comprise blast or smelting furnaces, cupola and air furnaces, grinding, glazing, and boring mills, &c., and are employed in the manufacture of ordnance of all kinds, anchors, anvils, machinery, and implements of agriculture. The company also work the extensive mines of coal, ironstone, and limestone in the neighbourhood. The works give employment to several thousand persons. Carronades were first made here, and took their name from this place.

CARRONBRIDGE, a vil. in the pars. of Durrisdeer and Morton, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 18 miles to the N. of Dumfries. It is seated on Carron Water, a feeder of the river Nith, and is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway.

CARRONSHORE, a vil. in the pars. of Larbert and Bothkennar, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, close to West Carron, and serving as a seaport to the Carron Iron Works, with which it is connected by a railway. Vessels of 150 tons can ascend to this village.

CARROW, a joint hmlt. with Trowse-Millgate, in the par. of Trowse, city of Norwich, in the co. of Norfolk, forming part of the southern suburbs.

CARROW, a hmlt. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the N. of Oughterard. It is on the S. side of Lough Corrib.

CARROWANERAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Carra, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Ballinrobe. It is near Lough Mask.

CARROWBAUN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ross, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles to the N. of Oughterard.

CARROWDORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ards, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N. of Grey Abbey. In the vicinity is Carrowdore Castle.

CARROWDRUMBRANAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.W. of Burren.

CARROWHEKEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ross, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles to the N. of Oughterard.

CARROWKEEL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Creggs.

CARROWKEEL, a hmlt. in the par. of Inishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N. of Muff. It is seated on the shore of Lough Foyle.

CARROWMORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilmaine, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles to the E. of Ballinrobe.

CARROWN, a vil. in the bar. of Moyarta, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Carrigaholt, at the mouth of the river Shannon.

CARROWNACLAW, a hmlt. in the bar. of Corcomroe, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles to the N.W. of Ennistymon. It is near the sea-coast.

CARROWNAGEERAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Leyny, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Collooney, on the banks of the river Arrow.

CARROWNEAN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballynahinch, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles to the N. of Clifden.

CARROWNTOBER, a hmlt. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Burren.

CARROWROE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Tulla, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles from Tulla.

CARROWTRASNA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Inishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.E. of Moville. It is not far from the coast.

CARROWWILKIN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Leyny, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.W. of Tobercurry. It is situated near the river Moy.

CARRUTHERS. See MIDDLEBIE, Dumfriesshire.

CARSEBURN, a vil. in the par. and co. of Forfar, Scotland, 2 miles from Forfar.

CARSETHORN, a vil. in the par. of Kirkbean, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 10 miles to the S. of Dumfries. It is situated on the N. shore of the Solway Frith and has a small harbour, subordinate to the port of Dumfries.

CARSHALTON, or CASEHORTON, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Wallington, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles W. of Croydon, and 10 S. of London. It is a post town, and a station on the Epsom and Leatherhead branch of the London, Brighton, and South-Coast railway. The parish is situated in a pleasant country on the northern border of Banstead Downs, famous as the scene of the Epsom races, and on the banks of the river Wandle. Carshalton is a place of great antiquity, and was made a market town in the reign of Henry III. In Domesday Book it is named Aulton. Chalk is the substratum of the district. Within the parish are several extensive corn-mills, drug-mills, paper-mills, oil-mills, snuff manufactories, and other similar establishments. The school, founded in 1848 by the Ordnance Department, for the education of officers for the artillery and engineers, has been done away with. The Wandle, famed for its excellent trout, is here crossed by a bridge, built about 1828, and in the centre of the village expands into a beautiful sheet of water, replenished by copious rills which rise in the parish. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the annual val. of £875, in the patron. of Albemarle Cator, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice partly in the early English style, with a tower between the nave and chancel. The body of the church is of brick, and of later date than the chancel, which is built of flint. It contains some ancient monuments of the Seawens and others, and two remarkably fine monumental brasses. One, beautifully coloured, is to the memory of Sir Nicholas Gaynesford, sheriff, who died in 1490, his lady and family; and the other, with a double canopy, to the memory of T. Ellenbridge, who died in 1497. The register dates from the year 1538. There is a National school. The charitable endowments of the parish, including bequests by Christopher Muschamp, in 1660, for apprenticing poor children; and by Edward Fellows, in 1726, for the like purpose, and the relief of the poor, produce about £60 per annum. Near the church is a spring named after Anne Boleyn, which is now arched over with stone. Carshalton House is a pleasant seat, and once belonged to Dr. Radcliffe, founder of the Radcliffe Library at Oxford.

CARSICK HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upper Hallam, in the par. and borough of Sheffield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the W. of Sheffield.

CARSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wirksworth, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles to the W. of Wirksworth, its post town. It is crossed by the Peak Forest railway. The district is hilly, and contains abundance of limestone, and some lead-mines. The village stands in a sheltered valley. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £176, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is small and has no tower, is dedicated to St. Margaret. The rect. was held by John Oldfield, one of the Nonconformist ministers ejected in 1662 under the Act of Uniformity, and a century later by Ellis Farneworth, translator of the works of Machiavelli. In the village is a free school, endowed by Mrs. T. Gill in 1726, the income of which is above £80.

CARSPHAIRN, a par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, with a vil. of the same name, 30 miles to the N. of Kirkcudbright. It is situated in a mountainous country on the borders of Ayrshire. The surface consists chiefly of pasture lands, on which are fed numerous herds of small black cattle and hardy mountain sheep. Iron is said to have been formerly worked here. The par. is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright, and in the patron. of the crown and W. Forbes, Esq., of Callender House, in Stirlingshire. The minister has a stipend of £182, There is a Free school for the parish of Carsphairn. The chief mansion is Craigengillan, the seat of the Hon. Colonel Cathcart. Sir Loudon McAdam, the celebrated engineer, and originator of the system of macadamised roads, was born at Waterhead, in this parish. The par. is about 10 miles in length and the same in breadth.

CARSTAIRS, a par. containing the vils. of Carstairs and Ravenstruther, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish, situated on the N. bank of the river Clyde, is partly hilly. It was crossed by Watling Street, and has the remains of a Roman camp, where various antiquities have been discovered. Here was also a castle erected by the bishops of Glasgow, to whom the parish once belonged. The living, worth £234, is in the presb. of Lanark, in the patron. of H. Monteath, Esq. Carstairs House is the chief residence. The par. is about 6 miles in length and 3 in breadth.

CARSWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Buckland, hund. of Ganfield, in the co. of Berks, 3 miles N.E. of Faringdon.

CARSWELL, ABBOTS. See ABBOTSKERSWELL, Devonshire.

CARTER-KNOWL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall-Bierlow, par. and borough of Sheffield, in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.W. of Sheffield.

CARTER-MOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kirkley, par. of Ponteland, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the S. of Morpeth.

CARTHORP, a tnshp. in the par. of Burneston, wap. of Hallikeld, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the W. of Thirsk. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel in the village, and there is a charitable bequest for the poor, but of small amount. In the vicinity is a Roman entrenchment.

CARTINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles to the N.W. of Rothbury. It is situated near a branch of the river Aln, and is the site of an ancient castle, once the seat of the Ratcliffes, and subsequently of the Widdringtons.

CARTLAND, a vil. in the par. of Lanark, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles from Lanark. It is seated on the banks of the river Mouse. In the neighbourhood is a remarkably deep and bushy ravine, called Cartland Crags, crossed by a bridge of three arches. There is also a very ancient bridge of one arch, supposed to be Roman. It is said that William Wallace several times found shelter at this spot.

CARTLETT, a hmlt. in the par. of Lower Guyting, hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles to the E. of Winchcomb. It is situated on the Cotswold hills.

CARTMEL, a par. and market town, in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 14 miles, in a direct line across the sands, to the N. of Lancaster, and 254 miles from London. Newton-in-Cartmel is its post town. It gives name with Carl to a station on the Ulverston and Lancaster railway. The parish, which is of great extent, is situated in a beautiful country on the borders of Westmoreland, on the coast of Morecambe Bay, at its north-eastern extremity, and is bounded on the W. by the river Leven and Windermere Lake. The river Ken skirts it on the E. The par. comprises the chplries. of Field Broughton, Grange St. Paul's, Cartmel-Fell, Flookburgh, Lindale, and Staveley, and the tnshps. of Upper Allithwaite, Lower Allithwaite, East Broughton, Upper Holker, and Lower Holker. Cartmel was the site of a monastery of the Augustine order, founded about 1188 by William Mareschal, Earl of Pembroke, which was well endowed and flourished till the Dissolution, at which period it had a revenue of about £212. The monks had amongst other privileges that of nominating guides for passengers across the Leven sands, which are passable at low water. After the Dissolution the church of the priory, being also the parish church, was ordered by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to remain undemolished. The town of Cartmel stands in a wooded valley sheltered by bold and lofty hills, and the neighbourhood abounds with striking scenery. Most of the streets are irregularly built and very narrow, and the houses are of stone. The pursuits of the inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. Some are employed in the powder factories at Upper Holker. Limestone is abundant in the district. Travellers are conducted over the sands by guides (called Carters) appointed and paid by government. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £113, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It was originally the church of the priory, and is a large building in the form of a cross, in the early English style with a curious central tower. It has 26 fine carved stalls, and a beautiful window at the E. end, and contains many ancient and interesting monuments. Among these are the tomb of William de Walton, one of the first priors of Cartmel; the fine altar-tomb, with recumbent effigies of (as is supposed) Sir John Harrington and his lady, who lived in the reign of Edward I.; and monuments to the Lowthers and Prestons. The church having fallen into decay after the Dissolution, was restored by the Prestons about the middle of the 17th century, and it has been again repaired since 1855. Here is a grammar school, founded about 1650, and afterwards endowed by several benefactors, which has an income of about £100 per annum. The poor have the benefit of other charitable endowments, which produce about £50 a year. At the foot of a limestone rock, called Humphrey Head, 3 miles S. of the town, is a mineral spring, called Holy Well, the water of which is used in cases of gout, skin diseases, &c. Holker Hall, the beautiful seat of the Earl of Burlington, is 2 miles to the W. of Cartmel. In the vicinity are numerous pleasant residences of the gentry. A large number of Roman coins was discovered in the parish, early in the present century. Edmund Law, Bishop of Carlisle, was a native of Cartmel, and was educated at the grammar school. His father was incumbent of Staveley. Tuesday is the market day, but little business is transacted. Fairs are held, chiefly for the sale of cattle, on Whit-Monday, the Monday after the 23rd October, the Wednesday before Easter, and the 5th November.

CARTMEL-FELL, a chplry. in the par. of Cartmel, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 7 miles to the N. of Cartmel. Ulverstone is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the small river Winster, which runs southward through the parish to Morecambe Bay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £103, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The church is dedicated to St. Anthony. Here is an endowed school with an income of about £30 per annum. There are some other charities of small value.

CARTRON, a hmlt. in the bar. of Dunkellin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Oranmore.

CARTSDYKE, or CRAWFURDSDYKE, a vil. and quoad sacra par. in the par. of East, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 1 mile from Greenock, of which it forms the eastern suburb. It is situated on the N. shore of the Frith of Clyde, where the Carts' Burn falls into that river. It was a free burgh of barony, and the seat of a flourishing trade. The living is in the presb. of Greenock.

CARTWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkburton, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the S. of Huddersfield. Many of the work-people are employed in the woollen manufactories.

CARVARCHELL, a vil. in the par. of St. David's, hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 3 miles to the E. of St. David's. It is seated near the coast of St. Bride's Bay.

CARWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Hopesay, hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the S.E. of Bishop's Castle. It is near the river Clun.

CARY BARONY, one of the bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, situated in the northern part of the co., and bounded on the N. and E. by the North Channel; on the S. by the bars. of Lower Glenarm and Upper Dunluce; and on the W. by the bar. of Lower Dunluce. It contains the pars. of Ballintoy, Cuffeightrim, Drumtullagh, Grange, Ramean, and Rathlin Island, with parts of the pars. of Armoy and Billy. The bar. comprises an area of about 75,000 acres.

CARY-COATES, a tnshp. in the par. of Thockrington, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the E. of Bellingham.

CARY-FITZPAINE, a hmlt. in the par. of Charlton-Mackrell, hund. of Somerton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the N.W. of Ilchester. It is seated on the banks of the river Cary.

CARYSFORT, or MACREDDIN, or MOYCREDDIN, a vil. in the par. of Rathdrum, and bar. of Ballinacor, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Rathdrum. The Probys of Glenart take the title of baron from this place, which once had a castle, and was incorporated by Charles I. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, and an endowed free school.

CASCOB, a par. partly in the hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, and partly in the borough of New Radnor, hund. and co. of Radnor, South Wales, 6 miles to the W. of Presteign, its post town. It contains parts of the tnshps. of Litton and Cascob. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £190, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

CASCOB, a tnshp. united with Litton, partly in the par. of Cascob, and partly in the par. of Presteign, hund. and co. of Radnor, South Wales, 2 miles to the W. of Presteign.

CASEHORTON. See CARSHALTON, Surrey.

CASEWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Uffington, in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the E. of Stamford. It is situated near the Leicester and Peterborough branch of the Midland railway.

CASEY GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of New Forest, and par. of Kirkby Ravensworth, wap. of Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N. of Richmond, which is a station on a branch of the North-Eastern railway.

CASHEL, a city, parliamentary borough, and market town, in the bar. of Middlethird, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 15 miles to the N.W. of Clonmel, and 100 miles to the S.W. of Dublin. It has given name, with Goolds Cross, to a station on the Great Southern and Western railway, from which, however, it is 6 miles distant.—Cashel is a place of very great antiquity, but nothing is certainly known of the date of its foundation, and very little of its early history. It was the seat of the kings of Munster, and also very early the seat of a bishopric; the royal and episcopal offices being combined. Before the middle of the 12th century the diocese of Cashel was converted into an archbishopric. In 1172 Henry II. called a synod of the Irish prelates, which met at this city, and acknowledged, as it is averred, his sovereignty, and confirmed to him and his successors the kingdom of Ireland; a decree subsequently confirmed by Pope Alexander. Early in the 13th century Cashel was constituted a borough, and shortly afterwards the town, which was given to the archbishops by Henry III., was re-granted by Archbishop Marian to the burgesses, with certain reservations. After the rebellion of the 17th century, the town was occupied by the royalists, but in 1647 was attacked and taken by storm by Lord Inchiquin for the parliament. The people had taken refuge in the cathedral, and a terrible slaughter took place.—The municipal area of Cashel comprises 4,018 acres, of which 3,764 are in the rural district and 254 in the city. The city, which stands in a fine level tract of country, about 2 miles E. from the river Suir, at the foot and on the sides of the bold hill known as the Rock of Cashel, consists chiefly of five streets, Main-street being the principal one. In 1861 it comprised 919 houses, inhabited by a population of 5,596 against 957 houses, inhabited by 4,798 in 1851, showing an increase in the decennial period of 798 persons, but a decrease of 38 houses. The city is lighted with gas, and has a good supply of water from the same source from which the friars, some centuries since, brought the water through pipes into the town. A reservoir has lately been formed by the town commissioners capable of containing 600,000 gallons, at a cost of £250. Many of the houses are poorly built; but considerable improvements have been made in the general appearance of the place. No manufactures are carried on, and the only business is the general retail trade. There are a market-hall, with reading and news-rooms, a court-house, town commissioners hall, gaol, county infirmary, and fever hospital. The city contains also infantry barracks, a police station, and a savings-bank. The privileges conferred on the townsmen by Archbishop Marianus were confirmed by various royal charters, the last being granted by Charles I.; under this the city was governed till the passing of the Irish Municipal Reform Act. The corporation was then superseded, and the municipal government is now vested in a body of commissioners. The revenue of the city, derived chiefly from ancient endowments, amounts to about £1,150, and is expended by the town commissioners for the paving and cleansing of the streets, gas and water supply, and salaries of officers, &c., besides £200 yearly for the purposes of education, £180 to the parish priest as patron of the National schools, £20 to the Protestant rector to be disposed of under his control, £40 at Christmas for blankets to the poor, and £40 to the Cashel Race Fund. Cashel returned two representatives to the Irish parliament till the Union, since which it has returned one member to the imperial parliament. The constituency in 1860 was 159. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union poorhouse. Quarter sessions are held here in January and July, and petty sessions weekly.—The archbishopric of Cashel was reduced to a bishopric by the Church Temporalities Act, passed in the reign of William IV. The diocese, united with those of Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, is in the province of Dublin, and comprises most of the benefices in the county of Tipperary, with several in Limerick. The revenue of the see is fixed at £5,000 per annum. The chapter consists of a dean, archdeacon, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, and five prebendaries, who, with the parochial clergy, divide an income of £22,000, to provide for less than 5,000 worshippers, the number of churchmen within the diocese according to the returns of 1861. The living is an union of the three parishes of Cashel, Ballyclerihan, and Coleman, val. together £430, in the patron. of the crown, and forms the corps of Cashel deanery. The parish church of St. John, which is also the modern cathedral, is a large and handsome edifice of stone, with a fine spire. It was completed about 1783, and stands on the site of an earlier church. The rest of the town is in the parish of St. Patrick's Rock, which is the cathedral parish, and is served by the vicars choral or their deputy. There are handsome chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics and Wesleyan Methodists, a nunnery of the order of the Presentation, a National and several endowed schools. The episcopal palace is a spacious mansion with pleasant grounds, in the centre of the city, and now the residence of the dean. The library attached to the see is kept in a building close to the cathedral.—The chief point of attraction and interest is the Rock of Cashel, crowned with the ruins of several ancient structures, which, from their position above the surrounding country, have a grand effect. The rock is a precipitous mass of limestone, rising boldly from the plain, and in ancient times was the site of the palace of the kings of Munster. On its summit, which is approached by a narrow lane from the principal street, are the ruins of the ancient cathedral, Cormac's Chapel, the episcopal palace, or vicar's hall, and a round tower. The cathedral, founded about the middle of the 12th century by Donald O'Brien, was cruciform, with a central tower, and in the early English style. It has a monument to Archbishop Magrath, who died about 1621. Cormac's Chapel is a small, but singularly interesting example of early Norman architecture. It was built about 1127 by Cormac M'Carthy, King of Munster, and first bishop of Cashel, and consists of a nave and choir, with a small square tower. The roof is of stone, and groined. The chapel is in perfect preservation. Its dimensions are—length, 53 feet; breadth, 18 feet; height of the tower, 68 feet. Some fresco paintings were discovered on the walls by Archdeacon Cotton. The episcopal palace, or vicar's hall, was erected about 1420 by Archbishop O'Hedian. The round tower, which stands close to the N. transept of the cathedral, is built of stone, and is still well preserved. It is about 90 feet high. There are remains of a friary near the rock; and not far from the city are the ruins of Hore Abbey.—Wednesday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs are held on the 26th March and the 7th August, besides customary fairs on the second Wednesday in every month.

CASHEL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Glennamaddy.

CASHEL, or CASHEL AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bar. of Rathcline, in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S. of Lanesborough. It lies in a boggy country, on the eastern shore of Lough Ree, and was the site of a monastery, subordinate to the abbey of Seven Church Island. There are some picturesque remains of the building. The parish contains some beds of limestone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, Ardagh, and Elphin, val. £228, in the patron. of the bishop. The church stands near the site of the old monastery. The principal mansion is Newpark House. The par. spreads over an area of 15,860 acres.

CASHEL, a vil. in Inishmurray Island, in the bar. of Carbury, and co. of Sligo, in the prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the N. of Ballyconnell. .

CASHIO, or CASHIOBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Watford, hund. of Cashio, in the co. of Hertford, 1 mile from Watford, which is a station on the London and North-Western railway. This place is said to have been an important town of the ancient British tribe called the Cassii, and afterwards a seat of the Mercian kings. The manor of Cashio was given by Offa as an endowment to the abbey of St. Alban's, which held it till the Dissolution. It was then conferred by Henry VIII. on the Morysons, by whom the mansion was erected, and from whom the estate came to the Earl of Essex. Cashiobury Park is a spacious and well-wooded demesne, through which passes the river Gade and the Grand Junction canal. The hall, a castellated building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, is the seat of the Earl of Essex. It was repaired by Wyatt, and contains a large collection of paintings, including among others, works by Vandyke, Kneller, Sir Joshua Reynolds, and Gainsborough. It has also some specimens of carving by Gibbons.

CASHIO HUNDRED, or LIBERTY OF ST. ALBAN'S, one of the 8 hunds. of the co. of Hertford, situated in the south-western quarter of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Dacorum, on the E. by the hund. of Broadwater, on the S. by the co. of Middlesex, and on the W. by the hund. of Dacorum and the co. of Buckingham. Several portions of this hund., which was a possession of the monks of St. Alban's, lie detached in various parts of the co. The hund. contains the pars. of Abbot's Langley, Aldenham, Chipping Barnet, East Barnet, Braintfield, Codicote, Elstree, Hexton, Newnham, Northaw, Norton, St. Paul's Walden, Redbourn, Rickmansworth, Ridge, St. Alban's, Sandridge, Sarrat, and Watford, comprising about 87,600 acres.

CASHLOURA, a hmlt. in the bar. of East Carbery, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles to the N.W. of Rosscarbery.

CASINO, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kinalea, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N. of Kinsale. It is not far from the river Bandon.

CASSAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Shelburne, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.E. of New Ross.

CASSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, in the co. of Oxford, 6 miles to the N.W. of Oxford, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Thames (here called Isis), and contains the hmlt. of Worton. It was the site of a castle, a seat of the Montacutes, to whom the manor belonged. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £166, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church College, Oxford. The church, part of which is of very ancient date, is dedicated to St. Peter. It was erected in the reign of Henry II. by his chamberlain, Geoffrey Clinton. It is partly in the Norman style, and contains two monumental brasses, one of which is dated 1420. The charitable endowments of the parish, consisting chiefly of a bequest by Henry Alnutt for teaching and clothing poor boys, produce about £40 per annum.

CASSOP, a tnshp. in the par. of Kelloe, ward of Easington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 4 miles to the S.E. of Durham. It is situated in a hilly district, near the North-Eastern railway. Limestone is abundant, and many hands are employed in working the mines and quarries of the neighbourhood.

CASTELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwychllyn, hund. of Penllyn, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 6 miles to the S.W. of Bala.

CASTELLAN, a chplry. in the par. of Penrhydd or Penrith, hund. of Kilgerran, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 6 miles to the S. of Cardigan. It is situated at the eastern extremity of the Preceily range of mountains, at the foot of Vrenin Vawr.

CASTELLMAI, a vil. in the par. of Llanbeblig, hund. of Isgervai, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 2 miles from Carnarvon.

CASTELLMOCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-yn-Mochnant, hund. of Llanfyllin, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 3 miles to the N. of Llanfyllin.

CASTERN, a hmlt. in the par. of Ilam, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 9 miles to the E. of Leek. It is seated in a beautiful spot near the sources of the small rivers Hamps and Manifold.

CASTERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby Lonsdale, ward of Lonsdale, in the co. of Westmoreland, 1½ miles N.E. from Kirkby Lonsdale, its post town and railway station, and 8 N.E. from Hornby. It is situated on the E. side of the river Lune. The formation of the district is Old Red sandstone, containing limestone and coal. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £116, in the patron. of trustees. The church, erected in 1833, is a stone building, with lancet-shaped windows and a tower. Here is the far-famed Clergy Daughters' School, containing 100 daughters of clergymen, instituted by the Rev. William Carus-Wilson in 1823, and removed to its present buildings in 1833. There is also an experimental school for training servants, instituted by the same gentleman, and removed here from Whittington in 1837. The charitable endowments of the township consist of the poor's estate, which produces about £10 a year, and a small endowment to the National school. Casterton Hall, the chief residence, is the property of W. W. Carus-Wilson, Esq. It is a fine new mansion, situated in the most beautiful part of the county of Westmoreland. Casterton Old Hall, the former seat of the Wilson family, is now in the occupation of Mr. William Key, the steward of the property.

CASTERTON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of East, in the co. of Rutland, 2 miles to the N.W. of Stamford, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Gwash, here crossed by a bridge, not far from the Leicester and Peterborough branch of the Midland railway, on which Stamford is a station. This place was formerly called Brig-Casterton, and was the site of a Roman station on the ancient way called Ermine Street. Some have conjectured it to be the Causennæ of Antoninus, which is, with more probability, fixed at Ancaster, in Lincolnshire. The station is said to have been burnt by the Picts and Scots. The barony was held by Earl Morcar, and, after many changes of possession, it came to the crown in the reign of Henry VIII. It is now held by the Marquis of Exeter. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. with that of Pickworth annexed, £450, in the patron. of the Marquis of Exeter. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, was founded about the time of Henry VI., and is in the perpendicular style. It was subsequently rebuilt, and contains some old monuments and a curious ancient font. The ancient manor-house stood at Casterton Lings.

CASTERTON, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of East, in the co. of Rutland, 1 mile to the E. of Great Casterton. Stamford is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Gwash, and contains the hmlt. of Tolethorpe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. with the cur. of Tolethorpe annexed, £254, in the patron. of Lord Chesham. The church is dedicated to All Saints. It is a small building, partly in the Norman and partly in later styles of architecture, containing a monumental brass of 1382 to Sir Thomas Burton, who held the manor of Tolethorpe. The manor of Little Casterton belongs to the Hon. C. C. Cavendish.

CASTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Barrowby, wap. of Winnibriggs and Threo, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the W. of Grantham.

CASTLE, a vil. in the par. of New Cumnock, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland.

CASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Pentyrch, hund. of Miskin, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 3 miles to the N.W. of Llandaff.

CASTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle-Caereinion, and borough of Welshpool, locally in the hund. of Cawrse, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 4 miles to the W. of Welshpool.

CASTLE, a tnshp. united with Escob, in the par. of Llanwnog, hund. of Llanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, 5 miles to the W. of Newton.

CASTLE ACRE, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Lynn, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the N.E. of Swaffham railway station, and 30 W. of Norwich. Brandon is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the small river Nar, which is navigable to Narborough, 5 miles distant, and, though now an inconsiderable village, is a place of great interest for its ancient remains. It is supposed to have been a Roman station on the way called the Peddar, of which traces have been discovered in the vicinity. There are also British earthworks, a Roman camp, and remains of an Anglo-Saxon cemetery, rich in magnificent urns, recently discovered. Soon after the Norman Conquest the lordship was given, with many others, to William de Warren, Earl of Surrey, son-in-law to the Conqueror, and by him the castle was erected. It was a very large and magnificent fortress, occupying about 18 acres, and defended by moats. One of the principal gateways, and some traces of other portions of the buildings, still remain in the village, which stands within the vallum of the castle. About 1085 William de Warren also founded a priory for monks of the Cluniac order, as a cell to that of Lewes, in Sussex. It was largely endowed by various benefactors, and received important privileges by royal charters. The priory, which was raised to an independent establishment in the reign of Edward III., flourished till the Dissolution, when it was valued at about £325. The buildings stood to the W. of the castle, and are said to have covered an area of nearly 36 acres. The priory church was a large stone structure in the form of a cross, with a tower at the intersection of the nave and transepts, and two towers at the W. end. The architecture was chiefly of the Norman style, with additions in the early English and perpendicular styles. The ruins consist of the W. front, some mutilated columns of the nave, the walls of the transepts, and some considerable portions of the conventual buildings, part of which are converted into a cottage. The most striking part of the ruins is the W. front, with the doorway, the fine window over it, and the side towers, which formed the subject of a very pleasing picture by Mr. R. P. Leitch, exhibited a few years ago at the Royal Academy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, in the patron. of the Earl of Leicester, to whom the estate now belongs. The church is dedicated to St. James. It is a large ancient edifice, with a good tower, containing five bells and a clock. In the interior are an antique font cover and a remarkable shrine, recently disclosed. The register dates from the year 1598. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the village. There are National and Sunday schools.

CASTLE ASHBY. See Ashby, Castle, Northamptonshire.

CASTLEBALDWIN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tirerill, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Collooney. Annual fairs are held here in the first week of June, July, September, and November.

CASTLEBAR, a market town in the par. of Aglish, bar of Carra, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles to the N.E. of Westport, and 160 miles to the W.N.W. of Dublin. It is situated at the northern extremity of Lough Lanark, on a branch of the river Moy. The Great Northern and Western railway of Ireland has its terminus here. The town rose into importance early in the 17th century, when it was made a market town and a borough by James I. In the autumn of 1798, the French, under General Humbert, having landed in Kilcummin Bay, and taken Kilcummin and Ballina, attacked and took possession of Castlebar, defeating the English under Hutchinson and Lake. They quitted the town a few days afterwards, and were taken prisoners near Sligo. The town consists chiefly of one long street, with a large and pleasant green, adorned with trees, on which are most of the public buildings and many good private residences. The streets are paved. There are extensive barracks, a court-house, a large and handsome county gaol, the county infirmary, a dispensary, a neat linen hall, and a large lunatic asylum in course of erection. The business of the town is confined to the general retail trades, the linen manufacture, which formerly flourished here, having almost ceased. Good limestone is quarried in the parish, and part of the subsoil is red sandstone. Castlebar is the county town of Mayo. The assizes are held here regularly, and quarter sessions in January and October. Petty sessions are held weekly. The elective franchise was conferred on the borough by James I., and it returned two members to the Irish parliament until the Union, when it was disfranchised. Castlebar is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union house. It has also chief police and revenue stations. Two weekly newspapers are published in the town, called the Mayo Constitutional and the Telegraph. The parish church of Aglish, which stands in the town, was erected about 1828; it is a handsome edifice in the perpendicular style, with a tower. The Roman Catholics and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels here. There are parochial and National schools, both free. In the vicinity is an ancient burying-ground, from which there is a good prospect; and on the opposite side of Lough Lanark are remains of an old fort. This place gives the title of baron to the Earl of Lucan, whose seat is The Lawn, an extensive and beautiful demesne on the Castlebar river. Other seats are Spencer Park, Mount Gordon, &c. Saturday is the market day. Annual fairs are held on the 11th May, the 9th July, the 16th September, and the 18th November.

CASTLE BELLINGHAM, a vil. in the par. of Gernonstown, bar. of Ardee, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles to the S. of Dundalk, and 42 miles from Dublin. It is pleasantly seated near the coast of Dundalk Bay, on the banks of the river Glyde, and is a station on the Dublin and Belfast Junction railway. In the village is a large ale brewery. The parish church of Gernonstown is an old stone edifice with a fine font and several monuments. There are chapels for Roman Catholics and Presbyterians, almshouses for four widows, endowed with about £60 a year, and a dispensary. Near the village is Castle Bellingham House, the seat of Sir Allan Bellingham, Bart. There are still remains of a castle near the Glyde, which belonged to the Bellinghams, and gave name to the village. It was burnt down before the battle of the Boyne. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday and the 10th October.

CASTLE BIGH. See CASTLE BYTHE.

CASTLE BLAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles to the W. of Fermoy.

CASTLEBLAKENEY, a vil. in the par. of Killoselan, and bar. of Tiaquin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 30 miles to the E. of Galway, and 105 miles to the W. of Dublin. It has a police station, and four annual fairs are held on the 1st January, the 25th May, the 26th July, and the 2nd October. Abbert is the principal residence.

CASTLEBLAYNEY, a market town in the par. of Mucknoe, bar. of Cremorne, in the co. of Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 11 miles to the S.E. of Monaghan, and 60 miles from Dublin. It is situated in a pleasant and highly-cultivated country, and is a station on the Irish North-Western railway. This place was founded in the 17th century by Sir Edward Blayney, to whom James I. granted a large district here. In the centre of the town, which has a population of 1,600, is the market-place, with a neat market-house of modern erection, sessions-house, and townhall. The linen manufacture is carried on to a small extent, and there are several corn-mills and tanneries. Castleblayney is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union house. Here are also a county bridewell, a police-station, and a dispensary. The streets are lighted with gas. The parish church of Mucknoe is in the town. It is a beautiful specimen of the early English style, erected in 1859, at a cost of £4,000. Here are also a chapel belonging to the Roman Catholics, two to the Presbyterians, one to the Wesleyan Methodists, and two charity schools. Castleblayney House, lately the property of Lord Blayney, is a handsome modern mansion standing near the site of the castle founded in the reign of James I., in a large and beautiful demesne, including the lake of Mucknoe. It is now the seat of Mrs. Hope, having been purchased by the late T. M. Hope, Esq. Markets for corn are held on Tuesday and Friday, and for miscellaneous goods on Wednesday. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday of each month.

CASTLEBOY, CASTLEBUOY, or ST. JOHNSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ards, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.E. of Portaferry. It is situated on the coast of the Irish Channel, on Cloghy Bay, and had a preceptory of the Knights of St. John, founded by Hugh de Lacy, near the close of the 12th century. Ruins of the building still exist. The district is fertile.

CASTLEBRACK, a par. in the bar. of Tinnahinch, Queen's County, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the W. of Portarlington. It lies in a boggy country on the confines of King's County, on the N. side of the river Barrow, and was the site of a moated castle belonging to the Dunnes, now dilapidated. The living is a vic. united with that of Rosenallis, in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare. Annual fairs are held in the village on the 16th May, the 12th August, and the 15th November.

CASTLEBRIDGE, a vil. in the pars. of Ardcavan, Ardcolm, and Tikillin, bar. of Shelmaliere, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N. of Wexford. It is pleasantly seated on the N. shore of Wexford Haven, on the banks of the Castlebridge river, and has a good trade in corn. The village contains large storehouses for agricultural produce, malthouses, and flour-mills. Here are the parish church of Ardcolm, the Roman Catholic chapel, a school, and a dispensary. There was anciently a castle at this place, on the site of which the church now stands. A police station is fixed here. Fairs are held on the 11th April, the 10th June, the 25th September, and the 26th December.

CASTLE BROMWICH, a hmlt. in the par. of Aston, hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the N.E. of Birmingham. It is within the bounds of the borough of Birmingham, and is a station on the Midland West Branch railway. The Fazeley canal passes by this place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £315, in the patron. of the Earl of Bradford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Near the hamlet is Castle Bromwich Hall, an ancient mansion, the seat of the Earl of Bradford.

CASTLE BYTHAM. See BYTHAM, CASTLE, Lincolnshire.

CASTLE BYTHE, or CASTLE BIGH, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 11 miles to the N.E. of Haverfordwest, its post town. The Roman road called Via Julia, passed near this village, and remains of a camp are still seen here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, in the gift of the lord chancellor.

CASTLE CAEREINION, a par. partly in the hund. of Cawrse, and partly in that of Mathrafel, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 4 miles to the W. of Welshpool, its post town. It is included within the limits of the borough of Welshpool, and comprises about 10 tnshps. It was the site of a fortress belonging to the princes of North Wales. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £575, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Garnon. There is a free school in the village endowed with about £15 a year. The other charitable endowments for the poor are worth about £45 per annum.

CASTLE CAMPS, a par. in the hund. of Chilford, in the co. of Cambridge, 5 miles to the S.E. of Linton, and 16 from Cambridge, its post town. It is situated on the confines of Suffolk and Essex, and was the site of a magnificent castle, founded by Aubrey de Vere, to whom the lordship was granted by William the Conqueror. The castle continued to be the seat of the De Veres, earls of Oxford, till near the end of the 16th century, when it was purchased by Thomas Sutton, founder of the Charterhouse, London, and was given by him as an endowment to that foundation. The moat still exists, and some small portions of the building, which are attached to a farmhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £570, in the patron. of the Governors of the Charterhouse, London. The church, a Gothic building with a square tower, is dedicated to All Saints, and contains monuments of the Davrells and of Chief Baron Reynolds. The Independents have a chapel here, and there is a charity school principally supported by the incumbent. The parochial charities are of trifling value. The parish, which includes a tract of common land, is supposed to have derived its name from a large Danish encampment which anciently existed in this neighbourhood.

CASTLE CARBURY. See CARBURY, Kildare.

CASTLE CARLTON. See CARLTON CASTLE, Lincolnshire.

CASTLE CARROCK, a par. in the ward of Eskdale, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the S. of Brampton. Carlisle is its post town. It is situated in a moorland district on both banks of the river Gelt, and contains beds of limestone and freestone. Here are remains of two old entrenchments, one of which is said to mark the site of a castle. There are also several large cairns, and a mineral spring. The living is a rect., with residence and 280 acres of glebe, in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £159, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, a stone edifice, rebuilt in 1828, is dedicated to St. Peter. The Independents have a chapel. There is a free school in the village, endowed with about £15 per annum.

CASTLE CARY, a par. and market town in the hund. of Catsash, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the W. of Bruton, and 129 miles from London by railway, or 113 miles by road. It is a post town, and a station on the Wilts and Somerset section of the Great Western railway. The parish is situated in a beautiful country, and contains the hmlts. of Clanville, Dimmer, and Cockhill. Here was anciently a castle, which, in the reign of Stephen, belonged to Lord Lovell, and was garrisoned by him against the king. The Lovells held the estate till the 25th Edward III., it then passed by marriage to the Lords St. Maur, and from them, in the same manner, to the Lords Zouche, who held it till the reign of Henry VII. Charles II. is said to have taken refuge here after the battle of Worcester. The site of the castle is traceable, but no remains exist of the building. The town consists mainly of one street, and has many neat and pleasant houses. There is a good supply of water. The manufacture of coarse linen and hair-cloth is carried on. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £312, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands on high ground, is dedicated to All Saints. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels in the town. There are several small charities and a savings-bank. The market is held on Tuesday. Fairs for the sale of cattle, cloth, &c., are held on the Tuesday before Palm Sunday, the 1st May, and Whit-Tuesday. Cattle markets are held every alternate Tuesday throughout the year.

CASTLE CARY, a hmlt. in the par. of Falkirk, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Falkirk. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. It is situated near the wall of Antoninus, of which it is supposed to have been one of the principal stations.

CASTLE CAULFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Donaghmore, bar. of Dungannon, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the W. of Dungannon. It is seated in a pleasant district, and was the site of a castle founded in the reign of James I. by Sir Toby Caulfield, afterwards Lord Charlemont, to whom the estate of the O'Donellies was granted. The castle was afterwards enlarged, and was burnt down in 1641. The ruins are very picturesque. Limestone and coal are found in the district. The pursuits of the inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The village contains the parish church of Donaghmore, a handsome edifice in the Grecian style. Here is a monument to the Rev. G. Walker, who took so distinguished a part in the defence of Londonderry against James II. in 1688-89, and fell at the battle of the Boyne in 1690. There are a chapel for Presbyterians and a parochial school. Castle Caulfield is the seat of Lord Charlemont. Cattle fairs are held in the village once in each month.

CASTLE-CHURCH, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 1 mile to the S.W. of Stafford, its post town. It is situated near the London and North-Western and Shropshire Union railways. It contains the chplry. of St. Paul's, Forebridge, which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £120, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Castle-Church; and the tnshps. of Burton and Rickerscote. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £120, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, an old edifice partly in the Norman style, is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to about £75 per annum. There are a handsome Roman Catholic chapel, and an endowed school connected with it.

CASTLE-COMBE, a par. and vil. in the hund. and union of Chippenham, in the co. of Wilts, 6 miles to the N.W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 11 N. of Bath. It was the site of a castle founded in the reign of Richard I. by Walter de Dunstanville, which afterwards passed to the Badlesmeres and Scropes, and was dismantled before the beginning of the 15th century. The castle was built on the summit of a hill northward of the village, near the site of the old British encampment. The great Roman road called the Fossway, leading from Bath to Cirencester and Lincolnshire, passes along the north-western boundary of the parish. Castle-Combe was formerly a market town, under a grant obtained by the Badlesmeres. The market has long been disused. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £383, with 25 acres of glebe land, in the patron. of G. Poulett Scrope, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew, and was restored in 1851. It is an ancient building in the early English style, with a tower 80 feet high supported by buttresses. The Rev. Joseph Hunter, the antiquarian, considered the chancel to belong to the 12th century, and the body of the church to the reign of Richard II. The tower is of later date, having been built in 1434. The most remarkable feature in the body of the church is the arch that separates the nave from the chancel. It contains, in good preservation, six figures in canopied niches; they represent St. Peter, St. Andrew, St. James, and three others. There were four several altars in use in this church in the 15th century, dedicated to St. Mary, the Holy Cross, St. Andrew, and St. Nicholas. There are fifteen windows, all with stained glass: that at the E. end is of the 13th century; it has been carefully preserved, and its form is extremely rare—perhaps unique. In the N. aisle is a monument of a recumbent knight; it belongs to the early part of the 13th century. The figure is considered to represent one of the Dunstanvilles, barons of Castle Combe. There is an old market cross in the village. The Independents and Baptists have chapels, and there is a National school. The charitable endowments consist of a bequest for education, worth £5 a year. Castle-Combe House, the seat of the Scrope family, who have held the property since the middle of the 13th century, stands in a pleasant sheltered valley, watered by a small stream, and surrounded by wooded hills. In the park are many noble trees. Its present owner, George Poulett Scrope, Esq., M.P. for Stroud, is lord of the manor, on the antiquities of which he has written a work of great legal and antiquarian interest.

CASTLECOMER, a par. and market town in the bar. of Fassadinin, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 11 miles to the N. of Kilkenny, and 60 miles from Dublin. It lies in a boggy and hilly country, on the banks of the small river Deen, a tributary of the Nore, and contains the greater part of the Kilkenny coal beds, which have been long worked extensively. The village has one broad and pleasant street, and contains infantry barracks, a market-house, court-house, fever hospital, and a police station. Petty sessions are held fortnightly

The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and working the collieries. Castlecomer is the head of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union poorhouse. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £726 gross, in the patron. of the crown. Besides the parish church, there is a chapel of ease in the colliery district. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a convent of the Presentation, with the latter of which is connected a large free school for teaching embroidery. There are three schools supported by the proprietor of the estate, of two of which the rector is patron. Near the town is Castle-Comer House, the seat of Charles Butler Wandesforde, Esq., a minor. The grounds are picturesque and wooded, and contain remains of an old castle. Saturday is the market-day. A large butter fair is held weekly during the season. Fairs are held on the 27th March, the 3rd May, and the 21st June.

CASTLE-CONNELL, a vil. in the par. of Stradbally, bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles to the N.E. of Limerick, and 114 miles from Dublin. It is a station on the Limerick, Castle-Connell, and Killaloe railway. The village is seated in a very charming spot on the E. bank of the river Shannon, which is not navigable here by reason of the numerous falls and rapids in its course. O'Brien's Bridge, a very ancient structure, but rebuilt and altered some years ago, is about 2 miles from Castle-Connell. Here was anciently a fortress, a seat of the O'Briens, of which the only remains are part of a tower and fragments of walls. This place was one of the first in Limerick taken possession of by the English. The castle was garrisoned for the parliament in 1651, and for James II. in 1690, but was demolished at the Revolution by De Ginkell. The purity of the air and the beauty of the scenery attract many visitors to this place during the summer months. Many also resort to it for the sake of the spa, the waters of which are valuable in scorbutic and other affections. There is a good salmon fishery in the Shannon. Petty sessions are held in the village, and there are a police station and a dispensary. The village contains the parish church of Stradbally, a handsome structure in the form of a cross, with a good octagonal spire. It was erected about 1810, and considerably enlarged in 1830. There is a chapel belonging to the Roman Catholics, and National and parochial schools. In the vicinity is Mount Shannon, the fine seat of the Earl of Clare. Hermitage is the seat of Lord Massy. Among the other principal residences are Castle-Connell, Doonas, Thornfield, &c. Besides the ruins of the castle, here are traces of a friary of the Franciscan order, founded about 1300. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, William de Burgh was created Baron of Castle-Connell. Fairs are held on the 20th April, the 1st June, the 26th July, and the 4th October.

CASTLE-CONNOR, a par. in the bar. of Tireragh, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.E. of Ballina. It lies in a fertile country on the river Moy, and includes a large tract of bog. Limestone is quarried extensively. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, Killala, and Achonry, val. with that of Kilglass united, £440, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a dispensary in the village. The residences of the gentry are Castle-Connor House, Moyview, Seaville, &c. By the river-side are some ruins of an old castle. In the vicinity are several Danish forts.

CASTLECUFFE, a vil. in the par. of Kilmanman, bar. of Tinnahinch, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, not far from Clonaslee. It is seated in a boggy district, under the Slievebloom mountains. Near the village is Brittas, the seat of the Dunnes. A fair is held on the 22nd November.

CASTLE-DAWSON, or DAWSON'S BRIDGE, a vil. or small market town, in the pars. of Magherafelt and Ballyscullion, bar. of Loughinsholin, in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N.E. of Magherafelt, and 118 miles from Dublin. It is a station on the Corkstown branch of the Belfast and Northern Counties railway. The village is pleasantly seated in a fertile and cultivated country on the banks of the river Mayola, which falls into Lough Neagh about 3 miles below the village. The river is crossed by a handsome stone bridge of one arch, erected by the Dawsons. The village consists of two principal streets with many well-built houses. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of linen, checks, and ginghams, and the corn and provision trades. Coarse earthenware and bricks are made, and there are large corn-mills. The village contains the parish church of Ballyscullion, a chapel for Presbyterians, and a National school. There are a police-station and a market-house. Petty sessions are held fortnightly. Near the village is Mayola Park, the beautiful seat of the Right Hon. George R. Dawson, which extends to the shore of Lough Neagh, and is crossed by a fine ancient avenue 3 miles long. A handsome obelisk in honour of the Dawson family stands on a hill near the village. It was set up by the Earl of Bristol. There are several other residences of the gentry in the vicinity. Saturday is the market day. Fairs for cattle, sheep, pigs, &c., are held on the last Saturday of every month.

CASTLE-DERG, or DERG-BRIDGE, a vil. or small market town in the par. of Skirts, bar. of Omagh, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles W. of Newtown-Stewart, and 125 miles from Dublin. It is seated in a hilly country on the confines of Donegal, on the banks of the small river Derg, a branch of the Mourne, and was founded soon after the commencement of the 17th century. The district was given by James I. to Sir John Davis, who built a castle and a bridge over the Derg. The castle was reduced to ruins during the Civil War, and the old bridge is replaced by a modern one of four arches, built about 1835. The village contains some good residences, a police-station, and a dispensary. Castle-Derg is the seat of a Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held. The parish church of Skirts, a modern edifice, stands in the village, and there is a National school. The market is on Friday, and fairs are held on the first Friday of each month.

CASTLEDERMOT, a par. in the bar. of Kilkea and Moone, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles to the S.E. of Athy, and 52 miles from Dublin. The Great Southern railway has a station at Maganey in this parish. It is situated in a flat, dreary district, on the small river Lerr, a feeder of the Barrow, and was anciently a place of some importance. It had an abbey founded at the beginning of the 6th century, which was the burial-place of Cormac MacCulinan, King of Munster and Archbishop of Cashel. A castle and a priory were founded soon after the English settlement, and subsequently a monastery of the Franciscan order. Parliaments were held here on two occasions in the reign of Henry IV. The Scots, under Edward Bruce, attacked, pillaged, and partly destroyed the town about 1315. It has never recovered the damage and destruction sustained during the civil war of the 17th century. The living is a vic. united with five others, in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. £550 net, in the patron. of the bishop and R. Latouche, Esq. Near the church are vestiges of an older one, and some curiously sculptured crosses, 10 feet high, of very early date. The round towers, so often found near the ruins of ancient churches in Ireland, are very high and covered with fine old ivy to the very top. There are chapels for Roman Catholics and Quakers, and parochial and National schools. Petty sessions are held, and a police force is stationed in the village. Granite is abundant in the district. There are several seats of the gentry. Some fine ruins still exist of the Franciscan monastery, consisting chiefly of the conventual church and the Lady chapel. The windows are almost all perfect and very beautiful. Fairs are held on the 24th February, the 7th April, the 24th May, the 4th August, the 19th September, and the 19th December.

CASTLE-DILLON, a par. in the bar. of South Salt in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the E. of Clare. It is situated on the banks of the river Liffey. The living is a rect. forming part union of Celbridge, in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare.

CASTLEDOCKRELL, a vil. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the W. of Ferns.

CASTLE DONINGTON. See DONINGTON, CASTLE, Leicestershire.

CASTLE DOUGLAS, a vil. in the par. of Kelton, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 20 miles to the S.W. of Dumfries. It is connected with the Glasgow and South-Western railway by a branch line from Dumfries. This village was formerly called Causewayend, and afterwards Carlinwark, and is seated near the loch of that name. It is a burgh of barony. A cotton-mill gives employment to some of the workpeople. The village contains a townhouse, chapel, and savings-bank. A market, chiefly for corn, is held on Monday, and an annual fair in June. To the S.W. of the village are the ruins of Thrieve Castle, a seat of the Douglases, from which the village took its present name in 1792.

CASTLE DYRRAN, or CASTELDWYRAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Cilymaenllwyd, hund. of Derllys, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 3 miles to the N.E. of Narberth, its post town. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Cilymaenllwyd, in the dioc. of St. David's.

CASTLE EATON, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, Cricklade and Staple, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles to the N.W. of Highworth. Fairford is its post town. It lies on the confines of Gloucestershire, on the banks of the river Thames, and contains the tythg. of Lushill. The Thames and Severn canal passes near the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £633, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Goddard. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities are of small amount.

CASTLE EDEN, or CASTLE IN THE DENE, a par. in the southern div. of the ward of Easington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 10 miles E. of Durham, 14 S. from Sunderland, and 7 to the N.W. of Hartlepool, by railway. Ferry Hill is its post town. It is a station on the Hartlepool and Ferry Hill branch of the North-Eastern railway. There is another station at Castle Eden colliery, and the Sunderland and Hartlepool railway also passes through the parish. This place, which was anciently a possession of the bishops of Durham, and subsequently one of the endowments of the priory of Gisburn, is situated at the head of a romantic glen called the Dene, through which a small river runs to the sea. The Dene has a winding course of about 3 miles, and its sides are rocky and wooded. The inhabitants of the parish are chiefly employed in agriculture, but there are also brick and tile works, a brewery, malting-houses, small rope factory, and a steam cornmill. In former times there was an extensive cotton factory, which has given the name of "The Factory" to one of the four small villages which comprise the township of Castle Eden. Petty sessions are held here monthly for the southern div. of Easington ward. There is also a police station, and two National schools, chiefly supported by R. Burdon, Esq., J.P., who has lately presented the village with a rectory house. There is an annual agricultural and horticultural show held in the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £242, in the patron. of R. Burdon, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a neat stone edifice, with a handsome spire erected in 1764. Castle Eden Hall, the seat of the Burdons, stands on the summit of the rocks overlooking the Dene, and commands a fine view over the country and the sea. This parish is the sole property of Rowland Burdon, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

CASTLE-ELLIS, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S.E. of Enniscorthy. The soil is generally good, and the parish contains granite quarries and beds of marl. The living is an impropriate cur. united with several other benefices, in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, in the patron. of the bishop. Newport is the principal mansion.

CASTLE-FINN, a vil. in the par. of Donaghmore, bar. of Raphoe, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles to the E. of Stranorlar. It is seated on the river Finn, and belonged, in the 16th century, to one of the O'Donnells. The village contains a chapel for Roman Catholics. Fairs are held on Easter Monday, Whit-Monday, the Monday before the 10th October, the 22nd November, and the Monday after Christmas.

CASTLEFORD, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Pontefract. It is a post town, and has a station on the North-Eastern, and the Leeds and Knottingley branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railways. The parish is situated on the banks of the river Aire, near its confluence with the Calder, and includes the tnshp. of Glass-Houghton. This parish, which is crossed by Watling Street, was the site of the Roman station Legiolium, and various Roman antiquities have been discovered. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the pottery. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £555, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and is said to stand on the site of the ancient camp. There are charitable endowments for the poor worth about £15 a year.

CASTLEFORE, a vil. in the bar. and co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Ballinamore. It is not far from the lough of the same name.

CASTLE FROME, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, in the co. of Hereford, 7 miles to the N. of Ledbury. Bromyard is its post town. It lies near the Frome hills and the river Frome. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £300, in the patron. of F. T. Freeman, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

CASTLEGANNON, UPPER and LOWER, hmlts. in the bar. of Knocktopher, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N. of Mullinavat.

CASTLEGAR, a vil. in the bar. and co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland.

CASTLE GREGORY, a vil. in the par. of Killiney, bar. of Corkaquiny, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 14 miles to the W. of Tralee, and 212 miles from Dublin. It is seated on the S. coast of Tralee Bay, and was the site of an ancient castle, which, being garrisoned for Charles I., was taken by the parliamentary forces during the civil war. The village contains a Roman Catholic Chapel, an endowed school, and coastguard and police stations. A fair for the sale of cattle, &c., is held on the 15th August.

CASTLE GRESLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Church Gresley, hund. of Repton and Gresley, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles to the S.E. of Burton-on-Trent. Gresley is a station on the Burton, Ashby, and Leicester branch of the Midland railway.

CASTLE-HALL, a vil. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, not far from Staleybridge, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron of trustees.

CASTLEHAVEN, a par. in the E. div. of the bar. of West Carbery, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Skibbereen. It is situated in a picturesque district on Castlehaven bay, or harbour, and was the site of a castle belonging to O'Driscoll, which was given up by him to the Spaniards, on their effecting a landing here in 1601. Some traces of the walls are yet to be seen. Off the coast are several small islands, and the rocks called the "Stags." The ancient name of this parish was Glanbarrahane. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, val. £531, in the patron. of the crown and the bishop alternately. The church, built about 1827, is a handsome structure of freestone, with a good tower. There are a large chapel for Roman Catholics, and parochial and other schools. Castle Townshend, Point House, Drishane, &c., are the chief residences. The title of Earl of Castlehaven was held by the Touchet family.

CASTLE HEDINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 4 miles to the N.W. of Halstead, and 48 from London. The town is an ancient place, situated on the river Colne, and was the head of an honour belonging to the De Veres, who built here a strong castle, in which Maud, the wife of King Stephen, died in 1151. Louis, the Dauphin of France, held it in the name of the barons in 1217, and Henry VII. was entertained here by John, the 13th Earl of Oxford. After having remained in the family of the De Veres for five centuries, the castle was alienated in 1625, and now belongs to Ashhurst Majendie, Esq., the lord of the manor, who resides at a handsome mansion erected in 1719, near the ruins of the old castle, which consist of little more than the keep, a massive pile built of Barnack stone, the walls of which are from 10 to 12 feet thick, and measure 62 by 55 feet. The tower is 110 feet high, and has still standing two out of the four turrets which anciently crowned it. It is divided into four stories, lit by narrow Norman windows or loop-holes, and stands on an eminence partly artificial, at a short distance from the village. There was also a Benedictine nunnery, founded in 1198 by the De Veres, but now converted into a farm-house; and a hospital called New Abbey, founded in 1250. The town is a polling place for the North Hinckford division of the county, and petty sessions are held every alternate Tuesday. The living is a don. cur., val. £100, in the dioc. of Rochester, and in the patron. of A. Majendie, Esq. The church, which was built in the reign of king John, is a fine specimen of Norman architecture, with ancient Norman traces and a timber roof, but the tower has been subsequently rebuilt. In the interior are many handsome tombs and effigies of the De Veres and Ashhursts, who have held the manor since the Conquest. The Independents have a spacious chapel. Fairs are held on the 14th May and 25th July.

CASTLE HILL SIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Almondbury, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Huddersfield.

CASTLEINCH, or INCHYOLAGHAN, a par. in the bar. of Shillelogher, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.W. of Kilkenny. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, val. with two other benefices, £450, in the gift of the bishop. In this parish are Desart House, a noble mansion in a well-planted demesne; Castle Bamford, and Tinny Park.

CASTLE-ISLAND, a par. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles to the S.E. of Tralee, and 180 miles from Dublin,. It is situated on the banks of the river Maine, which rises not far from the village, and is crossed here by several bridges. The district is hilly and boggy, but a considerable part of the surface is under cultivation. This parish was the site of a fortress, named the "Castle of the Island of Kerry," which was erected about 1230 by Geoffrey de Marisco, and was given by Queen Elizabeth to the Herbert family. Castle-Island, now a mere village, was formerly a market town and the county town of Kerry. It consists chiefly of one long street, and contains a market-house, court-house, and police-station. There is a small bridewell. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. £554, in the patron. of the proprietors of the Seignory of Castle-Island. The church is partly old and partly rebuilt. There is a spacious chapel for Roman Catholics, and a dispensary. Parkmoor is the principal residence. Fairs are held here on the first Monday in January and February, the 17th March, the 20th April, Easter Monday, the 20th May, the 24th June, the 1st August, and 1st October.

CASTLEJORDAN, a par. partly in the bar. of Warrenstown, King's County, and partly in the bar. of Upper Moyfenrath, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.E. of Phillipstown. It is situated in a boggy district on the border of Kildare, on the banks of the river Boyne, and was the site of a castle belonging to the Giffords, of which there are some remains. In the parish are quarries of gritstone. The living is an impropriate cur. united with that of Ballyboggan, in the dioc. of Meath. The church is a modern edifice. The chief residence is Tuberdaly.

CASTLEKNOCK BARONY, one of the 9 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, situated in the western part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the bar. of Balrothery; on the E. by the bar. of Coolock; on the S. by the bar. of Newcastle; and on the W. by the cos. of Kildare and Meath. It contains the parishes of Castleknock, Chapelizod, Cloghran, Clonsilla, and Mulhuddart, with parts of Finglass, and St. James, comprising an area of about 21,300 acres.

CASTLEKNOCK, a par. in the bar. of Castleknock, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the banks of the river Liffey, and includes the hmlt. of Blanchardstown, which is a station on the Midland Great Western railway. This parish was the site of an old fortress, said to have been first founded by the Danes. It was besieged and taken by Edward Bruce in 1316; and was taken by Monk, during the civil war of the 17th century, for the parliament. This castle, of which some remains exist on a hill by the village, was at one period the property of the Tyrrells. An abbey of the Augustine order was founded here in the 13th century. The parish is crossed by the Royal canal, and contains some extensive quarries of limestone. The land is good and well cultivated. The living is a prebend and vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. with two other benefices, £623, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. In this parish is Vice-Regal Lodge, the residence of the Lord-Lieutenant. There are several other residences of the gentry in the vicinity.

CASTLE LEAVINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Leavington, lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S. of Stockton. It is situated on a branch of the river Tees, near the North-Eastern railway, and was the site of a castle.

CASTLELOST, a par. in the bar. of Tartullagh, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles to the S. of Mullingar. It was the site of a very ancient monastery, said to have been founded by St. Carthag in the 7th century, and to have risen to great fame and importance. Here was also a castle belonging to the Tyrrells, of which remains still exist. The surface is partly under cultivation and partly boggy, with limestone subsoil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £201, in the patron. of Lord Kilmaine. Ruins of the old parish church stand near the site of the castle; there are several monuments to the Tyrrells, among which is an altar-tomb with the figure of a knight recumbent.

CASTLE-LYONS, a par. and small market town partly in the bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, and partly in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Fermoy, and 14 miles from Dublin. It is situated in a fertile and cultivated country on the banks of the river Bride, a branch of the Blackwater. It was the site of a castle of the O'Lehans, founded, as shown by an inscription, in 140[illegible] and of another erected subsequently by the Barrys. Early in the 14th century an abbey was founded by one of the lords Barry. Here was also a Carmelite friary. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I. an engagement took place here between the English under Lord Broghill, and the Irish under General Purcel, in which the latter were defeated. The district is fertile and cultivated, and limestone is quarried in large quantities. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and the flour trade. There is a small woollen factory. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, val. £484, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, which stands on the site of an older one, is dedicated to St. Nicholas. Connected with it is the family burial-place of the Barrys, which contains a handsome marble monument to James Earl of Barrymore, who died in 1747. There are a Roman Catholic chapel near the village, and National and parochial schools. Remains exist of the abbey and the castle of the lords Barry, as well as of another fortress, called Bally-Roberts Castle. A cairn formerly stood on the top of Corran Tierna, a hill on the border of this parish. In the vicinity are Castle-Lyons House, Coole Abbey, Mohera House, Bushey Park, and other residences of the gentry. Thursday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 1st January, Easter Monday, Whit-Monday, the 28th August, the 29th September, and the 16th November.

CASTLEMACADAM, a par. in the bar. of Arklow, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Arklow. It is situated on the banks of the river Ovoca, which is formed by "the meeting of the waters" of the Avonmore and Avonbeg. The par. is in its extreme length and breadth 10 miles by 6. The village of Ovoca has a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway. The "Vale of Ovoca" is famed for the surpassing beauty and variety of its scenery, which presents a charming combination of mountain, wood, grassy slopes, and water. The district is rich in sulphur and copper ore, containing the mines of Ballygahan, Ballymurtagh, Cronebane, Conneree, and Tigronory, which employ a large number of hands, and yield about 12,000 tons of those minerals in the year. The working of these mines was commenced about the middle of the 18th century. Clay-slate is quarried in the parish. There are lead, gold, and sulphur mines in Ballintemple, but the working of them has not been profitable. The parish of Ballintemple was united to Castlemacadam in 1854. The living is a union in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. £261, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Dublin and the Rev. W. Butler Bryan, alternately. The church, situated on high ground near the river, occupies the site of an old castle. Besides the church there are two licensed places of worship in connection with the Established Church, two Roman Catholic chapels, and a Wesleyan meeting-house. There are parochial, National, and other schools. Ballyarthur, Castle-Howard, and Cherry Mount are the principal seats. The former is a spacious, hilly, and wooded demesne, commanding splendid views of the valley and the waters. The house is approached by a fine avenue two miles long. Castle-Howard stands picturesquely on a steep rock over the Ovoca.

CASTLEMAGNER a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 25 miles to the N.W. of Cork. It is situated in a fertile and cultivated country on the N. side of the river Blackwater, and had anciently two castles, one founded by the Magners, and the other, called Loghort Castle, erected in the reign of King John. The former has long been occupied as a farmhouse. The latter is a very strong place, defended by a moat. It was repaired in the last century, and gives the title of baron to the Percivals, earls of Egmont. This castle was the scene of several conflicts during the Civil War. The parish contains abundance of limestone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, val. £362, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is of modern erection. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, and National and charity schools. Ballygiblin is the seat of Sir W. W. Becher, Bart. Among the other residences are Ramaher and Cecilstown Lodge.

CASTLEMAINE, a vil. in the par. of Kiltallagh, bar. of Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, one mile from Milltown. It is pleasantly seated at the S. foot of the Slievemish mountains, on the banks of the river Maine, at the head of Castlemaine harbour, in Dingle Bay. The Maine is crossed by a very ancient bridge, on which formerly stood a castle, erected by Macarthy More and the Earl of Desmond. This castle was taken and dismantled by General Ludlow during the Civil War. Castlemaine was once a market town, and had a good trade in corn, coal, &c. Fairs are held in May, September, and November.

CASTLEMARTIN, a par. in the hund. of the same name, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 6 miles to the W. of Pembroke, its post town. It is situated in a fertile and cultivated district on the sea-coast, not far from Milford Haven, and had anciently a castle. Good limestone is abundant here. The coast is bold and rocky. There is a hardy breed of cattle, which take their name from this place. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £315, in the patron. of Earl Cawdor. The church, which is very old, is dedicated to St. Michael. In the neighbourhood are remains of old forts and earthworks. Brownslade is the principal seat.

CASTLEMARTIN HUNDRED, one of the 7 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, situated in the southern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by Milford Haven and the hund. of Narberth, and on the E. S. and W. by the sea. It contains the pars. of Angle, Bosherston, Castlemartin, Cosheston, St. Florence, Hodgeston, Lamphey, Manorbier, Penally, St. Petrox, Pwllchrochan, Rhoscrowther, Stackpole-Elidor, St. Twinell, and Warren, with parts of Monckton and Nash.

CASTLEMARTYR, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Imokilly, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 18 miles to the E. of Cork. The Cork, Youghal, and Queenstown direct line has a station at Mogeely, about a mile from the village. It is seated near the sea-coast, and was anciently a place of some importance. It had a castle which belonged to the Geraldines, and was called the Castle of Imokilly. After being rebuilt it was garrisoned by the English, and was called in the 16th century the Castle of Ballymartyr. It was the scene of several sieges, and has been in ruins since the end of the 17th century. Castlemartyr was formerly a borough, incorporated by charter of Charles II., and returned two members to the Irish parliament. It was disfranchised at the union. The privilege of a market was granted to the town, but it is disused. The village consists chiefly of one broad street, and contains some pleasant and well-built houses. There are a market-house, a police station, and a dispensary. The church of Ballyoughtera is in the village. The living is a union, in the patron. of the Bishop of Cloyne, comprising Ballyoughtera rect. and vic. and Mogeely vic., forming together the corps of Caherultan prebend in the cathedral church of Cloyne. There are a parochial school, another under the National Board of Education, and an embroidery school, under the patronage of the Countess of Shannon. Next the village is Castlemartyr, the fine seat of the Earl of Shannon, the approach to which is by a magnificent avenue of elms, a mile long. The demesne is of great extent, and contains several lakes, or rather an extensive canal, the ruins of the ancient castle, now overgrown with ivy, and the ruins of two old churches. The hall was built by the Right Hon. Henry Boyle, Speaker of the Irish House of Commons. The Earl of Shannon takes the title of baron from this place. There are many other pleasant seats in the neighbourhood. Fairs are held on the 2nd May, the 19th July, the 2nd October, and the 19th December.

CASTLEMORE, a par. partly in the bar. of Costello, in the co. of Mayo, and partly in the bar. of Frenchpark, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile to the W. of Ballaghaderreen. The soil is poor, and there is much bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, Killala, and Achonry, val. with two other benefices, £248, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal residences are Castlemore House and Brooklawn, the latter being that of the Roman Catholic bishop of Achonry.

CASTLEMORRIS, a vil. in the par. of Mathry, hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 7 miles to the S.W. of Fishguard. It is seated near the sea-coast.

CASTLE-MORTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore. in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the S.W. of Upton-on-Severn, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Longdon, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church, which is of very ancient date, is dedicated to St. Gregory. The charitable endowments for the poor, consisting of the produce of church and poor's lands, are worth about £40 per annum. Near the church is a moat surrounding a mound, supposed to be the site of an ancient castle belonging to the De Montes.

CASTLE NORTHWICH, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund of Eddisbury, in the co. palatine of Chester, 1 mile from Northwich.

CASTLEPLUNKET, a vil. in the par. of Baslick, bar. of Castlerea, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.E. of Castlerea. The chief residence is Miltown. Fairs are held here on the first Thursday in May, the 13th August, and the 11th October.

CASTLEPOLLARD, a vil. or small market town in the par. of Rathgraff, bar. of Fore, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 10 miles to the N. of Mullingar, and 52 miles from Dublin. It is seated in a pleasant country on the N. side of Lough Deveragh, and near Lough Lane. The Cavan branch of the Midland Great Western railway passes within a short distance, the nearest station being Float. In the village are the parish church of Rathgraff, a chapel for Roman Catholics, and the parochial school. There are also a market-house, a savings-bank, and a fever hospital. Petty sessions are held, and a chief station of police is fixed here. Some ruins of the ancient parish church are still standing, but no remains exist of the old castle. Pakenham Hall is the seat of the Earl of Longford. Kinturk is the residence of the Pollard family, the proprietors of the village. Wednesday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 21st May, the 1st and 2nd August, the 10th October, and the 10th December.

CASTLERAHAN, a par. in the bar. of the same name, in the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles to the S.E. of Cavan. It is situated near the northern extremity of Lough Sheelin, and includes the vil. of Ballyjamesduff. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, Ardagh, and Elphin, val. £541, in the patron. of the bishop. In the village are chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics and Presbyterians. The principal residence is Fort Frederick.

CASTLERAHAN BARONY, one of the 8 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, situated in the southern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the bars. of Upper Loughtee and Clonkeen, on the E. and S. by the co. of Meath, and on the W. by the bar. of Clanmahon. It contains the pars. of Castlerahan, Lurgan, Mullagh, and Munterconnaught, with parts of Bailliebborough, Crosserlough, Devin, Killinkere, and Loughan. The bar. comprises an area of about 71,000 acres.

CASTLEREA, or CASTLEREAGH BARONY, one of the 9 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, situated in the western part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the bar. of Boyle, on the E. by the bars. of Roscommon and Ballymoe, and on the S. and W. by the co. of Galway. It contains the pars. of Ballintober, Baslick, Kilcorkey, Kilkeevin, and Kiltullagh, and spreads over an area of about 82,559 acres.

CASTLEREA, or CASTLEREAGH, a market town in the par. of Kilkeevin, bar. of Castlerea, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 17 miles to the N.W. of Roscommon, and 112 miles from Dublin by the Great Northern and Western railway, on which it is a station. The town is situated in a pleasant and fertile country, on the banks of the river Suck, over which are two bridges. It consists chiefly of one long street, and contains the parish church of Kilkeevin, chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics and Wesleyan Methodists, and National schools. The church has a good embattled tower. The pursuits of the inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. Castlerea is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union poorhouse. It is also a chief station of police. Quarter sessions are held here in rotation twice a year. There are large mills in the town, a court-house built in 1852, a bridewell, a dispensary, and a handsome bank in progress of erection; it is a branch of the National bank. Next the town is Castlereagh House, the seat of Thomas G. Hills Sandford, Esq., whose father succeeded the late Lord Mount Sandford in the Castlerea property. Castlerea was the birthplace of Bishop Young, the distinguished mathematician. Fairs are held annually on the 23rd May, the 21st June, the 23rd August, and the 7th November. Saturday is the market day, and Wednesday for corn.

CASTLEREAGH BARONY, LOWER, one of the 10 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, situated in the northern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by Belfast Lough, on the E. by the bar. of Ards and Strangford Lough, on the S. by the bar. of Dufferin, and on the W. by the bar. of Upper Castlereagh. It contains the pars. of Dundonald, Holywood, Kilmood, and Tullynakill, with parts of those of Bangor, Comber, Killinchy, Knockbreda, and Newtownards. The area of the bar. is about 51,400 acres.

CASTLEREAGH BARONY, UPPER, one of the 10 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, situated in the northern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by Belfast Lough, on the E. by the bars. of Lower Castlereagh and Dufferin, on the S.W. by the bars. of Kinelarty and Lower Iveagh, and on the N.W. by the river Lagan, separating the co. from Antrim. It contains the pars. of Drumbo, Killaney and Saintfield, with parts of the pars. of Blaris, Comber, Drumbeg, Killinchy, Killyleagh, Kilmore, Knockbreda, and Lambeg. The bar. extends over an area of about 55,300 acres.

CASTLE-RICHARD, a vil. in the bar. of Coshmore, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, miles to the W. of Lismore. It is seated on the bank of the river Blackwater. In the neighbourhood is Glencairn Abbey, a pleasant seat.

CASTLERICKARD, a par. in the bars. of Lune and Upper Moyfenrath, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S.W. of Trim. It is situated on the banks of the river Boyne. The living is rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £197, in the patron. of the bishop. The chief mansion is Castlerickard House.

CASTLE RISING, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Lynn, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the N. of Lynn and about 40 miles to the W. of Norwich, and 103½ from London. It is situated in a flat country on the coast of the Wash, and was formerly a seaport and market town, but has long been deserted by the sea. It is a borough by prescription, and having received the elective franchise in the reign of Queen Mary, returned two members to parliament till the passing of the Reform Act. It was then disfranchised. The corporation was abolished by the Municipal Reform Act, in 1835, although in former times its mayor took precedence of those of all the other boroughs in the county. The harbour has long been silted up, and the market and "sixteen-day fair" discontinued. Castle Rising is now an inconsiderable village, and is chiefly interesting as the site of an ancient castle founded about 1180 by William D'Albini, first Earl of Arundel. It was the place of confinement of Isabella, queen of Edward II. and mother of Edward III. for nearly 30 years, where she died in 1358. The castle stood in a hollow, and was defended by a moat and entrenchment. The remains consist of the keep and part of a gateway. The walls of the tower were 9 ft. thick. There are remains of a Saxon church within the mounds, and a camp and earthworks not far from the castle. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Roydon, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £419, in the patron. of the Howards. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. It is an ancient and interesting structure in the Norman style, with a central tower and a very fine western front, ornamented with mouldings and intersecting arches. The body of the church was restored in 1844, and the chancel in 1856. The church contains a fine old font. The register dates from the year 15[illegible]. There is a National school. Adjoining the churchyard is a hospital or almshouse for 13 poor women, founded in the reign of James I. by Henry Howard, Earl of Northampton, the income of which is about £100 per annum. The hospital contains a hall, chapel, and h[illegible] chen. In the village is a curious old cross. The contrast in the destinies of Rising and Lynn is the subject of a popular rhyme.

CASTLEROGY, a vil. in the bar. of Carrigallen, in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Ballinamore.

CASTLESAMSON, a hmlt. in the bar. of Athlone, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles to the N. of Athlone.

CASTLESHANE, a vil. in the par., bar., and co. of Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Monaghan. It is not far from the river Blackwater, and contains Castleshane House, the seat of the Right Hon. E. Lucas. Annual fairs are held here on the 21st June, the 21st July, the 12th August, and the 15th November.

CASTLE SOWERBY, or SOWERBY-CASTLE, a par. in Leith ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Hesket-Newmarket, 10 S. of Carlisle, and 11 N.W. of Penrith, its post town and railway station, being 295 from London. It lies within the limits of the forest of Inglewood, near the river Caldew, and includes the tnshps. of Bustabeck Bound, How Bound, Row Bound, Southernby Bound, and Stockdalewath Bound. In How Bound formerly stood a castle, of which all traces have disappeared. The manor is now held by the Duke of Devonshire. Some estates in this parish were held by the curious tenure, long obsolete, of their owners riding through Penrith on Tuesday in Whitsunweek, brandishing their spears. The title "Red Spears" was applied both to the lands and their holders. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £90, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Kentigern, is a small stone building in the township of How Bound. There is a chapel of ease at Roughton Head, and Sunday schools.

CASTLETERRA, a par. in the bar. of Upper Loughtee, in the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.E. of Cavan. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, Ardagh, and Ephin, val. £483, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. The poor have the benefit of charitable endowments worth about £20 a year. Ballyhaise is one of the principal residences.

CASTLE-THORPE, a par. in the hund. and union of Newport-Pagnell, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the N. of Stony Stratford, its post town, 5 N.E. from Newport Pagnell, and 3 N. of Wolverton station on the London and Birmingham railway. The London and North-Western railway passes near it. This parish belonged to the honour of Hanslope Castle during the baronial wars of the 13th century. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Hanslope, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with low square tower, and stands in the centre of the village. It contains a monument to Sir Thomas Tyrrell, Bart., who died in 1671.

CASTLETHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Broughton, wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 1 mile from Brigg, its post town and railway station. It is seated on the banks of the small river Ancholme. Ermine Street passed near it.

CASTLETOGHER, UPPER, LOWER, and MIDDLE, vils. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles to the S. of Glennamaddy.

CASTLETON, a par. in the hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 13 miles to the N. of Bakewell, and 30 miles to the N. of Derby. Sheffield is its post town. It includes the chplry. of Edale. This place is situated in a district full of interest and attraction, both for its ancient associations and its physical character and natural curiosities. A castle was in existence here before the Norman Conquest, but the erection of the present structure is attributed to William Peveril, son of William the Conqueror. Many lordships in this county were given to him. The castle, which was named Peveril from its founder, and Peak from its situation, was built on the summit of a steep rock hanging over the entrance to the Peak cavern. The rock is above 200 feet in height, and is very difficult of access. The castle was held by King John, but was captured and retained for some years by the barons. Edward III. granted it to his son John of Gaunt, who being afterwards created Duke of Lancaster, the castle became, what it still remains, part of the duchy of Lancaster. It was a fortress of considerable size and strength, having walls from 8 to 9 feet thick and 20 feet high. The ruins consist of the donjon, or keep; a massive tower, 55 feet high, standing on the edge of the rock; and part of the gateway on the N. side. It is said that a tournament was held here by William Peveril. The rock on which the castle stands is a mass of limestone, the prevailing rock in the district. The town itself is said to have been formerly fortified with a rampart and fosse, the latter of which is still traceable. Castleton is now a small village, occupied mostly by miners. Basalt and fluor spar are found, and there are several lead-mines.—The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £186, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lichfield. The church is dedicated to St. Edmund. It is an ancient building of small dimensions, and though modernised and much altered, still retains some vestiges of the early English, its original style. There are a chapel for Wesleyans and an endowed free school in the village. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to about £65 per annum. Castleton is part of the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.—The principal natural objects of interest in the vicinity are the Peak Cavern, the Winnets or Windgates-road, Mam Tor, and the Speedwell, Odin, Trecliff, and Water Hull mines. The Peak Cavern, also called the Devil's Cave, is at the termination of the remarkable glen or hollow in which the village stands, and consists of a series of vast chambers and passages in the interior of the rock on which the castle is built. The entrance is a great dark arch, 120 feet wide and 40 feet high. One of the chambers is 200 feet square and 120 feet high. A broad stream separates the cavities, and is crossed by a ferry. The entire length of the cavern is said to be 2,250 feet. Various names are given to the chambers, one being called the Bell House, another the Chancel, others the Devil's Cellar, Halfway House, &c. The Winnets or Windgates-road, is a very steep descent, a mile long, forming the approach to Castleton from Chapel-en-le-Frith, and winding, in some parts, between precipices 800 feet high. The road is so called on account of the rush of wind constantly sweeping through it. Mam Tor, a grand mountain, composed of gritstone and shale, rises majestically above the village to the height of 1,300 feet. From the nature of this rock its surface is subject to constant disintegration by the action of the atmosphere, and the loosened fragments fall and accumulate at its foot. From this circumstance it is also called the Shivering Mountain. On its summit are remains of an ancient camp, covering about 16 acres, surrounded by a double ditch, and close by are two barrows. Near the foot of Mam Tor is the famous Odin lead-mine, which is said to have been known to the Saxons, and is still one of the best mines in Derbyshire. Silver is found with the lead in small quantities, and the mine yields also a curious elastic bitumen, petroleum, fluor spar, manganese, &c. The Speedwell mine, near the foot of the Winnets-road, is no longer worked. It is reached by a descent of above 100 steps, at the bottom of which is a great level covered with water. This is crossed by boat, and the cavern is entered. It is believed to be 500 feet high, and to be bounded by an awful gulph several hundred feet deep, into which the water rushes with appalling noise. The Trecliff mine is near the Peak Cavern, and contains many great chambers splendid with stalactites. One of them is said to be 200 feet high, and another 150 feet. The latter is named Lord Mulgrave's Cave. This mine is celebrated for producing the fluor spar, or "Blue John," a very beautiful mineral, in large masses, a very fine specimen of which is preserved at Chatsworth. Elastic bitumen is also found here. In the vicinity of Castleton is an extraordinary chasm in the limestone rocks, called Eldon Hole, nearly 200 feet deep, at the bottom of which is supposed to be a passage to other caverns. This ravine was once supposed to be bottomless.

CASTLETON, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset. It is an extensive village, or suburb, adjoining the eastern part of the town of Sherborne, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £81, in the patron. of G. D. W. Digby, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The parochial charities produce about £8 a year. This place derives its name from an ancient castellated residence of the bishops of Sherborne, which was dismantled in the civil wars of Charles I., and is now in ruins.

CASTLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 1 mile from Rochdale. It forms part of the south-eastern suburbs, and includes the hmlts. of Buersill and Marland. Here was formerly a castle of very ancient date, some vestiges of which still remain. The gas and water-works are situated in this township. The Rochdale canal passes near Castleton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton and woollen manufactories.

CASTLETON, a vil. in the par. of Marshfield, hund. of Wentlloog, in the co. of Monmouth, 5 miles to the S.W. of Newport. It is situated near the border of Glamorganshire, not far from the South Wales railway, on which Marshfield is a station. This place was the site of a castle founded soon after the Norman Conquest, of which there are some slight remains. Near the village is a hill called Pen-y-Park-Newydd, on the top of which is an ancient round camp. The prospect from the hill is extensive and beautiful.

CASTLETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Danby, lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the S.E. of Guisborough. It is seated in a moorland country, near the river Esk, and is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland branch of the North-Eastern railway.

CASTLETON, a par. in the district of Castleton-Melrose, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland. It comprehends the whole district known in Border story as Liddisdale, and is the largest par. in the South of Scotland, being 18 miles in length, by 12 in breadth. It contains the vil. of New Castleton, which is situated 20 miles to the S.E. of Hawick, and 70 miles from Edinburgh. The parish is situated on the English border, and comprises the valley of the Liddal, or Lid, which, uniting with the Hermitage, runs through it in a south-westerly direction, and falls into the Esk river, about 10 miles from the Solway Frith. The lower part of the parish is a fine fertile district, but towards the sources of the Liddal and Hermitage the country is strictly pastoral and very mountainous. Among the most prominent of the hills are, Tudhope, which rises 1,830 feet above the level of the sea; Millenwood-Fell and Windhead, which have an elevation of 2,000 feet; Hermitage, Larriston-Fell, and Doel-Fell. The parish is watered by numerous small streams, feeders of the Liddal, along the courses of which there is some fertile land and much picturesque scenery. The most important of these rivers are the Hermitage, the Tweedon, the Kershope (which here forms the boundary between England and Scotland), the Tinnis, and the Blackburn. Trout abound in them. The Blackburn has many fine falls in its course.—Limestone, freestone, and whinstone are quarried in various parts of the parish, which also contains coal and several mineral springs. The resources of this fine pastoral and mineral district have recently been more fully developed by the opening of the Border Union and Border Counties railways, which enter the valley at the N.W., branching off to Northumberland on the E. and Cumberland on the S. Lime-works, to a large extent, are about to be opened on the estate of Thorlieshope; a new freestone quarry has lately been opened on this estate, which also contains a valuable sulphur-spring, and on the banks of the Tweedon is a powerful petrifying spring.—Liddisdale was, in the middle ages, the seat of various powerful and lawless clans, among which the chief were the Armstrongs and the Elliots, the remains of whose forts and strongholds are still visible. From one of the principal of these, built on a lofty rock by the Liddal, and said to have been founded by Ranulph de Soulis in the time of David I., and around which a village grew up, the parish took its name. Hermitage Castle, on the stream of that name, was founded by the Comyns in the 13th century, and was subsequently held by the Douglases and the Hepburns. The ruins form a striking object in the wild country around them. The Earl of Bothwell, who was wounded in a border foray by John Elliot of Reek, a famous freebooter, was visited here by Queen Mary. The estate is now held by the Duke of Buccleuch, to whom by far the greater part of Liddisdale belongs. Near the castle was the baronial chapel. Another strong castle stood at Flight, of which there are no remains. There are large ancient entrenchments on Carberry Hill and Sidehill—the former, which is circular, is 100 feet in diameter; the latter is square, and about 330 feet across—besides several smaller camps, together with cairns and examples of the structures called Picts' Houses. The ancient road, called the Wheel-way, crossed Liddisdale from Stanmoor, and a church which stood near it acquired the name of the Wheel church. At Milnholm, about a mile from New Castleton, is a very curious and ancient cross. The present village of Castleton was founded about 1790 by the Duke of Buccleuch, and consists of two long parallel streets, with neat and well-built houses.—The par. is in the presb. of Langholm, in the patron. of the duke. The stipend of the minister is £250. The church, which stands at the junction of the Hermitage with the Liddal, is about a mile and a half from the village, and was erected in 1808. There are places of worship belonging to the Free Church, United Presbyterians, and Independents. There were anciently three other churches, belonging to the separate parishes Castleton, Ettleton, Hermitage, and Wheel. They have, however, been united into one parish since the Reformation. Two of the churchyards are still in use, Castleton and Ettleton. Hermitage has been used within the memory of persons still living, but there is scarcely anything to mark where Wheel church stood. It was situated in a very wild and desolate part of the parish. There are four parochial schools in the parish and one adventure school, besides subscription and parochial libraries. Castleton was the birthplace (1709) of Dr. Armstrong, the poet, whose father was minister of the parish. Fairs are held in April, May, September, October, and November.

CASTLETON-MELROSE DISTRICT, one of the four subdivisions of the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland. It is situated in the southern part of the co., and contains the pars. of Boswell, Bowden, Castleton or Liddisdale, Lilliesleaf, Maxton, and Melrose, with part of Galashiels.

CASTLETON, or CASTLETOWN-OF-BRAEMAR, a vil. in the par. of Braemar and Crathie, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 10 miles to the W. of Ballater, 165 miles from Edinburgh, and 57 miles W. of Aberdeen. It is seated within the forest of Mar, on the bank of the river Dee. Here is a Royal Bounty chapel, a Free church, and a Roman Catholic church. It was here that in 1715 the standard of the Pretender was first raised by the Earl of Mar, whose castle is near the village. In the vicinity is the castle said to have been that of Malcolm Canmore. Annual fairs for the sale of cattle are held in April, June, September, and November.

CASTLETOWN, a vil. in the par. of Olrick, in the co. of Caithness, Scotland, 6 miles to the E. of Thurso, and about 290 from Edinburgh. The strong and durable paving-stone, known as Caithness pavement, is quarried at Castlehill near this village.

CASTLETOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kinneigh, bar. of Carbery East, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles to the W. of Bandon. It is seated in a mountainous district, not far from the sea-coast. This village suffered very severely during the rebellion in the 17th century. Fairs are held on the 1st January, Easter Tuesday, the 12th May, and the 4th September.

CASTLETOWN, a market town in the par. of Kirk Malew, Rushen sheading, in the Isle of Man, 10 miles to the S.W. of Douglas. It is situated on the coast near the southern extremity of the island, and takes its name from an ancient fortress named Castle Rushen, which stands on an elevated spot in the middle of the town. This castle, which is said to have been founded by Guthred, a Danish chief, about the middle of the 10th century, became afterwards the seat of the ancient kings of Man, and is the scene of many interesting legends. During the civil war in the 17th century it was garrisoned for the king, but after a siege and vigorous defence was surrendered to the parliament, for which Christian, the governor, was subsequently shot. Castletown is the seat of the governor of the island, and the House of Keys, or Manx Parliament, and the Deemsters' Court, are held in the castle, in which are also the barracks and the prison. The town has several spacious streets with well-built houses, a market-house, and a bank. A good trade in corn is carried on, and some of the inhabitants are employed in the coasting trade and the fishery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £50, in the patron. of the governor of the island. The church, rebuilt about 1830 on the site of a former one, is dedicated to St. Mary. There are three chapels belonging to various bodies of Dissenters, and several institutions for education. King William's College, founded in 1830, is a handsome Gothic structure, with a tower surmounted by a lantern 115 feet in height. Here is a free school endowed by Bishop Barrow. The school-house was once a chapel, and is of very ancient date. It is said to have been built before the middle of the 13th century. A monumental pillar stands on the parade, set up in memory of Lieutenant-Governor Smelt, one of the founders of the college. There is a literary institution. The harbour is small and difficult of entrance. It has a lighthouse on the S. side. Roman remains have been found at Castletown, and a Roman altar is preserved at the residence of the governor. The market is held on Saturday.

CASTLETOWN, a par. in the bar. of Coonagh, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.E. of Pallasgrean. It is situated in a boggy country, and was the site of a castle belonging to the O'Harleys, of which there are some ruins. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe. There is no church.

CASTLETOWN, a par. in the bars. of Upper and Lower Dundalk, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N.W. of Dundalk. It is situated on the coast of Dundalk Bay, near the Dundalk, Enniskillin, and Londonderry railway, and is crossed by a small stream which falls into the bay. This place takes its name from the ancient castle, said to be that of Fingal, which stood here, and of which there are still considerable remains. The castle subsequently belonged to the Bellews and the Boynes. The par. contains some stone-quarries. The living is a rect. united with the vic. of Dundalk, in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher. The chief residence is Castletown House. In the vicinity are remains of ancient forts and primitive stone circles.

CASTLETOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Ballingarry.

CASTLETOWN, or CASTLETOWN-KILPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of Morgallion, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Nobber. The district is fertile and cultivated. The living is a rect. united with that of Drakestown, in the dioc. of Meath. Rathhood is one of the chief residences.

CASTLETOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Upperwoods, Queen's County, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles from Mountrath. It is seated on the river Nore, and has ruins of a castle of the Fitzpatricks. Petty sessions are held, and a police force is stationed here. Fairs are held in May, June, and October.

CASTLETOWN, a vil. in the par. of Castletown-Kindalen, bar. of Moycashel, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles to the W. of Mullingar, and 58 from Dublin. It is seated near Lough Ennel, and is a station on the Midland Great Western railway.

CASTLETOWNARRA, a par. in the bar. of Owney and Arra, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles to the W. of Nenagh. It is situated in a mountainous country on Lough Derg, and contains large slate-quarries at Garry Kennedy. The greater part of the surface is cultivated, and the scenery of the neighbourhood is very striking and beautiful. The highest ground is about 1,550 feet above the level of the sea. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh, val. with those of Youghal-Arra and Burgess-Beg, £514, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is ancient, and is situated on the shore of Lough Derg. There is a police station. The principal seat is Castle Lough, near which are remains of the old castle from which the parish took its name.

CASTLETOWN-BEARHAVEN, a vil. in the par. of Killaconenagh, bar. of Bear, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 20 miles to the W. of Bantry. It is situated in a mountainous district on the N. coast of Bantry Bay, opposite Bear Island, and is noted as the place where the French, who effected a landing in 1796, were made prisoners. Near this place stood the castle of Dunboy, which belonged to the O'Sullivans, and was taken and dismantled by the English about 1602. Near Castletown, on the N., are the Allihais copper-mines, which were opened in 1812. The village consists of one street, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen and small traders. Castletown is the seat of a Poor-law Union and contains the Union poorhouse. Close to the village is the parish church of Killaconenagh. There is a spacious Roman Catholic chapel, built in 1822; coast-guard and police stations, and a bridewell. Some vestiges exist of M'Dermot's castle. Fairs are held here on the 1st January, Easter Tuesday, the 12th May, and the 4th September.

CASTLETOWN-CONYERS, a par. in the bar. of Upper Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Ballingarry. It was the site of a castle founded about the middle of the 14th century, belonging to the MacEineirys. Being forfeited to the crown by their adherence to the Stuart cause in the 17th century, it was given by William III. to George Conyers, ancestor of its present owner. An abbey is said to have been founded here, and to have attained great wealth and influence, but nothing more is known of it. The land is chiefly pasture. The par. contains extensive quarries of good limestone. The living is a vic. forming part of the union of Corcomohide in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe. There is no church. The neighbourhood of Castletown has much pleasant scenery and many seats of the gentry, among which are Castletown-Conyers, the residence of the Conyers family, Rossmore, Glenbrook, &c. Fairs are held on the 11th February, the 17th April, the 3rd November, and the 1st December.

CASTLETOWN-DELVIN, a par. and market town in the bar. of Delvin, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 11 miles to the N.E. of Mullingar, and 33 from Dublin by road. Killucan station, on the Midland Great Western railway, is 6 miles distant. The par. is situated in a cultivated district, with small tracts of bog and waste land, and had a castle built by the De Lacys, of which there are some ruins, consisting of the walls and round towers. In the town is a police station; and petty sessions are held fortnightly. Castletown-Delvin is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and near it is the Union poorhouse, the name of which was changed to Delvin by the Privy Council. There is a market-house, and part of the old castle of the De Lacys was converted into a bridewell, but subsequently condemned. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with the rect. of Clonarney, £233, in the patron. of the crown and the Marquis of Drogheda alternately. The church stands near the castle. There are in the town a Roman Catholic chapel and an embroidery school. Clonyn, lately the seat of the Marquis of Westmeath, who had the title of baron from this place, is now the residence of Colonel F. Greville. Rosemead is the seat of Lord Vaux; other seats are Ballyhealy, South Hill, Mitchelstown, &c. Besides the castle of the De Lacys, there are remains of several other old fortresses and round towers. Friday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 17th March, the 1st May, and the 1st December.

CASTLETOWN-ELY, or CASTLETOWN-LY, a par. in the bar. of Clonlisk, King's County, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Moneygall. It lies in a pleasant country on the border of Tipperary. The living is a rect. united with that of Dunkerrin, in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh. The parish church is in ruins.

CASTLETOWN-KILPATRICK. See CASTLETOWN, Meath.

CASTLETOWN-KINDALEN, or VASTINA, a par. in the bar. of Moycashel, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N. of Kilbeggan. It lies on the W. side of Lough Ennel, and had anciently a castle belonging to the M'Geoghegans, proprietors of the district. The land is mostly cultivated and limestone is abundant. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £483, pat. the crown. The church is of modern erection. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and National and parochial schools. The principal seats are Jamestown, belonging to Sir R. Nagle, Bart., a handsome modern mansion, and Middleton.

CASTLE-TOWN-QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Rockliff, in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Carlisle. It is situated on the banks of the river Eden, close to the Caledonian railway, on which Rockliff is a station.

CASTLETOWNROCHE, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 20 miles to the N. of Cork, and 150 miles to the S.W. of Dublin. It is 2 miles from a station on the Fermoy branch of the Great Southern and Western railway. The par. is situated in a fertile, cultivated, and beautiful country, on the banks of the river Awbeg, a tributary of the Blackwater, and is the site of a castle, founded by the Roches, lords of Fermoy. Sir Walter Raleigh in 1580 took Lord and Lady Roche prisoners on a charge of treason, and brought them to Cork from this castle, having surprised the garrison, who did not expect his approach. In 1650 Cromwell's troops, under Lord Broghill, besieged it. The castle was defended by Lady Roche, in the absence of her husband, and after a short resistance surrendered. The old keep is still standing. The town contains a police station, and a dispensary. The Awbeg, or "gentle Mulla," of Spencer, is crossed by a bridge of five arches, half of which is very ancient. Here are some large flour-mills. This town had the grant of a market from George II., but the privilege is disused. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £389, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1825, and stands on a hill by the Awbeg. It is a handsome edifice, with a tower and beautiful spire. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. The village schoolmaster of this place had the honour of instructing Edmund Burke for five years, previous to his removal to Dublin. His family now resides at Ballyduff. Castle Widenham, a noble mansion with which is incorporated the keep of the old castle of the Roches, occupies the summit of a rocky and wooded hill by the river, and commands fine views over the picturesque surrounding country. Part of the old walls still remain. Other seats are Annsgrove, the residence of Richard Grove Annesley, and Glenanore. Under the castle hill is a holy well, dedicated to St. Patrick.

CASTLETOWNSEND, a vil. in the par. of Castlehaven, bar. of Carbery West, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Skibbereen. It is pleasantly seated on the margin of Castlehaven harbour, and is visited as a watering-place. In the village are coastguard and police stations. It is a sub-port to Baltimore, and has a small custom-house. Castletownsend House, the seat of the Townsends, was attacked and taken in 1690 by the Irish under O'Driscoll, who, however, did not hold it long. Castlehaven church stands near this village.

CASTLEVENTRY, a par. partly in the bar. of East Carbery, and partly in the bar. of Ibane and Barryroe, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N. of Ross Carbery. It lies in a hilly and boggy district near Carrickfadda Mountain, and was the site of a fortress erected about 1300 by the Knights Templars. The living is a vic. forming part of the union of Kilkerranmore, in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne. The church is a modern building in the early English style. Ruins of the old parish church stand on part of the site of the Knights Templars' fortress.

CASTLE WARD, one of the 6 wards or subdivisions of the co. of Cumberland, situated in the southern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by Morpeth ward and part of the co. of Durham, on the E. by the North Sea, on the S. by the river Tyne, separating it from the co. of Durham, and on the W. by Tindale ward. It is in two divisions. The eastern div. contains the pars. of Earsdon, Horton, Long Benton, Tynemouth, and Wall's End, with portions of the pars. of All Saints', St. Andrew's, Gosforth, Morpeth, and Newburn. The borough of Newcastle-upon-Tyne is locally in the eastern div. of Castle ward. The western div. contains the pars. of Dinnington (formerly part of Ponteland), Meldon, Ponteland, Stannington, and Whalton, with part of those of St. Andrew's, Bolam, Gosforth, Heddon-on-the-Wall, St. John's, Mitford, Morpeth, and Newburn. This ward gives name to a Poor-law Union, comprising many of the above parishes, with some others. Castle ward comprises an area of about 103,700 acres.

CASTLEWARREN, a vil. in the bar. of Gowran, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles from Gowran.

CASTLEWELLAN, a small market town in the par. of Kilmegan, bar. of Upper Iveagh, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 11 miles to the S.W. of Downpatrick, and 82 miles from Dublin. It is situated in a sheltered spot among hills, and is a well-built and thriving town. A large number of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive bleach-ground, the linen and flax manufactory, and the yarn spinning mills. The first bleach-ground was established here in 1749. The town has a police station and a market-house. A new church was erected in 1854, at the expense of the Earl of Annesley. There are chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, and Wesleyan Methodists, a National school, and a school connected with the Church Educational Society. Castlewellan Lodge, the pleasant seat of the Earl of Annesley, is situated at the foot of Slieve-na-lat. This place gives the title of baron to that nobleman. Other seats are Woodlawn, Ansbro' Cottage, and Wood Lodge. In the vicinity is Tullymore Park, the seat of the Earl of Roden. Monday is the market day. Fairs are held on the second Monday in each month.

CASTLEWRIGHT, a tnshp. in the par. of Mainstonehund. and co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 5 miles to the S. of Montgomery. It is on the border of Shropshire, near Offa's Dyke.

CASTLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Leathley, wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the E. of Otley. It is situated on the banks of the river Wharfe.

CASTON, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the S.E. of Watton. Attleboro' is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £495, in the patron. of Henry Dover, Esq. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists. The charitable endowments for the poor are worth about £10 a year.

CASTOR, a par. in the lib. of Peterborough, in the co. of Northampton, 5 miles to the W. of Peterborough, its post town. It is situated in a fen country, near the river Nen, and is a station on the Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western railway. The par. includes the chplries. of Sutton and Upton, and the hmlt. of Ailesworth. Castor, as its name indicates, was the site of a Roman station named Durobrivæ, on the Ermine Street, which terminated here. Many curious and interesting Roman relics have been discovered, among which are a Jupiter Terminalis, tesselated pavements, coins of the emperors from Trajan to Valens, sculptured stones, urns, &c. It is said that a monastery was founded here by Keneburgha, daughter of Penda, King of Mercia, which was destroyed early in the 11th century by the Danes. From this monastery the place acquired the name of Kyneburgceastre. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £528, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Keneburgha. It is an ancient and very interesting structure in the form of a cross, with a fine tower and spire rising from the centre. It is chiefly of Norman architecture, and was built about 1120. The nave has on one side three round arches rising from round pillars, and on the other side three Gothic arches supported by hexagonal pillars. The church contains an ancient monument to St. Keneburgha, the foundress, and one to John Lauder, the mathematician, a native of Castor. The charitable endowments of the parish consist of the town lands and some poors' cottages. The rectory of Castor was held by Bishop Madan.

CASTOR. See CAISTER-NEXT-YARMOUTH, Norfolk.

CASTROPETRE. See MONASTERORIS, King's County, Ireland.

CASWELL, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Portbury, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the W. of Bristol.

CATCHBURN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Morpeth Castle, and par. of Morpeth, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles from Morpeth.

CATCHEM'S-END, a hmlt. in the par. of Pattishall, hund. of Towcester, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles to the N. of Towcester. It is near the London and North-Western railway.

CATCHERSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkwhelpington, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the E. of Bellingham.

CATCLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Rotherham, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S. of Rotherham. The Midland railway passes by this place. There is a small free school, endowed by John Beardsall, in 1702, with £10 per annum.

CATCOMB, a tythg. in the par. of Hillmarton, hund. of Kingsbridge, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the N. of Calne. It is near the Great Western railway.

CATCOTT, a chplry. in the par. of Moorlinch, hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 7 miles to the E. of Bridgwater, its post town. It contains part of the hmlt. of Burtle. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £100, in the patron. of A. Henniker, Esq. There are charitable endowments for the poor, amounting to nearly £150 per annum.

CATEBY. See CADEBY, Yorkshire.

CATEL, THE, or ST. MARY DE CASTRO, a par. in the Isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 1 mile to the W. of St. Peter's. It includes the vil. of King's Mills.

CATERHAM, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Tandridge, in the co. of Surrey, 7 miles to the S. of Croydon, its post town. It is situated in a pleasant country, and is connected with the South-Eastern railway by a branch line of 4 miles from Caterham Junction. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £255, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Legrew. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence.

CATESBY, or CATESBY-ABBEY, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles to the S.W. of Daventry, its post town. It is situated on the borders of Warwickshire, and contains the hmlt. of Newbold Grounds. This parish was the site of a convent, founded in the 12th century by Robert de Esseby, for nuns of the Benedictine order. It flourished till the Dissolution, when it had a revenue of £145. There are a few remains of the conventual buildings. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, in the patron. of T. and M. Scrafton, Esqrs. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has long been in ruins. Divine service is performed in the chapel in the grounds of Catesby House. This mansion stands on the site of the nunnery, and is the ancient seat of the Parkhurst family, of whom was John Parkhurst, the eminent Orientalist, and author of the well-known Hebrew and Greek Lexicons. He was born here in 1728. In the vicinity is Arbury, an ancient camp of British origin.

CATFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Happing, in the co. of Norfolk, 14 miles to the N.E. of Norwich. Stalham is its post town. It is not far from Hickling Mere. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £606, in the patron. of the bishop and of the Rev. B. L. Cubitt alternately. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and is partly in the perpendicular style of architecture. There are charitable endowments for the poor amounting to £10 a year. The chief residence is Catfield House, the seat of the Cubitts.

CATFOSS, a tnshp. in the par. of Sigglesthorne, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the W. of Hornsea.

CATHANGER-CUM-STOWEY, a tythg. in the par. of Fivehead, hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the S.W. of Langport.

CATHARGOED, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Aberbythych, hund. of Iskennen, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 5 miles to the S. of Llandeilofawr. It is seated near the river Towy, and the Llanelly and Vale of Towy railway. It is joined with the hmlts. of Cathilas and Glynn.

CATHCART, a par. partly in Lower ward, in the co. of Lanark, and partly in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland; its northern boundary reaches within 1 mile of the S. of Glasgow. It lies in a fertile country on the banks of the river White Cart, and contains the vils. of Old Cathcart, New Cathcart, and Langside. In the 12th century it became a possession of the monks of Paisley, to whom it was given by Walter Stewart. Langside was the scene of the defeat of Mary Queen of Scots by the Regent Murray in 1568. Here was a castle, called Caer Cart, the seat of the lords Cathcart till about the middle of the 16th century. Coal and limestone were formerly worked, and coal is abundant. The par. is in the presb. of Glasgow, and in the patron. of the Gordons of Aikenhead. The stipend of the minister is £274. The par. extends about 6 miles in length and 2 miles in breadth.

CATHEDINE, a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 6 miles to the E. of Brecknock. Crickhowell is its post town. It lies in a mountainous district near the border of Herefordshire, and is watered by a branch of the river Wye. In this parish is Blaenllynfi, a nominal borough of ancient date long decayed, and the site of a venerable castle built by the Normans, of which some traces remain. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £141, in the patron. of the Rev. R. W. P. Davies. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Cathedine House is the principal residence.

CATHERINE'S, ST., a par. partly in the bar. of Uppercross, and partly in the city of Dublin, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, close to Dublin. It includes the vils. of East and West Harold's Cross. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. £380, in the patron. of the Earl of Meath.

CATHERINE, ST., a par. partly within the bounds of the city of Gloucester, and partly in the upper and middle divs. of the hund. of Dudstone and King's Barton, in the co. of Gloucester, 1 mile to the N. of Gloucester. It includes the hmlt. of Longford St. Catherine's.

CATHERINE, ST., a par. in the hund. of Bath-Forum, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the N.E. of Bath, its post town. It is situated in a beautiful valley under Holt Down, and was once the seat of the abbots of Bath. A small stream, a feeder of the Avon, runs along the valley. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Batheaston, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, in the patron. of Christ Church College, Oxford. The parochial charities are of trifling value.

CATHERINE-SLACK, a vil. in the tnshp. of North Owram, and par. of Halifax, in the wap. of Morley, West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.E. of Halifax.

CATHERINGTON, a par. and large vil. in the upper div. of the hund. of Finch-Dean, Petersfield div. of the co. of Southampton, 1 mile to the N.W. of Horndean, its post town, 6 miles to the S. of Petersfield, and 10 N. of Portsmouth. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £280, in the patron. of G. Pritchard, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is an ancient structure with a square tower. It contains a monument of the Hyde family, and in the churchyard is one to the memory of Mrs. Kean, wife of the celebrated tragedian, Edmund Kean. There is an endowed free school, founded in 1695 by William Appleford, the income of which is about £15 per annum; also a National school for boys and one for girls—the latter has a small endowment. Sir J. C. Jervoise, Bart., is lord of the manor. The chief seat is Hinton House, formerly the residence of the Hydes, earls of Clarendon. It was here that the marriage of James II., when Duke of York, with Anne Hyde, is said to have taken place.

CATHERSTON-LEWSTON, a par. in the hund. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the N.E. of Lyme Regis, and 7 miles to the W. of Bridport. It is situated near the sea-coast, on the river Char, about 1 mile to the N. of Charmouth, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £67, in the gift of Mrs. Hildyard. The old church, dedicated to St. Mary, was taken down in 1858, and a new one erected on its site in the decorated Gothic style, from designs by J. Rasson, Esq., at the sole expense of the late R. C. Hildyard, Esq.

CATHILAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Aberbythych, hund. of Iskennen, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 6 miles to the S. of Llandeilofawr. It is united with the hmlt. of Cathargoed.

CATHILAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, hund. of Cathinog, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 5 miles to the S.E. of Llandeilofawr. It is seated on the river Cothi, a branch of the Towy.

CATHINOG HUNDRED, one of the 8 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, situated in the northern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the co. of Cardigan, and surrounded by the hunds. of Cayo, Iskennen, Elvet, and Derllys. It contains the pars. of Brechfa, Llanfihangel-Ar-Arth, Llanfihangel-Cilfargen, Llanfihangel-Ros-y-Corn, Llanfynydd, Llangathen, Llanllwny, Llanlluny, Llanbyther, and Pencarreg, with parts of the pars. of Llanegwad, and Llany-Crwys.

CATISFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Fareham, Fareham div. of the co. of Southampton, 1 mile from Fareham.

CATLEY LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Spotland, and par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles from Rochdale.

CATMORE, a par. in the hund. of Compton, in the co. of Berks, 3 miles to the W. of East Ilsley. Wantage is its post town. It is situated in a pleasant country, and includes the tythg. of Lilley. Catmore was anciently a market town under a grant by Edward I. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200, in the patron. of C. Eyre, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

CATON, a tnshp. joined with Littledale, in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles to the E. of Lancaster, its post town. It is a station on the Skipton and Lancaster branch of the Midland railway. The tnshp. is situated in a picturesque district on the S. side of the river Lune, and contains coal and slate. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the flax-mills and cotton factories. Caton is the seat of a Poor-law Union. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £100, in the gift of the Vicar of Lancaster. There are charitable endowments, partly for education, worth about £20 a year. A Roman way is supposed to have passed near this place, various Roman remains having been found in the neighbourhood.

CATRINE, a vil. and quoad sacra par. in the par. of Sorn, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 2 miles to the S.E. of Mauchline. It is seated in a pleasant spot on the banks of the river Ayr, and was founded about 1787 by the proprietors of the cotton factories then established here. It is regularly built, with a spacious square in the centre, and has a library for the use of the workpeople, a bank, and a brewery. There is a chapel of ease, the living being in the presb. of Ayr, and in the gift of the communicants; also a Free church and an United Presbyterian church. This village was for a time the residence of the philosopher, Dugald Stewart.

CATSASH HUNDRED, one of the 40 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Somerset, situated in the east parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Whitley, Glaston Twelve Hides, and Whitestone; on the E. by the hund. of Bruton; on the S. by the hund. of Horethorn; and on the W. by the hund. of Somerton. It contains the pars. of Alford, Almsford, Babcary, North Barrow, South Barrow, St. David Barton, North Cadbury, South Cadbury, Castle-Cary, Compton-Pauncefoot, Keinton-Mansfield, Kingweston, Lovington, West Lydford, Maperton, Queen Camel, Sparkford, Sutton-Montis, and Weston-Bampfield. The hund. extends over an area of about 25,300 acres.

CATS-DEANS, a hmlt. in the par. of Monks' Risborough, hund. of Aylesbury, in the co. of Buckingham, not far from Prince's Risborough.

CATSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Ninfield, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles to the S.W. of Battle, its post town. It contains some hop-grounds. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £311, in the patron. of the Earl of Ashburnham. The church is partly in the early English style, and is dedicated to St. Lawrence. There is a charitable bequest for the benefit of the blind, producing about £60 per annum. The principal residence is Catsfield Place.

CATSGORE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Somerton, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile from Somerton.

CATSHALL, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Godalming, in the co. of Surrey, 1 mile from Godalming.

CATSTREE, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles to the N. of Bridgnorth.

CATTAL, a tnshp. in the par. of Hunsingore, wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles to the W. of York. It is a station on the York, Knaresborough, and High Harrogate branch of the North-Eastern railway.

CATTERALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the S. of Garstang. It is situated on the banks of the river Wyre, where the West Calder joins it, not far from the Lancaster and Preston Junction railway. The Lancaster canal passes near this place. Here are extensive print-works, in which many of the workpeople are employed. These works were among the earliest established in Lancashire. Catteral Hall is the principal residence.

CATTERICK, a par. partly in the eastern div. of the wap. of Gilling, and partly in the eastern and partly in the western divs. of the wap. of Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.E. of Richmond. It is a post town, and is situated on the banks of the river Swale. Catterick Bridge, about 1 mile to the N. of the village, is a station on the Richmond and Darlington branch of the North-Eastern railway. The parish is of very great extent, and comprises numerous tnshps. In the wap. of Gilling, in this par., are the chplry. of Bolton-upon-Swale, and the tnshps. of Ellerton-upon-Swale, Kiplin, Scorton, Uckerby, and Whitwell. In the wap. of Hang, in this par., are the chplries. of Hudswell and Hipswell, which includes the ext. par. district of St. Martin's, and the tnshps. of East Appleton, West Appleton, Brough, Colbourne, Killerby, Scotton, and Tun stall (eastern div.). Catterick is a very ancient place, and probably derives its name from the Roman station Cataractonium, on or near the site of which it stands. This station was on Ermine Street. Roman antiquities, consisting of traces of buildings, coins, &c., have been discovered here. The town was burnt down by the Danes in the latter half of the 8th century. There was a hospital founded in the reign of Henry III. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. with the cur. of Tunstall annexed, £678, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Anne. It is partly in the early English and partly in the perpendicular style. The charitable endowments of the parish, consisting partly of the revenue (£45) of the small free school, and the hospital for widows, founded in 1658 by Michael Tyddall, produce about £130 per annum. Catterick is the head of a deanery in the archdeaconry of Richmond. In the vicinity is Castle Hill, the site of an old camp. Races take place annually on a course near Catterick Bridge.

CATTERLIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Newton-Rigny, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Penrith. Catterlin Hall is about a mile from the village.

CATTERLINE, a joint par. with Kinneff, in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland. The village of the same name is about 5 miles to the N.E. of Bervie. There is an Episcopalian chapel.

CATTERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tadcaster, Ainsty of the city of York, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.E. of Tadcaster.

CATTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 4 miles to the S. of Lutterworth. It is situated at the southern extremity of the county, on the edge of Northamptonshire and Warwickshire, on the N. side of the river Avon. Watling Street passed near it. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £260, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Harper, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, and contains an ancient font. The parochial charities are worth about £15 a year, chiefly the produce of the poor's land. This village is a meet for the Pytchley hounds.

CATTISTOCK, a par. and large vil. in the hund. of Cerne, Totcombe, and Modbury, in the co. of Dorset, 4 miles to the W. of Cerne Abbas, and 9 N.W. of Dorchester, its post town. It is watered by the river Frome. The Wiltshire and Somerset railway passes through the parish, within 250 yards of the rectory-house, and has a station at Maiden Newton, about 1 mile from the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £500. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is built of Ham-hill stone, and the interior is elaborately embellished. It was recently repaired at the expense of the late rector. The rectory-house is a neat building in the Gothic style. There is a National school. Near the village is an ancient camp, with a double entrenchment, covering about four acres. The principal residences are Cattistock House and Chalmington House.

CATTO, a tnshp. in the par. of Leake, wap. of Allertonshire, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the E. of Northallerton. It is joined with the tnshp. of Landmoth.

CATTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Croxhall, hund. of Repton and Gresley, in the co. of Derby, 6 miles to the S.W. of Burton-upon-Trent. It lies near the Midland West Branch railway, on which Croxhall is a station. Near the village is Catton Hall.

CATTON, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles to the N. of Norwich, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £142, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, which is overgrown with ivy, is dedicated to St. Margaret, and contains several old monuments. There are charitable bequests for the benefit of the poor, worth about £10 per annum. Catton Hall is the principal seat.

CATTON, a grieveship in the par. of Allendale, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 1 mile from Allendale.

CATTON, a par. partly in the Wilton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, and partly in the wap. of Ouse and Derwent, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the E. of York, its post town. It is situated on the river Derwent, and is intersected by the York and Market Weighton branch of the North-Eastern railway, on which there is a station at Stamford Bridge. The parish comprises the tnshps. of High Catton, Low Catton, East Stamford Bridge, West Stamford Bridge, and the chplry. of Kexby, of which the first three are in the wap. of Harthill, and the last two in that of Ouse and Derwent. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £410, in the patron. of Lord Leconfield. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There are a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists and a free school endowed with £25 per annum.

CATTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Topcliffe, wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.W. of Thirsk. It is seated on the banks of the river Swale, not far from the Leeds, Thirsk, and Stockton branch of the North-Eastern railway. Catton House is an old seat.

CATWICK, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the W. of Hornsea. Beverley is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £149, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is in the perpendicular style of architecture, and is dedicated to St. Michael. The charitable endowments for the poor produce about £6 a year.

CATWORTH, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 4 miles to the N. of Kimbolton, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £337, in the patron. of the Principal and Fellows of Brazenose College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. There are charitable benefactions for the poor, amounting to about £30 per annum. This village was the birthplace of Sir Wolston Dixie, Lord Mayor of London in 1585. Great Catworth is a meet for the Fitzwilliam hounds.

CATWORTH, LITTLE, a chplry. in the par. of Long Stow, hund. of Leightonstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 1 mile from Great Catworth.

CAUDLE GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Brimpsfield, hund. of Rapsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 8 miles to the S.E. of Gloucester.

CAUGHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Backford, hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the N. of Chester. It is near the Birkenhead railway.

CAULDHAME, a vil. in the par. of Kippen, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 8 miles to the S.E. of Aberfoil.

CAULDON, a par. in the northern div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 7 miles to the W. of Ashborne, its post town. It is watered by the small river Hamps, which near this place has a subterranean passage for several miles. The parish contains limestone, which is quarried extensively for burning. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £80, in the patron. of A. Henniker, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

CAULDWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Stapenhill, hund. of Repton and Gresley, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles to the S. of Burton-on-Trent.

CAULEDGE PARK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Alnwick, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles from Alnwick.

CAULK. See CALKE, Derbyshire.

CAUNDLE BISHOP, or BISHOP'S CAUNDLE, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, Sherborne div. of the co. of Dorset, 6 miles S.W. of Sturminster Newton, and 4 S.E. of Sherborne. It contains the hmlt. of Bishopsdown and the tythg. of Caundle Wake. The Central Dorset branch of the London and South-Western railway passes near the village, and has a station at Sherborne. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £226, in the patron. of G. D. W. Digby, Esq. The church is an ancient building with a tower. There is a National school, and charities to the value of £13 per annum.

CAUNDLE MARSH, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset, 1 mile E. of Sherborne, its post town and railway station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £143, in the patron. of Sir H. A. Hoare, Bart. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. There are charities to the value of £2.

CAUNDLE PURSE, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the N.E. of Sherborne, its post town and railway station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £160, in the patron. of Sir H. A. Hoare, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Here is an ancient building now used as a homestead, said formerly to have been in the possession of King John, and used by him as a hunting-seat.

CAUNDLE STOURTON, a par. in the hund. of Brownshall, in the co. of Dorset, 4 miles W. of Stourminster station, and 15 N.W. of Blandford. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £48, in the patron. of Sir H. A. Hoare, Bart., who is lord of the manor. The church is an ancient building with a tower, and possesses a monument to Highmore, the anatomist. Bishop Mew, who took a prominent part in the battle of Sedgmoor, was born here.

CAUNDLE WAKE, a tythg. in the par. of Caundle Bishop, hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Sherborne. This place was formerly possessed by the Wakes of Wareham, to which family Archbishop Wake belonged.

CAUNSALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolverley, in the co. of Worcester. It is situated near the river Severn, at a short distance from Kidderminster.

CAUNTON, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles N.W. of the Newark railway station, which is its post town. It contains the hmlts. of Beesthorpe, Deanhall, and Knapthorpe, and a considerable portion of common. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £171, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ripon. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice with a tower. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have places of worship. There is a free school for boys. Lord Middleton is lord of the manor. Beesthorpe Hall is a handsome edifice.

CAUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Westbury, in the co. of Salop, 9 miles W. of Shrewsbury. On a hill, commanding an extensive view, are the remains of a castle built after the Conquest by the Corbets.

CAUSEWAY, a vil. in the par. of Killury, in the bar. of Clanmaurice, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated between 6 and 7 miles to the N.E. of Ardfert.

CAUSEWAYHEAD, a vil. partly in the par. and burgh of Stirling, and partly in that part of the par. of Logie which lies in the co. of Clackmannan, Scotland. It is situated on the river Forth, 1 mile N. of the town of Stirling.

CAUSEWAYSIDE, a vil. adjoining Tollcross, in the par. of Old Monkland, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of Glasgow.

CAUSEY PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Hebburn, western div. of the ward of Morpeth, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles N. of Morpeth, its post town. A portion of Causey Park House was erected in 1582, and near it are the ruins of St. Cuthbert's chapel. There is an endowed school for boys.

CAUSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Clunbury, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles S.E. of Bishop's Castle.

CAUTLEY, a hmlt. in the par. and tnshp. of Sedbergh, in the West Riding of the co. of York.

CAVA, one of the Mainland Orkney islands of the Orkney and Shetland group, 2 miles S. of Houston Head, in the mainland, and forming part of the par. of Orphir. It is 1 mile in length and a quarter of a mile in breadth.

CAVAN, an inland co. in the extreme S. of the prov. of Ulster, Ireland, bounded on the N. by the co. of Fermanagh, on the S. by Westmeath on the E. and N.E. by Monaghan, and on the W. by Leitrim. According to Ptolemy, it was once the seat of the Erdini, or Ernaigh in the Irish language, and traces of this name are still preserved in Lough Erne, and the river Erne. This district also formed part of the ancient principality of Breifne, which was divided into the two principalities of the upper or East Breifne, and lower or West Breifne; the latter being composed of the co. of Leitrim, the former almost wholly of that of Cavan. It is celebrated, in the history of the wars in Ireland, for the fastnesses formed by its woods, lakes, and bogs, which long secured the independence of its native possessors. It was made shire-ground by Sir John Perrot, Lord Deputy of Ireland in 1584, and the whole county divided into baronies, two being assigned to Sir John O'Reilly, then chief lord of the country, free of contributions, and three to other members of the O'Reilly family. In the early part of the reign of James I., in consequence of the flight of the earls of Tyrone and Tyrconnell, and the rebellion of O'Dogherty and others, Cavan, and five other counties were forfeited to the crown, when the king determined on the general plantation of Ulster by loyal English and Scotch colonists. Castles were then built, and the foundations of towns and of numerous villages were laid. The principal settlers were Hamiltons, Auchmuties, and Bailies from Scotland; Lamberts, Parsons, Ridgeways, and Butlers from England; and of the reinstated Irish the chief were O'Reillys. The extreme length of the county is 51 miles, extreme breadth 28 miles, although throughout one half of its length it does not exceed an average of 6 to 8 miles.—Cavan is divided into eight baronies, viz.: Castlerahan, Clonmahon, Clonkee, Upper and Lower Loughtee, Tullygarvey, Tullyhunco, and Tullyhaw, and contains 746 square miles, or 477,360 acres, of which 375,473 acres are arable, 71,918 uncultivated, bog, mountain, &c., and 7,325 in plantation. The population of the county in 1861 was 153,972 against 174,064 in 1851, showing a decrease in the decennial period of 20,092, or 11·54 per cent. The great bulk of the population, who are distributed into 29,813 families, and occupy 28,129 houses, are Roman Catholics, as shown by the government returns, viz.: 123,825 Roman Catholics, 23,187 Established Church, 5,536 Presbyterians, 1,319 Methodists, 34 Society of Friends, and 71 of other persuasions. About 76 per cent. of the population live by agriculture, 20 per cent. by manufacture and trade, the remainder are independent or in professions. Cavan contains 30 parishes, besides parts of seven others. It is in the diocese of Meath, Ardagh, and Kilmore, and in the ecclesiastical province of Armagh. It contains the disfranchised borough and market towns of Cavan and Belturbet; the market and post towns of Arvagh, Bailieborough, Ballyconnell, Ballyhaise, Ballyjamesduff, Cootehill, Killashandra, Kingscourt, Stradone, and Virginia; the market towns of Ballinagh and Shercock; the post towns of Crossdoney, Mount-Nugent, and Scrabby; the modern and flourishing town of Mullagh; and the vils. of Butlersbridge and Swanlinbar. Cavan, prior to the Union, used to send six members to the Irish parliament, but since it only returns two representatives to the imperial parliament. The county members are elected at Cavan, where the assizes are held, and in which town are the county court-house and gaol. Quarter sessions are held at Cavan, Bailieborough, Ballyconnell, and Cootehill; at the three last-named towns are a sessions-house and bridewell. There are also 4 fever hospitals and 21 dispensaries besides a county infirmary. The county is governed by a lord-lieutenant and 10 deputy lieutenants, with about 85 magistrates; it has 23 constabulary stations. Cavan is in the N.W. circuit, and in the N. military district with stations at Arvagh, Ballyconnell, and Killashandra, affording accommodation for about 300 officers and men, and 100 horses. There are two savings-banks; 158 National schools, with upwards of 16,000 children attending; 51·9 per cent. of the people in 1841 could neither read nor write.—Cavan is uneven, something like Anglesea, forming an irregular oval, and mountains of considerable height rise at its north-western extremity. Cuilcagh, the highest point, rises 2,188 feet above the level of the sea, and forms, with the remainder of the Ballynageragh mountains, the southern boundary of the basin of Lough Erne. Some of the lakes, which are numerous though small, cover many hundred acres, and all abound with fish. The soil for the most part is a poor brown clay. Coal, iron, copper, lead, and other minerals are found; and there are numerous mineral springs, those of Swanlinbar and Derrylister being the most celebrated, the waters of which are alterative and diaphoretic. At Legnagrove and Dowra the springs contain sulphur and purging salt, and are used in nervous diseases. The well at Owen Breun, the waters of Carrickmore, and a pool in the mountains of Loughlinlea, between Bailieborough and Kingscourt, have also medicinal properties.—Agriculture is in a very backward state in the county, though much improved within the last twenty years, before which period the plough was scarcely known, most of the labour having been performed with the spade. The chief crops are oats, potatoes, and turnips, though in some districts flax and wheat are grown. The average size of farms is small, and the buildings are mean, the fences of stone; labour about 1s. per day. Linen is the chief manufacture, though the quantity made is much less than formerly, the linen district being now confined to the country about Cootehill, in the N. of the county. The old flax-mills and bleach-greens, formerly connected with the manufacture, are converted to other purposes. There are comparatively few antiquities in Cavan: the chief are Clonghoughter Castle; a round tower at Drumlane, where an abbey used to be; and Holy Trinity priory, in Lough Oughter, near to Kilmore. In 1715 fossil elephants' teeth, weighing 2 lb. 6 oz. each, were found in the bogs. The district between Fermanagh and Leitrim was, at the commencement of this century, inhabited by a primitive race of MacGawrens and Dolans, who intermarried and observed some peculiar customs, electing their own king and queen, to whom implicit obedience was paid, but these customs are now fast disappearing. Marquis Headford has a seat at Virginia Park, Lord Farnham at Farnham, Saunderson at Castle Saunderson, &c. In 1617 Sir Oliver Lambert was created Baron of Cavan, which title was raised to an earldom in favour of his son Charles, by whose descendants it is still enjoyed.

CAVAN, a market, post, and county town of the co. of Cavan, in the par. of Urney, in the bar. of Upper Loughtee, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 70 miles N.W. of Dublin by road, or 85¾ by the Midland Great Western railway, which has a branch to Cavan. It may also be approached by the Irish North-Western, which likewise has a branch to Cavan. It has a most picturesque situation about 3¼ miles E. of Lough Oughter, on a stream falling into the Annalee. It is a nominal borough, having been incorporated by James I., and returned two members to the Irish parliament before the Union. It is now governed by the county magistrates, and the assizes and petty-sessions are regularly held here. The original town, said to be of early date, was destroyed by fire in 1690, when a detachment of English troops, under the Duke of Berwick, was defeated by Captain Wolsey. The present town, consisting mainly of one long street, extends along the road from Dublin to Enniskillen, and contains, according to the census of 1861, 481 houses, inhabited by a population of 3,107, of whom 2,346 are Roman Catholics, 631 belong to the Established Church, 55 Methodists, and 5 of other persuasions. The houses in the main street are for the most part old and irregularly built; but the western suburb, comprising the public buildings, is remarkably handsome. It contains the parish church of Urney, the court-house, gaol, union poorhouse, fever hospital, several banks, barracks, and police station. In 1824 a commodious Roman Catholic chapel was erected in the town, at a cost of £1,000. Over the altar is a painting of the Descent from the Cross. There are also Presbyterian and Methodist chapels, and a public pleasure-ground, bequeathed by the late Lady Farnham, for the recreation of the inhabitants. The royal school is of ancient foundation, and has a revenue of £642, with five exhibitions at Trinity College, Dublin. Mr. Sheridan, the friend of Dean Swift, for some time was head-master. There are also a National and several other schools. It supports a newspaper of its own, called The Anglo-Celt. In 1300 the Abbey of Keadue was founded by the O'Reillys, where was buried Owen O'Niel, the Irish general, who was poisoned in Clonghoughter Castle in 1649, notable also for being the prison of Bishop Bedell in 1641. The remains of the abbey may still be seen standing on an islet not far from Lake Killikeen. The principal residences in the neighbourhood are Farnham House (the seat of Lord Farnham), Castle Saunderson, and Kilmore. The market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on the 1st February, Easter Monday, 14th May, 30th June, 14th August, 25th September, and 12th November.

CAVAN, a townland, in the bar. of Raphoe, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3½ miles N.W. of Lifford. In 1769 an observatory was erected here for noting the transit of Venus.

CAVE HILL, a mountain close to Belfast Lough, in the S.E. portion of the co. of Antrim, in the prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It rises to the height of 1,200 feet, and commands an extensive view over the North Sea and the western coast of Scotland.

CAVENDISH, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, in the co. of Suffolk, 6 miles N.W. of the railway station at Sudbury, which is its post town. It is situated on the river Stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £733, in the patron. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice in the perpendicular style of architecture, and contains a brass to the Cavendishes, and an old tomb. There is a school for boys endowed with £30, founded in 1696 by the Rev. Thomas Grey. The family of Cavendish, whose ancestors have filled such prominent places in the history of this kingdom, take their name from this place. They were originally an offshoot of the Gernons of Essex. On the 11th June a cattle fair is held here.

CAVENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Lackford, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Mildenhall, its post town, and 6 W. of Bury. It is situated on the river Lark, which is navigable, and is crossed by Temple bridge. The Great Eastern railway has a station at Mildenhall Road. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £113, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient Gothic structure. Here is a school supported chiefly by H. Waddington, M.P., who resides at Cavenham Hall. W. F. Farmer, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CAVE, NORTH, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N.W. of South Cave, and 23 S.E. of York. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £247, in the patron. of the Burtons. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

CAVERS, a par. in the district of Hawick, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland. It is situated in the centre of Teviotdale, but that part lying adjacent to England has been recently made the par. of Teviothead. The Teviot bounds it on the W., and the Rule on the E. The scenery is everywhere very beautiful. This par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh, and under the patron. of Douglas of Cavers. The stipend of the minister is £250. There are a Free church and an Independent chapel at Denholm, where Dr. John Leyden, the poet, was born in 1775. At Carlenrigg Wood, Johnny Armstrong was killed, and in the vicinity is a Roman camp where pottery and urns have been found.

CAVERSFIELD, a par. partly in the hund. of Ploughly, in the co. of Oxford, and partly in the hund. and co. of Buckingham, 1 mile N. of Bicester, its post town, and 13 S.E. of Banbury. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £69, in the patron. of the trustees of the late J. Bullock, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is partly in the Norman style, with a fine Saxon porch, and contains several monuments of the Langstons, Moyles, and Bards, and an antique circular font. Caversfield House is the seat of R. B. Marsham, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

CAVERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Binfield, in the co. of Oxford, 1 mile N. of Reading. It is beautifully situated on the river Thames, near the Great Western railway. At the period of the Conquest this place was given to the Giffards, earls of Buckingham, who subsequently founded a priory which was attached to Notley Abbey. Caversham Hill, in 1643, was the scene of a skirmish between the parliamentarians and Prince Rupert. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £236, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a tower partly of wood. It was partially restored in 1857. At the village of Kidmore End, which is situated within this parish, is a district church erected in 1852. There is a Dissenting place of worship and National schools for both sexes. A new church school with teacher's residence was built in 1860. The charities amount to £14 11s. 6d. per annum. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. William Crawshay, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Caversham Park, the grounds of which were laid out by Capability Brown. This estate, which was purchased by Mr. Crawshay, formerly belonged to the Marsacs and Cadogans, and gives to the latter the title of viscount. Old Caversham House, where the queen of James I. was entertained by Lord Knowles, and Charles I. was permitted to see his children, was destroyed by fire in January, 1850, but has since been rebuilt.

CAVERSWALL, a par. in the northern div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 1 mile N. of Blythe Bridge station on the Stoke and Derby branch of the North Staffordshire line, 7 S.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, and 4 W. of Cheadle. It includes the tnshps. of Caverswall, Weston-Coyney, and Hulme, and is intersected by the river Blythe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £217, in the patron. of the Hon. E. S. Parker Jervis, who is lord of the manor of Caverswall township. The church is an ancient stone building with a square tower annexed. It is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains monuments of William de Caverswall and Countess St. Vincent. There is a National school, and the Wesleyans have a chapel. The charities produce £35 per annum. Not far from the church stands Caverswall Castle, built in Edward II.'s time by Sir William de Caverswall, and rebuilt in James I.'s reign by Matt. Craydock. It is a large building, with towers at each angle and a high keep, and is surrounded by a moat. It has been possessed by the Montgomerys, Giffords, Ports, Hastings, and Vanes, but is now a nunnery, which it became in 1811. Park Hall, the seat of J. P. Ratcliffe, Esq., is a fine brick building. Weston-Coyney Hall, the seat of the ancient family of the Coyneys, is 1 mile N.W. of Caverswall. The township derives its name from this family, to whom a large estate was granted by Henry III. Major Coyney, the present possessor, is lord of the manors of Weston-Coyney and Hulme, and the Hon. E. S. Parker Jervis of the manor of Caverswall.

CAVERTON, a vil. in the par. of Eckford, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland. It is situated 4½ miles S.E. of Kelso. In the neighbourhood is Moss Tower, a border stronghold, which was burnt by the English in 1544 and again in 1553. The barony of Caverton belonged to the Lord Soulis, who is said to have been boiled alive in the parish of Castleton, near his castle of Hermitage.

CAVE, SOUTH, a par. and petty sessions town, partly within the liberty of St. Peter at York, and partly in the wap. of Harthill, East Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles from Hull, and 24 S.E. of York. It is an extensive parish, and includes the tnshps. of Broomfleet, South Cave, and Faxfleet. The town, which is situated in a hollow by the Humber, contains a bank, several inns, and three chapels. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £168, in the patron. of H. G. Barnard, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was built in 1601. The charities produce £24 per annum, of which £18 is the endowment of Jobson's school. Cave Castle commands a fine prospect, and contains a portrait of Washington, whose father, John Washington, was a landowner here previous to the emigration of the family to America in 1657. Monday is the market day, principally for corn, and a fair is held on Trinity Monday.

CAVIL, a hmlt. in the par. of Eastrington, in the hund. of Howdenshire, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N.E. of Howden. There are traces of the ancient seat of the Cavils.

CAWDEN WITH CADWORTH, a hund. in the S. portion of the co. of Wilts, contains the pars. of St. Martin Barford, Baverstock, Britford, Burcombe, Coombe-Bissett, Fovant, Grovcley-Wood, Nether Hampton, West Harnham, Homington, Odstock, St. Anthony Stratford, Sutton Mandeville, Whitsbury, and parts of Bramshaw and Wilton, and has an area of 25,100 acres.

CAWDOR, or CALDER, a par. in the district of East Inverness, in the cos. of Inverness and Nairn, Scotland, with a vil. of the same name, 5 miles S.W. of Nairn. Three-fourths of the surface consists of pasture and moorland, the remainder is wood and arable land. The principal heritors are the Earl of Cawdor and Sir J. Rose of Holme. Cawdor Castle, formerly the Tower of Calder, possesses great antiquarian interest. It was commenced in 1393, and increased by subsequent additions. In the 16th century it passed into the hands of the clan Campbell by the marriage of John of Lorn with the heiress of the Calder family. Here Lord Lovat lay hid after the rebellion of 1745, being ingeniously concealed in the roof, and might long have eluded search had he not left his retreat. Tradition asserts, though contrary to the opinion of antiquarians, that King Duncan (whose chain armour is here preserved) was murdered in the castle by Macbeth. The par. is in the presb. of Nairn, and in the patron. of the Earl of Cawdor. The stipend of the minister is £156. There is also a Free church. A fair is held in March.

CAWDRY, a tnshp. in the par. of Leek, in the co. of Stafford.

CAWKWELL, or CAWKWELD, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles N. of Horncastle, its post town, and the same distance from the Louth station of the Boston and Great Grimsby section of the Great Northern railway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £46, in the patron. of the Earl of Yarborough. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice. The lord of the manor is the Duke of Portland.

CAWOOD, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles from Tadcaster, 5 N.W. of Selby railway station, and 10 from York. The village, which is lighted with gas, is pleasantly situated on the navigable portion of the river Ouse, and was formerly a market town. There is a good ferry over the river. The quarter sessions for the liberty of Cawood, Wistow, and Otley, were formerly held here, but are now transferred to Otley. In the Saxon times the manor was given by King Athelstan to Wulstan, the 15th Archbishop of York, and from that time the northern prelates frequently resided here. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £140, in the patron. of the Archbishop of York. The church dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice in the English style, with a monument to Archbishop Montaigne's memory. The register commences as early as 1591. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. There is a school for boys, endowed with a master's house, school-house, and £20 per annum, by the late Archbishop Harsnett; likewise a school endowed with £80 per annum and house, by the Rev. S. Duffield, for the board and education of six girls. There is an almshouse, consisting of four tenements, founded about 1723 by William James, Esq., and endowed by him with £18 for each of the four occupants; also an almshouse, consisting of six tenements, founded and endowed in 1839 by James Waterhouse Smith, Esq. In the vicinity are the ruins of Cawood Castle, once the magnificent seat of the archbishops of York. It was to this castle that Wolsey retired after his fall, and here he was arrested on a charge of treason by the Earl of Northumberland. At the conclusion of the Civil War it was dismantled by order of parliament, and has gradually fallen to decay, so that at present the principal gateway is almost all that remains entire. A market was formerly held on Wednesday, but is now discontinued. There are two fairs in the year, one for cattle on the 12th May, and a pleasure fair held in August.

CAWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Melling, in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. of Lancaster. It is joined to Arkholme, to form a chplry., and is situated near the river Lune.

CAWRSE, a hund. in the eastern portion of the co. of Montgomery, North Wales; contains the par. of Forden, and parts of Church Stoke, Pool, Alberbury, Worthen, and Castle-Caereinion.

CAWSAND, a vil. in the hund. of Roborough, in the co. of Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Plymouth, on Cawsand Bay. Here are both pilot and coastguard stations, the bay forming a good anchorage for large ships. In the reign of Elizabeth, one of the ships of the Armada was fired here by the people.

CAWSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunchurch, 2 miles S.W. of Rugby. It is a meet for the North Warwick hounds. The chief residence is Cawston House, the seat of Lord Scott.

CAWSTON, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles W. of Aylsham, and 11 N.E. of Norwich. Alderford is its post town. It is situated on the river Wensum, near the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £1,015, in the patron. of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Agnes, is a fine edifice in the perpendicular decorated style of architecture, and possesses a curiously carved poor-box. The register commences in 1538. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The charities amount to about £11 per annum. Fairs are held on the 1st February, and the last Wednesday in the months of April and August. W. Bulwer, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CAWTHORN, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton, in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles N.W. of Pickering, and 8 E. of Kirby-Moorside. The lord of the manor is Col. Mitchelson. Near here may be seen in excellent preservation four Roman camps, through which the military road ran from York to Dunsley.

CAWTHORNE, a par. in the wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles S.W. of the Darton railway station, and 4 miles N.W. of Barnsley, its post town. The Barnsley canal terminates in this parish, in a basin, which is connected by a tramway with Silkstone and the neighbouring collieries. Cawthorne was a chplry. in the par. of Silkstone, but in 1707 was made parochial and independent. Veins of ironstone have been long worked, and there is a chalybeate spring. The population is agricultural, excepting those employed in mines and collieries, or as hand-loom weavers. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £185, in the patron. of J. S. Stanhope, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an old building in the Gothic and later English styles of architecture, The register is ancient. The late Rev. Joseph Hunter thought it not improbable that Cawthorne, though subsequently a dependent chapel, was the original mother church for the whole wapentake of Staincross. There is an old grammar school, now enlarged and used for the education of from 80 to 90 boys, and also for a night-school of boys and girls. There is besides a girls' school-house, recently built by John Spencer Stanhope, Esq., for the education of about 100 girls, in Tivydale. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have places of worship, used likewise as schools for boys and girls. Not far from the village is Cannon Hall, the residence of J. S. Stanhope, Esq.; also Barmby Hall, the residence of the Knightly family, and Banks Hall.

CAWTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bourn, in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Bourn. The Baptists have a place of worship, and there is a school in connection with the Church of England.

CAWTHORPE LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles E. of Louth station on the Great Northern railway, and 8 miles from Alford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £69, the patron. of which is sequestrated into the hands of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a brick edifice, rebuilt in 1860. The Wesleyans and Free Methodists have chapels here. The charities produce £10 per annum. The lord of the manor is L. Parker, Esq.

CAWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gilling, wap. of Ryedale, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles S. of Helmsley.

CAXTON, a par. in the hund. of Longstow, in the co. of Cambridge, 12 miles W. of Cambridge, and 11 N. of Royston railway station. It was formerly a considerable town on Ermine Street, belonging to the families of Frevile, Burgoyne, D'Eschallers, and others, but is now a small agricultural village. Up to the middle of the last century it had a market, which was granted about the year 1247. It is still the head of a Poor-law Union, and of a registration district, but is included in the New County Court district of Cambridge. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £80, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, to whom the church was given in 1351, having belonged previously to the priory of Lewes; it is dedicated to St. Andrew, and possesses some old tombs. The Baptists have here a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes. Matthew Paris, the historian, was born here. George Gaps, Esq., is lord of the manor. In this parish stands the workhouse of the Arrington and Caxton Union. Fairs are held on 5th March and 18th October.

CAYNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Edgmond, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles W. of Newport.

CAYO, a vil. in the par. of Conwil-Cayo, in the hund. of Cayo, 6 miles N.W. of Llandovery.

CAYO, a hund. in the eastern portion of the co. of Carmarthen, contains the pars. of Cilycwm, Talley, Llansawel, Conwil-Cayo, Llansorda, Llandyfeisant, and parts of Llandingat, Llan-y-Crwys, and Llandeilofawr.

CAYTHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of the Hougham railway station, on the Great Northern line, 9 miles E. of Newark, and 9 W. of Sleaford. It contains the hmlt. of Friston. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £976, in the patron. of Rev. C. D. Crofts. The church, dedicated to St. Vincent, is a fine building, principally in the decorated style of architecture, with a beautiful spire, peal of bells, and several monuments. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a school connected with the Church of England. The charities produce about £8 per annum. Caythorpe Hall, a modern edifice, beautifully situated, is the seat of G. H. Packe, M.P., who is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the second Friday after Good Friday.

CAYTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Rudston, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles N.E. of Great Driffield.

CAYTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lowdham, southern div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles S. of Southwell. It is situated on the river Trent, near the Lowdham station of the Nottingham and Lincoln line. The inhabitants are principally engaged in stocking weaving.

CAYTON, a par. in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S.E. of Scarborough. It includes the hmlts. of Killerby and Deepdale, and the tnshps. of Cayton and Osgolby. The village is situated near the coast, and is a station on the Scarborough and Hull section of the North-Eastern railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Seamer, in the dioc. of York, in the patron. of Lord Londesborough. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a handsome stone building with embattled tower. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there are schools for both sexes.

CAYTON, a hmlt. in the par. of South Stainley, in the lower div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles N.E. of Ripley. It was at one time a grange of Fountains Abbey.

CECILSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Castle-Magner, in the bar. of Duhallow, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Mallow. Here is a police station, and petty sessions are held by the county magistrates. Fairs are held on the 25th April, 14th May, 18th October, and 24th November.

CEDRIS, a tnshp. in the pars. of Llanfihangel-y-Pennant and Talyllyn, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 6 miles S.W. of Dolgelly.

CEFEN-LOCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 5 miles N. of Llanfyllin.

CEFN, or CEVN, a hmlt. in the par. of Gelligaer, hund. of Caerphilly, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 6 miles N. of Caerphilly. It is situated on a hill near the river Tâf. The Chester and Shrewsbury branch of the Great Western railway has a station here.

CEFNBLAIDD, a hmlt. in the par. of Talley, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 7 miles N. of Llandeilofawr.

CEFNCETHINFAWR, a hmlt. in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 3 miles S. of Llandeilofawr.

CEFN CYMER, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwym, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 13 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

CEFNDEISIOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel, co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 5 miles S.W. of Llanfyllin.

CEFNDU, a tnshp. in the par. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, near Rhuddlan.

CEFNHAFODAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangirrig, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 6 miles S. of Llanidloes. The river Cefni rises above Llangefni, in the co. of Anglesea, and runs S.W. to Malldraeth Bay, passing in its course under the nineteen-arched viaduct of the Chester and Holyhead railway.

CEFNLENYD, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Deythur, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 8 miles E. of Llanfyllin.

CEFNLLYFNOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Meifod, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 3 miles S. of Llanfyllin.

CEFNLLYS, or KEVENLLEECE, a hund. in Mid. Radnor, contains the pars. of Cefnllys, Llandrindog, Pilleth, Blethvaugh, Llanbadarn-fawr, Llanfihangel-Rhydithon, and Whitton, with parts of Llandegley, Llandewy-Ystrad-denny, Llangynllo, and Abbey-cwm-hîr.

CEFNLLYS, or KEVENLEECE, a par. and nominal borough, in the hund. of Cefnllys, in the co. of Radnor, 8 miles S.E. of Rhayader, on the river Ithon. It contains Trefonnon, Cwmbreetin, and Trelegoed. This is a polling place, and a contributory borough to New Radnor, nominally governed by a bailiff, recorder, and burgesses. Here are ruins of Castell Glyn Ithon, which was erected in the 13th century by Ralph Mortimer. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £135, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The charities produce £22 per annum.

CEFN-LLYS, ISAF, and ISCHAF, tnshps. in the par. of Llanerfyl, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 4 miles W. of Llanfair.

CEFNPAWL, a tnshp. in the par. of Abbey-cwm-hîr, hund. of Cefnllys, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 6 miles E. of Rhayadergwy. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Ithon and Clywedog.

CEFNPENNAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Aberdare, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 4 miles S.W. of Merthyr-Tydfil. It is situated on the river Cynon, near the banks of the canal. The inhabitants are engaged in the iron-works and collieries.

CEFNPOST, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel, hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 6 miles N.W. of Corwen.

CEFNRHOS and UCHA, tnshps. in the par. of Towyn, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, near Towyn.

CEFNTREFFRAW, a tythg. in the par. of Aberffraw, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wales.

CEFN-Y-BEDD, a hmlt. in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 4 miles from Wrexham.

CEFNYBERIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kerry, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 2 miles E. of Newtown.

CEFN-Y-COED, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglwysfach, in the co. of Denbigh, 4 miles S.E. of Conway.

CEFN-Y-GURDY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwyfan, in the co. of Denbigh, 5 miles N. of Ruthin.

CEFN-YR-OWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Dolgelly, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales.

CEFYN, or CEFN, a tnshp. in the par. of Cilcen, hund. of Coleshill, in the co. of Flint, 5 miles N.W. of Mold. It is situated on an eminence near the river Alwen, and is a station on the Chester and Holyhead branch of the London and North-Western railway.

CEGID RIVER passes under the viaduct, 600 feet long, on the Holyhead and Chester railway, and falls into the sea at Port Penrhyn, in the co. of Carnarvon.

CEIDIO, a par. in the hund. of Dinlaen, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 5 miles W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 2 from Nevin. The Crewe section of the London and North-Western railway has a station at Bangor, 28 miles distant. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £85, in the patron. of T. P. J. Parry, Esq. The charities produce £4 per annum.

CEIDIO. See RHODOGEIDIO, Anglesea.

CEIRCHIOG, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Llyfon, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wales, 4 miles N. of Aberffraw, and 3 from the Ty-Croes station on the Chester and Holyhead railway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Llanbeulan, in the dioc. of Bangor, in the patron. of the bishop.

CEIRIOG RIVER takes its rise in the S. part of the co. of Denbigh, under Cader Ferwyn, and runs eastward through the beautiful valley, where Owen Gwynnedd met Henry II., to the river Dee.

CELBRIDGE, a market town in the pars. of Donaghcumper and Kildrought, in the bars. of N. and S. Salt, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 11 miles W. of Dublin. It is situated in the midst of a highly improved country, on the river Liffey, near the Royal canal, and at the distance of 1 mile from the Hazelhatch station of the Great Southern and Western railway. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton and woollen trade, and there is a large woollen factory in the town, erected in 1806, but not recently at work. The town, which was founded at an early period by the earls of Limerick, contains the parish church of Kildrought, a modern structure, with a monument to the Conollys; a Roman Catholic chapel, savings-bank, hospital, and the Union poorhouse. There is a free school founded by the Conollys, the revenue of which is £309 per annum. Some interest is attached to this spot as having been the home of Esther Vanhomrigh, known as Vanessa in Dean Swift's poem of "Cadenus and Vanessa." A bower of laurels is still pointed out in the grounds of Celbridge Abbey as the place where the Dean and Vanessa frequently conversed. A handsome bridge here spans the Liffey, which flows for several miles through demesne lands of great beauty. There are several fine seats in the neighbourhood. The market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in April, 8th September, and 7th November.

CELLAN, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 3 miles N.E. of Lampeter. It is situated on the Roman road to Lorentium, or Llanio, vestiges of which yet remain, near the river Teifi. Among the mountains in the neighbourhood is an immense stone, known as Llêch Cynon, raised on a circular tumulus. The adjacent river, Frwd Cynon, is probably so named from Cynon, the reputed founder of Tregynon. There are likewise other sepulchral heaps, with remains of a cromlech, camps, &c.; among the former may be mentioned the Byr-faen and the Bedd-y-Forwyn, or "Virgin's Grave," to the S. of the village.

The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £83, in the patron. of the bishop. The church consists of a nave and chancel, and possesses two sacristories for holy water. Here the Welsh antiquary, the Rev. M. Williams, was born.

CELLARDYKES, a large fishing vil. in the par. of Kilrenny, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It forms part of the burgh of Kilrenny.

CELLAR-HEAD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hulme and Rownall, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Cheadle.

CELLIWYNN, a hmlt. near Llantrissant, in the co. of Glamorgan.

CELLWS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanbadarn-fawr, in the co. of Radnor, 7 miles S.E. of Rhayader.

CEMAS-COED, a vil. in the chplry. of Trewalchmai, in the co. of Anglesea, 5 miles to the N.E. of Aberffraw.

CEMMAES, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadrig, hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wales, 10 miles N.E. of Holyhead. The London and North-Western railway passes within 3 miles of the village, and has a station at Ty-Croes. It is situated on a little creek, opening into a most beautiful bay, about 1 mile across, on the northern side of the isle. It affords a shipping place for the exportation of the serpentine, or Mona marble, called by statuaries "verd antique," quarried in the adjacent parish of Llanvechell. Its entrance into the main sea is guarded on each side by a craggy promontory, the one of gray the other of snow-white marble, smooth as the surface of a mirror, and when illuminated by the sun, its sparkling transparency baffles description. In the interior recesses of the bay a bank of black shale finely contrasts with a lofty, irregular, projecting arch of white marble.

CEMMES, a par. in the hund. of Machynlleth, in the co. of Montgomery, 6 miles N.E. of Machynlleth, its post town. It is situated on the river Dyfi. Here is Moel Eiddau, a Roman camp, which commands an extensive view. The par. includes the tnshps. of Brynnchel, Tafolog, and Gwernybwlch. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £288, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Tydecho. There is an Independent chapel. The charities produce £5 per annum. Fairs are held on the 1st May, 9th and 24th September.

CENARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Harmon, hund. of Rhayader, in the co. of Radnor.

CENARTH. See KENARTH, Carmarthenshire.

CENIN, a vil. in the par. of Llanfihangel-y-Pennant, in the co. of Carnarvon, 5 miles N. of Criccieth.

CENOL, a parcel in the par. of Llanfihangel-cwmdû, in the hund. of Crickhowell, in the co. of Brecon, 5 miles N.W. of Crickhowell. It is situated on the Roman road Via Julia, near the river Rhiangol.

CERES, a par. in the district of Cupar, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Cupar. The Springfield station of the Edinburgh and Northern railway is at the W. end of the par. It contains, besides the town of Ceres, the vils. of Craigrothie, Baldinie, Petscottie, and Chance-inn. The parish, which is of an irregular elliptical form, extending some 7 miles from E. to W., whilst its greatest breadth is near 4 miles, comprises 8,000 acres, of which about nine-tenths are under tillage, whilst the remaining one-tenth is planted or in pasture. Limestone is extensively wrought, and coal and sandstone are found. A short time ago it was reported that in boring for coal the workmen had come upon a valuable bed of black band ironstone, but operations have not yet been entered upon for sinking. The principal manufactures are linen of medium quality (in the production of which there are about 300 looms employed), bleaching and spinning. The principal heritors of the parish are the Earl of Glasgow, J. A. Thomson, Esq., of Charleton, G. W. Hope, Esq., of Craighall, and Major Kemyss, of Kemyss Hall. Upon the estate of Kemyss Hall is a beautiful tower of jointed freestone, 24 feet square and about 50 feet high, formerly the residence of the author of the celebrated "Staggering State of Scotch Statesmen." Magus Muir, the scene of Archbishop Sharpe's murder is in the E. part of this par. The par. is in the presb. of Cupar, and in the patron. of the Earl of Glasgow. The stipend of the minister is £229. There is also a Free church and two United Presbyterian churches. In addition to the parochial and female schools in the town of Ceres, there are schools at Baldinie and Craigrothie. Fairs are held in June and October.

CERIST, a tnshp. in the par. of Mallwyd, in the co. of Merioneth, 2 miles S. of Dinas Mowddwg.

CERNE-ABBAS, a par. in the hund. of Cerne, in the co. of Dorset, 7 miles N. of Dorchester, and 10 S. of Sherborne. It is situated near the South-Western railway, and is watered by the river Cerne. The principal business of the place is in malting, brewing, and tanning. The manufactures of coarse linen, gloves, parchment, and silk-winding are carried on to a small extent. Cerne is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £81, in the patron. of Lord Rivers. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is in the later English style, and has a beautiful tower and chimes. The Independents and Methodists have places of worship, and there is a free school. Traces of the abbey, founded in 987, are yet to be seen, where St. Edwald, the brother of King Edmund the Martyr, was buried, and of which Cardinal Morton was a monk. Its revenues at the Dissolution were valued at £623 13*s.* 2*d.* On Trendle Hill there is cut in the chalk a large figure nearly 200 feet high, of which nothing certain has been discovered. This was formerly a market town, and petty sessions for the division are still held here. Near the village stand the Union poorhouse and a large stone barn formerly belonging to the Abbey. The fairs are held on Mid-Lent Monday, 28th April, and 2nd October.

CERNE, NETHER, a par. in the hund. of Cerne, in the co. of Dorset, adjoining Cerne-Abbas. There is no village, and only fifteen houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £60, in the patron. of R. B. Sheridan, Esq.

CERNE, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset, adjoining Cerne-Abbas. There is no village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, in the patron. of W. W. White, Esq., who is proprietor of the whole parish, and resides at Upper Cerne House, a fine old structure, formerly connected with Cerne Abbey.

CERNEY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, union of Cirencester, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles from Cirencester, its post town and railway station. It contains the tythgs. of Calmsden and Woodmancote. The living is a rect. in the archdeac. and dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £654, in the patron. of University College, Oxford. In the vicinity are the traces of a small Roman camp on Ermine Street.

CERNEY, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Crowthorne and Minty, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles from Cirencester, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Thames, near the Severn canal and Great Western railway. The living is a discharged vic. in the archdeac. and dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £231, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. In 1834 Mrs. Edwards left a munificent bequest for the relief of the widows and orphans of clergymen in the dioc. of Gloucester, and in 1837 the trustees resolved to expend half the bequest in erecting a college or asylum for the pensioners. Land was given at South Cerney for the purpose; and the building, called Edwards' College, has a chaste and beautiful appearance.

CERNIOGAU MAWR, or KERNIOGGY, a hmlt. in the co. of Denbigh, 10 miles S.E. of Llanrwst. It is situated near the rivers Dee and Conway.

CERRIG-CEINWEN, a par. in the hund. of Malltraeth, in the co. of Anglesea, 5 miles N.E. of Aberffraw, and 11 from Beaumaris. The London and North-Western railway passes within 4 miles of the village, and has a station at Gaerwen. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Llangristiolus, in the dioc. of Bangor, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Ceinwen.

CERRIG-Y-DRUIDION, a par. in the hund. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, 9 miles N.W. of Corwen, and 15 from Ruthin. It is situated on a branch of the river Dee, and derives its name from the Druidical remains which formerly stood here. At Pen-y-Gaer, where a castle anciently stood, Caractacus is stated to have sought refuge previous to his capture by the Romans. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious edifice. The charities produce £99 per annum, besides Price's almshouses for six poor men. Fairs are held on the 18th March, 27th April, 24th August, 20th October, and 7th December.

CESSFORD, a vil. in the par. of Eckford, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland. It is situated 6½ miles N.E. of Jedburgh. The ruin of the ancient castle of Cessford, which gives the title of baron to the Duke of Roxburgh, stands S. of the village.

CEULAN-Y-MAES-MAWR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Geneur-Glynn, hund. of Geneur-Glynn, in the co. of Cardigan, 5 miles E. of Aberystwith. It is situated on the Ceulan river.

CEUSWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Talyllyn, in the co. of Merioneth, 5 miles S. of Dolgelly.

CHACKMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Radclive, hund. of Buckingham, in the co. of Bucks, 1 mile N.W. of Buckingham. The church is in ruins.

CHAD, or ST. CHAD, three pars. of this name, one in the borough of Shrewsbury, in the co. of Salop; another united with the par. of St. Mary, co. Stafford; and a third a district par. in the par. of Malpas, higher div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester.

CHADBURY, a tythg. in the par. of Norton, lower div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles N. of Evesham, and 2 miles from Norton.

CHADDENWICK, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Mere, in the co. of Wilts. It is situated near Mere, in the ecclesiastical district of Zeals Green.

CHADDERTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestwich, hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Oldham, and 7 from Manchester. It is situated at a short distance from the Middleton station of the Leeds and Manchester railway, which is here intersected by the Leeds and Manchester canal. Here are the fine hills known as Chadderton Heights, and at their foot the old hall of Chadderton, formerly the residence of Sir Watts Horton, Bart., but now the property of Mr. Rheiss, who is related to the noble families of Wilton and Derby; also Fox Denton Hall, the property of the Radcliffes, an old Lancashire family. There are also some handsome modern residences belonging to the wealthy manufacturers of Oldham. The township forms two ecclesiastical districts in the dioc. of Manchester, the living of St. John, val. £150, and that of St. Matthew, val. £150, both perpet. curs., and in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The latter church is a modern building, and was erected by subscription and contribution. The Wesleyans, at Cow Hill, and the Baptists, at Mills' Hill, have places of worship, together with day, night, and Sunday schools. A cemetery for the borough of Oldham is situated here. The rivulet Irk rises in the neighbouring township of Royton, runs through Chadderton, and joins the Irwell at Manchester. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in hand-loom silk weaving, but there are also several coal-mines and cotton-mills. Lawrence Chadderton, the celebrated divine, was born here in A.D. 1536. He was first master of Emanuel College, Cambridge; one of the five divines chosen in the third year of King James I.'s reign to manage the Puritan cause at the Hampton Court conference, and was named one of the commissioners for translating the Bible. In this township are many traces yet to be seen of the Roman road between Manchester and York, and there is an extensive unexplored tumulus.

CHADDESDEN, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 2½ miles E. of Derby. It is crossed by the Nottingham branch of the North Midland railway, the river Derwent, and the Derby canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £89, in the patron. of Sir H. Wilmot, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, and possesses a beautiful carved oak screen. In the chancel is a cenotaph to the memory of Sir Edward Wilmot, the physician of George I. and George II., and also a monument to his son, Sir Robert M. Wilmot. The register is of early date. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a school for boys, erected by subscription. The annual val. of the charities amounts to £54, of which Wilmot's school receives £34. A chantry was founded in the reign of Edward III. by Henry de Chaddesden, then Archdeacon of Leicester. Robert Newton died seised of the chantry in 1593. The Hall is a fine building, beautifully situated, and is the seat of Sir H. Wilmot, Bart., who is lord of the manor. This place is a meet for the Donington hounds. The feast is held on the nearest Sunday to St. Peter's Day.

CHADDESLEY CORBETT, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 13 miles to the N. of Worcester, and 4½ S.E. of the Kidderminster station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton line. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in worsted spinning. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £541, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient building, partly Gothic and partly Norman in style of architecture. It possesses a spire and a peal of eight bells. The annual val. of the charities amounts to about £327. Here are two free schools for both sexes, and a Roman Catholic chapel.

CHADDLEWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Kintbury Eagle, in the co. of Berks, 6 miles S. of Wantage, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Newbury. It contains Woolley, where was formerly a priory. The Great Western railway passes within 6 miles of the village, and has a station at Wantage Road. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £272, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient building with a low tower, nave, and chancel; the porch entrance is a Saxon arch of great antiquity. There is an endowed school, supported by funds left by Mrs. Saunders and Mrs. Wynne, as well as National schools. There are some small charities. B. Wroughton, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of Woolley Park, which is very extensive and well stocked with deer. The principal residences are Woolley Park and Chaddleworth House.

CHADKIRK, or ROMILEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. of Chester, 4 miles E. of Stockport. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Rector of Stockport. The chapel is an ancient building. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are several large print-works as well as cotton-mills. Near Compstall Bridge the river Etherow has its confluence with the Goyt, and from that point is known as the Mersey.

CHADLINGTON, a hund. in the N.W. portion of the co. of Oxford, contains the pars. of Ascott-under-Wychwood, Chastleton, Churchill, Cornwell, Enstone, Fifield, Fulbrook, Idbury, Kiddington, Kingham, Milster-Lovell, Northmoor, Chipping Norton, Hook Norton, Great and Little Rollright, Salford, Salsden, Shipton, Spelsbury, Swerford, Swinbrook, Taynton, and part of Charlbury, comprising 70,000 acres.

CHADLINGTON, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Charlbury, hund. of Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles S. of Chipping-Norton, their post town. They are situated on the N. bank of the river Evenlode. East Chadlington is a cur. to the vic. of Charlbury, not in charge. The church estate produces £30 per annum.

CHADSHUNT, a par. in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles N. of Kington, its post town and railway station, and 9 from Warwick. There is no village, and only eight houses in the parish. It had formerly an oratory to St. Chad. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Bishop's Itchington in the dioc. of Worcester, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lichfield. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

CHADSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Castle Ashby, in the co. of Northampton, 7 miles E. of Northampton

CHADWELL, a par. in the hund. of Barstaple, in the co. of Essex, 2½ miles E. of Grays, its post town, and 2 N. of Tilbury, both being stations on the South-end line. A portion of Tilbury Fort is within this parish. Its name originates from the well of St. Chad, at which miraculous cures were supposed to be wrought. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £427, in the patron. of the Rev. J. P. Herringham. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice recently repaired. Here are National schools for both sexes. Daneholes and Cunobelin's gold mines are chalk caverns here.

CHADWELL, or CHADWELL HEATH, a ward in the par. of Barking, hund. of Becontree, in the co. of Essex, 2½ miles E. of the Great Ilford station of the Great Eastern line, and 3 W. of Romford. Here the Baptists have a chapel, and the K division of the Metropolitan police a station.

CHADWELL, or CAWDWELL, a chplry. in the par. of Rothley, hund. of East Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles N. of Melton Mowbray, its post town. The chapel of ease is a neat building with a tower. The charities produce £4 per annum.

CHADWELL, or ST. CHAD'S WELL, one of the sources of the New River, rising near Ware Park, in co. Herts.

CHADWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles W. of Rochdale, where stands Chadwick Hall.

CHADWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Bromsgrove, in the co. of Worcester, 3 miles N. of Bromsgrove.

CHAFFCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles E. of Chard, and about 3 S. of Ilminster. The Yeovil and Exeter branch of the London and South-Western railway has a station at Chard Road. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £143, in the patron. of Earl Poulett. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient building in the early English style, and has been recently restored. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The lord of the manor is Earl Poulett. The principal residence is Chaffcombe Hall.

CHAFFORD, a hund. in the S.W. portion of the co. of Essex; it contains the pars. of Aveley, Childerditch, Cranham, North and South Ockendon, Rainham, South Weald, Stifford, Grays and West Thurrock, Upminster, Great and Little Warley, and Wennington, comprising about 35,000 acres. Chafford deanery, in the dioc. of Rochester, is nearly conterminous with the hund.

CHAGFORD, a par. and stannary town in the hund. of Wonford, in the co. of Devon, 15 miles S.W. of Exeter, its post town, and 4 from the Moreton station of the London and South-Western railway. It is situated in a pretty spot on the river Teign, and surrounded with most romantic scenery. There are two good hotels besides lodging-houses, for the accommodation of visitors who resort to the village in the summer months for the benefit of the bracing air. The market-place, recently built, forms part of the revenues of the church. The tin-mines are no longer worked. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £650, in the patron. of the Rev. G. H. Haines. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a handsome stone edifice in the early perpendicular style. The Bible Christians and Wesleyans have places of worship, and there are schools for both sexes. The charities produce about £21 per annum. The lords of the manor are Nicholas Clampett and J. Coniam, Esqrs. The market is on Saturday. Fairs are held on the last Thursday in March, September, and October, and the first Thursday in May.

CHAIGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Mitton, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 5 miles W. of Clitheroe.

CHAILEY, a par. in the hund. of Street, rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 6½ miles N. of Lewes, its post town, and 4 from Cook's Bridge station of the London and Brighton line. It is the head of a Poor-law union, and contains the Union workhouse, but is comprised within the registration district of Lewes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £505, in the patron. of Mrs. Hepburn and Mrs. Blencowe. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small structure in the early English style, with spire. Here are National schools for boys and girls. James Ingram and O. Blencowe, Esqrs., are the chief landowners. A fair is held on the 29th June for pedlery.

CHALBURY, a par. in the hund. of Badbury, in the co. of Dorset, 6 miles N. of the Wimborne station of the South-Western railway, and 11 E. of Blandford. Chalbury Hill is a place of interest from the beauty of the views on all sides, embracing the sea and a richly wooded country. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £168, in the patron. of the Earl of Pembroke. The church is an ancient edifice, and possesses a register, the earliest date of which is 1695. The Earl of Shaftesbury is lord of the manor.

CHALCOMBE, or CHACOMBE, a par. in the hund. of King's Sutton, in the co. of Northampton, 3 miles N.E. of Banbury, its post town and railway station. It is situated near the river Cherwell, which bounds the parish on the W. There are considerable remains of a priory, which was founded by Hugh de Chacombe in the time of Henry II., and at the Dissolution the site was purchased by the Foxe family, now represented by Charles Wykeham Martin, Esq., its present owner. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture and the manufacture of hosiery. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £250, in the patron. of Charles Wykeham Martin, Esq. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone edifice, partly in the decorated and partly in the perpendicular style, and contains an ancient brass. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have chapels, and there is a school with a small endowment. The charities amount to £4 per annum. Charles Wykeham Martin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHALDON, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Wallington, in the co. of Surrey, 5 miles N.E. of Reigate, and 2 N.E. of the Merstham station of the London and Brighton line. Redhill is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £255, in the patron. of James Legrew, Esq. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure partly in the early English style, with spire. The charities amount to £4 per annum.

CHALDON HERRING, or EAST CHALDON, a par. in the lib. of Bindon, South Blandford div. of the co. of Dorset, 10 miles S.W. of Wareham, and 11 from Dorchester, its post town. It includes West Chaldon, which was formerly a separate parish. The London and South-Western railway passes within 5 miles of the village, and has a station at Wool. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £62, in the patron. of Joseph Weld, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. In the neighbourhood are several barrows.

CHALE, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, 7 miles from Newport, 10 from Brading, and 20 from the Gosport station of the London and South-Western line. Chale is one of the most picturesque spots in the island, with its grey old church standing near the verge of a precipice, and overlooking a snug cove, known to sailors as Chale Bay, delightful in its aspect, but too often fatally dangerous to the shipping along the coast. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £334, in the patron. of James Theobald, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was built in the reign of Henry I. by Hugh Vernon. It possesses a fine square tower, and contains a monument to the late Sir Henry Worsley, who endowed the schools. In the churchyard lie the remains of the captain and part of the crew and passengers of the Clarendon, which was lost in Chale Bay. Blackgang Chine, about half a mile from the church, is a tremendous chasm, the sides of which rise nearly perpendicular, 500 feet above the bay. On its summit stand the Blackgang Hotel and Sealand Cottage, commanding a good view of the Needles and the Dorsetshire coast. Near the Chine is St. Catherine's Hill, 800 feet above the level of the sea, on the top of which are the remains of a tower built in 1323 by Walter de Godyton, and also a column erected on the brow of the hill, 72 feet high, by Michael Hoy, to commemorate the visit of Alexander I. of Russia to this kingdom in 1814. At the foot of the hill the Medina takes its rise.

CHALEND, a vil. in the co. of Bedford, 2 miles W. of Luton.

CHALFIELD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Bradford, in the co. of Wilts, 7 miles from Bath, and 4 from the Melksham station of the Great Western railway. It is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and includes the ext. par. libs. of Little Chalfield and Cottles. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £162, in the patron. of Lady Neale. The church is dedicated to St. Catherine. The manor-house, erected in the reign of Henry VI., is a fine specimen of the Tudor style of architecture.

CHALFIELD, LITTLE, an ext. par. place in the above parish.

CHALFONT ST. GILES, a par. in the hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Amersham, 4 from Gerrard's Cross, and 6 from Uxbridge station of the Great Western railway. It is situated on the Misbourn stream. A money-order office and savings-bank have recently been established in the village. Milton, during the time of the plague in 1665, wrote his "Paradise Regained" and retouched his "Paradise Lost" in a house still standing, where his name and coat of arms may yet be seen over the doorway. In the cemetery belonging to the Society of Friends lie the remains of William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania, as also those of Thomas Ellwood, the friend of Milton, and author of the poem "Davideus." The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £804, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice in the Norman style, and was restored in 1863. During the repairs several interesting discoveries were made of ancient mural paintings, supposed to be at least 700 years old. Some being in good preservation have been left for view. The church contains a font of Saxon origin, monuments of the Clayton family, and brasses to the Fleetwood and Gardner families. The Society of Friends have a meeting-house, which is one of the oldest in the kingdom, and is familiarly known as the "Westminster Abbey of the Quakers," from the fact that most of the ancestors of the recent Quakers lie there interred, brought from different parts of the kingdom. There are chapels belonging to the Primitive and Congregational Methodists and Independents. The National schools have recently been enlarged; they are supported from bequests, producing about £80 per annum, and by annual subscription. There are also Church and Nonconformist Sunday schools. The charities amount to £100 per annum. The lord of the manor is T. N. Allen, Esq. There are several gentlemen's seats in the neighbourhood. The manor-house, called the Vache, a fine old mansion, was formerly the residence of the De la Vache and Fleetwood families. One of the latter family having signed the death-warrant of Charles I., he was attainted and his estates confiscated. Roman coins of Nero have been ploughed up in the parish. A fair is held on the 22nd June.

CHALFONT ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Bucks, 4 miles E. of Beaconsfield, and 5 N.E. of Uxbridge railway station. The Misbourn stream runs through the village and the adjoining parish of St. Giles. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £731, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church was erected in 1726 with stone from the ruins of Verulam, and has been lately enlarged; it is in the Gothic style of architecture. The charities amount to £22 per annum. The Particular Baptists have a chapel, and there is a National school. The lady of the manor is Mrs. Mary Moore. There are several gentlemen's seats, among which may be mentioned Chalfont Park and Bulstrode Park; the latter the property of the Duke of Somerset. Gerrard's Cross in this neighbourhood is a fine plain, surrounded by many villa residences. A fair is held on the 4th September for pedlery.

CHALFORD, a tythg. and hmlt. partly in the par. and hund. of Bisley, and partly in the par. of Minchinhampton, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles S.E. of Stroud, its post town, and 12 from Gloucester. It is situated on the Thames and Severn canal, and that portion of the river Frome known as Chalford Bottom. The Great Western railway passes near the hamlet. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the broad-cloth trade and silk weaving, which employ many mills. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, called Christ Church, is a stone edifice, erected in 1724 by the parishioners. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Independents have places of worship. There are National and British schools for both sexes. This place shares the charities of its parish. There are petrifying springs. T. M. Goodlake, Esq. is lord of the manor. In the vicinity are the remains of a Roman camp. A fair is held on the Monday following the 11th August.

CHALFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Aston Rowant, in the co. of Oxford, 3 miles S. of Thame.

CHALGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, in the co. of Bedford, 5 miles S.E. of Woburn, and 7 from Leighton Buzzard. It contains the hmlts. of Wingfield and Tebworth. The London and North-Western railway passes within 5 miles of the village, and has a station at Woburn Sands. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rev. J. M. Hamilton. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is in the early English style.

CHALGROVE, a par. in the hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, 8 miles S.W. of Thame, and 6 S.W. of Tetsworth, its post town. Chalgrove Field is celebrated as having (on the 18th June, 1643) been the scene of a battle between the royalists and parliamentarians when John Hampden was mortally wounded, to whose memory a monument was erected on the 18th June, 1843, being the 200th anniversary of the occurrence. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val., with the cur. of Berwick Salome annexed, £600, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice in the Norman style, and contains several monuments, brasses, and an antique font. There are charities to the val. of £53 per annum, and £40 per annum for the repairs of the church. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, and there is a small school. M. Blount, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHALK, a hund. in the S. portion of the co. of Wilts, contains the pars. of Alvediston, St. John Berwick, Bower and Broad Chalk, Ebbesborne-Wake, Fitzhead, Bavant, Semley, and part of Tollard-Royal, comprising 26,610 acres. Chalk deanery, in the dioc. of Salisbury, includes the whole of this hund., and several adjoining parishes.

CHALK, a par. in the hund. of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 2¼ miles S. of Gravesend, its post town, and 3 from Rochester. The North Kent railway and the Medway canal intersect the parish, and the Thames bounds it on the N. There was formerly a manufactory of gun-flints here, which were reckoned the best in Europe. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £200, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient flint structure, with some curious carvings over the porch. The churchyard has some ancient tombstones. There is a National school. A fair is held on Whit-Monday.

CHALLACOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, in the co. of Devon, 10 miles N.E. of the Barnstaple railway station. Linton is its post town. The river Bray runs through this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £200, in the patron. of Earl Fortescue, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a modern edifice in the Gothic style, with an ancient tower. The charities amount to £3 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

CHALLOCK, or CHALLOCK LEES, a par. in the hund. of Felborough, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles N. of Ashford, its post town, and 4 N.W.

of the Wye station on the South-Eastern railway. It is situated between Ashford and Feversham, on the high road, near the river Stour, which bounds the parish on the E. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Godmersham, in the dioc. of Canterbury, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Cosmus and Damien, is an ancient structure with embattled tower. The charities amount to £5 per annum. Here are free schools for both sexes. The register commences in 1600. In the vicinity is Eastwell Park, the seat of the Earl of Winchilsea. There is an annual cattle fair held on the 8th October.

CHALLOW, EAST, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Letcombe-Regis, hund. of Kentbury Eagle, in the co. of Berks, 1 mile W. of Wantage. It is situated on the Berks and Wilts canal. The living is a cur. united to the vic. of Letcombe-Regis. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

CHALLOW, WEST, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Letcombe-Regis, in the co. of Berks, adjoining East Challow. The chapel of ease is dedicated to St. Lawrence.

CHALTON, a par. in the hund. of Finch Dean, in the co. of Southampton, 3 miles N.E. of Horn Dean, its post town, and 8 miles N. of the Havant station on the Brighton and South Coast railway. It includes the chplry. of Idsworth. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the rect. of Clanfield and cur. of Idsworth annexed, £600, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice with a tower. Here is a National school for both sexes. Sir S. C. Jervoise, Bart., is lord of the manor.

CHALTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Toddington, in the co. of Bedford, 3 miles N. of Dunstable.

CHALVEY, a chplry. in the par. of Upton, hund. of Stoke, in the co. of Bucks, 2 miles N. of Windsor. It is situated near the Great Western railway. Here are British schools for both sexes.

CHALVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Shiplake, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles from the Berwick railway station on the Brighton line, and 5 miles W. of Hailsham, its post town. It is situated near the river Cuckmere, which bounds the parish on the E. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £200, in the patron. of A. E. Fuller, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a small ancient structure in the decorated English style of architecture, The earliest entry in its register is 1638. The manorial rights are in the jurisdiction of the Duchy of Lancaster.

CHAMBOIS. See CAMBOIS, Northumberland.

CHANCE-INN, a vil. in the par. of Ceres, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It stands half-way between Ceres and Cupar.

CHANDLINGS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Hormer, in the co. of Berks, near Abingdon.

CHANNEL, THE BRITISH, or ENGLISH, is the name of the narrow sea which separates the southern coast of England from the northern shores of France, and unites the Atlantic on the W. with the North Sea on the E. Here it contracts into the narrow neck called the Straits of Dover, or Pas de Calais, according to the French, who call the whole channel La Manche. At its narrowest point, which occurs between Folkestone and Cape Grisnez, it is only 20 English miles across; but more to the westward, between Brighton and Havre, it is above 90 miles across; and at the broadest point, between St. Alban's Head in Dorsetshire and the harbour of St. Malo, it is about 140 miles. The command of the Channel has always been considered essential to the safety of England, and her contests with Spain, Holland, and France, as each of these countries became successively great naval powers, were chiefly for the possession of these waters, which at length established her supremacy on the seas. In all her naval contests with France, England has enjoyed the great advantage of deep and safe harbours, while all the French ports along the Channel are shallow, and none of them except Cherbourg capable of admitting men-of-war; even this port is liable to be choaked with sand, and has cost the French government vast sums at different periods in attempts to deepen it, but which have been only partially successful. In 1858 the works were completed for rendering Cherbourg the great northern arsenal of France, and its opening was inaugurated with unexampled magnificence by the Emperor in person, who invited the Houses of Parliament and the English ministry to be present on the occasion. The reason why England has some of its finest harbours on the coast line of the Channel, while the French harbours are comparatively insignificant, is probably explained by the fact that the current sets in from the Atlantic, as shown by the eastern tides being stronger than the western or ebb tides, and in stormy weather the water in the Channel is two or three feet above the surface of the North Sea. This causes the Atlantic waves, as they roll in from the S.W., to impinge on the English coast, and gives a greater depth of water, while the French coast meets the current in an oblique line. The fishing in these waters is also a matter of material consideration, and is regulated by international laws, the chief trade being in pilchards, which are taken in vast quantities off the coasts of Devon and Cornwall.

CHANNEL ISLANDS, the only remaining portion of the dukedom of Normandy, now possessed by England, are situated off the coast of Brittany, and consist of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Serq, Jethou, Herm, Le Marchant, and the Caskets, which see under their respective heads.

CHANNELKIRK, or JINGLEKIRK, a par. in the co. of Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Lauder. It is bounded by the cos. of Edinburgh and Haddington, and the par. of Lauder. The land is chiefly pasture, except on the banks of the streams, where it is arable. Many Pictish encampments and a Roman camp are found in the neighbourhood. The par. is in the presb. of Lauder, and in the patron. of Sir H. Campbell, Bart., The stipend of the minister is £190.

CHANONRY, a town in the par. of Rosemarkie, in the co. of Ross, Scotland. It was united to the burgh of Rosemarkie by a charter granted by James II., and the united towns have since been known by the name of Fortrose. It was formerly the seat of the bishops of Ross, and is now a presb. of the Established and Free Churches. On Chanonry Point a fixed light was put up in 1846, which can be seen for 11 miles.

CHANTRY, a vil. 2 miles W. of Frome, in the co. of Somerset.

CHAPEL, or PONTISBRIGHT, a par. in the Witham div. of the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 4 miles N.E. of Coggleshall, and 6 N.E. of Halstead, its post town. It is a railway station on the Sudbury branch of the Great Eastern line, the viaduct of which crosses this parish. Here the Halstead branch leaves the Sudbury line. It is situated on the river Colne. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £70, in the patron. of the parishioners. The church is an ancient structure with a spire. There are some small charities.

CHAPEL, or THE CHAPEL OF ST. CLEMENT, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Enniscorthy. It is situated on the river Boro, a tributary to the Slaney. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Killegney, in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, in the patron. of the bishop. Remains of a church and moat are still in existence.

CHAPEL ALLERTON. See ALLERTON CHAPEL, Somersetshire.

CHAPEL ASCOTE. See ASCOTE CHAPEL, Warwickshire.

CHAPEL BRAMPTON. See BRAMPTON-CHAPEL, Northamptonshire.

CHAPEL-CARRON, a quondam par. in the bar. of Shelmaliere, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, annexed to the vic. of Killurin and some others, and in the patron. of the bishop. It is watered by the Slaney.

CHAPEL CLEEVE. See CLEEVE CHAPEL, Somersetshire.

CHAPEL-EN-LE-FRITH, a town and par. in the hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 6 miles N. of Buxton, and 8 miles S. of Glossop. It is situated in a hilly district, and embosomed by the mountains which bound the extremity of the county. The par. includes the tnshps. of Bowden-Edge, Bradshaw-Edge, and Coombe's-Edge. The London and North-Western railway runs through the parish to Buxton, and has a station about three-quarters of a mile from the town. The principal business of the place consists in the manufacture of cotton and paper. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the resident ratepayers. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is a stone edifice in the later English style. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There are National and infant schools for both sexes. The charities produce about £50 per annum. There is a savings-bank and a mechanics' institute. Petty sessions are held once a month at the townhall, which is a handsome structure, built in 1851. The county court and court-leet are likewise held here. A chapel was built in 1229 by the inhabitants, and in 1317 it was constituted a parish church. There are vestiges of a Roman encampment in the neighbourhood, near which human remains have been found. William Bagshaw, known as the "Apostle of the Peak," resided in this parish; he published the "De Spiritualibus Pecci." The market, which is now obsolete, was held on Thursday. Fairs are held as follows, viz.: Thursday before 14th February, March 3rd and 22nd, Thursday before Easter, April 30th, Holy Thursday, and the third Thursday after July 7th, Thursday after October 11th, and Thursday before November 23rd.

CHAPELFIELD, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tireragh, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Easky.

CHAPEL-FOLD, a hmlt. in the par. of Batley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles N.W. of Wakefield.

CHAPELGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of East Retford, in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham.

CHAPEL HADDLESEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Birkin, lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles from Birkin, and 4 S. of Selby. It is situated on the river Aire, near the Selby canal. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Birkin, in the dioc. of York, and in the patron. of Rev. T. Hill. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

CHAPELHALL, a vil. near Holytown, in the par. of Bothwell, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. This village is of recent growth, and dependent on the neighbouring collieries and the Monkland Iron and Steel Company.

CHAPELHILL, a vil. in the par. of Monzie, in the co. of Perth, Scotland.

CHAPEL HILL, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, in the co. of Monmouth, 4 miles N. of Chepstow, its post and railway town. It is situated on the river Wye. In the vicinity is the celebrated Tintern Abbey, which was founded by Walter de Clare in 1141. The inhabitants are chiefly iron-workers and agriculturists. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £60, in the patron. of the Duke of Beaufort. The charities produce about £63 per annum.

CHAPEL HILL, a chplry. in the par. of Swineshead, and wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln. The living is a perpet cur. annexed to the vic. of Swineshead, val. £47, in the dioc. of Lincoln, and in the patron. of the Vicar of Swineshead.

CHAPEL-ISLAND, one of the islands in Bantry Bay. There is also another island of the same name in Lough Strangford, in the co. of Down, Ireland, near Grey Abbey.

CHAPELIZOD, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Castleknock, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated upon the river Liffey, about 3 miles to the W. of Dublin. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with two others, £248, in the patron. of the archbishop. This parish, which is one of extreme beauty, now forms part of Phœnix Park. It is noted for its extensive strawberry plantations. It is said to have taken its name from Izod, the daughter of Angus, King of Ireland, and it was here that William III. rested some days after the battle of the Boyne. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the linen factories, which were first established here by Lawrence, author of the "Wealth of Ireland." The parish contains many handsome villa residences. The village, which is a suburb of Dublin, extends into the adjoining parish of Palmerston. The parish church, an ancient structure, is situated in the village, and has undergone considerable repairs. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a dispensary, and several flax-mills.

CHAPEL-LE-DALE, a chplry. in the par. of Bentham, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles S.E. of Dent. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £64, in the patron. of the Rector of Bentham.

CHAPELMIDWAY, a par. in the bar. of Castleknock, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated 7 miles to the N.W. of Dublin. The living is a rect. annexed to Kilsallaghan, in the dioc. of Dublin, and in the patron. of the crown.

CHAPEL MUMBY, a chplry. in the par. of Mumby, hund. of Calceworth, in the co. of Lincoln, 10 miles E. of Spilsby, and 3 from Mumby. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Mumby. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

CHAPEL OF GARIOCH, a par. in the district of Garioch, in the co. of Aberdeen, 7 miles S.W. of Old Meldrum, consisting of the united pars. of Logie Durno and Fetternear. Its length from S.E. to N.W. is about 12 miles; its average breadth about 3½ miles. The Great North of Scotland railway runs through it, and since its opening the value of the land in the neighbourhood is almost doubled. This par. is the seat of the presb. of Garioch, and is in the patron. of Sir J. D. H. Elphinstone, Bart. The stipend of the minister is £250. At Blairduff, in the S. of the parish, is a Home Mission chapel connected with the Established Church. Within the parish are also two Free churches and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are good schools in different districts of it, attended by a very large proportion of the young. The river Ury flows through the parish, on the bank of which is situated Pitcaple Castle, the seat of H. Lumsden, Esq., recently much improved and modernised. Within the parish are also situated Fetternear House, the seat of Colonel Leslie; Logie Elphinstone, the seat of Sir J. Elphinstone, Bart., M.P.; and Pittodrie, the seat of Colonel K. Erskine—all elegant and commodious mansions. The ruin of Balquhain Castle is a short distance E. of the church. Near it stands a Druidical circle, and beyond it, still further to the E., is an elevated plateau, where the battle of Hurlan was fought in 1411.

CHAPEL OF KEILLOR, a vil. in the par. of Newtyle, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland.

CHAPEL-ROSAN, a vil. in the par. of Kirkmaiden, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Kirkmaiden. It is situated near the shore of Luce Bay, and gives name to the harbour.

CHAPELRUSSELL, a par. in the bar. of Kenry, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Askeaton. It was formerly called Killenolatar, and included part of Ardcanny. It is situated near the banks of the Shannon, and contains Pallas Kenry. The soil is good, and limestone is quarried. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. with Ardcanny, £39, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a modern structure, was built by the late Board of First Fruits. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. The walls of an old church, and the ruins of O'Donovan's Castle, still remain. The principal seat is Castletown.

CHAPEL SUCKEN, or KIRKSANTON, a tnshp in the par. of Millom, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 12 miles S.E. of Ravenglass, and 6 miles from Bootle. It is stated that a church lies buried beneath a large sheet of water here, whence arises the name of the place.

CHAPELTHORPE, a vil. in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S. of Wakefield. Here is a neat chapel of ease, the living of which is a cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £189, in the patron. of the Vicar of Sandall.

CHAPELTON, a vil. in the par. of Bogue, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Kirkcudbright.

CHAPLETON, a vil. in the co. of Cambuslang, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Glasgow.

CHAPELTON, a vil. in the par. of Glasford, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Hamilton.

CHAPELTON, a vil. in the par. of Borrowstowness, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 2½ miles N.W. of Linlithgow.

CHAPELTON-OF-BOYACK, a vil. in the par. of Inverkeillor, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Arbroath.

CHAPELTOWN, a vil. in the co. of Lancashire, 3 miles N. of Bolton. It is situated on the Blackburn railway.

CHAPELTOWN, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Ecclesfield, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles N. of Sheffield, its post town. It is a station on the Sheffield and Barnsley line. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and Archbishop of York alternately. The church, dedicated to St. John, was built by subscription in 1860. It is a stone edifice, in the pointed style, with a beautiful spire. There is a chapel of ease at Mortomley. The Independents and Wesleyans have places of worship, and there are National and British schools. The charities produce £130 per annum. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor.

CHAPELTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is upwards of 4 miles to the N.W. of Tralee.

CHAPEL YATE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bilsdale Midcable, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 11 miles N.W. of Helmsley.

CHARBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Morden, hund. of Loosebarrow, in the co. of Dorset, 1 mile W. of East Morden, and 5 miles W. of Wimborne Minster. It was formerly a separate parish, but is now included in that of Morden. Charborough Park, the seat of the Drax family, is a fine old mansion, with a staircase painted by Thornhill. It was in this house that the plan of the Revolution of 1688 was discussed. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, annexed to that of Morden. The church contains several monuments of the Drax family.

CHARD, a par., borough, and market town in the east div. of the hund. of Kingsbury, in the co. of Somerset, 18 miles S. of Bridgwater, and 3 N. of the Chard Road station of the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the highest ground between the British and English Channels, on the border of Devonshire, and was anciently spelt Cerde, or Cherde, taking its name from Cerdic, King of the West Saxons. In Domesday Survey it is called Cerdre, at which time the manor belonged to the Bishop of Wells. Bishop Jocelyn, of Bath and Wells, incorporated this borough, and gave the land from his manor of Chard for the building of the town, previous to which it is supposed to have constituted what is now known as the old town. The borough of Chard was represented in parliament during the reigns of Edwards I., II., and III., but by the neglect of the freemen the privilege was lost. The government of the town consists of a mayor, town council, and 4 aldermen. The townhall, recently erected in place of an ancient Gothic structure, is a fine building. The town itself has been greatly improved of late years, and is lighted with gas. The streets are rather irregularly laid out, but the houses are in general well built. A plentiful supply of water is insured by a fine spring which issues at the head of the town, and flows by in a stream. The market-house, an ancient structure, was originally built as a court-house for the assizes. The Somerset Banking Company have a branch bank here, and there is a literary institution, and agricultural society. Chard is the head of a Poor-law Union and County Court district, but Ilminster is the polling place for this portion of the county. The chief employment of the inhabitants is in the manufacture of lace, but there are also two iron foundries, and several other factories. The trade of the town is much facilitated by the Bridgwater canal, which has many commodious warehouses on the quay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £436, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient stone edifice, erected in the reign of Henry VII., but recently restored. There is also a chapel of ease at Tatworth, recently erected for the use of the hmlts. of South Chard, Combe, Chilson, Forton, and Perry Street. The Wesleyans, Free Church, Baptists, and Independents have places of worship, and there are National and British schools for both sexes. Here is a hospital for poor persons, natives of the town, endowed by Richard Harvey in the reign of Charles II., and rebuilt in 1841. There is also an endowed grammar school of ancient foundation. The chief seats in the neighbourhood, which abounds in pleasant scenery, are Parrocks Lodge, Cricket Lodge, Sadborrow House, Leigh House (where 500 coins of Claudius were found in 1831), and Castle Neroche (where tesselated pavements have been discovered). This place is mentioned in the history of the 17th century as being the place where the royalists, under Colonel Penruddock, were defeated, and likewise the birthplace of John Sandford and Sir Simon Every, the former an eminent divine, and the latter celebrated for his sufferings in the cause of Charles I. The lord of the manor is Earl Poulet. The market is on Monday, and fairs are held on the first Wednesdays in May, August, and November.

CHARD, three tnshps. of this name in the par. of Chard, distinguished as Old, South, and Crim.

CHARDSTOCK, a par. in the Bridport div. of the hund. of Beaminster Forum, in the co. of Dorset, 3½ miles N. of Axminster, and 3 S.W. of Chard, its post town. It is situated on the river Kitbridge, and forms a gore of land between the cos. of Somerset and Devon. The Yeovil and Exeter branch of the London and South-Western railway passes near the village, and has stations at Chard-Road and Axminster. Flax dressing and the woollen manufacture are carried on to a small extent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £450, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Here are National and Industrial schools for both sexes. Besides the parish church there is a district church, dedicated to All Saints, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the gift of the vicar. A fair is held on Old Michaelmas Day.

CHARFIELD, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Grumbald's Ash, in the co. of Gloucester, 2½ miles from Wootton-under-Edge, its post town, and 2 miles from Wickwar. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £351, in the patron. of Sir. J. Neeld, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure, of the Gothic style, with several ancient monuments and a hagioscope. There is a Wesleyan place of worship. A school was built here in 1855, by the Rev. R. Jones, the late rector, who likewise left £2,000 for the same, and £300 for the benefit of twelve agricultural labourers, selected by the rector, the interest of which amount is laid out every Christmas in bread and blankets for their relief.

CHARFORD, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Upper Fordingbridge, in the co. of Hants, 3½ miles N. of Fordingbridge, its post town, and 6 miles from Salisbury. It is situated on the river Avon, and was named by the Saxons Cerdicesford, from the circumstance of Cerdic having here defeated the British king, Nanteleod. The living is a cur. in the archdeac. and dioc. of Winchester, valued in the king's books at £5 13s. 4d., but at present not in charge. The church, once dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has long been in ruins. There is no village, and only a small agricultural population, decreasing.

CHARFORD, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Upper Fordingbridge, in the co. of Hants, adjoining North Charford.

CHARING, a par. in the hund. of Calehill, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles N.W. of Ashford, its post town, and 4½ miles N.E. of the Pluckley station of the South-Eastern line. It is situated on the high road between Maidstone and Ashford. It is the Cheringes of Domesday, and was given by the Saxon kings to Christ Church, Canterbury; but when Lanfranc divided the revenues of that monastery, it was allotted to the archbishops, whose palace, rebuilt in the 14th century, is now a farmhouse. It was here that kings Henry VII. and VIII. were entertained, and, at the Dissolution, Cranmer made over to the king this palace and manor, and all his other estates in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £475, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient cruciform structure in the perpendicular style, and was partly burnt in 1590. It contains monuments to the Brent and Sayer families, and one to Mrs. Ludwell, a benefactress. Adjoining the chancel is a small chapel, built in the reign of Richard III. as a burial-place, by Amy Brent, a member of the Brent family, who then occupied the manor-house of Wickens, in this parish. Here are endowed and National schools. Charing gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Maidstone and dioc. of Canterbury. Fairs are held on the 29th April and October, for cattle and sheep.

CHARINGWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Ebrington, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles E. of Chipping-Campden.

CHARLBURY, a par. and market town in the hunds. of Banbury and Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles S.E. of Chipping-Norton, and 7 miles N.W. of Woodstock. It is a station on the West Midland railway. This ancient manor and market town, founded by the Mercian kings, and by them given to the Bishop of Lincoln, afterwards passed to the monks of Eynsham, in whose possession it remained until the reign of Henry VIII., when it was purchased by St. John's College. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. with the curs. of Shorthampton and Chadlington annexed, £800, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. There is also a district church at Finstock, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £75, in the gift of St. John's College, Oxford. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a beautiful ancient structure in the early English style, with late roof. Portions of it are supposed to have been erected in the time of Edward the Confessor; it possesses monuments of the Somerset and Jenkinson families. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Baptists, Particular Baptists, and the Society of Friends. There is an endowed school for boys, under the patron. of Brasenose College, Oxford; also a mixed British school and an infant school, newly built. There is a fund, arising from land, for apprenticing poor boys. This is a market town, although not of so much note as formerly. The market day is Friday, and fairs are held on 1st January, the second Friday in Lent, second Friday after 12th August, and first Friday in October.

CHARLCOMBE, a par. and small vil. in the hund. of Hampton, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile from the city of Bath. The Charlcombe water-works for the supply of Bath are in this parish, and the Great Western railway passes near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200, in the patron. of the Mayor and Corporation of Bath, as trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a very ancient stone edifice, said to have been at one period the parish church of the city of Bath.

CHARLCOTE, a par. in the Warwick div. of the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles S. of Warwick, and 4 N.E. of Stratford-on-Avon. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Avon, near the Great Western railway, which has a station at Stratford-on-Avon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £183, in the patron. of George Lucy, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, was rebuilt by the widow of the late George Lucy, in the Gothic style of architecture. It possesses several stained-glass windows, and some beautiful monuments of the Lucy family, one of which is the work of the Italian sculptor, Bernini. Charlecote Hall, built in 1558 by Sir Thomas Lucy (Shakspeare's Justice Shallow), is in shape of the letter E, in honour of Queen Elizabeth, having a beautiful entrance porch, by John of Padua. It is a fine specimen of the Elizabethan architecture, and is beautifully situated in a park, stocked with deer, through which the river Avon flows. The park is approached by venerable trees, near which tradition says Shakspeare killed the deer.

CHARLCOTT, a small hmlt. in the co. of Salop, 7 miles S.W. of Bridgnorth.

CHARLCOTT, a tythg. in the par. of Whitchurch, in the co. of Hants, CHARLCOTT, a tythg. in the par. of Bremhill, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles N. of Calne.

CHARLEMONT, a quoad sacra par., post and market town, in the par. of Loughgall, in the bar. and co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N. by the river Blackwater. The town is situated on the confluence of the river Callan with the Blackwater, 6 miles on the road from Armagh to Dungannon. The castle, now used as a depôt and headquarters for the artillery of North Ireland, was built by Lord-Deputy Mountjoy, and from its commanding position on the river, was formerly regarded as a point of great consequence in resisting the advances of the O'Nials of Tyrone, by whom it was taken in 1641. It was ceded to Schomberg during the struggle of 1690, when the governor, Teague O'Regan, was compelled to surrender from want of supplies. Charlemont was formerly a borough incorporated by charter of 2 James I, and governed by a portreeve and burgesses, returning two members to the Irish parliament before the Union, but its existence as a corporation was of short duration. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the linen trade and as carriers. The living is a cur. separated from Loughgall, in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher, val. £50, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Loughgall. The church, which stands in the town, is a modern structure built at a cost of £1,200, principally contributed by the late Board of First Fruits. Public worship is also held in two school-rooms, and in the barracks. Here is a Wesleyan chapel, five week-day, and three Sunday schools. A well-built bridge connects the town with that of Moy, which is in point of fact the post town, but from their proximity the two towns are generally regarded as one. The Ulster canal commences from near this spot. The principal seats are Church Hill, the residence of Colonel Sir W. Verner, Bart., and Charlemont Place. Charlemont gives the title of earl to the Caulfields. The market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on 12th May, 16th August, and 12th November.

CHARLES, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles N.W. of South Molton. It is situated on the river Bray, near the South-Western railway, which has a station at South Molton Road. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £390, in the patron. of Rev. R. Blackmore. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient stone edifice in the perpendicular style. Here is a school for both sexes. Sir P. Acland, Bart., is lord of the manor.

CHARLES-FORT, a fort of considerable strength near Kinsale, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It commands the entrance to Kinsale Harbour, and was built in 1670. The remains of the old port are to be seen on the opposite shore. In 1691 they were both surrendered to the Earl of Marlborough.

CHARLES-THE-MARTYR, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, and borough of Plymouth, in the co. of Devon. It adjoins Plymouth, and contains the tythg. of Compton-Gifford.

CHARLESTON, a vil. and burgh of barony in the par. of Aboyne, district of Kincardine O'Neil, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is situated on the N. bank of the Dee, 30 miles W. of Aberdeen. The Marquis of Huntly has a seat in the neighbourhood, called Aboyne Castle. The scenery is very fine. Fairs are held in February, April, June, October, November.

CHARLESTON, a vil. in the par. of Knockbain, in the co. of Ross, Scotland.

CHARLESTON, a vil. in the par. of Rathen, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland.

CHARLESTON, a vil. in the par. of Pitsligo, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland.

CHARLESTON, a vil. in the par. of Dunfermline, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It is situated on the Firth of Forth, 3½ miles S.W. of Dunfermline, and 4 miles W. of Inverkeithing. It was founded in 1778 by the Earl of Elgin, for the workmen employed in his extensive lime-works. The harbour is good, and immense quantities of coal, limestone, and lime are exported. Broomhall, the mansion of the Earl of Elgin, is in the vicinity.

CHARLESTON OF GLAMMIS, a vil. in the par. of Glammis, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland. It is quite modern, having been built since 1830.

CHARLESTON OF NIGG, a vil. in the par. of Nigg, in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland.

CHARLESTON OF PAISLEY, a suburban district on the S. side of the town of Paisley, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland.

CHARLESTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kilbride-Langhan, bar. of Kilcursey, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It was formerly a town, but is now only a village. It is situated in the vale of the Brosna, within a short distance of Clara and Kilcursey Castle. Fairs are held on the 20th April, and 20th October.

CHARLESTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of West O'Neilland, in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated upon Lough Neagh, 6 miles to the N.W. of Portadown.

CHARLESTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Montiaghs and Islands, in the bar. of East O'Neilland, in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland.

CHARLESTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Ardee. The locality is boggy, and stone is obtained for building purposes. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher, val. with Tallanstown, Mapastown, Philipstown, and Clonkeehan, £349, in the patron. of the bishop. Several seats adorn the neighbourhood.

CHARLESTOWN, a vil. in the tnshp. of North Owram, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N.E. of Halifax.

CHARLESTOWN, EAST and WEST, two hmlts. including the seat of Sir Gilbert King, in the par. of Kilmore, bar. of Ballintober, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. They are situated near Drumsna, on the banks of the Shannon.

CHARLESWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 2½ miles S.W. of Glossop. It had formerly a market and fair, granted to the Abbot of Basingwerk. It is situated near the Manchester and Sheffield railway, which has a station at Glossop. The hmlt. is bounded on the W. by the river Etherow. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Glossop, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a neat modern edifice. The Wesleyan Methodists, Primitive Methodists, Independents, and Particular Baptists have places of worship. There is a National school, and schools in connection with some of the above Dissenting chapels.

CHARLETON, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, in the co. of Devon, 1½ mile S.E. of Kingsbridge, its post town, and 9 from Dartmouth. It is situated on a creek near the sea. The par. is divided into two parts, E. and W., and contains the hmlt. of Frogmoor. The South Devon railway passes near the village, and has a station at Kingsbridge Road. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £522, in the patron. of Mrs. Isa. Twysden. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice, recently restored. The charities amount to £2 per annum. Lord Ashburton is lord of the manor.

CHARLETON, QUEEN, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile S.W. of Keynsham. Bath is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £65, in the patron. of Mrs. Dickinson, who is lady of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a small edifice and has recently been restored. The charities produce about £23 per annum. This place was settled by Henry VIII. on Queen Catherine. The gateway of the court-house of Keynsham Abbots is still standing.

CHARLEVILLE, or RATHGOGAN, a par. and market town in the bar. of Orrery and Kilmore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The town, which has a station on the Great Southern and Western railway, is 34 miles N.N.W. of Cork, and 129 from Dublin by rail. The Cork and Limerick direct line branches off here. The town is situated at the cross roads from Cork to Limerick, and from Kanturk to Kilmallock. It was founded in 1661 by Roger Lord Broghill, first Earl of Orrery, who built here a castle of much grandeur, which was destroyed by the Duke of Berwick in 1690. Charleville became a borough in the reign of Charles II., at the instance of Lord Broghill, who was active in promoting the advance of the then village. It returned two members to the Irish parliament before the Union, and was governed by a sovereign, 2 bailiffs, and burgesses. The corporation has long since been dissolved, and the town is now much decayed, containing only 2,500 inhabitants. It contains the district bridewell, court-house, dispensary, and a branch of the National Bank. A part of the inhabitants are occupied in the corn-mills and tan-yard. The living is a vic. united with Ballyhea, in the dioc. of Cloyne, and in the patron. of the bishop. The Earl of Cork is entitled to the rectorial tithes, which amount to two-thirds of the rent-charge; the remaining third goes to the vicar. The church, a remarkably chaste and elegant building, with tower and steeple, was erected in 1845. The late Earl of Cork contributed £800 towards its erection. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. The school at which Baron Yelverton was educated was originally endowed by the first Earl of Cork and Orrery. The name of the town was altered from Rathgogan to Charleville, after Charles II., by the Earl of Orrery. Here are the ruins of Ballysallagh church, in the grounds of which is a monument to an Irish poet who translated Homer into the Erse language. The principal seats are Sanders Park, Fortlands, Miltown, Castle-Harrison, Cooline, and Ardskagh. The manor belongs to the Earl of Cork. The market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the 10th January, 16th March, 12th May, 15th August, 10th October, and 12th November.

CHARLEVILLE, the seat of the Earl of Rathdown, in the half bar. of Rathdown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It stands about 3 miles to the S.W. of Bray. The spot is one of much beauty and luxuriance.

CHARLEVILLE CASTLE, or CHARLEVILLE FOREST, the seat of the Earl of Charleville, in the bar. of Ballycowan, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It lies on the banks of the little river Cloddagh, near Tullamore. The spot, though possessing no natural attractions beyond a fine growth of trees, has been very tastefully laid out.

CHARLEY, or CHARNWOOD, an ext. par. place in the hund. of West Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles W. of Loughborough, its post town. It is situated near Charnwood Forest, on the Wolds. The ruins of an Austin Eremite friary, founded by Blanchmains, Earl of Leicester, in the reign of Henry II., are still to be seen. A church was erected here in 1815. The Hall is a handsome building, pleasantly situated within the bounds of the forest, which was enclosed in 1830.

CHARLINCH, a par. in the hund. of Cannington, in the co. of Somerset, 3½ miles from Bridgwater, and 9 from Taunton. It is situated on the river Perret, or Parrot, about 5 miles distant from the Bridgwater station on the Great Western railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £400, in the patronage of Lord Taunton. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an old stone edifice, of no particular style of architecture, containing monuments and tablets to the family of the celebrated Admiral Blake. The register commences in 1631. There is a mixed school for the village children. Gothelney House, now converted into a homestead, is a fine old edifice of the 15th century, in the Norman style of architecture. Here live in common, at the "Agapemone," or "Abode of Love," a sect of Princeites, or Lampeters, chiefly consisting of persons of fortune. The lord of the manor is Lord Taunton.

CHARLTON, a hund. in the S.E. portion of the co. of Berks; contains the pars. of Barkham, Finchampstead, and parts of Shinfield, Sonning, and Swallowfield, comprising 12,940 acres.

CHARLTON, or GREAT CHARLTON, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, in the co. of Wilts, 8 miles S.E. of Devizes. It is situated on the river Avon, and was formerly of more importance than at present. An alien priory was founded here by Reginald de Raveley in 1187, as a cell to L'Isle Dieu Abbey. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £143, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an old building with tower. It contains a brass, bearing date 1524. Here is a National school, and charities producing about £6 per annum. Stephen Duck, author of various poems, was born at this place. Casterley, a Roman camp, is situated on Uphaven Hill. The lord of the manor is the Earl of Normanton.

CHARLTON, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles N.E. of Malmesbury, its post town, and 2 from the Tetbury Road station of the Great Western railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of St. Mary Westport, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, and in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice, in the early English style of architecture. It contains several figures and monuments, and the family vault of the earls of Suffolk. Here is a free school for both sexes, chiefly supported by ladies Andover and Howard. Charlton House, beautifully situated, is a fine mansion, the seat of the Earl of Suffolk. It was partly designed by the celebrated Inigo Jones, and contains a fine collection of pictures. The Earl of Suffolk is lord of the manor.

CHARLTON, a tythg. in the par. of Henbury, in the upper div. of the hund. of Henbury, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles N. of Bristol.

CHARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Cropthorn, in the middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 1 mile E. of Whitling Pychill, and 2 N.W. of Evesham. It is situated near the river Avon.

CHARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Singleton, in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 5 miles S. of Midhurst.

CHARLTON, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Wantage, hund. of Wantage, in the co. of Berks, 1 mile N.E. of Wantage, close upon the Berks and Wilts canal. Here is a meet for the Vale of White Horse hounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Wantage, in the dioc. of Oxford, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor.

CHARLTON, a tythg. in the par. of Tetbury, in the co. of Gloucester. It is situated near Tetbury.

CHARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Sunbury, in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles S.E. of Staines.

CHARLTON, a hmlt. partly in the par. of King's Sutton, and partly in the par. of Newbottle, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles W. of Brackley. Not far from this place is Rainsborough, a Roman camp, where coins of Vespasian have been discovered.

CHARLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrockwardine, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles W. of Wellington. The whole of this township is the property of the Duke of Sutherland.

CHARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilmersdon, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles W. of Frome.

CHARLTON, a tythg. in the par. of Shepton Mallet, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile E. of Shepton Mallet.

CHARLTON, a tythg. in the par. of St. Mary Donhead, in the co. of Wilts, 7 miles S. of Hindon. The living is a cur. annexed to St. Mary Donhead. The church is now in ruins.

CHARLTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Downton, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Salisbury.

CHARLTON ABBOTS, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Kiltsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 2¾ miles from Winchcomb, and 5 from Cheltenham, its post town and railway station. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £38, in the patron. of C. J. Chamberlayne, Esq. The church is a small ancient structure.

CHARLTON ADAM, or EAST CHARLTON, a par. in the hund. of Somerton, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles S. of Ilchester, and 6 N.W. of Sparkford railway station on the Great Western line. It is situated on the river Cary. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £137, in the patron. of the Rev. Guy Bryan. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone edifice in the perpendicular style of architecture. The register commences as early as 1550. There is a Wesleyan chapel. The lord of the manor is F. H. Dickinson, Esq.

CHARLTON-BY-DOVER, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent. It is situated 1 mile inland, within the borough of Dover, on the river Dour. Many houses have recently been built, connecting the village with Dover, of which it will shortly become a fashionable suburb. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £93, in the patron. of Rev. John Monins. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, was rebuilt in 1827, and is a cruciform structure. There are National schools for both sexes. The hospital for the borough of Dover is situated in this parish. It is supposed by some that this was the Roman Portus Dubris, anchors and portions of ships having been dug up here.

CHARLTON CROSS, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Kilmersdon, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles N. of Frome.

CHARLTON EAST and WEST QUARTERS, two tnshps. in the par. of Bellingham, in the N.W. div of Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles W. of Bellingham. Here are some excellent collieries. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor. In East Quarter is a Roman Catholic chapel, with schools for boys and girls.

CHARLTON-HORETHORNE, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles S.W. of Wincanton, and 5 S.E. of the Sparkford station on the Great Western railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £384, in the patron of the Marquis of Anglesea. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient stone edifice, partly in the perpendicular style, and at one period was attached to the priory of Kenilworth. It was restored in 1846. The register dates from 1734. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a National school for both sexes. The charities amount to about £11 per annum. This village was anciently a market town. The County Court for Wincanton district is held here.

CHARLTON, KING'S, a par. in the hund. of Cheltenham, in the co. of Gloucester, situated on the high road from London to Cheltenham; it is 1½ mile from the latter place, and 2 S.E. from the Charlton station of the Great Western railway. In the adjacent par. of Dowdeswell the river Chelt rises, and flows through Charlton parish from E. to W. The parish is under the management of a Local Board of Health. In 1855 a handsome vestry-hall was erected close to the church, in which parish meetings are held. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £177 in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a large stone structure, in the perpendicular style. In 1842 it was enlarged, but again requires repairs. It has a tower with clock and peal of six bells, and a new burial-ground has lately been added. The Wesleyans and Baptists have places of worship. There are National schools for both sexes. Battledown, within this parish, was the scene of a skirmish between the royalists and the parliamentary army. It possesses many good residences. The lord of the manor is Sir William Russell, Bart., C.B., M.P.

CHARLTON MACKRELL, or WEST CHARLTON, a par. in the hund. of Somerton, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles E. of Langport, and 3 E. of Somerton station on the North-West section of the Great Western railway. It is situated on the river Cary, near the Roman Fosse-way to Ilchester, which is 4 miles distant, and contains the hmlts. of Cary-Fitzpaine and Lytes-Cary. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £499, in the patron. of James S. and John Brymer, Esqrs. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient stone edifice in the perpendicular style, recently restored. The register commences as early as 1550. There is a National school for both sexes, erected by the late James Brymer, Esq., endowed with £45 per annum. The walls of the interior of the building are tastefully fitted up with coloured tiles. The lord of the manor is F. H. Dickinson, Esq. An ancient mansion, with a chapel annexed, stands at Lytes-Cary.

CHARLTON MARSHALL, a par. in the East Shaston div. of the hund. of Cogdean, in the co. of Dorset, 2 miles S. of Blandford, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Stour, near the Central Dorset branch of the London and South-Western railway. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, annexed to the rect.* of Spetisbury, val. jointly, £517, in the patron. of J. S. Drax, Esq. The church is a flint edifice in the early English style, and was rebuilt in 1727 by Dr. Sloper, to whose memory it has a monument, as also one to Wake, the founder of the Corporation of the Sons of the Clergy. The Independents have a place of worship. The children of this parish are admitted to the free school at Spetisbury. There is an infant school. S. White, Esq., is lord of the manor. Roman coins have been discovered, and there are several barrows in the neighbourhood. The village is a meet for the Blackmoor Vale harriers.

CHARLTON MUSGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Norton-Ferris, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile N.E. of the Wincanton station of the Central Dorset branch line, which passes through the parish, and 4 S. of the Bruton station of the Somerset and Weymouth line. It is situated on the river Cale and the road to Bath. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £463, in the patron. of the Rev. Paul Leir. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is a stone edifice, built in the time of Henry VI., and possesses a handsome tower. The register dates from 1534. The Baptists have a place of worship, and there is a National school for both sexes. This was the birthplace of Musgrave the antiquary.

CHARLTON NEW, a hmlt. in the par. of Charlton-next-Woolwich, on the banks of the Thames.

CHARLTON-NEXT-WOOLWICH, a par. and suburban London district, in the hund. of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 1 mile from Woolwich, and 6 miles E.S.E. of London. It is a railway station on the North Kent line, and is pleasantly situated near the river Thames. In the neighbourhood are Blackheath, Woolwich Common, and Greenwich Park. Much of the land is under cultivation as market gardens. This village was anciently a market town, and is the Cerletone of Domesday Book. It was presented to the abbey of Bermondsey by William II., and afterwards came to the Newton, Langhorne, Ducie, and Maryon families. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £600, in the patron. of Sir T. M. Wilson, Bart. There are also three other churches in this parish—that of St. Thomas, a perpet. cur.,* val. £300, in the patron. of Sir T. M. Wilson, Bart.; Blackheath Park Chapel, in the gift of J. Cator, Esq; and St. Germain's Chapel, Blackheath. The parish church, dedicated to St. Luke, is a plain brick structure, and was built in 1640 by Sir Adam Newton. It contains monuments of the Newton, Langhorne, Ducie, and Maryon families, and among others one to Mr. Drummond, secretary to Sir Robert Peel, who was shot by McNaghten in 1843. It is remarkable that Charlton is also the burial-place of the Right Hon. Spencer Percival, assassinated by Bellingham in 1812. The charities amount to about £80. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes. Charlton House, built by Inigo Jones in 1616, and since enlarged, is a fine mansion, now the seat of Sir Thomas M. Wilson, Bart; in front of it is a row of cypress trees, said to have been the first planted in England. It contains some fine decorations and valuable portraits. The ceiling of the saloon is as left by Inigo Jones, who painted it for Sir Adam Newton, the tutor of Prince Henry. In an adjoining apartment is a chimney-piece of black marble, so highly polished that tradition asserts Lord Downes to have seen reflected in it a robbery committed on Shooter's Hill, or, according to Lysons, at Blackheath. A fair for horn goods, &c., is held on St. Luke's Day, at which formerly a burlesque procession was formed, and passed from Deptford, through Greenwich, to Charlton, each person wearing some ornament of horn on his head; but it became a nuisance, and was suppressed by Sir Thomas S. Wilson. The greater part of Woolwich Common lies within this parish.

CHARLTON, NORTH and SOUTH, tnshps. in the par. of Ellingham, in the co. of Northumberland, 4½ miles N. of Alnwick.

CHARLTON-UPON-OTMOOR, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles S.W. of Bicester, 9 N.E. of Oxford, its post town, and 3 S.W. of the Islip station of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the river Ray, and contains the tnshps. of Charlton, Murcott, and Fencott. It is said formerly to have been a cell to the priory of St. Ebrulf Utica. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, and in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, in the early English style of architecture. It contains a curious brass, and there is a stone cross in the churchyard. The charities amount to £10 per annum. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. Roman pottery has been discovered in the neighbourhood. The manorial rights are vested in the trustees of Sir G. P. Turner. It is a meet for the hounds of Mr. Drake.

CHARLTON WOODLANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Shepton Mallet, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile E. of the town of Shepton Mallet.

CHARLWOOD, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Reigate, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles S.W. of the Horley station of the London, Brighton, and South Coast line. It is situated near Timberham Bridge, on the river Mole, where the Danes were defeated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £550, in the patron. of H. C. Wise, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, partly in the Norman style. The charities amount to £28 per annum. Here are schools for both sexes, with a small endowment.

CHARMINSTER, a par. in the hund. of George, in the Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, 1½ mile N.W. of Dorchester. It is situated in a valley on a branch of the river Froom, and contains the hmlts. of Burton and Forston. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Stratton, in the patron. of Rev. G. Pickard. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome stone edifice, and possesses monuments of the Trenchard family. The register commences in 1561. At Forston, not far distant, the Dorset Lunatic Asylum stands. It is a fine building, formerly the mansion of the late F. J. Browne, Esq., who gave it to the county for the asylum.

CHARMOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles S.E. of Axminster, and 2 E. of Lyme Regis. From its delightful situation it is much frequented as a watering-place. It is situated near the river Char, on the side of a hill, lying between it and Lyme Regis, and rather more than 500 feet high. It is supposed to be the Cauca Arixa of the Romans, and the site of several engagements between the Saxons and Danes in the time of Ethelwolf and Egbert. Charles II., after the battle of Worcester, and while escaping to France, was nearly captured here—a village smith having discovered, from shoeing the horse of Lord Wilmot, that he came from the north, and raised the alarm. The village was anciently a market town, and is now a watering-place and coastguard station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £150, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a handsome stone edifice. The Independents have a place of worship and a school. There is likewise a National school. The charities produce about £40 per annum. George Frean, Esq., is lord of the manor. A remarkable phenomenon occurred here in August, 1531, which is thus described by Hutchins, in his History of Dorsetshire:—"After very hot weather in that month, followed by sudden rains, the cliffs near Charmouth began to smoke, and soon after to burn with a visible but subtile flame. The same phenomena were observed at intervals, especially after rains, till winter; the flame, however, was not visible by day, except the sun shone, when the cliffs appeared at a distance as if covered with pieces of glass which reflected the rays; at night the flame was visible at a distance, but when the spectator drew near, he could perceive only smoke. On examining the cliffs, a great quantity of martial pyrites was found with marcasites, that yielded nearly a tenth of common sulphur, besides various shells and belemnites, all encrusted with pyritical matter." The cliffs of this coast, on either side of Charmouth,—from Axmouth, in Devonshire, to Bridport, in Dorsetshire, and beyond,—are, from their composition, subject to frequent founders and landslips. Occasionally these are of great extent; the last of any importance occurred in June, 1862, when a cliff nearly 100 feet in height, and 200 yards in length, and situated about 200 feet above the sea, fell, carrying with it several acres of surface occupied by gardens and fields. This lapse is in the immediate vicinity of the new road between Lyme Regis and Charmouth—which road itself, soon after its construction in 1825, in one place subsided many feet in the course of one night. The most remarkable landslip, however, recorded upon this coast was one which took place in December, 1839, on the farms of Dowland and Great Bindon, within 2 miles of Axmouth, and which at the time was erroneously ascribed to the agency of an earthquake. Along the coast are found many geological specimens.

CHARNDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Twyford, in the hund. of Buckingham, in the co. of Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Twyford, and 6 S. of Bicester, its post town. It is situated near the London and North-Western railway, and is watered by a branch of the river Ouse.

CHARNES, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, in the north div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Eccleshall.

CHARNEY BASSETT, a chplry. in the par. of Longworth, in the co. of Berks, 6 miles E. of Faringdon. It is situated near the river Ock, in the vicinity of the Danish camp on Cherbury Hill. The chapel of ease, which is dedicated to St. Peter, has a handsome Norman doorway.

CHARNHAM-STREET, a tythg. in the par. of Hungerford, hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles from the town of Hungerford. It is situated near the river Kennet and a branch of the Great Western railway. It anciently gave name to the parish.

CHARNOCK HEATH, a tnshp. in the par. of Standish, hund. of Leyland, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles S.E. of Chorley.

CHARNOCK RICHARD, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Standish, hund. of Leyland, in the co. of Lancaster, 1 mile from Euxton, and 2 from Chorley. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, and in the patron. of James Darlington, Esq. The church has recently been erected. There are several collieries. Park Hall, occupied by R. E. Allison, Esq., is a fine building.

CHARNWOOD. See CHARLEY, Leicestershire.

CHARNWOOD FOREST, an ext. par. place in the hund. of West Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, about 6 miles S.W. of Loughborough. This forest, which was disafforested after the Conquest, but not enclosed till 1830, contained about 18,000 acres of bleak moorland, stretching along the Wolds to Charley. The rocks are chiefly trap, with some slate, stone, and coal, covered by a thin layer of vegetable mould, and attain an elevation at Bardon Hill of 853 feet; from the summit of which is one of the most extensive views in England. On this commanding spot was built in 1845 a monastery of St Bernard, a remarkably handsome edifice in the early English style, including a chapel, cloisters, refectory, and chapter-house. In the vicinity are the ruins of an Austin Eremite friary, and of the priory of Ulverscroft, also within the bounds of the forest, the greater portion of which now belongs to the Marquis of Hastings.

CHARSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Loes, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles to the N. of Woodbridge, its post town, and 3 from Wickham Market station on the East Suffolk branch of the Great Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100, in the patron. of Earl Howe. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a handsome brick edifice. The Baptists have a chapel. The charities amount to £8 per annum.

CHART, a tythg. in the par. of Frensham, in the co. of Surrey, 5 miles S. of Farnham.

CHART AND LONGBRIDGE, a hund. in the lathe of Scray, in the eastern portion of the co. of Kent. It contains the pars. of Ashford, Bethersden, Brook, Great Chart, Hinxhill, Hothfield, Kennington, Kingsnorth, Mersham, Sevington, and Willesborough, and comprises 25,000 acres.

CHART, or GREAT CHART, a par. in the hund. of Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles W. of Ashford, its post town, which has a station on the South-Eastern railway, and 54 from Canterbury. It is watered both by the Medway and Stour, and is the Carth of Domesday. It was once a market town, and formed part of the demesnes of Christ Church, Canterbury. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £600, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome structure; the S. aisle was built in Edward IV.'s time, by Bishop Goldwell, of Norwich, who was a native of this town, and of whose family the church has monuments. There are two almshouses for aged persons, a Wesleyan place of worship, and a National school. In 1580 an earthquake was felt here. The fair, usually held on the first Monday in April for horses, cattle, and pedlery, is at present discontinued.

CHART, or LITTLE CHART, a par. in the hund. of Calehill, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles N. of the Pluckley station of the South-Eastern line, and 5 W. of Ashford, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £298, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St Mary, is an ancient stone structure with tower. The charities amount to £9. The register commences 1685. The Roman Catholics have a chapel.

CHARTER-HOUSE, an ext. par. place in the par. of Sculcoates, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile N. of Hull. There are also several other small places of the same name—one near Market Bosworth, in Leicestershire, another near Axbridge, in Somersetshire, and a third near Coventry, in Warwickshire.

CHARTER-HOUSE-HINTON, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Bath and 1 mile S. from the Freshford station of the Great Western railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Norton St. Philip. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone edifice. The a National and Sunday schools for both sexes. Here is an old tower of a Carthusian (Chartreux) priory, founded about the year 1230 by Ela Countess of Salisbury, who likewise laid out the park. There have been discovered in this parish traces of a Roman amphitheatre, as well as pottery and coins, supporting the opinion that this formerly was a Roman station. Hinton Charter-House is a handsome residence, containing a fine collection of paintings, amongst which are some valuable portraits of Henry VIII. and Edward VI., by Holbein; Mary Queen of Scots, by Zucchero; Lord-Keeper Guildford and Lord Strafford, by Vandyck; besides several by Abbot, and other painters.

CHARTER-HOUSE-ON-MENDIP, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Winterstoke, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles E. of Axbridge, and 8 from Wells. The hmlt. is situated within the lib. of Witham Friary.

CHARTERIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Chesham, in the co. of Bucks. It is situated near Chesham.

CHARTERS HALL, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Ninian, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Stirling. It is situated near the river Bannock.

CHARTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Felborough, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles S.W. of Canterbury, its post town. It is situated on the road between Ashford and Canterbury, on the river Stour, and near the South-Eastern line. The village of Chartham, called Certeham in Domesday Book, is situated on low ground bordering on the river Stour. The manor was given to the priory of Christ Church by Duke Alfred, in 871, towards clothing the monks, who had a church here at the time of the Domesday Survey. In the reign of Henry I. they had a vineyard here, and in that of his successor they received a confirmation of the liberty of free-warren. After the Dissolution it was granted by Henry VIII. to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, to whom it still belongs. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £800, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious edifice, in the early decorated style, built in the form of a cross, and contains various sepulchral memorials. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The paper-mills of Messrs. Weatherley and Drew employ about 200 persons. Over the downs are scattered a vast number of barrows, or tumuli, described in ancient books as Danes' banks, which extend on the S. side of the high-road between Canterbury and Ashford, several of which have been opened, when human remains, trinkets, &c., were found enclosed. A fair is held on the 29th June. The chief residence is Mystole, the seat of Sir John Fagg, Bart.

CHARTHAM HATCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Chartham, in the hund. of Felborough, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 1 mile N. of Chartham.

CHARTLEY HOLME, or CHARTLEY LODGE, an ext. par. place in the southern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 8 miles N.E. of Stafford, and 1 N. of Stowe. The old timbered mansion, where Mary Queen of Scots was imprisoned, was burnt down in 1781, and the new hall, erected on its site by Earl Ferrars, was also destroyed by fire in 1847; it was surrounded by a fine park of 1,000 acres. This is one of the few places in Great Britain where the indigenous breed of wild cattle is to be found pure. In this park, on a hill, stand the ruins of two round towers, the remains of Chartley Castle, built in 1220 by the Earl of Chester.

CHART-NEXT-SUTTON-VALENCE, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Maidstone, and 5 N.W. of the Headcorn railway station of the South-Eastern line. The remains of an old castle, supposed to be of Saxon origin, though not extensive, are very picturesque; they are mantled with ivy, and crown the summit of a lofty hill. There is a fine view from the high ground at the back of the village over the Weald of Kent, as far as the Sussex hills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a modern stone structure with tower. The register commences 1558. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. Sir Edmund Filmer, Bart., M.P., is lord of the manor. It is noted for producing superior hops. The chief residences are East Sutton Place, the seat of Sir Edmund Filmer, Bart., Wierton House, Prospect House, and at Sutton-Valence, Ivy Cottage, long the residence of Sir Alexander Morison, M.D.

CHARWELTON, or CHURCH CHARWELTON, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, in the co. of Northampton, 5 miles S. of Daventry, its post town, and 11 N.E. of Banbury. It is situated near the source of the river Charwell. Over the river is an antique stone footbridge, consisting of two arches. The Great Western railway passes within 6 miles of the village, and has a station at Fenny-Compton. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £582, in the patron. of Sir C. Knightley, Bart., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient edifice, with monuments, brasses, and a curious old octagonal font. Here is an endowed Sunday school.

CHASELEY, or CHACELEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 3 miles S.W. of Tewkesbury, its post and railway town, and 7 S. of Upton. It is situated on the Severn, which bounds it on the E. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £134, in the patron. of the Vicar of Longdon. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice, with tower and spire. The parish registers date from 1538. The charities produce £33 per annum, £18 of which is applied to the educating of 16 poor children. The Dean and Chapter of Westminster are the lords of the manor.

CHASEWATER, a chplry. in the par. of Kenwyn, in the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles W. of Truro.

CHASLY, a vil. in the par. of Holsworthy, in the co. of Devon, 1 mile from Holsworthy.

CHASTLETON, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles S.E. of Moreton-in-the-Marsh, its post town, and the same distance N.W. of Chipping Norton. A severe engagement occurred here between Canute and Edmund Ironside, in which the former was defeated. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £518, in the patron. of Sir R. Westmacott. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is in the Norman style of architecture. There are charities to the val. of £23. Chastleton Hill House is a fine mansion in the Elizabethan style, near which is a Roman encampment. The manorial rights are vested in the trustees of the late J. W. Jones, Esq.

CHATBURN, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Whalley, in the higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles E. of Clitheroe. It is a station on the western division of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The tnshp., which is united with that of Worston, is watered by the river Ribble. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £165, in the patron. of Hulme's Trustees. The church, dedicated to Christ, is a stone edifice in the Romanesque style of architecture. Here are National schools for both sexes. There are extensive lime-works in the vicinity. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

CHATCULL, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles N. of the village of Eccleshall.

CHATER RIVER takes its rise near Tilton-on-the-Hill, co. of Leicester, and runs across Rutland, near Tinwell, 15 miles E. to the Welland.

CHATFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Condover, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

CHATHAM AND GILLINGHAM, a hund. in the northern portion of the co. of Kent. It contains the pars. of Chatham and Gillingham, comprising 4,310 acres.

CHATHAM, a naval arsenal and parliamentary borough, forming a suburb to the city of Rochester, but chiefly in the hund. of Chatham and Gillingham, in the co. of Kent, 16 miles from Sheerness, 25 miles W.N.W. of Canterbury, 30 miles from London by road, and 37½ miles by the London, Chatham, and Dover railway; the North Kent railway has a station at Strood, 2 miles from Chatham, and 31 miles from London. The town, which lies on the Medway, appears in Domesday Book as Cetcham; it belonged to Earl Godwin and his son King Harold II., and was given by William the Conquerer to Hamon de Crevequer, from whom it came to the Badlesmeres, Despencers, Wentworths, and others. Roman tiles, weapons, coins, and other relics of that people have been found in Chatham; and from various discoveries made in erecting the fortifications, it seems probable that the Romans had a cemetery here. Human remains, discovered in the surface soil in the year 1863, near Luton, in this parish, showed evidence of death by sabre cuts, or wounds of a similar character, and from the position in which they were found, it was conjectured that they belonged to ancient Britons killed by the Romans in some conflict in that locality. The Dutch under De Ruyter, in 1667, having taken Sheerness, did considerable damage to Chatham; this was the cause of additional and stronger fortifications being erected. The dockyard may be said to have been of little consequence until the time of Queen Elizabeth, who erected Upnor Castle, at present merely a powder magazine, for defence of the dockyard and the shipping. The dockyard, which has been very much enlarged, is a mile in extent, and contains, besides officers' houses, six building slips, four wet and one dry stone dock, a storehouse 660 feet long, a mast-house 240 feet, rope-house 1,128 feet, sail loft 210 feet, besides blacksmiths' shops with upwards of 40 forges and sawmills by Brunel. A large establishment is kept up here, and in time of war as many as 3,000 workmen are employed. The arsenal and barracks extend more than 2 miles along the Medway. In consequence of the entire space at St. Mary's Creek, Chatham, hitherto used by the Royal Engineers for carrying on their course of instruction in pontooning, diving, and subaqueous experiments, being required by the Admiralty for the enlargement and extension of Chatham Dockyard, the Royal Engineer Pontoon Depôt was removed in 1863 to the opposite side of the creek, near Upnor Castle, where the pontoons and other apparatus are now located.—There are five livings in Chatham. The principal one is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £400, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and was rebuilt in 1788, on the site of the early English one, of which remains may be seen at the W. and S.W. of the present building. It had a finely carved sedilia, and the shrine of Our Lady, which used to be famous for working miracles; there is a brass plate recording the memory of Stephen Borough, who opened the N.E. passage to Russia. St. Paul's is a perpet. cur. val. £250, in the patron. of the Bishop of Rochester. The church was consecrated in 1854; it is built in the Norman style, and seats upwards of 900 persons. The other three churches, St. John's, Luton, and Brompton, are all perpet. curs., the two first, which are endowed, being in the patron. of the Vicar of Chatham, the last in that of the Rev. W. and Miss Conway. Brompton Church stands in the par. of Gillingham, but the district was partly formed out of Chatham. Besides these churches there is also a small chapel attached to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, which is used as a chapel of ease. Near the railway station is a Presbyterian church, erected in 1861 at a cost of £1,400, on a site granted by the War Department, a neat building of galvanised iron, with slate roofs. There are chapels for Reformed Wesleyans, Baptists, Independents, Bible Christians, Irvingites, Swedenborgians, and Unitarians. There are four sets of National schools in the parish—one attached to the parish church, one to St. John's and one to St. Paul's church, and one at Luton; the British school is situated on the New Road. Extensive buildings have been recently erected for the Medway Union. Ralph Paine, by his will bearing date 1812, left a sum of money in the Funds, now amounting to about £10,000, to the vicar and churchwardens, for the relief of decayed persons who are not in the receipt of parish relief.—Since the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832, Chatham has returned one member. The population in 1851 was 28,424, with 4,337 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 36,177, with 5,185 inhabited houses, besides 8,910 military. The fortified lines were made in 1756; they enclose a space of 1½ mile, and were defended by forts Pitt and Clarence at one end, Gillingham Fort at the other end, and Spur Battery on the heights. The defences, however, are now undergoing a thorough alteration and improvement, in accordance with the Fortifications Bill. Amongst other works, a large fort is being erected on the Isle of Grain, between the Thames and the Medway, to command the mouth of the latter river. Within the old lines are the dockyard, the Marine and St. Mary's barracks, the new Soldiers' Institute, the Melville hospital, &c. The High Street, which is narrow, is about 1¼ mile in length; a considerable portion of the town itself is irregular and ill built. Behind the Sun Inn is a pier erected by Colonel Best, which cost £3,000. A military school was founded in 1812, and experiments are sometimes carried on upon a large scale, many visitors coming from a distance to witness them. Fort Clarence forms a military prison, but the medical school which was stationed at Fort Pitt, and the invaliding establishment at St. Mary's are now in course of removal to Netley. There are United Service and Marine libraries; the Chatham and Rochester Mechanics' Institute, which has a library of 2,000 volumes; two banks, besides a savings-bank with 3,175 depositors, holding £101,982; a lepers' hospital called St. Bartholomew's, founded by Ernulph the Saxon, or Bishop Gundulph, in 1078—this hospital is now reconstituted under a degree of the Court of Chancery; the management of the income, which is considerable, and of the new building, are intrusted to a body of trustees, of whom the Dean of Rochester is chairman; another hospital for 10 decayed mariners and shipwrights, founded by Sir John Hawkins in 1592 and incorporated by Queen Elizabeth in 1594; the ex victualling office, and other buildings. Hawkins and Drake founded the "Chatham Chest," in 1588, but this has since been removed to London. There is an old house in the town which belonged to Pett, the celebrated ship-builder of the time of Charles I. Chatham gives the title of earl to the Pitts. The market, fairs, and races have recently been discontinued.

CHATHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellingham, in the southern div. of the ward of Bambrough, in the co. of Northumberland, 9 miles N. of Alnwick. It is a railway station on the York and Berwick line.

CHATLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Leighs, in the hund of Witham, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles N.W. of Great Leighs, and 4 miles S.W. of Braintree.

CHATLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Woolverton, in the hund. of Frome, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles N. of Frome.

CHATSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Edensor, in the hund of High Peake, in the co. of Derby, 157 miles from London, 25 from Derby, and 8½ from Matlock. It appears in Domesday Book as Chatesworde, and was then owned by William Peveril. Through the Leches or Lukes, and Agards, it descended to Sir William Cavendish, who in 1570 began to build the old seat which was afterwards finished by his widow, the Countess of Shrewsbury. Mary Queen of Scots was imprisoned at Chatsworth. It was garrisoned by the parliamentarians in 1643, and by the royalists in 1644. In the church of St. Peter at Edensor are monuments to the first Earl of Devonshire, to the celebrated Elizabeth Hardwick, whose fourth husband was George, sixth Earl of Shrewsbury, and to James Beton, a favourite servant of Mary Queen of Scots, who died while Mary was a prisoner at Chatsworth. The population of Chatsworth in 1861 was 53, with 8 inhabited houses. Chatsworth House, the seat of the Dukes of Devonshire, was rebuilt by the first Duke from designs by Talman and Wren. The great stables were built about 1760; the north wing since 1820, by Wyatville. There are many exquisite marbles, pictures, carvings, an escoes at Chatsworth House, including Raphael's rtoons in Ghobelin tapestry; the Jewish Rabbi, Rembrandt; Belisarius, by Murillo; Queen Mary, Zucchero; Henry VIII., by Holbein; Philip II., by tian; Charles I., by Jansen; Duke of Albemarle, by r Peter Lely; George IV., by Sir Thomas Lawrence; sides other valuable pictures by Myttens, Vandyck, r Godfrey Kneller, and other eminent artists. In the lpture gallery are some of the finest works of Canova, llekens, Chantry, Campbell, and Thorwaldsen. The te-rooms are 190 feet long; the music-room 35 feet by feet; the grand drawing-room 45 feet by 28 feet; the rary 90 feet by 22 feet; the dining-room 58 feet by 30 t; and the ball-room, which, with its adjoining cham- rs, forms a suite of 557 feet; this last has a Corinthian mple over it, and commands a magnificent view. The rk is nearly 12 miles round, well laid out, and stocked th deer. The gardens were laid out by Loudon and axton, and are now under Sir Joseph Paxton's care; ey have long had a high and well-deserved reputation. the grounds is Queen Mary's Bower. The grand nservatory covers about an acre of ground; it is 320 t by 145 feet, and has 70,000 square feet of glass in ; the orangery is 180 feet long, 27 feet wide, and 21 t high, lighted by a glass roof; the kitchen garden 12 acres in extent; the arboretum of trees and shrubs vers several acres. The water works and great cascade re designed about a century ago by Grillet: one untain is supplied from a hill 4 miles off, and has a jet 200 feet; the stream then disappears amidst the rocks, d passes underground to the river. Here may be seen ueen Victoria's oak (her Majesty having visited Chats- rth when Princess Victoria in 1832, and again in 1843, hen the pleasure-grounds and grand conservatory were luminated), the Duchess of Kent's chesnut, and the mperor Nicholas's chesnut. Marshal Tallard was lowed to remain here on parole, and Hobbs spent any years of his life at Chatsworth. Christian VII. sited it in 1768, and the Archduke Nicholas of Russia 1861.

CHATTERIS, a par. and market town in the hund. f North Witchford, in the co. of Cambridge, 26 miles .W. of Cambridge, and 7 S. of March. It is a station n the Ely and Peterborough railway, and is situated n the river Ouse. Alwina, wife of Athelstan, and iece of King Edgar, founded a convent of Bene- ictines about A.D. 980, which was in Henry VIII's. eign wholly suppressed. The place is mentioned in Domesday Survey under the name of Cateriz, or Cetriz. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £1,50C, in he patron. of W. Hawkins, Esq. The church, dedicated o SS. Peter and Paul, is a handsome edifice. The eneral Baptists, Particular Baptists, Wesleyans, ndependents, Primitive Methodists, High Calvinists, nd Society of Friends have chapels, and there are ational, British, girls' and infant schools. The town as made a market town in 1834; and a court-leet and etty sessions are held here. The Bishop of Ely is lord f the manor. A large number of Roman coins and urious relics have been found at various times, and not any years since part of the skeleton of an elephant. The market day is Friday.

CHATTERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolstanton, n the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, about 2 miles from Tunstall, and 3 from New- astle-under-Lyme.

CHATTISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Samford, in he co. of Suffolk, 5 miles W. of Ipswich, its post town, nd 3 N. of the Capel railway station, on the Great Eastern line. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £168, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a plain edifice, with a brass of the date 1592. The Wesleyans have chapel. There was left by the Rev. Thomas Warren, for educating poor children, the sum of £200. The manorial rights are vested in Eton College. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

CHATTON, a par. in the eastern div. of the ward of Glendale, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles E. of Wooler, its post town. It is situated on the river Till, near the Yorkshire and Berwick railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £198, in the pa- tron. of the Duke of Northumberland. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is a stone edifice in the Gothic style, and contains several beautiful stained-glass memorial windows. The register commences 1713. Here is a Presbyterian place of worship, and there is a National school for both sexes. The Duke of Northum- berland is lord of the manor. In the vicinity are New Hall and Fowberry Tower.

CHATWALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Cardington, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Church Stretton. In the vicinity is fine clay and quartz, used in the potteries.

CHATWELL GREAT and CHATWELL LITTLE, hmlts. in the par. of Gnosall, in the co. of Stafford, 8 miles W. of Penkridge. The river Rowley and the Liverpool canal pass at a short distance.

CHAVERIDGE, or CHEVENAGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsley, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Tetbury. The living is a cur. united with Horsley. Chaveridge Green is a meet for the Beaufort hounds. In the vicinity is Chaveridge House, a fine old Elizabe- than mansion built by the Stephenses of Horsley Priory.

CHAWLEIGH, or CHAWLEY, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles S.E. of Chulmleigh, its post town. It is situated on the river Dart, not far from the London and South-Western rail- way, which has a station at Eggesford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £455, in the patron. of the Earl of Portsmouth. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient edifice in the early English style. The Independents and Bible Christians have places of worship, and there is a school for both sexes. The charities amount to about £100 per annum. The Earl of Portsmouth is the lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the 6th May, and the Tuesday before the last Thursday in October.

CHAWLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Cumnor, hund. of Hormer, in the co. of Berks, 2 miles S.W. of Oxford.

CHAWSEY, a tythg. in the par. of Maple Durham, in the co. of Oxford, 3 miles N.W. of Reading. It is situated in a pleasant country near the river Thames.

CHAWSON, a hmlt. in the par. of Roxton, in the co. of Bedford, 3 miles W. of St. Neot's. It is situated near the river Ouse.

CHAWTON, a par. in the hund. of Upper Alton, in the co. of Hants, 1 mile S.W. of the Alton station of the South-Western railway The village of Chawton is situated in a valley, and in the neighbourhood are lavants, or land springs, which at times overflow the lands adjoining. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £353, in the patron. of Edward Knight, Esq. The church is in the Gothic style of architecture, and is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The par. possesses a neat National school. Chawton House, occu- pied by the lord of the manor, Edward Knight, Esq., is a beautiful seat. The charities produce about £9 per annum. It is a meet for the H.H. hounds.

CHEADLE, a par. and small town in the southern div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 14 miles N.N.E. from Stafford. It is distant about 3½ miles from each of the four stations, Moghall and Oaka- moor, on the Churnet Valley branch, and Blyth Bridge and Cresswell on the Potteries branch of the North Staffordshire railway. This parish, called in Domes- day Book Cedla, is situated in a hollow of the moor- lands, between two small tributary streams of the Tean Brook, which flows into the Churnet. It con- tains the hmlts. of Cheadle Mill, Brookhouses, and Huntley, and the chplries. of Freehay and Oakamoor. The principal trade of the place consists in the working of copper and brass, and in the silk and tape manufactures. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbour- ing collieries, and iron-mines. The town, which is irregu- larly laid out, contains two mills, a branch bank, and the Union poorhouse. It is a polling place for the county elections, the head of a Poor-law Union, and of a County Court district. In the vicinity are several large plantations, and from Cheadle Park there is a fine view. The manor formerly belonged to the Bassets, who had their seat here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £438, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a stone structure of the later English style, built in 1837. It has several monumental figures, and a register of early date. The old church, which stood near the same site as the present one, and was taken down in 1837, was a curious old structure, with massive wooden arches supporting the roof, and embellished with grotesque corbells. There are two district churches at the places above mentioned, and a handsome Roman Catholic church, erected by the Earl of Shrewsbury in 1846, at the cost of £60,000, from designs by Pugin. It is in the pointed style of architecture, with a spire nearly 200 feet high, and contains a fine altar-piece. The Independents, Wesleyans, New Connexion, and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. About 4 miles from the town are the ruins of Croxden Abbey, founded in 1176 for monks of the Cistercian order. There is a National school, and charities to the value of about £65 per annum. The wakes and races are held during the week following the 1st September.

CHEADLE, a par. in the hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Stockport, and 8 from Manchester. It is a station on the Manchester, Crewe, and Chester, and the Manchester, Buxton, and Macclesfield sections of the London and North-Western railway. The parish is situated on the river Mersey, and includes the tnshps. of Cheadle-Bulkeley, Cheadle-Moseley, and Handforth-cum-Boden. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture, or in the print-works, and in silk-weaving at home; but those who live within that part of the parish comprised within the borough of Stockport are chiefly engaged in the manufactures of cotton and silk. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £635, in the patron. of Sir H. D. Broughton, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is in the later perpendicular style. In 1858, a new church, called St. Matthew, Stockport, was built at Edgeley, for the Peel district, which comprises the hamlets of Edgeley and Brinksway, within this parish, but is included in the borough of Stockport. There is also a chapel of ease to the mother church of Cheadle, at Handforth, built in 1837, and another chapel of ease at Cheadle-Hulme, built in 1863. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have places of worship, and there is a Roman Catholic chapel at Edgeley. There are National schools in the village of Cheadle and at Handforth, and also a small endowed school at Cheadle-Hulme. In the vicinity are many villa residences and several mansions.

CHEADLE, BULKELEY and MOSELEY, tnshps. in the par. of Cheadle, in the hund. of Macclesfield, and borough of Stockport, in the co. of Chester. See CHEADLE.

CHEAL, a hmlt. in the par. of Gosberton, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Donington. It is situated near the hmlt. of Risegate, the river Eau, and the Great Northern railway.

CHEAM, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Wallington, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles from Epsom, and 5 from Kingston. It is a railway station on the London, Croydon, and Leatherhead section of the Brighton and South Coast line. It was given by Athelstan to the monks of Canterbury, and afterwards passed to the Lumley family, who built the old manor-house. About half-a-mile to the S.W. of the village formerly stood the magnificent palace of Nonsuch, the erection of which was commenced by Henry VIII., and completed by Henry, Earl of Arundel; it became the favourite seat of Queen Elizabeth, and was kept up as a royal residence by James I., who purchased for it the library of the Lumleys, thus laying the foundation of the King's Library, now in the British Museum. After the decapitation of Charles I., it came into the possession of Algernon Sydney, and at the Restoration was granted to the Duchess of Cleveland, who pulled down the building and disparked the land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £559, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Dunstan, is a handsome and ancient structure, and contains monuments and brasses to the Lumley family, &c. The register commences 155[illegible]. Here are National schools for both sexes. Five out of six rectors of this parish became bishops between the years of 1581 and 1662. Lloyd, the antiquary, resided here at one period. Gilpin, who wrote the "Tour in search of the Picturesque," kept a school here, and in the churchyard lie the remains of Lady Lumley, who translated the "Iphigenia" of Euripides, and some of the works of Isocrates into English. The chief residence is Cheam House, a seat of the Antrobus family.

CHEAPSIDES, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Howdenshire, and union of Howden, in the East Riding of the co. of York, about 7 miles from Howden.

CHEARSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, in the co. of Bucks, 4 miles N.E. of Thame, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Aylesbury railway station. It is situated on a branch of the river Thame. This place is supposed to be the Cerdicesleagh of the Saxon Chronicle, where the Britons were defeated, in 571, by Cerdic and Cynric. Several skeletons have been turned up at the intersection of the trackways from Crendon, Chilton, Winchendon, and Cuddington. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £68, in the patron. of Miss Grubbe. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a neat stone edifice, with a tesselated altar floor, an ancient carved font, and several brasses. The Baptists have a place of worship.

CHEBSEY, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 1½ mile S. of Norton Bridge station of the North-Western railway, and 2 E. of Eccleshall, its post town. In the churchyard formerly stood a stone obelisk, like that at Draycot. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £285, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield. The church is an old Gothic edifice, dedicated to All Saints.

CHECKENDON, or CHAKENDEN, a par. in the hund. of Langtree, in the co. of Oxford, 7 miles W. of Henley-upon-Thames, its post town, and 4½ from the Goring railway station on the Great Western line. It is situated under the Chiltern hills, and the village is small and straggling. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £555, in the patron. of University College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient edifice in the Norman style of architecture, and possesses some ancient brasses. There are several small charities for clothing the poor.

CHECKLEY, a par. in the south div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 35 miles from Macclesfield, 53 from Manchester, and 1½ N.E. of Leigh station on the Crewe, Stoke, and Uttoxeter branch of the North Staffordshire line. It is situated on the river Tean, and includes the tnshps. of Madeley-Holme, Nether Tean, and Upper Tean. The living is a rect.* annexed to the cur. of Hollington, val. together, £576, in the patron. of Edward Philips, Esq. The church of St. Mary and All Saints, is an ancient and handsome building of the Gothic style of architecture, possessing a tower and stained-glass windows. Three stones in the shape of pyramids are to be seen in the churchyard, inscribed with rude figures, which Gough conjectures to be Danish funeral monuments, but which tradition asserts to have been erected to the memory of as many bishops who were killed in an engagement between the Danes and Saxons. The charities produce about £194, chiefly the interest of £4,000 left by John Philips, in 1810, for the benefit of the poor. The lord of the manor is the Rev. William Hutchinson.

CHECKLEY, and CHECKLEY GREEN, hmlts. to the par. of Mordiford, in the co. of Hereford, 6 miles E. of Hereford. Part of the land is laid out in hop grounds, and adjoins the river Lug, which here falls into the Wye. In the vicinity is Ethelbert's camp.

CHECKLEY-CUM-WRINEHILL, formerly known s CHECKLEIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, n the hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 5 miles . of Basford railway station on the London and North-Western line, and 7 from Nantwich. Checkley Hall is ow used as a farmhouse. Sir H. D. Broughton is lord f the manor.

CHEDBURGH, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, in the o. of Suffolk, 5 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post own. The Great Eastern railway passes within a few niles of the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. f Ely, val. £150, in the patron. of the Marquis of Bristol, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1842, and is a handsome struc- ure in the decorated style of architecture. The register lates from 1538. There is an endowed school for both exes, and the charities amount to about £8 per annum.

CHEDDAR, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, in he co. of Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Axbridge station of he Great Western railway. It is situated under the Mendip hills, on the Cheddar river (from which it takes its name—ced dwr, or "hill stream"), which joins the river Axe. This village, noted for its cheese, was formerly a considerable market town, and the old market cross is till standing. Alfred the Great had a hunting-seat here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £203, in the patron. of the Dean and Chap- er of Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is spacious building with a Gothic tower, and contains rasses to the Cheddar family. The register commences n 1687. Here are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, also National chools. The annual val. of the charities is about £180. Owing to the declivity of the Mendip hills, the cenery is most beautiful. In the Cheddar cliffs one of he many chasms extends almost a mile in length, the walls of which rise more than 400 feet perpendicularly. About 1840, a beautiful stalactite cave was discovered.

CHEDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, n the co. of Bucks, 6 miles S. of Tring, its post town, nd 2 N.W. of Ivinghoe. It is a railway station on the London and North-Western line, where the Aylesbury branch turns off. The Grand Junction canal intersects he parish, which contains the hmlts. of Seabrook and heddington Hill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £233, in the patron. of Earl Brownlow. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a well-built edifice, in the perpendicular style of architecture, and contains an ancient pulpit. The charities amount to £12 per annum. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels, and there are National schools for both sexes, besides a plaiting school. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor.

CHEDDINGTON, a vil. in the par. of Ivinghoe, in the co. of Bucks, 5 miles S. of Leighton Buzzard.

CHEDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster Forum, in the co. of Dorset, 4½ miles S.E. of Crewkerne, its post town, and 3 N. of Beaminster. It is situated on the river Axe, and commands a beautiful prospect. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £128, in the patron. of William T. Cox, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a modern edifice in the Elizabethan style. Here are traces of a Roman camp.

CHEDDLETON, a par. in the northern div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 16 miles from Macclesfield, 35 from Derby, and 7 N. of Cheadle. It is a station on the London and North-Western line, and is beautifully situated, overlooking the river Churnet, Caldon canal, and Churnet Valley railway. It includes the tnshps. of Basford, Rownall, Wetley Rocks, and Cunsall, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as held by William, under the Earl of Arundel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £160, in the patron. of the Rev. Edward Powys. The church, dedicated to St. Edward, is an ancient Gothic structure. Here the Methodists have a chapel, and the Wesleyans a Sunday school for both sexes. There is likewise a National school for boys and girls, which is endowed with the interest of £200, left by James Whitehall in 1724, and an annual rent of £5, left in 1814 by John Bagnall. There are several gifts and charities. There is a fair on the 5th May, and first Thursday in November at Cellar Head. The wakes are held on the fourth Sunday after the last day of September.

CHEDDON-FITZPAINE, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles N.E. of Taunton. The village is situated near the Bristol and Exeter railway, the Taunton and Bridgwater canal, and the river Tone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £584, in the patron. of J. A. Warre, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a beautiful edifice, and was restored in 1861. The charities amount to about £7 10*s.* per annum. Here is a school for both sexes. The lord of the manor is John H. Warre, Esq.

CHEDGLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Crudwell, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles N. of Malmesbury.

CHEDGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, in the co. of Norfolk, ½ mile N. of Loddon, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Norwich. It is situated on a branch of the river Yare. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £231, in the patron. of Sir W. B. Proctor, Bart., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with curious thatched roof, Norman doorways, beautiful stained-glass windows, and register commencing in 1501. There is a National school for both sexes. A school-house and residence has lately been erected by the assistance of the Committee of Privy Council for Education.

CHEDISTON, or CHESTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles W. of Halesworth, its post town and railway station. Part of the parish is unenclosed, and there are 30 acres of town lands. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Halesworth, in the dioc. of Norwich, in the patron. of Mrs. Jos. Badeley. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient building. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The charities amount to about £49 per annum. F. J. Ridsdale and J. Crabtree, Esqrs. are lords of the manor. Chediston Hall, the seat of Thomas Rant, Esq., is a fine edifice of the Elizabethan style.

CHEDWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles N.E. of Northleach, its post town, and 7 from Cirencester. The Swindon and Cheltenham section of the Great Western railway passes within a few miles. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £302, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a beautiful sculptured stone pulpit. The Independents have a chapel. The Howe family took the title of baron from this place. A Roman bath was discovered in 1760, and there is a barrow on the hills.

CHEDZOY, a par. in the hund. of North Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles E. of Bridgwater station on the Great Western railway. The living of this parish was formerly held by Bishop Nikke and A. Pascal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £480, in the patron. of the Rev. G. O. Mullens. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient building in the Gothic style of architecture, and possesses a register of early date. There is a parochial school for both sexes, supported by the rector. Near this place the battle of Sedgmoor was fought, and in one of the buttresses of the church may be seen a whetstone, said to have been used to sharpen axes for that engagement. In the possession of the rector are some swords and coins found on the battlefield, and near the church earthen urns and fibula have been discovered.

CHEEKPOINT, or BOLTON, a vil. in the par. of Faithleg, in the bar. of Gualtier, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Barrow and Suir.

CHEESACOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Okehampton, in the co. of Devon. It is situated in a pleasantly wooded country.

CHEESDEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Spotland, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles W. of Rochdale.

CHEESE BAY, a natural harbour on the N.E. of the Island of North Uist, Scotland. It is easily accessible from the S.E., and affords protection to the largest vessels.

CHEESEBURN-GRANGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, in the north-eastern div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles from the Wylam railway station. Newcastle is its post town. The Hall is a handsome stone building, annexed to which is a Catholic chapel, and is occupied by E. Riddell, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

CHEETHAM, a chplry. in the par. and borough of Manchester, in the co. of Lancaster. It is situated to the N. of Manchester, but may be said to commence in Manchester itself. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Mark, and was, before the Rectorial Bill passed, simply a chapel of ease. There is another church, dedicated to St. Luke; the living is also a rect., val. £258, in the patron. of the trustees. Here the Wesleyans and Independents have places of worship. In Edward III.'s time this was the estate of Sir George Cheetham, and is described as a "little village to the N. of Manchester, which gave its name to the family of Cheetham." Smedley Old Hall, which is situated in this chapelry, formerly belonged to the Cheethams. Of this family was Humphrey Cheetham, who is included by Fuller among his "Worthies of England." He was high sheriff of the county of Lancaster A.D. 1635, "discharging that office," says Fuller, "with so great honour, that very good gentlemen of birth and estate wear his cloth at the assize, to testify their unfeigned affection to him." Having amassed a large property by the cotton trade, he left a handsome endowment for the education of 40 boys, to be selected from the neighbouring towns, and also funds for the foundation of the fine library and college which now adorn Manchester. He further bequeathed £200 to purchase "godly English books," to be chained upon desks in the churches of Manchester and Bolton, and the chapels of Turton, Walmsley, and Gorton. His will is dated 16th December, 1651, and his trustees were made a body corporate by charter of Charles II.

CHELBOROUGH, EAST, or LUCCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Tollerford, in the co. of Dorset, 6 miles N.E. of Beaminster, and 8 from Sherborne. On a hill in this parish are the ruins of an ancient castle, visible from a great distance. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £242, and in the patron. of the Rev. R. F. Meredith, the incumbent.

CHELBOROUGH, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Tollerford, in the co. of Dorset, adjoining the above, of which it formerly formed part. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £88, and in the patron. of Lord Rolle and J. Bragge, Esq.

CHELDON, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, in the co. of Devon, 8 miles S. of South Molton, 5 miles N.E. of Eggesford railway station, and 3 N.E. of Chulmleigh, its post town. It is situated on the river Dart. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £97, in the patron. of the Earl of Portsmouth. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone edifice in the Norman style of architecture. The charities amount to £3 per annum. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor.

CHELFORD, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, in the hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. of Chester, 5 miles S.E. of Knutsford, 8 N.W. of Congleton, and 14½ N. of Crewe. It is a railway station on the Manchester and Macclesfield line, the distance of the station being about 1 mile from the village. The two streams forming the river Peover here unite. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100, in the patron. of J. Dixon, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Werbergh, is in the early English style, with tower and spire. Here is a parochial school for both sexes. The charities, including school endowments, amount to about £30 per annum. Withington Hall, most delightfully situated, is a handsome edifice. The chplry. of Chelford embraces the tnshps. of Chelford and Old Withington.

CHELL, GREAT and LITTLE, two tnshps. in the par. of Wolstanton, in the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles N. of Burslem. The inhabitants are chiefly maintained by the potteries. In a healthy spot in this township is erected the workhouse for the Union of Burslem and Wolstanton.

CHELLASTON, a par. in the hund. of Repton, in the co. of Derby, 4½ miles S.E. of Derby. It is situated near the Grand Trunk and Derby canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure in the later English style, with a handsome tower. The Baptists and Reformed and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship. Here are extensive gypsum mines, which form the chief employment of the inhabitants. The manor-house is said to have been the birthplace of Robin Hood.

CHELLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Willey, in the co. of Bedford, 1 mile S.E. of Harrold, and 8 N.W. of Bedford. It is bounded on the W. and N. by the river Ouse. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect. of Carlton, in the dioc. of Ely, val. together, £370, in the patron. of Lord Dynevor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone edifice. Here the Baptists have a place of worship. The manorial rights are vested in the trustees of the Dynevor family.

CHELLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Bradford, in the wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N.W. of Bradford.

CHELMARSH, a div. of the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop. It contains the pars. of Deuxhill, Chelmarsh, Glazeley, Abbot's Astley, Morvill, Tasley, Highley, Sidbury, North Cleobury, Billingsley, Oldbury, Upton Cressett, Neenton, Middleton Scriven, Acton Round, Sheinton, Aveley, and parts of Quatt Malvern, Chetton, Pattingham, and Quatford.

CHELMARSH, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 3½ miles S. of Bridgnorth, its post town. It is situated on the river Severn, which bounds it on the E. The Severn Valley branch of the West Midland railway passes near the village, and has a station at Bridgnorth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £260, in the patron. of Sir T. G. S. Sebright, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone edifice with tower and fine stained-glass windows. There is a National school. J. Nicholls, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Chelmarsh House.

CHELMER RIVER rises about 3 miles N. of Thaxted, in the co. of Essex, and runs in a S.S.E. direction to the river Blackwater at Maldon, passing in its course through Dunmow and Chelmsford.

CHELMICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Hope Bowdler, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Church Stretton.

CHELMONDISTON, a par. in the hund. of Samford, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles S.E. of Ipswich, its post town. It is situated on the river Orwell, near its mouth. The Great Eastern railway passes within 2 miles of the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £347, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice. The register is modern, 1727 being its earliest date. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels, and there is a National school. A trade is carried on in septaria for Roman cement, which is dredged out of the sea off Harwich. J. Berners, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHELMORTON, a chplry. in the par. of Bakewell in the hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles S.W. of Tideswell, and 7 W. of Bakewell. It is situated at the foot of a high hill. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the ribbon manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £78, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bakewell. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a stone building with a fine spire, built in the year 1111. The Independents have a place of worship, which is sometimes used by the Methodists. There is a parochial school, to which £1 per annum was bequeathed by William Brocklehurst about 1792. In the neighbourhood are two barrows, one opened in 1782 being 80 yards in circuit, and in which were discovered a number of human skeletons in stone coffins. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor. The feast is held on New Year's Day.

CHELMSCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Brailes, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles E. of Shipston-on-Stour.

CHELMSFORD, a hund. in the middle portion of the co. of Essex. It contains the pars. of Great and Little Baddow, Blackmore, Boreham, Broomfield, Buttsbury, Chelmsford, St. James Chignal, Smealy Chignal, Danbury, Fryerning, East Hanningfield, West and South Hanningfield, Ingatestone, Little Leighs, Margaretting, Mountnessing, Rettendon, Roxwell with Writtle, Runwell, Sandon, Springfield, Great and Little Waltham, Widford, Woodham-Ferris, and part of Great Leighs, comprising 81,560 acres.

CHELMSFORD, a par. and market town in the hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, of which it is the county town, 29 miles by road, and the same distance by the Great Eastern railway from London, which passes to the W. of the town, where it has a station and extensive warehouses. It derives its name from an ancient ford over the river Chelmer, near its confluence with the river Cann. In Domesday Book it appears under the names of Celmeresfort and Celmeresforde, and in ancient records as Chelmereford, Chelmesford, and Chelmsford. According to Camden it was the Roman station Canœnium, but later writers have not endorsed this opinion, as there was no direct road through the town until the reign of Henry I., when the Bishop of London built the first bridge over the Cann. The present handsome stone structure was built in 1787. From the time of Edward the Confessor the town and manor belonged to the bishops of London, but in 1545 they were given by Bishop Bonner to Henry VIII., whose daughter, Queen Elizabeth, granted them, in 1563, to Sir Thomas Mildmay, in whose family the manor and most of the land still remain.—The living is a rect., dedicated to St. Mary, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £588, in the patron. of Lady St. John Mildmay, of Moulsham Hall. The church, a spacious Gothic structure, with a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles and surmounted by a lofty spire, was originally built in 1424, but a portion of the walls having given way in 1800, it was rebuilt. The interior contains many interesting monuments, and records are also preserved there. There is a district church at Moulsham, dedicated to St. John, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the rector. The Quakers, Wesleyans, Baptists, Irvingites, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics have chapels in the town, which, according to the census of 1861, contained 1,166 houses, inhabited by a population of 5,513, having decreased in the decennial period, since 1851, by 520.—The town, which is situated in a beautiful valley between the Chelmer and the Cann, consists of one principal street with three or four smaller ones branching off from it. The houses are mostly substantially built, and have gardens behind, extending to the banks of the rivers. It contains many handsome public buildings. The shire-hall, situated in Tindal-square, is a fine stone structure, facing which is the sitting statue in bronze of the late Chief Justice Tindal, by Bailey; the corn-exchange, opened in 1857, has a hall 100 feet long by 45 wide, with a glass roof, also auction and committee-rooms, and a gallery; the county gaol is an extensive structure, capable of holding 400 prisoners; there are also a museum, an archæological society, savings-bank, literary and mechanics' institute, concert and assembly rooms, dispensary, and spacious reading-rooms, capable of seating 2,800 visitors. The town is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water. The fountain was reconstructed in 1841. Besides the stone bridge already mentioned, there are three others—one of cast-iron over the Cann, and two over the branches of the Chelmer.—The trade of the town is chiefly dependent on agriculture; but there are manufactories for agricultural implements, corn-mills, organ and coach-builders, tanneries, and foundries.—Chelmsford supports three newspapers. It is the head of a Poor-law Union and County Court district, and the chief place for the county elections. The county assizes, and quarter and petty sessions are held in the town. The inhabitants have the benefit of a grammar school founded and endowed by Edward VI. in 1551.—It was here that Philemon Holland, the translator of Camden; Dee, the astrologer; Sir William Mildmay, founder of Emmanuel College, Cambridge; and Archd. Plume, were educated. There are, besides free schools, National, British, and infant schools.—The market is on Friday. Fairs are held on the 12th May and November for cattle, and in June for wool. Annual races take place in August on an oval course of nearly 2 miles, at a place called Galleywood Common. Mr. Tuffnell's harriers hunt in the vicinity.

CHELSEA, a petty sessions town, and extensive suburban district of London, locally in the Kensington div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles S.W. of St. Paul's. It is situated at Chelsea Reach, on the N. bank of the Thames, where the ground rises about 15 feet above the level of the river. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Chelched, but emended into Cercehede, and in the Saxon times was written Ceols-hythe, where a synod was held in 785. It was in the 16th century the residence of Queen Catherine Parr and the Princess Elizabeth, who occupied the old manor-house, which afterwards successively became the residence of the Duke of Northumberland, Lord Cheyne, and Sir Hans Sloane, who here formed his collection. The market gardens which surrounded this once quiet village are now almost entirely built over, and the town comprises the two pars. of Upper and Lower Chelsea and part of Knightsbridge. It has many handsome streets and squares, though the greater part of the houses are small, and some of the streets almost exclusively occupied by mechanics engaged in the manufactures of combs, pipes, oil-cloth, soap, or in the breweries. The population of Chelsea in 1851 was 56,538, which, in 1861, had increased to 63,439, with 8,314 inhabited houses.—In former times many of the nobility and gentry had residences here, and in the 17th and 18th centuries there were many public-houses with gardens, which were much frequented. The most remarkable object in Chelsea, and that from which it derives its chief interest, is the Royal Hospital for invalid soldiers, which, with its grounds, occupies more than 50 acres. The site was originally that of Dean Sutcliffe's Polemical Divinity College, the first stone of which was laid in 1609, and was called in the charter of incorporation, "King James's College at Chelsey." This college was appropriated by the parliament during the civil war of the 17th century, and was subsequently given to the Royal Society by Charles II., but it was afterwards restored to the king for £1,300, in order that the present hospital might be erected. The foundation stone was laid by the king on the 16th February, 1682, at the instance of Sir S. Fox, though tradition says of Nell Gwynne. The architect was Sir Christopher Wren, and the building was completed in 1690 at a cost of about £150,000. The front is 790 feet long, with a Doric centre. There are three courts, two of which are spacious quadrangles. In the centre are the chapel and great dining-hall. Mother Ross, who served as a dragoon under Marlborough; Young, immortalised as Fielding's "Parson Adams," Dr. Burney, and others, lie in the burial-ground. The eccentric Monsey was physcian, and P. Francis chaplain to the hospital. The establishment consists of a governor, lieutenant-governor, and other officers. There are generally about 500 in-pensioners, who are provided with clothes, lodging, and diet, besides an allowance of money varying from 8*d.* to 3*s.* 6*d.* a week, according to rank, and who are regulated by military discipline; there are also between 70,000 and 80,000 out-pensioners. The total charge to the country, which is defrayed chiefly by an annual grant from parliament, is about £1,000,000. At the lying-in-state of the body of the Duke of Wellington, in November, 1852, so great was the pressure of the crowd that thronged to the hospital that several persons lost their lives. There is also another excellent institution, called the Royal Military Asylum, in connection with the hospital; it is an extensive building forming three sides of a quadrangle, with a portico and pediment of the Doric order. The foundation stone was laid by the Duke of York in 1801, and it was completed in 1805. It has a chapel and regimental training school, where from 800 to 900 boys, and about 300 girls, the children of soldiers and non-commissioned officers, receive instruction—the boys on leaving enter the army, the girls are apprenticed. This institution is supported by parliamentary grants, and by an annual contribution of one day's pay from the whole army. There is also a normal school for regimental schoolmasters. Barracks for the Guards are in course of erection at Chelsea, under the direction of G. Morgan, the architect; when completed they will be very extensive, and consist of several commodious buildings, the largest of which are intended as quarters for the officers, non-commissioned officers, privates, and married soldiers, accommodation being provided for 1,000 men; there will also be a large church, hospitals, prisons, &c. The exterior was finished in March, 1863. The frontage is about 1,250 feet.—There are eight churches and as many chapels in Chelsea. The church of St. Luke (Lower Chelsea) is a spacious edifice, built in 1824, at a cost of £40,000. It is in the pointed style, and contains a monument by Chantrey of Colonel Cadogan. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £1,003, in the patron. of the Earl of Cadogan. The old church, a brick structure near the river, has two ancient chapels attached, called the Lawrence and More chapels; the former was built in the 14th century, and the latter by Sir Thomas More, in 1522. It contains many highly interesting monuments and brasses to illustrious personages, the tombs of the mothers of G. Herbert and Fletcher the poet; of Boyer, the author of the French Dictionary; of Woodfall, the printer of "Junius"; of Dr. Kenrick, the reviewer; of Dr. Chamberlayne, and of Sir John Fielding, a relative of the novelist, besides many other names of literary note. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £250, in the gift of the Rector of St. Luke's. The parish church of Upper Chelsea, or Hans Town, is in the pointed style of architecture, and was built in 1830. The living is a rect., val. £840, in the patron. of the Earl of Cadogan. Besides these there are three churches, viz. Christ Church, Park Chapel, and St. John's, Kensal Green, in the par. of Lower Chelsea; and three, viz. St. Saviour, St. Simon, and St. Jude, in the par. of Upper Chelsea. There are also many chapels for Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics, with numerous schools and charities; some of these are wealthy and important institutions, as York Hospital, for wounded soldiers; the Western grammar school; St. Mark's training college and chapel for schoolmasters; and Whitelands House for schoolmistresses. Here are likewise the V police station, the Union workhouse, two lunatic asylums, savings-bank, gasworks, and waterworks; these last were established in 1733.—In the burial-ground in King's-road lie the remains of Martyn the botanist, Cipriani, and other worthies.—The Chelsea, Brompton, and Belgrave dispensary was established in 1812; it is situated in Sloane-square, and in 1860 the sick poor who were relieved there numbered upwards of 6,000; the total investments are £1,114 14*s.* 3*d.* Three per Cent. Consols. The Chelsea Home was founded by a few ladies to shelter patients on leaving the Brompton Consumption Hospital,—the number of in-patients in 1861 was 111. —The wooden bridge across Chelsea Reach to Battersea was built in 1771, at a cost of £20,000. Close to it was Beaufort House, the seat of Sir Thomas More, and afterwards of the Paulets, Dacres, Cecils, Villiers, Beauforts, and Sir Hans Sloane, who pulled it down in 1740. The gate, commemorated in an inscription by Pope, is now at Chiswick. The new bridge, in connection with Battersea Park, was commenced in 1851; it is called "Chelsea Suspension Bridge," and is 922 feet in length by 45 feet in breadth; it cost £88,000, or £2 2*s.* 5*d.*, per square foot of surface, being less than two-thirds the cost of Blackfriars bridge, and less than one-fifth the cost of London, Southwark, or Waterloo bridges. The architect was Mr. Thomas Page. The towers are of iron, and the casting of an ornamental character, painted light green, and relieved by gilding. There is also a railway bridge across the Thames, close to the Chelsea Suspension Bridge, designed by Mr. T. Fowler, 900 feet in length, which connects the Victoria station with the Sydenham and Brighton lines. A very large steam-boat traffic has occasioned the erection of three piers, one of which, erected by the Earl of Cadogan, is a handsome structure.—Chelsea Botanic Gardens were founded and bequeathed by Sir Hans Sloane to the Apothecaries' Company for the cultivation of medicinal plants for the benefit of medical students. It consists of 4 acres, and is one of the oldest of existing gardens. The cedars of Lebanon are supposed to be the first known in this county, and are said to have been planted in 1683. The statue, by Rysbrack, of Sir Hans Sloane, who gave the freehold of the ground on consideration of an annual presentation of plants to the Royal Society, stands in the centre of the Botanic Gardens, to which the public are not admitted. Cremorne House, which was built by the Earl of Huntingdon, whose daughter is Steele's "Aspasia," and the gardens, have passed into the hands of proprietors, who have converted the two mansions and grounds of Lots Cremorne and Ashburnham into a public place of amusement, in imitation of Paris gardens. The entertainments comprise concerts, ballets, &c., and dancing. The "original" bun-house, in Jew's-row, was pulled down in 1839. The "World's End," near Cremorne House, was of celebrity; and Queen's Elm, marks the spot where Queen Elizabeth once took shelter.—There are many old seats where men of family or eminence have resided, as the Beachamps, the Berkeleys, and the Talbots. At Monmouth House Gay lived as secretary to the duke's widow and here it was that Smollett wrote his "Sir Launcelot Greaves" and "Humphrey Clinker," and Steele many numbers of his "Tatler." Dr. Hoadley, author of the "Suspicious Husband," lived at Ashburnham House. Bishop Fletcher, father of the poet, Bishop Atterbury, Swift, and Arbuthnot resided near each other in Church lane. Winchester House was the seat of the Bishops down to 1814. In Paradise-row lived Dr. Mead, the commentator, Stackhouse, the learned Mrs. Astell, and the Duchess of Mazarene, whom Charles II. would have married. Sir C. Wager died at Stanley House. The seat of the Carberys was at Gough House. Sir Robert Walpole lived close to the hospital. At Dr. Saltero's house and museum Pennant used to see Richard Cromwell, "a little neat old man with a most placid countenance." The Earl of Cadogan is lord of the manor of Chelsea, and takes from it his title of Viscount Chelsea.

CHELSEA, LITTLE, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Chelsea and partly in that of Kensington, hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, half a mile S.W. of Chelsea. It contains St. George's workhouse, formerly the residence of the earls of Shaftesbury; Chelsea Park, the Pavilion, and the "Goat and Boots" inn, the sign of which was originally painted by Moreland.

CHELSEA MEADOW, an ext. par. place in the par. of St. Mary Plympton, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles E. of Plymouth.

CHELSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Ruxley, a lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles S.E. of Bromley, and 2 from Orpington. Chiselhurst is the post town. It is situated on the high road between London and Seven Oaks. The living is a rect.* annexed to which is the cur. of Farnborough, val. together £876, in the dioc. of Canterbury, in the patron. of All Souls' College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a neatly constructed edifice in the early English style, and contains four brasses of priests of the 15th century. Here are National schools for both sexes, partly supported by contributions. William Warre, Esq., is lord of the manor. There is a small endowment for the repairs of the church, and for the benefit of the poor; also six almshouses and six acres of parland. In the vicinity is Lullingston Park, the seat of Sir P. H. Dyke, Bart.

CHELSHAM, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Tandridge, in the co. of Surrey, 6 miles S.E. of Croydon, its post town, and 2 N.E. of the Warlingham stat of the Caterham branch of the Brighton and South Coast railway. It is situated under Battle-Hill, on which is a Roman camp. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Warlingham, in the dioc. of Winchester, in the patron. of A. W. Wigzell, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure in the early English style of architecture. Here are parish schools for boys and girls.

CHELSWORTH, or CHELLESWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles N.W. of the Hadleigh railway station, and 15 from Bury St. Edmund's. It is situated on the river Brett. The manor anciently belonged to the Howards, and afterwards to the family of De Vere. In 1737 it became, by purchase, the property of Robert Pocklington, Esq., who erected Chelsworth House. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £266, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a handsome and ancient edifice, containing an old fresco of the Judgment Day, which was brought to light in 1849, and a monument to Sir John de St. Philibert. The register commences in 1559. Here is a school for both sexes. M. R. Pocklington, Esq., is lord of the manor. Chelsworth House is situated near the remains of an ancient edifice called The Park.

CHELTENHAM, a hund. in the middle portion of the co. of Gloucester. It contains the borough of Cheltenham, and the pars. of King's Charlton, Leckhampton, and Swindon, comprising 10,810 acres.

CHELTENHAM, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Cheltenham, in the co. of Gloucester, 96 miles from London by road, or 121 miles by the Great Western railway. The Midland railway, which has a station 1 mile from the town, connects Cheltenham with all the N. and W. lines in the kingdom. Cheltenham derives its name from the river Chelt, which flows through the town. It appears from numerous antiquities found in the neighbourhood to have been occupied by the Romans, probably on account of its mineral waters, the knowledge of which was afterwards lost till the 18th century. The town is beautifully situated in a healthy spot, under the Cotswold hills, and was anciently a royal manor. It belonged to Edward the Confessor, afterwards to William the Conqueror, and was exchanged by King John for other lands; the abbey of Feschamp, and the nunnery of Sion successively possessed it, till the Dissolution, at which time it reverted to the crown. Cheltenham is a new borough under the Reform Act, and returns one member to parliament. The town is governed by a high bailiff, constables, and board of commissioners. The population in 1851 was 35,051, with 6,356 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 39,693, with 7,012 inhabited houses.—Cheltenham is a polling place for East Gloucestershire, and a petty sessions town, but has acquired its present importance from the celebrity of its mineral springs, with which it abounds, having no trade excepting a little malting business. The medicinal virtues of the Cheltenham waters were accidentally discovered in 1716, and a visit from King George III., who was directed by his physicians to try the waters, in 1788, established their reputation and brought visitors from all parts of the world. The "Queen of watering places" has since become a fashionable resort. There are four spas—the Royal Old Well, discovered in 1716, with its pump-room, rebuilt in 1803; the Montpelier spa, pump-room, and rotunda; Pitville spa, with its pump-room built in 1824, a very fine building; and the Cambray spa. The waters are all saline, and there are numerous baths. The principal street, the High-street, is about 1½ mile in length, and is interspersed with many handsome ranges of buildings. There are also numerous other streets, squares, crescents, and terraces, well paved, and lighted with gas. Cheltenham is famous for its magnificent hotels:—the principal one, the Queen's, was erected in 1836, at a cost of nearly £50,000. The town contains a theatre, assembly rooms, artists' repository, horticultural society, and several libraries. There are likewise a gaol, county court house, four banks, a savings-bank, hospital, infirmary, dispensary, rural constabulary barracks, almshouses, and many local institutions for the benefit of the poor.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £500, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built about 1011, and is a fine old Gothic structure in the form of a cross. The square graduated tower, which contains a fine peal of eight bells, is surmounted by an octagonal spire, and it has a handsome circular window. There are also the following churches, the livings of all which are perpet. curs. viz.:—St. John's, val. £250, in the patron. of Rev. W. S. Phillips for 40 years; St. Paul's, val. £300, in the patron. of the Rector of Cheltenham; St. James's, val. £250, in the patron. of the trustees for 40 years; Christ Church, val. £400, in the same patron.; St. Peter's, val. £150, in the patron. of the trustees; St. Luke's, val. £350, and likewise one (Trinity) chapel, both in the patron. of the rector. There are also places of worship for Baptists, Independents, the Society of Friends, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, Mormonites, Jews, and Roman Catholics. The principal educational establishment is Cheltenham College, situated in the Bath-road; the building, which is in the Tudor collegiate style, was erected in 1843, with a pinnacled frontage of 240 feet, tower 97 feet, hall 90 feet by 45 feet, lecture-room 40 feet by 32 feet, and the principal windows 35 feet high and 20 feet wide. The number of pupils in 1863 amounted to about 600. The government of the college is vested by the shareholders in a board of directors. The free grammar school, founded by Richard Pate towards the end of the 16th century, is situated in High-street. It has an income of about £800, with ten scholarships and exhibitions at Oxford, There is also a Normal Training College, built in the early pointed style, at a cost of about £12,000. From this college, masters and mistresses are supplied to schools in all parts of the kingdom, the colonies, and the East Indies. Many National and British schools flourish in this town.—Thirlestone House, the seat of Lord Northwick, in the Bath-road, was once famous for its extensive and magnificent collection of paintings, but these have been recently dispersed, and the house is now closed. Bays Hill Lodge, then the seat of Lord Fauconberg, was occupied by George III. on taking the waters in 1788. Southampton, anciently belonging to the De la Beres, is the Earl of Ellenborough's seat; Charlton Park that of Sir W. Russell, Bart, M.P.; and there are other noble mansions about the neighbourhood. Mr. Jessop's nursery grounds, which occupy about 20 acres, and his aviaries, are a favourite place of resort. —The town supports several newspapers. The present lord of the manor is Robert Sole Longwood, Esq., who purchased it in 1862 for £32,000. The Cheltenham staghounds hunt round here.—Market days are Thursday and Saturday. Seven fairs are held during the year, in April, August, September, and December, for cattle, cheese, &c. The races are discontinued.

CHELVESTON, or CHELVESTON-CUM-CALDECOTT, a par. in the hund. of Higham Ferrers, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles S. of Thrapston, and 2 E. of Higham Ferrers, its post town and railway station. The village is small and straggling, and the inhabitants wholly engaged in agriculture. The par. includes the hmlt. of Caldecott. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Higham Ferrers, in the dioc. of Peterborough, in the patron. of Earl Fitzwilliam. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a neat stone building, situated at some distance from the village. Here are an endowed free school for boys, and almshouses for four poor widows. Earl Fitzwilliam is lord of the manor. There are several small charities.

CHELVEY, a par. in the hund. of Hartcliffe, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles S.W. of Bristol, and 1 from the Nailsea station of the Bristol and Exeter railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £142, in the patron. of J. Cooke, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Bridget, is an ancient edifice in the perpendicular style of architecture, and possesses a register which dates from 1735.

CHELWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles E. of Pensford, and 7 S.E. of Bristol. It is situated on the road to Wells. Coal has been found in the parish, which is well wooded. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient stone edifice, not long since restored. The charities amount to £87 per annum.

CHELWORTH, a tythg. in the par. of Cricklade, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile S.W. of Cricklade.

CHELWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Crudwell, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles N.E. of Malmesbury.

CHENEY LONGVILLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wistanstow, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Church Stretton.

CHENIES, or CHENEYS, a par. in the hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Bucks, 4½ miles E. of Amersham, and 4 N. of Rickmansworth, its post town. The North-Western railway passes within a few miles of the village, and has a station at King's Langley. Chenies is a pretty rural village, situated on the brow of a steep hill, at the foot of which runs the river Chess, one of the numerous mill-streams which intersect Buckingham and Hertford shires. The manor has for many generations belonged to the Bedford family, who succeeded the Chenies in 1539. John Russell, ancestor of the present Duke of Bedford, was raised to the peerage by the title of Baron Russell of Chenies, which title is still borne by his descendants. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £380, in the patron. of the Duke of Bedford, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure in good repair. Adjoining the church is the Russell Chapel, built in 1562, which contains monuments to the illustrious Lord William Russell (beheaded in 1683), and his wife. There is also a very chaste statuary tablet to the memory of the late Lady Ribblesdale, first wife of Earl Russell, bearing the simple emblem of a plucked flower. The charities amount to £70 per annum, exclusive of 10 almshouses for poor women, endowed by the Countess of Warwick in 1603. The Baptists have a chapel, and there are National, infant, and industrial schools. There are several gentlemen's seats in the neighbourhood, among which may be mentioned the Manor House, anciently occupied by Lord Chenies.

CHEPSTOW, a par., seaport, and market town, in the upper div. of the hund. of Caldicott, in the co. of Monmouth. It is situated in a beautiful spot on the right bank of the river Wye, 135 miles by road and 141½ by the Great Western and South Wales railways from London. Anciently the town was strongly fortified, and the fine ruins of its Norman castle, Castellum de Estrighoil, or Strigul, of Domesday, are still in existence, and partially occupied. This castle is said to have been built about the time of the Conquest by W. Fitz-Osborne, Earl of Hereford; the Duke of Beaufort, who takes the title of Baron Herbert from it, inherits it through the Clares and Plantagenets. The ruins consist of four courts, besides a central building, and extend a considerable distance along a precipitous cliff. The entrance is by a gateway between two large round towers. The area of the castle is above three acres. In 1646 Sir Nicholas Kemys, at the head of a small band of royalists, defended it against Cromwell, and not until Kemys and 40 of his followers were slain, and their provisions were exhausted, did the garrison surrender. Henry Marten, one of the judges who assisted at the trial of Charles I., was confined for upwards of 20 years in Chepstow Castle, where he died, and was buried in Chepstow church. The population in 1851 was 4,295, with 723 inhabited houses, which, in 1861, had decreased to 3,364, with 638 inhabited houses. Chepstow Poor-law Union contains 38 parishes and townships, with an area of 64,930 acres. There are no manufactures in the town, but many of the inhabitants are employed in shipbuilding, and there is a good export trade. For large vessels the Wye is navigable to Chepstow bridge; barges go up the river as far as Hereford. From the narrowness and depth of the channel, the tide rises suddenly and to a great height. Chepstow is built on a hill, which, rising with a gentle slope from the river, has a picturesque appearance. The bridge, built of iron in 1816 upon five arches, is a handsome structure. The railway bridge over the Wye is tubular in form, but open at the top on the Gloucestershire side, while the rail runs upon arches on the Monmouthshire side, to prevent the navigation of the river being impeded. The streets are well paved, and the town is lighted with gas. The living is a vic.* in the archdeac. of Monmouth, and dioc. of Llandaff, val. £178, in the patron. of E. Bevan, Esq., and Mrs. Burr alternately. The church is of Norman erection, and originally belonged to the priory of Chepstow; it has lately been restored and enlarged to accommodate 1,600 persons. It contains tombs of Henry Earl of Worcester, Marten the regicide, and several handsome monuments. There are also chapels for Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Independents, Irvingites, and Baptists. The town possesses a market-house, a theatre, assembly rooms, choral society, literary institution, horticultural society, two banks, and a savings-bank, besides Clayton's school, a free school for 12 boys, a National school, Powis' almshouses, Montague's hospital, and a custom-house. In the neighbourhood of Chepstow are Hardwicke House, the seat of the Bishop of Llandaff, St. Kynemark's Priory, St. Lawrence's Chapel, and the grounds of Piercefield, the beautiful seat of N. Wells, Esq. Numerous picnic parties resort to Wyndcliff, a rock 970 feet high, rising precipitously from the banks of the Wye, and commanding very fine views of great extent. Five miles from Chepstow are the noted and picturesque ruins of Tintern Abbey. All the country round about is beautiful and interesting. Wednesdays and Saturdays are market days. Fairs are held on Whitsun Friday and Saturday, the Saturday before the 20th June, the 1st August, and the Friday before the 29th October; also the last Monday in the month for horses, cattle, &c.

CHEQUER, a ward in the par. of St. Margaret, in the borough of King's Lynn, in the co. of Norfolk.

CHERHILL, a par. in the hund. of Calne, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles S.E. of Calne, its post town, and 8 N. of Devizes. This place was held some time by the Beauchamp family. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient edifice, but in good preservation. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship, and there is a National school. On the hill-side, and visible for some miles round, is the figure of a horse, 157 feet long, cut in the chalk, which was executed about 1780 at the cost of Christopher Allsop, an eminent physician of Calne. Near it is a monument in honour of the birth of the Prince of Wales, erected by Lord Lansdowne. W. Heneage, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHERINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, about 4 miles S.E. of Shipston-on-Stour, its post town, and 8 from Chipping-Norton. It is situated near the river Stour and the Great Western railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £259, in the patron. of Daniel Turner, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a stone edifice with a tower, in the mixed style of architecture. Cherington House, the seat of William Dickins, Esq., the magistrate of the Warwickshire quarter sessions, is a fine stone building.

CHERITON, a par. in the hund. of Folkestone, lath of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles W. of Folkestone, and 2½ N.E. of Hythe, its post town. The South-Eastern line passes at a short distance from the village, and has a station at Folkestone. The living is a rect.* annexed to which is the vic. of Newington, val. together, £657, in the dioc. of Canterbury, and in the patron. of Rev. J. Brockmann. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is partly in the Saxon style, and contains brasses and monuments, some being to the memory of the Brockmann family. Here are National schools for both sexes. The parish contains Sandgate coastguard station.

CHERITON, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, in the co. of Glamorgan, 12 miles W. of Swansea. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Burry and Loughor. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £150, in the patron. of the Prince of Wales. The church, dedicated to St. Catwg, is an ancient edifice. Here are traces of Beville Castle.

CHERITON, a par. in the hund. of Fawley, in the co. of Hants, 7 miles to the E. of Winchester, and 2 miles to the S. of New Alresford, its post town. It includes the tything of Beauworth, and was the scene of a battle in 1644 between the royalists and parliamentarians. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the curs. of Kilmeston and Brightsum annexed, £1,192, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a modern Gothic building with plain tower. Mrs. Godrich bequeathed a sum of money, which now produces about £16 per annum, to be distributed in bread and clothing: and the Rev. Morrant Jones an amount which returns £12 per annum for the instruction of poor children.

CHERITON-BISHOP, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, in the co. of Devon, 10 miles W. of Exeter, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Crediton railway station, on the North Devon branch of the London and South-Western line. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £421, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient building in the perpendicular style of architecture. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The charities produce about £23 per annum. Here is a private school for both sexes. The lord of the manor is R. L. Pennell, Esq., who resides at Venbridge House in this parish.

CHERITON FITZPAINE, a par. in the hund. of West Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Crediton, its post town and railway station, and 10 N.W. of Exeter. It is situated near a branch of the river Creedy, and includes the tythgs. of Bradley and Fulford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £710, in the patron. of the Rev. W. H. Arundell. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice in the Gothic style of architecture. The Independents have a place of worship, and there is a free school for both sexes. The value of the charities distributed yearly amounts to £84. The freeholders are the lords of the manor.

CHERITON, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, and union of Wincanton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles from Wincanton, and 25 from Westbury station on the Great Western railway. The living is a rect. in the archdcn. of Wells, and dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £200, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Gatehouse, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Abbot's charities produce £8 per annum.

CHERITON, SOUTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsington, hund. of Horethorne, in the co. of Somerset, half a mile to the S. of North Cheriton.

CHERRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Longtree, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles N. of Tetbury Road station on the Great Western railway, and 8 from Cirencester. Tetbury is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £176, in the patron. of the Rev. W. George. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. Professor Trapp, a translator of Virgil, was a native of this place.

CHERRINGTON, CHIRTON, or CHURTON, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles S.E. of Devizes. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £190, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a handsome structure in the Norman style of architecture. It contains a beautiful font. Here is a National school. The manorial rights are vested in the Heytesbury Trustees.

CHERRINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Egmond, Newport div. of the hund. of South Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles W. of Newport.

CHERRY BANK, a vil. in the par. of East Church, in the co. of Perth, Scotland.

CHERRY BURTON. See BURTON CHERRY, Yorkshire.

CHERRY HINTON, a par. in the hund. of Flendish, in the co. of Cambridge, 2 miles S.E. of Cambridge, its post town. It is a station on the Cambridge and Newmarket branch of the Great Eastern line, and is pleasantly situated under the Gogmagog hills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £164, in the patron. of Peter House, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice in the early English style, and contains monuments and an ancient font. The register, the earliest date of which is 1538, is in good preservation. Here are National schools for both sexes, with a small endowment. The charities amount to about £12 per annum. Not far from the village is the reservoir and engine-house of the Cambridge waterworks. Captain Pearce, St. Thomas's Hospital, and St. Peter's College hold the manorial rights. There are several beautiful seats, including Manor-up-Hall, Rectory Farm Hall, Nether Hall, and the residence of J. Oakes, Esq. A pleasure fair is held in the first week of October.

CHERRY-TREE HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Sheffield, in the southern div. of the wap. of Strafforth, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

CHERRY WILLINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 1 mile N. of the Washingboro' station, and 3 miles E. of Lincoln, its post town. It is situated on the river Witham. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £95, in the patron. of Messrs. Cook, Gordon, and Ellis. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a fine building in the Grecian style of architecture. The lord of the manor is Sir G. J. Heathcote, M.P.

CHERTSEY, a par. and market town in the second div. of the hund. of Godley, in the co. of Surrey, 21½ miles by the South-Western railway from London. It is situated on the banks of the Thames, and was a place of considerable importance in the early Saxon times, being a seat of the South Saxon kings. It is called by Bede Cerotesei, or Cerotesi insula, which would seem to imply that it was at this period surrounded by the Thames, and must since have undergone a considerable geological change, as at present it has no appearance of having been an island. Much of its importance was derived from a Benedictine abbey, which was founded in 666 by Frithwold, governor of Surrey, under Wulphere, King of Mercia, whose original grant is still in existence, and curiously illustrates the intellectual condition of the highest nobility of that time—"I Frithwold, who am the giver, together with the Abbot Erkenwald, on account of my ignorance of letters, have expressed my consent with the sign of the cross." The abbey was dedicated to St. Peter, but was pillaged and burnt by the Danes. Some ruins of the abbey, refounded by King Edgar about 964, on the site of the former one, still remain, being part of a wall which forms the boundary of an orchard.—The chief trade of Chertsey is in malt and flour, but silk, coarse thread, iron-hoops, and brooms are manufactured in the town, which also carries on a considerable traffic in the agricultural produce of the surrounding district. The population of Chertsey in 1851, including the hamlets of Addlestone, Botleys with Lyne, and Longcross, was 5,755, which in 1861 had increased to 6,589, distributed in the following proportion:—the town of Chertsey 3,066, inhabiting 578 houses; Addlestone, 2,[illegible]; Botleys and Lyne, 494; and Longcross, 159.—Chertsey stands on a slip of land between the Thames and a small stream which issues from Virginia Water. A stone bridge, built in 1785 at a cost of £13,000, here connects the counties of Surrey and Middlesex. The town is irregularly built; the streets are paved and lighted with gas; and the curfew bell tolls from Michaelmas to Lady Day at 8 o'clock.—Chertsey is governed by a bailiff, under letters patent from the Exchequer, and exercises a separate jurisdiction extending over the hundred. It is a polling place for the county and a petty sessions town, and contains a handsome townhall, completed in 1851, a literary and scientific institution, two banks, and a savings-bank. An agricultural society is kept up, and County Court is regularly held in the town. The lord of the manor holds a court-leet on Whit Tuesday, when headboroughs and other officers are appointed; and a court-baron is held on the following day. It is also the head of a Poor-law Union of 9 parishes and townships. —The living is a vic.* in the archdeac. of Surrey, and dioc. of Winchester, val. £250, in the patron. of the Haberdashers' Company and the Governors of Christ's Hospital alternately. The vicarage-house was rebuilt in 1857. The parish church is a handsome structure, situated in the centre of the town, and, with the exception of the chancel and tower, was rebuilt in 1808. The tower contains a fine peal of eight bells, one of which belonged to the abbey, and has this inscription on it—"Ora mente pia pro nobis virgo Maria." The church contains monuments to the Mawbeys of Botleys Park, and a cenotaph of the great statesman and orator, Charles James Fox, and his widow, whose seat was at St. Anne's Hill, which commands a beautiful view of the valley of the Thames as far as Richmond, and has a holy well and the remains of a chapel near it. There are also three district churches, the livings of which are perpet. curs.: that at Addlestone, val. £150; Botley and Lyne, val. £100, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester; and that of Longcross, in the patron. of W. Tringham, Esq. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Independents, and Presbyterians have chapels. There are likewise National schools, founded by Sir William Perkins, and several almshouses—one founded by Cowley, the poet, who died in Porch House, in Guildford-street, in 1667, on which is inscribed the line, "Here the last accents flowed from Cowley's tongue." Hardwick House, now a farm, was the residence of Henry VI. in his infancy, who was buried in the abbey, but afterwards removed to Windsor. The mansions and villas of the gentry around Chertsey are numerous; among the principal are Lyne Grove, Fox Hill, Botleys Park, Ottershawe Park, and St. Anne's Hill.—The market is held on Wednesdays, and fairs on the first Monday in Lent for cattle, the 14th May for sheep, and two general fairs on August 6th, and September 25th,—the former was granted by Henry VI., and is known as Black Cherry Fair.

CHERWELL RIVER rises at Charwelton, in the co. of Northampton, and runs in a southerly direction to the Thames below Oxford; the river Snere joins it near Deddington, and the river Ray near Islip.

CHESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Bucks, 3 miles from Amersham, and 5 from Great Berkhampstead. It is situated in a valley on the river Chess, and includes the hmlts. of Ashley-Green, Bellingdon, Chartridge, Ashbridge, Waterside, and Latimer. The North-Western railway passes within a few miles. The river Chess, which gives its name to the place, turns several mills in this parish, and flows down the valley between the high and beautifully wooded chalk hills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £453, in the patron. of the Duke of Bedford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform edifice in the Gothic style. In addition to the parish church there is a new church, erected in 1863, in the hamlet of Waterside, with 400 sittings. The General, Particular, and High Calvinistic Baptists, Independents, and Society of Friends have each a place of worship here. There are British, National, infant, and Sunday schools for both sexes. The town is improving, and is lighted with gas. It contains a townhall, temperance hall, and mechanics' institute. There are also two breweries, a tan-yard, and a silk manufactory. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of shoes, paper, straw-plait, and lace. A great quantity of coarse wooden turnery is made, and a large number of light beech and cherry-wood chairs are sent to London. The County Court is held here once a month. There are some good springs in the neighbourhood, one of which is said to cure scorbutic affections. The lords of the manor are Lord Chesham, W. Lowndes and B. Fuller, Esqrs. Wednesday is market day for corn, cattle, &c., and Saturday for straw-plait, which is made to a considerable extent, and rivals in its fineness the Tuscan. Fairs are held on the 21st April, 22nd July, 28th September, and the second Wednesday in November.

CHESHAM BOIS, a par. in the hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Bucks, 1 mile S. of Chesham, its post town, and 2 N. of Amersham. It is a pretty little village pleasantly situated on the river Chess, and the road from Chesham to London. The inhabitants have the privilege of sending their sons to Lord Cheyne's free school at Amersham. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £117, in the patron. of the Duke of Bedford. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient edifice. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor.

CHESHIRE, one of the sea-side cos. in the N.W. of England, lying between 52° 56′ and 53° 34′ N. lat., and between 1° 47′ and 3° 11′ W. long. It is bounded on the N. by Lancashire and Yorkshire; on the E. by Derbyshire and Staffordshire; on the S. by Shropshire and Flintshire; and on the W. by Denbighshire, Flintshire, and the Irish Sea. Its form has been compared to that of an eagle's right wing extended, as it were, from the Wirrall to Yorkshire. Its extreme length from N.E. to S.W. is about 58 miles; its extreme width from N. to S. about 32 miles. It is about 200 miles in circuit. Its area is 1,104 square miles, or 707,078 acres, and it includes within its limits 103,294 houses, of which 5,420 are unoccupied. Its population is 505,128, according to the census of 1861. There has been an increase of 49,703 persons, or 11 per cent. since 1851, and of 313,128 persons, or 163 per cent. in the last 60 years. The old Celtic inhabitants of Cheshire had, in common with those of Staffordshire, Flintshire, Shropshire, Warwickshire, and Leicestershire, the name of Cornavii, or Cornabii. This, at least, was the Latinised form of it, and it may, perhaps, still be traced in the name of Kinderton, the ancient Condate. Cheshire was included in the Roman district Flavia Cæsariensis. When the Romans abandoned the island, the Britons again became masters; but were compelled to yield this portion of their territory to Ethelfrith, the Saxon King of Bernicia, in 607. In 828, Egbert, King of Mercia, conquered and annexed it to his own dominions, giving it the name of Cestrescyre. About 200 years afterwards it was overrun by the Danes, but recovered from them by Alfred in 877. Chester first became an earldom under Canute, who bestowed it upon Leofric. There were, however, only three earls of Chester before the Conquest, when William gave the county to Hugh d'Avrenches, or Lupus, with the permission to hold it "tam libere ad gladium, quam ipse Rex tenebat Angliam ad coronam." It was constituted a county palatine. The earls of Chester had eight barons holding of them, their own parliament, and their own courts of law. The government of the county continued to be equally independent even after the earldom had become an appanage of the Prince of Wales, but in the reign of Henry VIII. it was made subordinate to the crown. The Cheshire families made common cause with Hotspur, and lost 200 knights and squires at the battle of Shrewsbury. They suffered also terribly in the wars of the Roses, and especially at the battle of Blore Heath, when the Cheshire men were engaged in almost equal numbers on each side. In the Civil War Cheshire was the scene of several engagements. Lord Byron, the royalist commander, defeated Sir William Brereton at Middlewich in 1643, and laid siege to Nantwich in 1644. He was at length put to flight by the united forces of Fairfax and Brereton, and compelled to take refuge in Chester. The whole county submitted to the parliament after the battle of Rowton Moor and the fall of Chester in 1646. A royalist insurrection broke out in 1659 under Sir George Booth, who raised 3,000 men and fought a battle with General Lambert at Winnington Bridge, near Northwich. He was defeated, and afterwards taken at Newport Pagnell, whence he was sent to the Tower.—The surface of Cheshire is generally flat, and the county was formerly called "the Vale Royal of England," from the abbey of Vale Royal, founded by Edward I. There is, however, on the eastern border a range of hills extending into Derbyshire; and on the western side a line of hills extending from Frodsham southwards. Beeston Rock, on which there is a castle, is one of the outlying hills of this range. It is a conspicuous object from every part of the county. There are no forests in Cheshire, for Delamere Forest has no claim to the title; it is a barren sandy tract, covered with heath and moss. The county is not very well wooded, but there are some very fine oaks growing in the hedge-rows.—There are several meres, or lakes; but none of them of great size: Comber Mere, from which Lord Combermere takes his title, is the largest, and is three-quarters of a mile in length. Cheshire is watered by the Dee, the Mersey, the Weaver, the Wheelock, the Peover, the Tame or Thame, the Dane, and the Bollin. The Dee rises in Merionethshire, flows eastward through Denbighshire, past Bangor, Iscoed, and Worthenbury. It then flows N. to Chester, marking for some distance the boundary between Wales and Cheshire. From Chester Bridge it runs in an artificial channel, 3 miles in length, and near Flint Castle it becomes an estuary, 3 miles wide, and empties itself into the Irish Sea. The sands at the mouth of the Dee render the navigation very difficult, but ships of 600 tons may reach Chester by the cut which was made in 1754. The Mersey is formed by the junction of the Etherow, the Tame, and the Goyt. From Stockport to Liverpool it forms the boundary between Cheshire and Lancashire. Between Runcorn and Liverpool it is an estuary of considerable breadth, but at Liverpool its channel is contracted to the width of three-quarters of a mile. About 5 miles further N. it falls into the Irish Channel. Its navigation, like that of the Dee, is impeded by sands at its mouth, but the evil is not beyond the remedy of an excellent system of pilotage, to which Liverpool is mainly indebted for its commercial prosperity. The Weaver was, in 1720, made navigable by a system of locks from Frodsham Bridge to Winsford Bridge. It rises in the N. of Shropshire, receives the Dane and the Peover as tributaries, and itself falls into the Mersey below Frodsham. The Wheelock is a small tributary of the Dane. The Bollin rises in Macclesfield Forest, and falls into the Mersey at Rixton. The Tame rises in Yorkshire and joins the Mersey at Stockport. There is also in Cheshire an excellent system of water communication by canals. The Bridgwater canal traverses about 24 miles of the county, crossing the Mersey at Ashton. The Grand Trunk, or Trent and Mersey canal runs through the centre of the county from Preston Brook past Northwich, Middlewich, Sandbach, and Church-Lawton, into Staffordshire. There is a canal between Chester and Nantwich, which is connected by the Middlewich branch with the Trent and Mersey canal. The Ellesmere canal affords communication between Chester, Nantwich, Middlewich, and Whitchurch. The Macclesfield canal joins the Grand Trunk with the Peak Forest canal, passing by Church-Lawton, Congleton, and Macclesfield, to Ashton-under-Lyne.—The climate of Cheshire, like that of Wales, is moist, but not very cold. The Derbyshire hills on the E., the Welsh hills on the W., and the Irish Sea beyond, produce an annual rainfall far above the average of the eastern counties. The land is consequently well adapted for grazing, and but very little corn is grown. A clause is generally inserted in the leases to the effect that not more than one-fourth part of a farm shall be ploughed, meadow and pasture being more valuable than arable land. The farms in Cheshire are not commonly more than 100 or 150 acres in extent, and the chief produce is the cheese for which Cheshire is famous. The soil is generally clayey or a sandy loam, with a substratum of marl, resting upon the New Red sandstone.—The most important minerals found in Cheshire are rock-salt and coal. The salt was first discovered near Marbury, in the parish of Budworth, in 1670. There are now mines at Witton, Wincham, Marston, and Lawton. The salt is sometimes found white and transparent, sometimes of a reddish brown colour—in the former case it is chloride of sodium, almost pure; in the latter there is a small proportion of oxide of iron present. Many thousand tons of salt are also annually extracted from the brine springs, which were known to the Romans, who from this circumstance named Nantwich Salinæ. The district in which the salt is found at traversed by the Weaver and its tributaries, and the transit is consequently easy. Coal of good quality and in considerable quantities is found at Denwall, in the hund. of Wirrall, and at Worth and Poynton, in the N.E. of the county. The two latter collieries supply Stockport, which is in a degree dependent on them for its prosperity as a manufacturing town. There are quarries of freestone at Runcorn, Manley, and Great Bebington; and of limestone at Newbold-Astbury. Mow-Cop Hill supplies mill-stones. Iron and cobalt have been found at Alderley Edge; copper and lead at Alderley Edge and in the Peckforton hills.—The great increase in the population of Cheshire during the present century may be attributed to the prosperity of its manufactures, of which cotton and silk are the chief. Large numbers of immigrants are attracted by them from Wales and from Ireland. Fustian, calico, tape, ribbons, thread, gloves, and stockings are also manufactured at Stockport, Macclesfield, Congleton, Sandbach, and Knutsford. The mines also afford employment to a considerable number of labourers.—According to Domesday Book there were 12 hunds. in Cheshire, but the county then included portions of Flintshire and Lancashire. It is now divided into 7 hundreds:—Bucklow, Macclesfield, Northwich, Eddisbury, Nantwich, Broxton, and Wirrall. The shire is divided into North Cheshire and South Cheshire, each division returning two members to parliament. The former consists of the two hunds. of Bucklow and Macclesfield, the latter of the remaining five. The county is included in the North Wales circuit, and the assizes and quarter sessions are held at Chester. Cheshire constitutes an archdeaconry belonging to the bishopric of Chester, and includes 7 deaneries and 147 parishes. It has 13 market towns: Chester, the county town, a seaport, and a city; Stockport, Macclesfield, Congleton, Knutsford, and Sandbach, manufacturing towns; besides Nantwich, Northwich, Middlewich, Malpas, Frodsham, Tarporley, and Altrincham. Other important towns are Stalybridge, a portion of which is in Lancashire; Runcorn, a port on the Mersey; Hyde, Sutton, Crewe; the three watering-places of Great Neston, Park-Gate, and New Brighton; and Birkenhead, the great suburb of Liverpool, which lies on the Cheshire side of the Mersey.—There are some remains of Birkenhead Priory, of Rock Savage Priory, and of the castles of Haulton (built by John of Gaunt) and Beeston-rock. There are many tumuli near Prestbury; and in the township of Butley, near the high road from Stockport to Macclesfield, several cairns were discovered in 1808, about 3 feet below the surface. The great sword of Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester, was formerly in Sir Hans Sloane's collection, but is now in the British Museum. It is nearly 4 feet long; its blade is $2\frac{3}{8}$ inches wide at the top, and tapers gradually to a point; the handle is gilt, ornamented with scrolls of foliage and flowers, and inlaid with mother-of-pearl.—Cheshire is divided into nine Poor-law Unions: Chester, Stockport, Macclesfield, Altrincham, Runcorn, Northwich, Congleton, Nantwich, and Wirrall.—Among the natives of Cheshire were Bishop Heber, who was born at Malpas; Bishop Wilson, who was born at Burton, in the Wirrall; Holinshed and Speed. At Nantwich Milton's widow died in 1726.—The principal noblemen's seats are those of the Marquis of Westminster, at Eaton Hall, near Chester; of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, at Cholmondeley Castle; of Viscount Combermere, at Combermere Abbey; of the Earl of Stamford and Warrington, at Dunham Massey; of Lord Crewe, at Crewe Hall; of Lord de Tabley, at Tabley Hall; of Lord Vernon, at Poynton; and of Lord Delamere, at Vale Royal Abbey. There are, in addition to these, many others belonging to the untitled aristocracy of the county, several of which are built of wood and are of great age.—Railways and telegraph wires cross Cheshire in all directions:

from Birkenhead to Chester; from Holyhead and the extreme North of Wales to Chester; from Manchester and Warrington to Chester; from Chester to Crewe, and from Crewe to Stockport and Manchester; from Stockport, by Macclesfield and Congleton, into Staffordshire; and from Chester, by North Wales, to Shrewsbury. The London and North-Western railway and its branches connect all these lines with London and with the North.

CHESHUNT, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Hertford, in the co. of Herts, 2 miles N.W. of Waltham Abbey, and 12 miles from London by road, or 16¼ by the Great Eastern railway, which has a station here. It is an extensive and pleasant village, extending along both sides of the high road, with many detached villa residences, surrounded by gardens and shrubberies. It was formerly a market town, and is called in Domesday Book Cestrehunt. It is still a petty sessions town and chief station of the N division of the metropolitan police. The parish, situated near the river Lea and the New river, includes Cheshunt Street, Waltham Cross, and Woodside. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £401, in the patron. of the Marquis of Salisbury. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome fabric, erected in the time of Henry VI. by Nicholas Dixon, who was for 30 years rector of the parish, and whose tomb, bearing the date of 1448, is still to be seen in the chancel. It also contains four fine monumental brasses, and several monuments to the memory of the Atkynses and Dacres of Cheshunt Park, once the property and occasional residence of Cardinal Wolsey. There is a district church (Trinity) at Waltham Cross, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £160, pat. the vicar. This place has an additional interest from having been the residence of Richard Cromwell, some time Protector, who, on his return from abroad after the Restoration quietly settled in this village, where he resided under the name of Clarke from 1680 till his death in 1712. Not far from the parish church is the old stone cross, recently restored; and the Countess of Huntingdon's College, for 40 clerical students brought from Trevecca in 1792, and now affiliated to the London University. The principal is the Rev. Dr. Harris, and the education provided is of the first class. There is also a free school endowed by Dewhurst with £148 a year. The parochial charities produce £480 a year, to which Beaumont's trust contributes £310. There are almshouses at Turner's Hill for 10 widows, with small endowments. In the vicinity is Theobalds, once the seat of the great Lord Burghley, and now the residence of Sir G. B. Prescott, Bart., who inherits the manor of Cheshunt-Paramount through the Cromwells. There are four other manors within the parish which have branched off since the Domesday Survey, when the manor was held by Earl Alan, the Conqueror's nephew, who commanded the rear of the Norman army at the battle of Hastings, and was rewarded with the earldom of Richmond, and the whole of Richmondshire, to which this manor was an appanage. It afterwards passed to John of Gaunt, and the Fitzroys, and subsequently to the Cromwells. There are still some remains of a nunnery, founded by Peter de Belingey in the reign of Stephen. At the Cheshunt Wash, near Turnford, have been discovered many coins of the emperors Hadrian, Claudius, and Constantine, which were exhibited at the Society of Antiquaries by Dr. Stukeley and Mr. Sawyer in 1724. This discovery, in conjunction with the traces of an ancient camp and a military way towards St. Alban's, and the Roman road of Ermine Street, has induced many antiquarians to fix upon this village as the Roman Durolitum.

CHESILBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Whiteway, in the Cerne subdivision of the co. of Dorset, 6 miles E. of Cerne Abbas, and 8 N.E. of Dorchester, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Piddle. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £254, in the patron. of Lord Rivers. The church is in the Gothic style of architecture, with embattled tower. There is a free school. The village is a meet for the Blackmoor Vale harriers.

CHESILTON, a small hmlt. on the coast of Portland island, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles S. of Weymouth. The Chesilbank, a pebble beach outside the Fleet, stretches from this point to Abbotsbury, nearly 17 miles. The pebbles are of a chalky white, with varieties of jasper.

CHESLYN HAY, an ext. par. place, in the eastern div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Penkridge, its post town and railway station. There are chapels both of the Primitive and New Connexion Methodists.

CHESSINGTON, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Copthorne, in the co. of Surrey, 4 miles S. of Kingston, its post town, and 4 N. of Epsom. The Epsom and Leatherhead branch of the London and South-Western line, passes within a few miles. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Malden, in the patron. of Merton College, Oxford. The church, originally of the 13th century, was restored and reopened in 1854. The charities amount to £10 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes. Henry Gosse, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHESTER, a city, port, municipal and parliamentary borough, and a co. of itself, locally situated in the hund. of Broxton, in West Cheshire, 178¼ miles distant from London by the London and North-Western railway, and 213 by the Great Western, 84½ from Holyhead, 84½ from Birmingham, and 52 from Manchester. It is connected, by the Ellesmere canal, with the Mersey and with Nantwich. It is a bonding port, and is 22 miles distant from the sea.—It does not appear that Chester was a place of any importance before the Roman era. It was then walled round, and was called in the Cymric language Caer Lleon vawr, the "Camp of the Great Legion." It is probably identical with the Deva of the Itinerary of Antoninus, and was called Deunana, or Deva, by the Romans, from being half encircled by the Dee. After many struggles the Saxons finally wrested it from the Britons in 830, the Danes from the Saxons in 894, and again the Saxons from the Danes in 908. It was an important post as a fortress on the Welsh frontier, and as a stronghold against Danish invaders. Edgar received at Chester the homage of six kings in 972. As the story is told by William of Malmesbury, Edgar sat in the prow of a boat on the Dee while the six kings plied their oars. After the Conquest Chester fell to the share of Hugh Lupus, nephew of William the Conqueror, who was created Earl of Chester, and who built the castle, in which were held the courts of the county palatine of Cheshire. From Domesday Book it appears that, at this time, there were 431 houses taxable, and 56 belonging to the bishop, and that it had a "guild mercatory," equivalent to a corporation, with a chief magistrate, called "præpositus regis," or provost. The descendants of Hugh were earls of Chester until the reign of Henry III., when the earldom, being again in the gift of the crown, was conferred upon Prince Edward, whose son, Edward of Carnarvon, was the first Prince of Wales. The title still belongs to the eldest son of the sovereign. In 1159 Henry II. met Malcolm IV. of Scotland at Chester, when the latter ceded the three counties of Northumberland, Cumberland, and Westmoreland, which had been wrested from the English crown. Edward of Carnarvon, the first Prince of Wales, received the homage of the Welsh in this city in 1309. Chester was one of the six cities which coined silver in the reign of William III.—The Chester Mysteries, or plays founded on scriptural subjects, were formerly acted by the city companies in church, and are attributed by some to Randle, a monk, by others to Higden, a poet, who wrote the "Polychronicon." Their date is probably about the 13th century, and they were 25 in number, with a range of subjects including the Creation and the Judgment. Bradshaw, a poet, Molyneux and Brerewood, mathematicians, and Dean Whittingham, the translator of the Geneva Bible, were also natives of Chester.—The city sustained a siege of some length during the Civil War. It was in the hands of the royalists, and was at length compelled to surrender to Brereton, the general of the parliamentary army. It is said that Charles I.

saw, from the Phœnix Tower, the defeat of his own army on Rowton Heath.—Chester is situated on a bend of the river Dee, and is built on red sandstone rock. The plan of the town is commonly compared with that of a Roman camp, the streets intersecting each other at right angles; and it is supposed that modern Chester covers the same ground that was occupied by the 20th Legion—the Valens Victrix; and that the Roman camp has grown, without change of position, into the English city. In the centre of the city formerly stood "The High Cross," which was removed after the surrender of Chester to the parliamentary army. At this point the four principal streets converge. A portion of the cross itself is still to be seen in the grounds of Netherley House. The appearance of the streets—especially of Old Bridge-street and Watergate-street—is very picturesque; the houses are generally ancient, and are ornamented with the gables of the 16th century. The most remarkable feature in the architecture is "The Rows," and this feature would be unique, did not Berne, in Switzerland, share it with Chester. These Rows constitute the ordinary trottoirs, and are level with the first-floors of the houses; the second-floor projects over them and protects them from the rain. In the Rows are the principal shops. The streets are cut into the red sandstone rock to the depth of about 10 feet, the Rows marking the natural level. It has been argued that this fact is additional evidence of the Roman origin of the city—that where the Rows are here were formerly vestibules, and that the shops beneath the Rows were cryptæ and apothecæ. The old walls of Chester are among the most perfect in England; they are more than 1¾ miles in circuit. Though no longer a protection, they afford an excellent promenade to the inhabitants. Two persons can walk abreast on them in the narrowest part, and they command a pleasing view, including the Welsh hills, Wirrall (as the peninsula between the Dee and the Mersey is called), the Beeston rock, and the course of the Dee. There were formerly several towers at intervals along the walls, each within bow-shot of its neighbour; but of these only two now remain—the Phœnix Tower and the Water Tower. The Water Tower, called also the New Tower, was built in 1322. Rings were fixed into the masonry, to which ships were fastened before the sands had made their last inroads upon the channel of the Dee. The tower is, as it were, a monument to the memory of the former commercial prosperity of Chester. It has long been impossible for any vessel to approach it, and it is now not even at the water's edge. The Phœnix Tower was formerly called Newton Tower, and takes its present name from the crest of the Company of Painters and Stainers who met in it. The Phœnix Tower is the last which remains of the ancient fortifications, the Water Tower having been built at a later date and for a different purpose.—Chester has four gates, marking the four points of the compass — East-gate, North-gate, Bridge-gate, and Watergate. The East-gate was the termination of the great Watling Street road, or the Via Devana, as it was here called; it was rebuilt in 1769, and has a principal arch, above which appear the arms of the Grosvenors, and two posterns for foot-passengers. The North-gate was rebuilt in 1810; it was formerly used as the city prison. The Bridge-gate was rebuilt in 1782 at the expense of the corporation. Water-gate was rebuilt in 1775, and the funds were provided from the ancient murage duties. The Dee is crossed by four bridges: by the Old Bridge, of seven arches, which is of great antiquity, but has been several times rebuilt; by the new bridge, to which the Queen (then Princess Victoria) gave the name of Grosvenor Bridge, on the occasion of her visit to Eaton Hall; by the Suspension Bridge, which has been still more recently erected; and by the iron girder bridge of the Chester and Holyhead railway.—There is easy communication by railway with all parts of the kingdom, and the station is one of the most convenient and handsome in the provinces.—Chester Castle is, with the exception of one tower, modern; it is built of stone, and was designed by Harrison. It serves the different purposes of county gaol, barracks, shirehall, assize court, and county court. The shirehall is of noble proportions, and is approached by a portico resembling the Acropolis at Athens. It is semicircular in form, and is supported by twelve Ionic columns. Of the other buildings the principal are the common hall, in which are portraits of the Grosvenor family, and in which the sessions are held; the county lunatic asylum, which stands on an eminence in the Bath-road, and is well designed; the theatre, formerly St. Nicholas' chapel; and the engine-house, built by the Duke of Ormond, in 1680. There is much to interest the antiquary in Chester, both in the buildings of the city itself, and in the Roman remains which have been discovered; amongst the latter are altars, coins, fibulæ, inscribed stones and tiles, a statue of Pallas Armata, and a hypocaust.—Chester has now no great commercial importance, though it had a considerable trade both before and after the Conquest. The navigation of the Dee is difficult, and the advantages possessed by Liverpool and the Mersey render rivalry impossible. There is, nevertheless, a considerable number of sailing vessels and steamers belonging to the port. Chester possesses an iron ship-building yard, tobacco and snuff manufactories, tan-yards, smelting-works, timber-yards, corn-mills, and saw-mills. Ropes, sails, whips, fringe, thread, tobacco-pipes, and woollen hose are also manufactured. —Chester, even in Saxon times, had its trade companies. After the Conquest it received charters from the earls of Chester and from the kings Edward I., Edward III., Richard II., and Henry VII. In 1242 a mayor was elected by the principal citizens assembled in a guild. The power of the corporation seems to have grown somewhat despotic, for in the reign of Henry VIII., the mayor, whose name was Gee, issued an order regulating the dresses of the women and their diet, prohibiting any women between the ages of 14 and 40 from waiting in any hostelry. In 1506 the city of Chester was constituted a county of itself by a charter of Henry VII., which was rescinded in 1660, but restored by Charles II. in 1664. It is divided into five wards, and the corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, sheriff, 24 aldermen, and 20 common councilmen. The mayor is elected for one year, the aldermen for three. The recordership is in the gift of the crown. The sheriff is chosen by the town-council. The borough of Chester has returned two members to parliament since 1541. Under the Reform Act the limits of the borough include the six parishes of the city, and portions of three other parishes, the cathedral precincts, the castle, gaol, and barracks, with Handbridge, Spittle Boughton, and part of Great Boughton. Assizes and sessions are held at Chester, which is the head of the Welsh Circuit, as well as of the County Court and Excise districts. Chester is also a military station, the headquarters of the Cheshire militia, and the seat of a Poor-law Union, which is co-extensive with the city. The municipal and parliamentary limits are also co-extensive. The population is 31,110, of whom 14,898 are males, and 16,212 are females. According to the census returns of 1861, there are 5,971 inhabited houses, 245 unoccupied, and 76 in process of building. The population appears to be steadily on the increase. —The diocese of Chester is in the province of York. It was created by Henry VIII. after the dissolution of the abbey of St. Werburgh, which was one of the wealthiest monastic establishments in England. Though formerly of greater extent, it now includes only Cheshire and the deanery of Warrington. It is divided into two archdeaconries—Chester and Liverpool—and comprises nine deaneries. The bishop has a fixed income of £4,500. The chapter consists of the dean, the two archdeacons, a chancellor, 6 prebendaries, 4 honorary canons, and 4 minor canons. Chester Cathedral is remarkable for its antiquity and its associations, but, externally at least, is of no extraordinary beauty. It has grown out of the church of St. Werburgh's Abbey, to which additions have been again and again made, at different times and in different styles. St. Werburgh may be considered the patron saint of Chester. She was the daughter of Wulfhere, King of Mercia, and her body, which was looked upon as a sacred relic, was removed, in the year 875, to Chester, for security against the Danish invaders. A nunnery was built, and the remains of St. Werburgh enshrined in the church. Chester soon afterwards fell into the hands of the Danes; but was retaken by the Saxons in 908, when Ethelfleda, the illustrious daughter of Alfred the Great, is said to have founded St. Werburgh's abbey on the site of the nunnery. The present cathedral is in length 350 feet; in breadth, including the aisles, 74½ feet. The length of the transept is 200 feet, and of the Lady chapel 65 feet. The length of the nave is 120 feet, and its breadth 41 feet. The height of the tower is 127 feet. The best feature in the building is the western entrance, which is in the florid Gothic style. The bishop's consistory court is on the right of this entrance, and his palace on the left. The greatest curiosity in the cathedral is the bishop's throne, which, if tradition may be trusted, was the shrine of St. Werburgh, or rather, as Pennant considers it, the base on which the shrine was placed; it is very elaborately carved, and adorned with figures of the kings of Mercia. The chapter-house, the oldest portion of the building, dates from the 13th century, and is in the early English style. In the cloisters, which form a quadrangle, is the burial-place of the earls of Chester. In 1724, the remains of the first earl, Hugh Lupus, were dug up; they were wrapped in leather in a stone coffin, and at the head was a stone cross, with his cognizance or crest, a wolf's head, on it.—The living of St. Bridget's with St. Martin's, is a rect., of the val. of £160, in the gift of the bishop. The church is a handsome building, and has accommodation for 1,000 people. St. John the Baptist's is a vic., val. £300, in the gift of the Marquis of Westminster. It is said that the church was built on the site of Ethelfleda's Abbey, which was founded at the beginning of the 10th century. In design it was originally cruciform, and it is in the early Norman style of architecture. It was formerly a collegiate church and the cathedral of the dioc. of Lichfield, of which Chester once formed a part. It possesses some ancient monuments and brasses. Little St. John's is a perpet. cur., of the val. of £230, in the gift of the corporation. St. Michael's with St. Olave's is a perpet. cur., val. £173, in the gift of the bishop. St. Peter's is a rect., val. £120, in the same patron. Partly without the city is the par. of Holy Trinity; the living is a rect., val. £290, in the gift of the Earl of Derby. St. Mary-on-the-Hill is a rect. with Upton cur., val. £400, in the gift of the Marquis of Westminster. The church is in the early English style, and contains some curious monuments; it has also a fine painted window. Lache with Saltney is a perpet. cur., val. £55, in the gift of the bishop. St. Oswald's is a vic. with Bruera, val. £245, in the gift of the dean and chapter. The S. transept of the cathedral is used as the parish church, but it has a distinct parish. St. Paul's, Boughton, is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the gift of the Vicar of St. John's. Christ Church is a perpet. cur., val. £170, in the gift of the bishop. The Roman Catholics, the Unitarians, the Independents, the Wesleyan, New Connexion, and Primitive Methodists, the Welsh Calvinists, the Society of Friends, the followers of Lady Huntingdon, and the Presbyterians severally have chapels of greater or less dimensions.—Chester has a grammar school, which was founded by Henry VIII., and is called the King's school; it is under the direction of the dean and chapter, is attached to the cathedral, and is endowed with one scholarship. The blue-coat school was founded in the year 1700, at the suggestion of Bishop Stratford; a portion of the hospital of Little St. John is assigned to it. It boards 32 blue-coat boys, and receives 60 as day scholars. The school is supported partly by voluntary contributions, and partly by its own revenues. The Marquis of Westminster's free school educates more than 400 boys and girls. The consolidated Sunday school, and working school for girls, serves as a training place for the blue-coat girls' school, to which the scholars are promoted according to merit. The diocesan training school was founded by Bishop Law in 1812, for the education of poor children, natives of the diocese of Chester, and with the object of providing teachers for the National schools. The hospital of Little St. John was founded before the time of Edward III. by Randal Blundeville, Duke of Brittany, for the support of 13 poor and impotent persons. On the same foundation is the chapel of Little St. John. The patronage is in the hands of the local charity trustees.—There are many benevolent institutions in Chester. The General Infirmary was built in 1765; the building faces the Dee, and is well adapted for its purpose. There is also a lying-in charity and a female penitentiary. There are almshouses known as Deane's, Smith's, and Jones's. There are also public baths and wash-houses, which were erected in 1849; a house of refuge, a house of industry, a public library, a savings-bank, and a mechanics' institute, with a museum in the Water-gate. The city is paved with stone and lighted with gas.—The racecourse, called the Rood-eye, Rood-ee, or Roodie, lies between the walls and the river. The course is one of the best in England, and the whole length of it is seen from the walls. Chester has from a very early period been celebrated for its horse-races, and the race for the Chester Cup is now one of the great events in the sporting year. Antiquaries are at variance upon the question of the origin of the name Rood-eye. The most amusing, if not the truest story, accounts for it in the following manner:—There was at Hawarden, in Flintshire, in the year 946, a church containing an image of the Virgin Mary, Our Lady of the Rood, as she was there called, which image had a great reputation for curing all afflictions. Among other supplicants Lady Trawst, wife of the governor of the castle, was saying her prayers, when the Virgin toppled from her pedestal upon the head of her lady-ship, and broke it. The offence was considered so great that the Virgin was sentenced to banishment, and thrown out on the sands of the river. The tide carried her away and landed her safely near the walls of Chester. She was buried with great solemnity by the inhabitants of the city, and the place of her interment was called the Rood-eye.—A new neighbourhood of villas has grown up in Curzon Park, on the S. bank of the Dee, and there are many handsome mansions within a short distance of the city. Eaton Hall, the seat of the Marquis of Westminster, is about 3 miles from Chester. The country round it is unfortunately flat; but the Hall itself is magnificent. It is built throughout in the florid Gothic style. Overleigh Hall, about 1 mile distant, contains many portraits of the Cromwell family.—Chester supports three newspapers: the Chester Chronicle, the Chester Courant, and the Farmer's Herald.—The ordinary market days are Wednesday and Saturday, and the corn-market is held on Saturday. There are cattle fairs on January 29th, February 16th, March 26th, April 23rd, May 20th, July 6th, August 4th, September 3rd, October 10th, November 26th, and December 17th, and fairs for the sale of cheese every month on days fixed by the town-council.

CHESTER, a ward in the co. of Durham, separated into three divs. The eastern div. contains the pars. of Bedlington (in Northumberland), Bolden, Gateshead, Jarrow, Monkwearmouth, Washington, and Whitburn; the middle div., parts of the pars. of Chester-le-Street and South Oswald; the western div., the pars. of Edmondbyers, Lanchester, Muggleswick, Ryton, Winlaton, Whickham, Witton-Gilbert, and Kimbleworth; together comprising 158,160 acres. Chester gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Durham.

CHESTER, or LITTLE CHESTER, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of St. Alkmund, hund. of Morleston, in the co. of Derby, 1 mile N. of Derby. It is situated on the Leeds railway and the river Derwent, and occupies the site of the Roman station Derventio, the Cestre of Doomsday. The wall which formerly surrounded it could be traced in 1721; but the whole of it has been removed by subsequent cultivation. The site measured 600 feet by 700. The living is a perpet. cur., in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop and crown alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, and built in 1849, is a handsome structure the decorated style. There are National schools for both sexes. In the vicinity have been found many Roman coins, and military ways led to Chesterton and Manchester.

CHESTERBLADE, a chplry. in the par. of Evercreech, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles S.E. of Shepton Mallet. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Evercreech.

CHESTER CASTLE, an ext. par. place, in the city and co. of Chester.

CHESTERFIELD, a par., market town, and municipal borough in the hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 21 miles N. of Derby, and 156½ from London by railway. It is a station on the N. branch of the Midland line. The parish is intersected by the rivers Rother and Hipper, and includes the chplry. of Brimington, with the tnshps. of Hasland, Tapton, Temple-Normanton, and Walton, and the hmlts. of Calow, Newbold, Dunston, and Pilsley. The town, which is a place of considerable importance, was, at the time of the Norman survey, only a bailiwick to Newbold, which is now a small hamlet of the parish. It must, however, shortly after have considerably increased, for King John, when he presented it to William de Briwere, or Bruere, gave it an annual fair and two weekly markets. It subsequently became the property of the Wakes and Plantagenets, and is now in the possession of the Duke of Devonshire. In the middle of the 13th century, a battle was fought here between Robert de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, and Prince Henry, nephew of Henry III., in which the former was defeated and taken prisoner. It was also the scene of an engagement during the civil wars of Charles I., in which the Earl of Newcastle routed the parliamentary forces in 1643.—The trade of the town greatly increased after 1776, when Brindley succeeded in constructing the Chesterfield canal, which joins the Trent near Stockwith. This canal, which cost £160,000, is about 45 miles in length, passes through two tunnels, and has 65 locks, with a fall of 335 feet. The principal industries are in lace and broad net making, merino, silk, and cotton manufactures, and mining operations. By the Municipal Act the limits of the old borough were considerably extended, so as to take in parts of Brampton, Newbold, and Walton. The present town comprises an area of about 13,160 acres, with a revenue of £540. It is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. The houses, though irregularly built, are constructed of brick with stone roofs, and are plentifully supplied with water, by pipes which convey it from Holme, 2 miles W. of the town. A council-house was erected in 1849, and the townhall faces the market-place. There are also assembly-rooms, theatre, house of correction, three banks, a savings-bank, cotton, silk, and carpet mills, besides ironworks, potteries, brick-kilns, &c.—The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated in the town. It is a handsome cruciform structure, in the early English style of architecture of the middle of the 13th century, with a twisted spire, 230 feet in height, covered with lead, and has the peculiar effect of appearing to lean on one side from every point of view. In the interior are a carved screen, two altar tombs, and a brass, bearing inscriptions to the Foljambes, who resided at Walton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield and Coventry, val. £357, in the patron. of the bishop. There is another church at the N.W. end of the town, dedicated to the Holy Trinity; it was completed in 1838. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £120, in the patron. of trustees. Besides these churches there are two others in the parish, one at Hasland and the other at Newbold, the livings of which are perpet. curs. in the gift of the vicar. The Roman Catholics and the different denominations of Dissenters have chapels in this parish. The charities are rich and numerous, amounting to £1,400 per annum, including Foljambe's, of £660, for apprenticing and clothing poor children. There are several almshouses, and a Union workhouse erected in 1840. A free grammar school was founded by the Foljambes in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and has an income from endowment of £100 per annum. It was rebuilt in 1710 on the site of St. Helen's Chapel, and is now managed by trustees. Clarke's and Bright's schools have an income of £70, and are now called the Victoria Schools, in commemoration of her Majesty's visit to Chesterfield, in 1843, when staying at Chatsworth House. There are also National, British, industrial, and infant schools. In the neighbourhood of the town are ironstone and coal mines and foundries, in which upwards of 300 men are employed.—Chesterfield is the head of a County Court district, Poor-law Union, and registry, and the seat of a deanery. It gives the title of Earl to the Stanhopes of Bretby, and supports one newspaper, the Derbyshire Courier. There are traces of a Roman way leading to Little Chester, near Derby, which in conjunction with the fact of its being called Ceaster by the Saxons, has led to the supposition that it was once a Roman station. There are still traces of a leper's hospital, founded in the 12th century, besides two chantries and three free chapels. The poet Ince, the mathematician Lucas, and the Nonconformist ministers Oldfield and Wood, were natives of this town. The principal residences are Highfield Hall and Tapton House.—In the vicinity of the town is a racecourse, of nearly two miles in length, where the annual races take place in September. Saturday is the market day, and fairs are held for the sale of cattle and cheese, on the 27th January, 28th February, first Saturday in April, 4th May, 5th July, 25th September, and 25th November.

CHESTERFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Shenstone, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles S. of Lichfield.

CHESTERFORD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, and union of Saffron Walden, in the co. of Essex, 3½ miles to the N.W. of Saffron Walden, and 47½ from London. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway, and was formerly a market town. The village is pleasantly situated on the eastern bank of the river Granta, which, in this part of its course, divides Essex from Cambridgeshire, and is generally called the Cam. In the reign of Edward the Confessor, the manor was the property of Earl Edgar, but at the time of the Domesday Survey it belonged to the king, and had the privileges of a royal demesne. Henry VIII. granted it to the Lord Chancellor Audley, from whose family it passed to the fifth Lord Braybrooke, brother of the late lord. In the certificate of the chantry lands this place is described as "a great toune and populous, having in yt to the number of 500 houseling people and more." The parish now contains a population of 925. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. with the rect. of Little Chesterford annexed, £570, and is in the patron. of the Marquis of Bristol. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a large ancient edifice, and had formerly a chantry attached to it, founded by W. Howden. It contains two brasses, one dated 1530. The charities produce £140 per annum, of which £41 is the endowment of Hart's free school, and £75 the produce of Hill's fund for "refreshing poor persons, giving to any that need a horse or cow, and other acts of charity." In this parish are the remains of an ancient Roman station, covering about 50 acres; till very recently the bounds of the encampment might be completely traced, and portions of the walls are still visible in various places. Its name, however, has been much contested by antiquarians. Horsley calls it the Iciani, a station which Salmon refers to Colchester, while Dr. Stukeley and Baxter consider it to be the Camboricum of Antoninus, an opinion in which Mr. Gough coincides. In its immediate vicinity are remains of several smaller camps, and roads are traced to Chelmsford, Grantchester, and Ixworth. Many coins of the Roman emperors, from Caligula, urns, and other remains, have been found; as also ruins of a Roman villa, at Boroughfield, in 1848, and a temple at Ickleton, by the Hon. Richard Cornwallis Neville, fourth son of the late Lord Braybrooke. A fair is held on the first Friday in July.

CHESTERFORD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, in the co. of Essex, 1 mile to the S. of Great Chesterford. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Great Chesterford. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. It contains a brass of 1462, to the memory of Mrs. Langham. The charities amount to £41 a year. Little Chesterford Park is situated 1 mile E. of the village.

CHESTERHILL, a vil. in the par. of Cranston, in the co. of Edinburgh, 3 miles S.E. of Dalkeith.

CHESTERHOPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Corsenside, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles E. of Bellingham. Near here may be traced the site of a Roman station, situated on Watling Street.

CHESTER-LE-STREET, a par. partly in the middle div. of Chester ward, and partly in the northern div. of Easington ward, in the co. of Durham, 6 miles N. of Durham, and 3 from the Pensher station of the North-Eastern railway. The parish is very extensive, comprising an area of 31,260 acres, with a population of about 20,000, and is divided into the chplries. of Chester-le-Street, Birtley, Pelton, Lamesley, and Tanfield, each with its own church, schools, &c., and the tnshps. of Beamish-Edmonsley, Harraton, Hedley, Kibblesworth, Lambton, Great and Little Lumley, Plawsworth, Ravensworth, Urpeth, Ouston, and Waldridge. In 1821 a bridge was built over the river Wear, which is navigable to this part. In the tnshps. of Tanfield and Waldridge are extensive collieries, which with the iron-works at Birtley and Whitwell are said to employ near 3,000 hands. There are besides manufactories of nails, ropes, and tiles. The parish church is situated in the chplry. of Chester-le-Street. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £377, in the patron. of H. Jolliffe, Esq., and the trustees of Lady Byron alternately. There are besides five district churches (as above). The Independents, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels in the parish. The charities produce about £124 per annum, including £40 belonging to Lumley hospital. This parish has also a share of about £16 16*s.* in the Longstock estate, under Harry Smith's charity. The manor belongs to the Bishop of Durham, who holds a court-leet twice a year. This parish is in the Durham new County Court district, but is the head of a Poor-law Union and Registration district. In the vicinity are Lumley Castle, the seat of the Earl of Scarborough, and Lambton Castle, formerly known as Harraton Hall, once the seat of the D'Arcys, and now the residence of the Earl of Durham. The present castle, built by Bononi, is a modern structure. The Roman way Watling Street passed through this parish, which, according to Camden, was the site of the Roman station, Condercum, but nothing has yet been discovered to confirm this assertion.

CHESTER-LE-STREET, a tnshp. and town in the par. of Chester-le-Street, in the middle div. of Chester ward, in the co. of Durham, 6 miles N. of Durham, and 3 from the Pensher railway station. It is situated in a pleasant valley, W. of the river Wear, and is a very ancient place, being called by the Saxons Cunceastre, or Cuneageatre. In 883, Bishop Eardulph removed hither the relics of St. Cuthbert from Lindisfarne, or Crake-Minster, and erected a church to receive them. Elgeric, fourth Bishop of Durham, rebuilt the church on a more magnificent scale, and expended in its decoration part of the treasure he discovered during the work. It remained the cathedral church for near a century, when the see was removed to Durham. From this time it remained parochial till 1286, when Bishop Anthony Beck made it collegiate. At the time of the Dissolution its revenue amounted to £77 12*s.* 8*d.* The present church is a handsome structure of stone, in the earlier and later English styles of architecture, with a fine octagonal tower on a square base, surmounted by a spire 156 feet in height, considered one of the handsomest in the North of England. In the interior are fourteen altar tombs, with effigies of the ancestors of the noble family of Lumley, of Lumley Castle, from the Conquest to the time of Queen Elizabeth, most of them placed there by Sir John Lumley. In 1771, the town of Chester-le-Street was much injured by an inundation of the Wear, when much property was destroyed. It contains about 490 houses, with a population of 3,000, chiefly occupied in the adjoining collieries and iron-works. By a recent Act this town was made a polling-place for the northern division of the county of Durham.

CHESTERS, a vil. in the par. of Foggo, in the co. of Berwick, 3 miles E. of Greenlaw. In the vicinity are traces of a camp.

CHESTERS, a vil. in the par. of Southdean, in the co. of Roxburgh, 7 miles S. of Jedburgh. Here are the remains of a fort, and of a Roman camp on Watling Street.

CHESTERTON, a hund. in the southern portion of the co. of Cambridge, surrounding the town of Cambridge; it contains the pars. of Chesterton, Childerley, Cottenham, Dry-Drayton, Histon, and part of Oakington, and comprises 16,600 acres.

CHESTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Chesterton, in the co. of Cambridge, 1½ mile N. of the Cambridge railway station. It is situated on the river Cam, and has the remains of Cambridge Castle, of a seat of the priors of Barnewell, and of a Roman camp called Harborough, or Arbury, where coins and other antiquities have been found. It is the head of a deanery, of a Poor-law Union, and of a Registration district, but is within the new County Court district of Cambridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £206, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a commodious and handsome edifice in the perpendicular style. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. There are British, National (for both sexes), and Industrial (for boys only) schools. The asylum of the Victoria Lunatic Society, county gaol, and Union workhouse are here situated, and there is a cemetery for Dissenters of all denominations. The manorial rights are vested in the Benson family.

CHESTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, in the co. of Huntingdon, 5 miles S.W. of Peterborough, and 3 from the Wansford station of the Northampton and Peterborough railway. It is situated on the river Nen, near the ancient Ermine Street. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £430, in the patron. of the Marquis of Huntley, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice in the early English and Norman styles of architecture. It contains several ancient monuments. A single-ditched Roman camp is seen at Castlefield, where a stone coffin, skeleton, and coins have of late years been discovered.

CHESTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles S.W. of Bicester, its post-town, and 11 N.E. of Oxford. It is situated on a branch of the river Ray, near the old British road Akeman Street. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Chesterton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice, with a piscina and sedilia. Here is a free school. The Earl of Jersey is lord of the manor. There is a meet here for Mr. Drake's hounds.

CHESTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile from the Harbury railway station, and 8 S.E. of Warwick. It contains the hmlt. of Kingston. The parish took its name from the Roman station Mediolanum, and near it on the Fosse Way is a Roman camp. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £82, in the patron. of Lord Willoughby de Broke. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. In this parish is a windmill, built in 1632 by Sir J. Peyto, and designed by Inigo Jones.

CHESTERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolstanton, in the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles W.S.W. of Tunstall, and 2 W.N.W. of Burslem station on the Crewe, Stoke, and Uttoxeter branch of the North Staffordshire railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to the vic. of Wolstanton, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a new and handsome structure of the early English style, with a tower and beautiful pire. There are Methodist and Wesleyan places of worship, and a National school. A castle stood here before the Conquest, all traces of which have disappeared. Near here are collieries and iron-works. J. E. Heathcote, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Apedale Hall, a mansion beautifully situated about a mile distant from the village.

CHESTERTON, a tythg. in the borough of Cirencester, in the co. of Gloucester. Here the Fosse Way, Ermine and Icknield Streets met. See CIRENCESTER.

CHESTERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth. In the vicinity are the traces of a Roman camp and military way.

CHESTERTON PARVA, or KINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Chesterton, in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick.

CHESWARDINE, a par. in the hund. of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Market Drayton, and 10 N.W. of the Norton Bridge railway station. It is situated near the Liverpool and Birmingham canal. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £245, in the patron. of E. W. Harding, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1809; it is a stone edifice in the pointed style. Here are free schools for both sexes. The charities, which are chiefly used for purchasing corn for the poor, amount to £87, and there is an endowment of £21 left for repairing the church.

CHESWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ancroft, in the hund. of Islandshire, in the co. of Northumberland (formerly in Durham), 4 miles S.E. of Berwick. It is situated near the coast.

CHETLOP, a river in the co. of Northumberland, rises in Girdle Fell, and forms a beautiful cascade of 70 feet before joining the Reed.

CHETNOLE, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Yetminster, in the co. of Dorset, 6 miles S.W. of Sherborne, its post town. Yetminster is a station on the Wilts and Somerset branch of the Great Western railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Yetminster, in the dioc. of Salisbury, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Here is a National school.

CHETTISHAM, a hmlt. or chplry. in the par. of St. Mary, city of Ely, in the co. of Cambridge, 2 miles N. of Ely, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £65, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

CHETTLE, a par. in the hund. of Monckton-up-Wimborne, in the East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 4 miles N.E. of Blandford, its post town and railway station, and 7 W. of Cranborne. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £180. in the patron. of H. Chambers, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a flint edifice, rebuilt in 1849, with the exception of the tower, at the cost of E. Castleman, Esq., of Allendale House. There are two barrows in the neighbourhood. The principal seats are Eastbury Park and Allendale House.

CHETTON, a par. in the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Bridgnorth, its post and railway town. It comprises the tnshps. of Ewdon George, Ewdon Burnell, Chetton, Faintree, and Cridlon, and the chplry. of Loughton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. with the rects. of Deuxhill and Glazeley, and the cur. of Loughton annexed, £772, in the patron. of T. W. Browne, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient stone edifice, in the early English style of architecture, and contains a brass to Archdeacon Vickers, the late rector. Here are National schools for both sexes. The annual val. of the charities is £21. Faintree Hall is a brick edifice pleasantly situated.

CHETWODE, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, in the co. of Bucks, 4½ miles S.W. of Buckingham, and 9 S.E. of Winslow. The parish belongs to Sir John Chetwode, Bart., whose ancestors held it previous to the Conquest, formerly an Augustine priory stood here, and likewise a hermitage dedicated to SS. Stephen and Lawrence, founded by one of the Chetwode family, who still claim suit and service by prescriptive right over this place and the neighbouring townships anciently included in Rockwood Forest. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to the perpet. cur. of Barton Hartshorn, in the patron. of Mrs. Bracebridge. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Nicholas, is an ancient edifice, and possesses the oldest stained-glass window in England. The glass was formerly contained in the E. window, which was put up in 1240, but part of it having been stolen, the remainder of it was removed to the window of the S. chancel. A tributary of the river Ouse flows through the parish, separating the counties of Bucks and Oxford.

CHETWYND, a par. in the hund. of South Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles N.W. of Newport, its post and railway town. It is situated on the river Mees, and contains the tnshps. of Howle, Pickstock, and Sambrooke. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £705, in the patron. of J. C. B. Borough, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a brick edifice. Here the Independents have a place of worship. There is a free school. The charities produce about £46 per annum. J. C. B. Borough, Esq., is lord of the manor. Chetwynd Park contains a substantially built mansion, and is well stocked with deer.

CHETWYND, a hmlt. in the bar. and co. of Cork, Ireland, near the city of Cork.

CHETWYND ASTON, or FIELD ASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Edgmond, in the Newport div. of the hund. of South Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile S. of Newport, its post town and railway station. It gives name to Viscount Chetwynd, of North Aston, whose family held it before the time of Henry III.

CHEVELEY, a hund. in the S.E. portion of the co. of Cambridge; it contains the pars. of Ashley, Cheveley, Kirtling, and Newmarket All Saints, and comprises 12,867 acres.

CHEVELEY, a par. in the hund. of Cheveley, in the co. of Cambridge, 3 miles S.E. of Newmarket. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £704, in the patron. of the Rev. J. T. Bennet. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice. There is an endowed free school for boys. The charities amount to about £28 per annum. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor, and owner of Cheveley Park.

CHEVELEY. See CHIEVELEY, Berkshire.

CHEVENING, a par. in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 3½ miles W. of the Sevenoaks railway station, which is its post town. It is situated in a pretty spot, and once belonged to the Crevequer family. It comprises the hmlts. of Bessells Green and Chipstead. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £766, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient structure, partly in the Gothic and partly in the early English styles, with an embattled tower, and is in good repair. It contains two beautiful stained-glass windows in the chancel: the one at the E. end being a memorial window to Frederick Perkins, Esq., late of Chipstead Place, in this parish, and is the gift of his son, George Perkins, Esq.; the other, on the N. side, as well as the tablets, were presented by the present rector, the Rev. Thomas Sikes, M.A. There are two handsome windows in the Stanhope Chapel, recently executed by the Countess Stanhope, and also monuments of the Stanhope and other families, including the splendid monumental work of Chantrey, to the memory of Lady Frederica Louisa Stanhope. There are charities left by the Countess of Stanhope, Mrs. Wyndham, and Mrs. Strode, for apprenticing poor children. The register commences in 1561. There are National schools for both sexes. Chevening Place, built by Inigo Jones, and now the seat of Earl Stanhope, is delightfully situated. It was here that the late Earl Stanhope displayed his mechanical genius in perfecting that press which so materially promoted the progress of the noble art of printing.

CHEVERELL, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, in the co. of Wilts., 5 miles S.W. of Devizes. The manor belongs to Heytesbury hospital. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £353, in the patron. of the Rev. R. M. Atkinson, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charities produce about £15 a year.

CHEVERELL, LITTLE, a par. in the co. of Wilts., adjoining the above on the S.E. The living is a rect., val. £405, in the patron. of the Earl of Radnor. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

CHEVET, a tnshp. in the par. of Roystone, in the wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles S. of Wakefield, through which the North Midland line runs. Chevet Hall is a fine building, pleasantly situated in a park, the seat of Sir W. Pilkington, Bart.

CHEVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £396, in the patron. of the Rev. J. White. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure. Here is a National school, erected at a cost of £600. The annual val. of the charities is £22. In the vicinity is Ickworth Hall, the seat of the Marquis of Bristol, who is lord of the manor.

CHEVINGTON, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Warkworth, Morpeth ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Morpeth.

CHEVIOT HILLS, a range of mountains forming the boundary between the cos. of Northumberland and Roxburgh. Cheviot Hill, the highest of the range, has an altitude of 2,684 feet. Carter-bar, traversed by the road from Jedburgh to Newcastle, is the principal pass. These hills are dome-shaped in figure and volcanic in their origin, and afford excellent pasture for sheep.

CHEW, a hund. in the north-eastern portion of the co. of Somerset; contains the pars. of Chew Magna, Chew Stoke, Clutton, Dundry, Norton-Hawkfield, Norton-Malreward, Stowey, and Timsbury, comprising 15,120 acres. The deanery of Chew, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, includes the whole of the hund.

CHEWBENT, a vil. in the co. of Lancashire, 2 miles N. of Leigh. It is situated near the Bolton railway.

CHEW MAGNA, or BISHOP'S CHEW, a par. in the hund. of Chew, in the co. of Somerset, 7 miles S. of Bristol. The parish is watered by a branch of the Avon, and includes the tythgs. of Bishop-Sutton, Knowle, Knighton-Sutton, North Elm, and Stone. This village was formerly a borough, and had an extensive woollen manufactory. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the cur. of Holy Trinity annexed, £634, in the patron. of the bishop and others in turn. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was restored in 1860. It is an ancient stone edifice, with several monuments, stained-glass windows, and a register commencing in 1562. There is a chapel of ease at Bishop-Sutton, and a district church in the peculiar of Dundry, the living of which is a perpet. cur. in the gift of the vicar. The Wesleyans and Baptists have places of worship. There is a school for boys, with a small endowment. The value of the charities is about £35 per annum. Sutton Court, the beautiful residence of Sir E. Strachey, has been lately restored. It is very ancient, a portion of the building being of the period of Edward III. It was here that Bishop Hooper, and John Locke, the philosopher, were frequent guests of their friend, John Strachey. There are other fine residences, amongst which may be mentioned The Firs and Chew Court. At Bishop-Sutton are several coalpits. Here is a reservoir belonging to the Bristol Water Company.

CHEW-STOKE, a par. in the hund. of Chew, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles from Bristol, and 1 S.W. of Chew Magna. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £305, in the patron. of the Rev. W. P. Wait. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone edifice. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a National school, partly endowed. A good library and reading-room was built in 1855. The charities amount to £20 per annum.

CHEWTON, a hund. in the N.E. portion of Somerset; it contains the pars. of Brockley, Cameley, Chewton-Mendip, Chilcompton, Compton-Martin, Emborough, Farrington-Gurney, West Harptree, Hinton-Blewett, Kingston-Seymour, High Littleton, Midsomer-Norton, Paulton, Stone Easton, and Ubley, comprising 31,580 acres. It forms part of the deanery of Chew.

CHEWTON, a tythg. in the par. of Milton, in the co. of Hants, 3 miles E. of Christchurch.

CHEWTON KEYNSHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Keynsham, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile N. of Keynsham.

CHEWTON-MENDIP, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles N.E. of Wells, and 7½ N.W. of Shepton Mallett. It is situated under the Mendip hills. There are several lead-mines and stone-quarries in the parish. About the year 1745 part of the common was enclosed and set apart for the support of a school, the rent of which is now £20 per annum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £61[illegible] with the parochial chplries. of Emborough, Farrington-Gurney, and Stone-Easton annexed, in the patron. of R. P. Philpott, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient stone edifice, with a beautiful tower of Henry VII.'s period. The register commences in the year 560. The Wesleyan Reformers have a place of worship, as also the Wesleyan Methodists at Edgehill. There is a National school for boys and girls. The charities amount to £10 per annum. The river Chew rises in this parish, and from here the Bristol water works are supplied. The lady of the manor is Frances Countess of Waldegrave.

CHICHESTER, a rape in the co. of Sussex. It contains the hunds. of Aldwick, Bosham, Box, Dumpford, Easebourne, Manhood, and Westbourne, and comprises 144,160 acres.

CHICHESTER, a city, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, forming a co. of itself, but locally situated in the hund. of Box and Stockbridge, in the rape of Chichester, and western div. of the co. of Sussex, 7 miles by the Portsmouth branch of the Brighton and South Coast railway from London, and 62 miles S.W. by road, 30 miles from Southampton, and 18 from Portsmouth. Chichester occupies the site of the Roman station, Regnum (or capital of the Regni), where Flavius Vespasian fixed his headquarters and built the walls. The certainty of this tradition is confirmed by the numerous coins and other Roman antiquities which have been found, including the walls of a temple of Minerva. The present walls of the town are said to have been built of the materials of the Roman wall. According to some accounts the city was burnt or destroyed by Ella, in a siege, in 478, but rebuilt by Cissa, King of the South Saxons, who called it Cissaceaster, the city or castle of Cissa. In the time of Egbert it was an important and flourishing city, but it afterwards greatly decreased, owing, in a great measure, to the incursions of the Danes. Milton, speaking of the valour and patriotism of the inhabitants in the reign of Alfred, says "The Danes returning by sea from the siege of Exeter and in their way landing on the coast of Sussex, the men of Chichester sallied out and slew of them many hundreds, taking also some of their ships." They were again victorious in 900 at Rigley Bolton. William the Conqueror made this city the head of a dioc. on removing it from Selsea, about 1070. At the Norman survey it had 238 houses, which were given to Roger de Montgomery, who was created the first Earl of Chichester. The earliest charter is by Stephen. The mints were established in the reign of King John at Chichester. Queen Elizabeth paid two visits to the city, one in 1551, while princess, and the second in 1591. In 1642 it was occupied by the royalists, when two churches were pulled down to repair the walls, and the following year it was taken by Sir William Waller, who battered down the N.W. tower of the cathedral. Parliament ordered the fortifications to be demolished in 1648.—Chichester has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I. The limits of the borough under the Reform Act are enlarged so as to take in the greater part of the two outlying parishes, with parts of St. Bartholomew and Rumboldswick.—Chichester possesses no manufactures, though woolstapling, tanning, and brewing are carried on to some extent; there are also several large malting establishments, and great quantities of corn are sent from thence to London and the West of England. Some trade is also carried on in timber and coals. The port of Chichester is at Dell Quay, about 1½ mile from the city; a short canal, which joins the Arundel canal as it passes to the south of the city, connects it with the sea at Chichester harbour. This canal is chiefly used to convey coals, but since the opening of the South Coast railway it has been of much less importance. The city is pleasantly situated on a gentle eminence, a few miles S. of the Great Downs, and is nearly surrounded by a small rivulet, called the Lavant, which is occasionally dry in summer. Within the walls it is divided by two principal streets, which diverge E., W., N., and S. from the market-place, where is a fine octagonal Gothic cross, built by Bishop Storey in 1500. The suburbs extend beyond the walls, in the direction of the principal streets. The city walls, which are of stone, are supposed to have been built by the Romans; they are above a mile and a half in circuit, and are lined with lofty elm trees, which have a singularly picturesque appearance, the cathedral and spires being the only objects visible above them. The gates of the city were finally removed in 1773.—Chichester is well built, drained, and supplied with water. Most of the houses, which are in general handsome, are built of brick and roofed with tiles. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. There is a local police, consisting of an inspector, sergeant, and 6 men, and a recently-built station for the Chichester division of the county police. The population, in 1851, was 8,662, inhabiting 1,653 houses, which in 1861 had decreased to 8,059, with 1,601 inhabited houses. The city contains a townhall, a commodious building, with council chamber and spacious assembly-rooms; a guildhall, an ancient structure, once the chapel of the monastery founded in 1233, by William Earl of Arundel; a gaol, built in 1783, now used as a police station; a corn exchange, with extensive granaries and warehouses attached; a custom-house, market-house, theatre, barracks, assembly-rooms, two banks, a savings-bank, a literary and scientific institution, possessing a library of 3,000 volumes; a dispensary; and the Union poorhouse. Townshend's iron-foundry is an establishment of considerable importance, and there are extensive gas-works. Chichester Poor-law Union comprises nine parishes, with an area of 1,680 acres. Chichester is the polling-place for West Sussex, and the head of a new County Court district, comprising the registries of Westbourne, West Hampnett, and Chichester. The government of the city is regulated by a charter granted by James II., and vested in 6 aldermen and 18 councillors, one of whom is mayor.—The cathedral, the great ornament of the city, is a noble Gothic structure, built originally of wood in the form of a cross. It was founded in 1108, by Bishop Ralph, on the site of a monastery, of which a Norman doorway remains; it was burnt in 1114, rebuilt in 1123, and being again partly burnt with the city, was restored in 1187, by Bishop Seffrid. The spire, which was reckoned one of the most graceful in England, was built in 1250, about the time of Salisbury Cathedral. It was struck by lightning in 1721, but repaired, so that it lasted till February, 1861, when it fell down. Mr. Beanland, of Halifax, has contracted to re-erect the spire for £37,846; out of which the foundations, which are already completed, have cost £6,000. The extreme length of the cathedral from E. to W. is 407 feet, from N. to S. 150 feet; the transept is 129 feet long by 34 feet wide; and the nave and aisles are 97 feet wide. The building is remarkable for having double side aisles, and exhibits almost every variety of Gothic architecture. The restoration commenced in 1830, and is continued at intervals. In the S. transept are some curious old paintings, formerly attributed to Holbein, though now generally supposed to be by Bernardi. There are also portraits of kings from William the Conqueror to George I., and of bishops to the Reformation. There is a Saxon chest in the sacristy, where are some fine oak stalls, and a beautiful Gothic chantry to St. Richard. The cloisters, which are about 120 feet by 100 feet, contain, among other monuments, one to Chillingworth, the controversialist, who died in 1643, after having been taken prisoner at Wardour Castle; he lies buried in the transept of the church. The transept windows, of the date of the early part of the 14th century, were put up by Bishop Langton, who built the chapter-house and the bell tower, which is 120 feet high. The stalls and screen were built between 1508 and 1536, by Bishop Sherburne, who also erected the episcopal palace and its chapel. This last is supposed to stand on the site of a Roman villa. The palace was repaired in 1800, and contains some fine pictures and specimens of stained glass. There are many very interesting monuments, besides several brasses, in Chichester Cathedral, including a brass of W. Bradlynge and wife, date 1546; monuments to bishops Langton and Sherburne, and to the poet Collins, a native of this city, who died in 1759; this last monument is the work of Flaxman; Huskisson has also a monument, by Crewe. There still remain broken effigies of celebrated characters, which were injured by the soldiers of Sir William Waller's army, who also destroyed the E. window of the cathedral. The deanery was built by Sherlock, the then Dean of Chichester. Besides the cathedral, there are ten parish churches. The livings vary in val. from £110 to £45, six of them being in the gift of the dean and chapter: All Saints, called also the Pallant or Palatinate; St. Andrew's; St. Bartholomew's; St. Martin's; St. Olave's; St. Paul's; St. Peter the Less; St. John's, New Town, formerly called the Blackfriars; St. Pancras; and St. Peter's the Great, otherwise the Subdeanery. This last is the most modern of all the churches in the city; it was erected in 1852, and is a large, handsome stone building, in the style of the 14th century, capable of accommodating 700 persons. Up to the consecration of this (new) church the parochial services were conducted within the N. transept of the cathedral. This important parish of St. Peter's the Great, otherwise the Subdeanery, embraces about one-half of the entire population of the city of Chichester, and its registers date so far back as 1558. The history of the connection between the subdeanery and the parish is thus traced by Dr. Lushington, in the judgment delivered by him in the Arches Court, August 5th, 1862, in the case of Braithwaite v. Hook:—"There certainly seems to have been a time when the vicar was not subdean, and the parish not called the subdeanery. In the taxation of Pope Nicholas in 1291, the parish is called 'St. Peter's the Great' only, not 'otherwise the Subdeanery.' Again, in 1397, at the visitation of Bishop Rede, there presented themselves 'parochiani' of 'St. Peter's the Great,' without the addition of 'otherwise the Subdeanery,' and this, though that visitation was held at the altar of the subdean. But in 1481 it is recorded that at the visitation of Bishop Storey there appeared, amongst others, two persons, one Simon Moleyns, the Subdean, the other John Willoughby, called the Rector of St. Peter's the Great. So then the vicarage and the subdeanery were originally distinct. When they were first filled by the same person is not known; but as far back as 1481 it appears that the N. transept, being used as the parish church, was styled 'Ecclesia Subdecanatus;' the parish was called the parish of St. Peter's the Great, otherwise the Subdeanery, and the vicar after his institution went by the title of subdean." Prior to the fall of the tower and spire the subdean (as such) had his stall in the choir of the cathedral, bearing this inscription upon it—"Subdecani;" and his seal, with the impression on it, "S. Subdecani Cicestrie," is, at the present time, in the British Museum. There are chapels for Roman Catholics, Calvinists, Unitarians, Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and the Society of Friends. There are numerous schools, including a grammar school founded by Bishop Storey, about 1497, where Archbishop Juxon, Collins the poet, Selden, and Hurdis were educated; the Whitby, or Bluecoat school, founded by Oliver Whitby in 1702, for teaching navigation; a diocesan theological college, established in 1839, by Bishop Otter; and Bishop Manningham's boys' gray-coat and girls' blue-coat schools. Besides these there is a training college for schoolmasters, founded by the late Dr. W. Otter, an elegant stone structure, built in the collegiate style of the 15th century, and completed in 1850, from designs by Mr. J. Butler. In it there is accommodation for 24 students, besides apartments for the vice-principal, and a commodious residence for the principal; there is also a chapel attached to the college; the site was given by the bishop. There are several hospitals in the city, one or two being of ancient date, as St. Mary's, which was once a nunnery, and was founded in 1174 (this hospital has a chapel, piscina, and stalls); and St. James's, which was originally founded for lepers. A large infirmary, to which another wing has lately been added by Charles Dixon, Esq., of Stanstead House, was built about 1830. The ancient residence of the earls of Arundel, in the N.E. quarter of the city, has lately been converted into "The Friary Park," through the liberality of the Duke of Richmond, to whom it belongs. For many years this magnificent piece of ground was used only for grazing; but it has recently been converted into an archery and cricketing ground, and the remainder made available for the recreation of the inhabitants.—The celebrated Archbishop Bradwardine, who died in 1349, Bishop Buckner, and Holland, who founded Steyning school, were natives of the city. Chichester gives the title of earl to the Pelhams. Close by is Goodwood, the seat of the Duke of Richmond, and the ancient camps called Gonshill and Brill.—The diocese of Chichester is in the province of Canterbury, and was founded in 681, at Selsea. It comprises the archdeaconries of Chichester and Lewes, or 12 deaneries, and about 279 benefices; the bishop's income is £4,200. The chapter includes a dean, chancellor, treasurer, 2 archdeacons, a precentor, 4 canons, 28 prebendaries, and 4 minor canons, with the patronage of 21 livings. The archdeaconry comprises the deaneries of Arundel, Boxgrave, Chichester, Midhurst, Storington, Pagham, Tarring, or 34 livings. The deanery comprises the livings of Brede, Chichester, Crowhurst, New Fishborne, and Rumboldswyke.—Market days are Wednesday and Saturday for corn, cattle, sheep, and pigs. Fairs are held on St. George's Day, Whit Monday, St. James's Day, and Old Michaelmas Day.

CHICHLEY, or CHICHELEY, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Newport-Pagnell, and 6¼ from the Wolverton station, on the London and North-Western railway. It is situated near the river Ouse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £116, in the patron. of C. M. Chester, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is in the early English style of architecture. The charities amount to £3 per annum. Here is a meet for the Oakley hounds.

CHICKERELL, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Culliford-Tree, in the co. of Dorset, 2½ miles N.W. of Weymouth, its post town, and 8 from Dorchester. Both the Great Western and London and South-Western railways pass near the village, and have stations at Weymouth. The par. includes the chplry. of Herringstone, and the tnships. of East Chickerell and Putton. The living is a rect., formerly in the archdeac. of Dorset and dioc. of Bristol, but now in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £320, in the patron. of the Duke of Cleveland and the Dowager Countess Sandwich. The principal residence is Herringstone Lodge.

CHICKLADE, a par. in the hund. of Dunworth, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile N. of Hindon, its post town, and 7 from Warminster. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £230, pat. the Marquis of Bath. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat edifice with tower. The register commences 1721. Here is a free school. John Candy, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHICKNEY, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, in the co. of Essex, 5 miles N.W. of Dunmow, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Bishop Stortford. It is situated on a branch of the river Chelmer, near the Great Eastern railway, which has a station at Elsenham, 3 miles distant from the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £164, in the patron. of Mrs. Cranmer. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is a substantial structure with spire, and possesses a register, the earliest date of which is 1604. The Rev. J. Collin and Captain H. Byng are the principal landowners.

CHICKSANDS PRIORY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Clifton, in the co. of Bedford, 6 miles S.E. of Ampthill, on the river Ivel. Pain de Beauchamp, about A.D. 1150, founded a priory here, of which the two quadrangles and cloisters are yet entire, and have been converted into a modern mansion, which contains the bed of James I., and a portrait by Sir Peter Lely of Oliver Cromwell.

CHICKSGROVE, or CHISGROVE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Tisbury and Wardour, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles E. of Hindon.

CHICKSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Littleham, in the co. of Devon.

CHICKWARD, a hmlt. in the par. of Kington, in the hund. of Huntington, in the co. of Hereford, 2 miles S.W. of Kington.

CHIDDEN, a tythg. with Glidden, in the par. of Hambledon, in the co. of Hants, 6 miles E. of Bishop's Waltham.

CHIDDINGFOLD, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Godalming, in the co. of Surrey, 4 miles E. of Haslemere, and 2 S. of the Witley station of the London and Portsmouth (direct) line. Godalming is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the cur. of Haslemere annexed, £522, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a charity of £25 per annum, which is delivered in bread to the poor on Easter Monday. There are National schools for boys and girls.

CHIDDINGLY, a par. in the hund of Shiplake, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 10 miles E. of Lewes, and 3½ from the Berwick station of the London, Brighton, and South Coast line. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £158, in the patron. of the Dowager Countess Amherst. The church, the dedication of which is unknown, is an ancient edifice in the decorated (14th century) style of architecture, with a tower and beautiful spire, and possesses a handsome monument to Sir John Jefferay, who died in 1678. Here are National schools for boys and girls. The register commences in 1625. Chiddingly Place is a very old seat, and its chapel is now converted into a barn. The Earl of Chichester and Fuller Meyrick, Esq., are the chief landowners. The parochial charities produce about £6 a year.

CHIDDINGSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Somerden, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles S.W. of Sevenoaks, and 1½ mile S.E. of Penshurst station of the London and South-Eastern line. It is situated on the river Eden in the Weald, and contains the hmlt. of High Street. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £650, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with tower and fine spire, and contains monuments to the Streatfield family. There are National and infant schools. High Street House and Stonewall Park are seats here. The Chiding Stone stands in the park. H. Streatfield, Esq., is lord of the manor, through the Burgh and Cobham families.

CHIDEOCK, a par. in the hund. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, in the Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles W. of Bridport, its post town and railway station, and 6 E. of Lyme Regis. It is situated near the sea. The living is a cur.* annexed to the vic. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, in the dioc. of Salisbury, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient stone building with a tower. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Roman Catholics have places of worship. Charles Weld, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHIDGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, in e co. of Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet.

CHIDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bosham, rape of ichester, in the co. of Sussex, 5 miles W. of Chichester. nsworth is its post town. The living is a vic.* in the pc. of Chichester, val. £190, in the patron. of Miss alker. The church is in the early English style of chitecture. There are some small charities. The 'hidham white," or hedge wheat, was first grown here.

CHIDLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, in the gher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Ches- r, 2 miles S.E. of Malpas. The owner and lord of the nor is G. C. Goodwin, Esq.

CHIDSWELL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Soothill, in e West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N.W. of akefield.

CHIEVELEY, a par. in the hund. of Faircross, in e co. of Berks, 4 miles N. of Newbury, its post town, d 4½ from Ilsley. It comprises the chplries. of Oare, interbourn, and Leckhampstead, and the tythgs. of burage, Snelsmore, and North Heath. The living is a .* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. with the curs. of Oare, interbourn, and Leckhampstead annexed, £1,460, in e patron. of James Dand, Esq., and Miss Wasey alter- tely. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is in the rly English style. There is a National school for both xes at North Heath. The Wesleyans, Primitive ethodists, and Baptists have each a place of worship. he charities amount to £86 per annum, of which Hen- aw's school has £16.

CHIGNAL ST. JAMES AND ST. MARY, a par. in e hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles .W. of Chelmsford, and 7 from Dunmow. It is situ- ed on a branch of the river Chelmer, a short distance om the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect. the dioc. of Rochester, val. with the annexed rect. Mashbury, £430, in the patron. of the Rev. J. G. ilne. The church is dedicated to St. James. Here e National schools for the children of this and the ighbouring parish of Mashbury. T. Bramston, Esq., lord of the manor. Agriculture is the chief employ- ent of the inhabitants.

CHIGNAL SMEALY, or LITTLE CHICKNALL, a r. in the hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, 4 iles N.W. of the Chelmsford railway station, and 1 N. Chignal St. James. The living is a rect. in the dioc. Rochester, val. £120, in the patron. of F. Austin and mes Cooke, Esqrs. The church, dedicated to St. icholas, is a small brick structure with embattled ower. The Independents have a place of worship. he parochial charities produce about £4 a year.

CHIGWELL, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, in the co. of ssex, 5 miles S. of Epping, and about 10 from London. t is pleasantly situated near the river Roding and the rests of Epping and Hainault, possessing several gen- emen's seats and residences. The living is a vic.* in he dioc. of Rochester, val. £500, in the patron. of the ishop. The parish church, dedicated to St Mary, an ancient edifice partly in the Saxon style. It pos- sses a brass to the memory of Archbishop Harsnet 631), who was vicar of the parish and founded the hools afterwards mentioned; and likewise a brass dated 540. There are also two district churches in this arish: that of St. John's is a perpet. cur.,* val. £60, the patron. of the vicar; and Chigwel Row, a perpet. ur., val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop lternately. The Independents have a place of worship. here are grammar and free schools; the famous William Penn, it is said, was educated at the former, which has an income from endowments of £350 per nnum. Here are almshouses, and a once celebrated ineral spring. The minor charities produce about £70 er annum. A fair is held on the 30th September.

CHIGWELL ROW, a vil. and district par. in the par. f Chigwell, and hund. of Ongar, in the co. of Essex, miles E. of Chigwell. This is the Cingawella of the axons. Here are a mineral spring, and several suburban esidences. It is pleasantly situated near the river Roding nd Hainault Forest.

CHILBOLTON, a par. in the hund. of Lower Wher- well, Andover div. of the co. of Hants, 9 miles S.W. of the Andover Road station, and the same distance from Winchester. Stockbridge is its post town. It is situ- ated on the river Anton, near the canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £430, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built about 1300. It is in the decorated style. Here is a free school. Dr. Layfield's charity, for appren- ticing children of this parish, amounts to £25 a year. It was from the rectory here that the celebrated Oriental writer, Sir William Jones, dated his letters when on a visit to Dr. Shipley, Bishop of St. Asaph. The Dean and Chapter of Winchester are lords of the manor.

CHILCOMB, a par. in the hund. of Fawley (lower half), Winchester div. of the co. of Hants, 2 miles S.E. of the Winchester railway station on the South-Western line. It is situated in a valley through which the river Hitchen flows. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £167, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is small, and in the Norman style of architec- ture, with wooden tower. It is said to have been erected in 1066. Nearly the whole parish belongs to the Bishop of Winchester.

CHILCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Uggscombe, Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, 5 miles E. of Brid- port, its post town and railway station. Near Chilcombe Hill there are traces of a Saxon camp, 1,333 feet by 672, with a circular ditch. Here is an ancient preceptory of the Hospitallers. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £53, in the patron. of the devisees of the Rev. E. Foyle.

CHILCOMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Shepton Mallett, and 7 N.E. of Wells. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £129, in the patron. of H. S. W. Tooker, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. John, was rebuilt in 1839, and is in the pointed style of archi- tecture. The register commences in 1685. Here is a Wesleyan chapel, and a parochial school for both sexes. Henry Werret in 1681 left £100, the interest whereof to be applied for apprenticing poor boys of the parish, and about 30*s.* per annum to be distributed in bread to the poor. The lord of the manor is the Marquis of Bath. Near Blacker's Hill are the traces of a Roman camp.

CHILCOTE, a chplry. in the par. of Clifton-Camp- ville, in the hund. of Repton, in the co. of Derby, 6½ miles S.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. The village is situ- ated on a rock, and was rebuilt by the late F. Robertson, Esq. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Clif- ton Campville, in the dioc. of Lichfield, in the patron. of H. J. Pye, Esq. The chapel, dedicated to St. Mat- thew, is a neat structure with beautiful stained-glass windows. The Hall, the seat of the Milwards and Clarkes, has been taken down. Near this place, at a spot called No Man's Heath, the counties of Leicester, Stafford, Warwick, and Derby adjoin, so that a person may be in all four of them at the same time. The lord of the manor is E. W. Robertson, Esq.

CHILCOTT, a tythg. in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles E. of Wells.

CHILDERDITCH, a par. in the hund. of Chafford, in the co. of Essex, 5 miles S.W. of Billericay, and 2½ S.W. of the Brentford station of the Great Eastern line. It is situated near the source of the Marditch stream, and is a very ancient place, having existed in the time of Edward the Confessor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £160, in the patron. of Lord Petre, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints and St. Faith, is a small structure with steeple and spire. The earliest date in the register is 1537. Here is a National school. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The chief residence is Thorndon Hall.

CHILDERLEY, a par. in the hund. of Chesterton, in the co. of Cambridge, 7 miles N.W. of Cambridge, and 3 N.E. of Caxton. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £20, in the patron. of N. Calvert, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is in ruins, having been destroyed by Sir John Cutts. Childerley Hall was the ancient seat of the Cutts family. It has recently been rebuilt on the site of the old hall, and is a handsome edifice in the Elizabethan style. Charles I. was brought here after his arrest at Holme, in Lincolnshire, and the chamber in which he was confined has been carefully preserved.

CHILDER THORNTON, or THORNTON CHILDER, a tnshp. in the par. of Eastham, in the higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. of Chester, 7 miles S. of Birkenhead, 8 N.W. of Chester, and 1 from the Hooton and Sutton stations of the Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire railway.

CHILDHAY, a tythg. in the par. of Broadwinsor, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles W. of Beaminster.

CHILD-OKEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Redlane, Sturminster div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles E. of Sturminster, and 4 S.E. of Blandford. The Dorset Central branch of the London and South-Western railway passes near the village, and has a station at Sturminster Marshall. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £316, in the patron. of the Rev. C. E North. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a plain edifice with a tower. Here is a National school. The charities produce £13 per annum.

CHILDREY, a par. in the hund. of Wantage, in the co. of Berks, 2 miles W. of Wantage, its post town, and 5 S.E. of the Wantage Road station of the Great Western line. It is situated near Icknield Street and the Wilts and Berks canal. In this parish is an ancient building formerly occupied by the Fettiplaces, and said to have been the place where Charles I. slept on his march from Oxford to Marlborough. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £604, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with embattled tower and beautiful stained-glass windows. It contains a piscina, brasses from 1430, and a very curious leaden font, which is circular in shape and bears figures of abbots. Here are a school for boys and some almshouses.

CHILD'S-ERCALL, a par. in the Drayton div. of the hund. of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles S. of Market Drayton, and 7¼ N.W. of the Newport railway station. It is situated near the river Tern. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £66, in the patron. of Richard Corbet, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone Gothic edifice. There is a school for both sexes. The tithes were commuted in 1839. Child's-Ercall Hall is now a farmhouse.

CHILD'S-WICKHAM, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles from the Evesham railway station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton line, and 1½ from Broadway, its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £246, in the patron. of the representatives of the Rev. J. H. Tucker. The church is a stone structure with a spire. The tithes were commuted in 1763.

CHILDWALL, a par. in the hund. of West Derby, in the co. of Lancaster, 5 miles from Liverpool, and 4 from Prescot. It includes the tnshps. of Allerton, Childwall, Halewood, Speke, Little Woolton, and Much Woolton, and the chplries. of Garston, Hale, and Wavertree. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £456, in the patron. of the bishop. There are also eight district churches in this parish, the livings of which are perpet. curs., viz.: that at Wavertree, val. £117; at Woolton, val. £220, which, with that at Halewood, is in the patron. of the vicar; at Garston, val. £138, in the patron. of Richard Watt, Esq.; at Hale, val. £105, in the patron. of J. I. Blackburn, Esq.; St. Mary's, val. £100, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester; St. Anne, Aigburth, and another at Grassendale, in the patron. of trustees. At a short distance from the village is Childwall Hall, a seat of the Marquis of Salisbury.

CHILFORD, a hund. in the S.E. portion of the co. of Cambridge, contains the pars. of Great and Little Abingdon, Babraham, Great Bartlow, Castle Camps, Kildershaw, Horseheath, Linton, Pampisford, Shudy-Camps, and West Wickham, comprising 21,430 acres.

CHILFROOME, a par. in the hund. of Tollerford, Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, 8 miles N.W. of Dorchester, and 1 from Maiden Newton station, on the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the river Froome. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £180, in the patron. of Lord Portman and W. Fryer, Esq. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small edifice, without a tower or spire. There is a small school. This parish partakes in the charities of Spettisbury.

CHILGROVE, a tythg. in the par. of West Dean, in the hund. of Westbourne and Singleton, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 1½ mile N.W. of West Dean.

CHILHAM, a par. in the hund. of Felborough, lath of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 7 miles N. of Ashford, and 7 from Faversham. It is a railway station on the London and South-Eastern line, and is situated on the river Stour. This village, which was once a market town, is the Chilleham of Domesday Book, and extends along the road between Canterbury and Ashford. It is very pleasantly situated, having the church and vicarage to the N., and the castle and park of Chilham on the S., just opposite to which there is a delightful view over the vale of Ashford. This place was in early times the scene of many sanguinary contests, and was a military station or castrum by the Romans, as is shown by the many relics in the neighbourhood. In the Saxon times King Withred, of Kent, towards the close of the 7th century, resided here, and greatly strengthened the fortifications. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. with the cur. of Molash annexed, £695, in the patron. of Charles Hardy, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome cruciform structure in the early English style, with an embattled tower, and two chapels, which are attached to it. It contains a monument to Sir Dudley Digges; and there has existed for near a century a mausoleum of the Colchester family, sadly out of keeping with the architectural appearance of the fine old church. This mausoleum, through the kindness of the present owner, Sir E. Cockburn, is now (1863) in course of removal, and the chancel of the church is being thoroughly and beautifully rebuilt at the sole cost of C. Hardy, Esq. There are National schools for both sexes, besides an infant school. Chilham Castle was built by Sir D. Digges, in 1616. Its walls, venerably mantled with ivy, are from 10 to 12 feet thick, surrounded by a fine park. Not far from the park is a barrow 180 feet long, known as Julaber Grave, and supposed to be the place of interment of Julius Laberius, a Roman general. At Olwoods (or Old Wives) Lees annual foot races formerly took place, when two young men and two maidens, between the ages of sixteen and twenty-four, ran a tye; the foremost young man and woman were rewarded with £10 each, left by Sir Dudley Digges, in 1638. The money is now spent in prizes for the scholars of the National schools. Charles Hardy, Esq., is lord of the manor, and chief landowner. A cattle fair is held on the 8th November.

CHILHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of South Newton, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile N. of Wilton.

CHILLAND, a tythg. in the par. of Martyr-Worthy, in the co. of Hants, 3 miles N.E. of Winchester.

CHILLENDEN, a par. in the hund. of Eastry, lath of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles W. of Deal and 5 S.W. of Sandwich. Wingham is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £130, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure. The principal residences are Goodstone Hall, the seat of Sir B. W. Bridges, Bart.; St. Alban's Hall, and Knowlton Park. There is a fair held on Whit-Monday.

CHILLERTON, a tythg. in the pars. of Wootton and Carisbrooke, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Hants, 3 miles S. of Newport.

CHILLESFORD, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Orford, and 5 N.E. of Woodbridge. Wickham Market is its post town. It is situated on an estuary of the river Butley near Orford Haven. The living is a rect. in the dioc.

Norwich, val. £355, in the patron. of the Rev. W. E. Cooley. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone edifice. Here is a school. The charities amount to about £5 per annum.

CHILLINGFORD, a lib. in the tnshp. of Brewood, in the co. of Stafford, 1 mile from Brewood, and 10 S. of Stafford. It is situated near a branch of the river Pinkand the London and North-Western railway.

CHILLINGHAM, or CHEVELINGHAM, a par. in the eastern div. of the ward of Glendale, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles E. of Wooler, and 5 miles from the Lucker station. It is situated on the river Till, and includes the tnshps. of Chillingham, Hebburn, and Newtown. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £340, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice. Here are schools for boys and girls. The castle, pleasantly situated, is a handsome building, the seat of the Earl of Tankerville; it is four stories high in the wings, and three in the centre, rebuilt in the reign of Elizabeth, and contains some valuable portraits. In the park is a herd of wild cattle; they are white, with black noses and eyelids, and are called the "White Scotch Bison," but the bulls have lost the manes attributed to them by Boethius. There is in the vicinity a British camp, called Roscastle.

CHILLINGHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Chillingham, in the eastern div. of the ward of Glendale, in the co. of Northumberland.

CHILLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles from Ilminster, and 5 E. of Chard. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £60, in the patron. of Earl Powlett. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone edifice. Here are National schools for both sexes. The lord of the manor is J. B. Notley, Esq.

CHILLINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stokenham, in the co. of Devon, 3½ miles E. of Kingsbridge.

CHILLINGTON, a lib. in the par. of Brewood, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Brewood. Here the Albrighton hounds meet.

CHILMARK, a par. in the hund. of Dunworth, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles E. of Hindon, and 3 from the Salisbury railway station. It is situated on the river Nadder, and the Roman way to Bath, which passed through this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £426, in the patron. of the Earl of Pembroke, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient edifice, with beautiful stained-glass windows, and in good condition, nearly £2,000 having been laid out in its restoration in 1856. Here are National schools for both sexes. This place is celebrated for its freestone, of which Salisbury Cathedral and many other notable edifices of the county of Wilts are built. Near the church is an outhouse, supposed to be a remnant of Wilton Abbey. John de Chilmark, the Archimedes of the 13th century, was born here. The parish register dates from 1653.

CHILSON, a hmlt. in the par. of Shorthampton, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles S. of Chipping-Norton.

CHILSON, a hmlt. in the tythg. of South Chard, in the co. of Somerset, near Chard.

CHILSWELL, a lib. in the par. of Cumnor, in the hund. of Hormer, in the co. of Berks, 3 miles W. of Oxford.

CHILSWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Milton, in the co. of Oxford, 3 miles from Tetsworth, its post town. It is situated on the river Thame, and comprises about 16 houses.

CHILSWORTHY, a vil. in the par. of Holsworthy, in the co. of Devon, 1 mile from Holsworthy.

CHILTERN, or CHITTERN, ALL SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles from Warminster, and 4 E.N.E. of the Heytesbury station, on the Salisbury branch of the Great Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Wiley. The living is a vic.* united with the cur. of Chiltern St. Mary, in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £325, in the patron. of the Bishop and of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury alternately. The church is ancient, and is dedicated to All Saints. There is a small charity which produces about £2 per annum. In the vicinity is Knook camp. Chiltern is a meet for the South Wilts hounds.

CHILTERN HILLS, a range of chalk hills extending across England, from Wilts, through Berks, Oxford, and Bucks, to Suffolk, and attaining the altitude of 900 feet above the sea near Wendover. They were anciently covered with dense beechwoods, which afforded a covert for robbers and wild beasts. To clear these an officer of the crown, called the Steward of the Chiltern Hundreds—being Burnham, Desborough, and Stoke, in Buckinghamshire—was appointed, with a fee of 20*s.* per annum. This office has now become merely honorary, and is accepted by a member of parliament who may wish to retire.

CHILTERN ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, in the co. of Wilts. It adjoins the parish of Chiltern All Saints.

CHILTHORNE-DOMER, a par. in the hund. of Stone, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles N. of the Yeovil station, on the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the old coach road from Ilchester to Yeovil. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £235, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Baily. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice in the decorated style, with monuments, and a register commencing in 1678. Here is a school for both sexes. The lord of the manor is H. W. Hasley, Esq.

CHILTINGTON, a manor in the par. of West Chiltington, in the hund. of West Eastwrith, in the co. of Sussex.

CHILTINGTON, EAST, a chplry. in the par. of Westmeston, in the hund. of Street, and rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 5 miles N.W. of Lewes. It is situated near the river Ouse, under the South Downs. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Westmeston in the dioc. of Chichester, in the patron. of G. Campion, Esq. Here is a National school. The charities amount to £7 per annum.

CHILTINGTON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of West Eastwrith, and rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 9 miles to the E. of Petworth, and 7 from Steyning. It is situated in a pleasant country, about 10 miles from the Brighton and South Coast railway, which has a station at Horsham. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £491, in the patron. of the Earl of Abergavenny. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The charities amount to £47, the endowment of Smyth's free school.

CHILTON, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, in the co. of Bucks, 9 miles W. of Aylesbury, and 4 N. of Thame, its post town. The manor formerly belonged to the ancient family of Le Blount, who, during the wars of the Roses, concealed themselves under the name of Croke, and on the accession of Henry VII. still retained that name. Sir George Croke, a member of this family, for many years filled the office of Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, previous to the breaking out of the Civil War, and rendered his name illustrious by opposing the levying of ship money without authority of parliament. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £67, in the patron. of C. S. Ricketts, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice in several styles of architecture. It contains some brasses, and several ornamental monuments of the Croke and Blount families. The organ was presented by the vicar, at whose expense a school is conducted. The charities amount to £36 per annum, besides almshouses. The lady of the manor is Mrs. Ricketts.

CHILTON, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, in the co. of Suffolk, 1½ mile N.E. of Sudbury, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Stour, which bounds it on the W. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £208, and in the patron. of W. C. Parmenter, Esq. W. H. Windham, Esq., is lord of the manor. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The principal residence is Chilton Lodge.

CHILTON, a par. in the hund. of Compton, in the co. of Berks, 4 miles N. of East Ilsley, and 8 from Abingdon, its post town. The Great Western railway passes within a few miles of the village, and has a station at Didcot. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £400, in the patron. of G. Morland, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a modern building in the early English style. The charities amount to £11 per annum.

CHILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Mottiston, in the Isle of Wight, co. of Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Newport.

CHILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Atcham, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Shrewsbury.

CHILTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Merrington, in the south-eastern div. of the ward of Darlington, in the co. of Durham, 9 miles S.E. of Durham.

CHILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, in the hund. of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, near Ramsgate.

CHILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Clare, in the co. of Suffolk, 1 mile N.W. of Clare. A house stands here which was anciently an Austin priory.

CHILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stowmarket, in the co. of Suffolk, 1 mile N. of Stowmarket.

CHILTON CANDOVER. See CANDOVER, CHILTON, Hants.

CHILTON CANTILO, a par. in the hund. of Houndsborough, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles E. of Ilchester, and 3 S.E. of the Marston railway station. It is situated on the road between Yeovil and Rimpton, near the river Yeo, and includes the chplry. of Nether-Adbeer. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £260, in the patron. of H. Goodford, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient edifice, in the Norman style of architecture. Here is a school for both sexes. The lord of the manor is Henry Goodford, Esq. The annual val. of the charities is about £2.

CHILTON FOLIATT, a par. partly in the hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, and partly in the hund. of Kintbury Eagle, in the co. of Berks, 2½ miles from Hungerford, its post and railway town. It is pleasantly situated on the river Kennet, and includes the tythg. of Leverton. Formerly this place belonged to the Foliot family, and came through the Warines to Sutton, who presented it to the Charter House. The greater part of the par. is in Wilts, and in 1861 contained only 691 inhabitants. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £994, in the patron. of F. L. Popham, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat edifice, and contains monuments to the Popham family, and effigies of one of the Foliot family. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a National school for boys. The charities amount to £3 per annum. Chilton Lodge, designed by Pilkington, was anciently the seat of Secretary Whitelock.

CHILTON, GREAT and LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Merrington, in the co. of Durham, 6 miles E. of Bishop Auckland.

CHILTON TRINITY, a par. in the hund. of North Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles N. of Bridgwater. It is situated in a valley through which the river Parret runs. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic.* of Bridgwater, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone building with tower, and is very ancient.

CHILTON-UPON-POLDEN, a chplry. in the par. of Moorlinch, in the hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles E. of Bridgwater, and 3 S.W. of the Edington railway station. It has lately been constituted a parish for ecclesiastical purposes under Sir Robert Peel's Act. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the perpet. cur.* of Edington, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £120, in the patron. of the Rev. R. J. Luscombe. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The church is a plain stone edifice. The Independents have a place of worship. The charities are about £6 per annum. The moor is celebrated for its beautiful specimens of ferns and orchids. The lord of the manor is Colonel Tynte.

CHILVERS COTON, a par. in the Atherstone div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick. It is a station on the North-Western railway and Coventry canal, 8 miles from Coventry, and 1 from Nuneaton. The inhabitants are principally engaged in ribbon-weaving and the other manufactures of Coventry and Nuneaton. In the vicinity are several extensive collieries. It contains the hmlt. of Griff and Arbury Park, the old seat of the Newdegates. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £106, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a large structure, with a square tower. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics have places of worship. There is a commodious free school for boys and girls, supported by C. N. Newdegate, Esq., M.P. In the village stands the Union poorhouse. Arbury Hall, the splendid seat of the Newdegate family, was built in the reign of Elizabeth by Sir Edmund Anderson, out of the materials of the old monastery, the site of which had been granted by Henry VIII. to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, in 1538.

CHILWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Attenborough, in the southern div. of the wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 4 miles S.W. of Nottingham. It is situated near the river Trent. The inhabitants are principally employed in stocking-weaving. Chilwell Hall is a fine mansion.

CHILWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Mainsbridge, in the co. of Hants, 4 miles E. of Romsey, its post town, and near Chandler's Ford station of the South-Western railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £53, in the patron. of John Fleming, Esq., who rebuilt the church at his sole expense. It is in the Gothic style, and is a small but handsome edifice with neat spire, containing a beautiful stained-glass window of the Evangelists. A monument stands in the churchyard to the memory of the late Hon. Richard G. Quin, and likewise a mausoleum to W. H. Pitt, Esq. John B. Fleming, Esq., of Stoneham Park, owns the manor and the whole of the parish, which consists generally of open ground and woodland.

CHILWORTH, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of St. Martha-on-the-Hill, in the first div. of the hund. of Blackheath, in the co. of Surrey, 2½ miles S.E. of Guildford, its post town. It is a railway station on the London and South-Western line, and is situated a little to the N. of the river Wey. It was formerly considered extra-parochial and extra-judicial. The living is a rect. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £25, in the patron. of Lord Lovaine. The church, dedicated to St. Martha, is a flint structure. Here are both gunpowder and paper mills.

CHILWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Milton, in the hund. of Bullingdon, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles W. of Thame.

CHIMNEY, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 6 miles S. of Witney. It is situated on Chimney Brook, which runs into the river Isis.

CHIMNEY MILLS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Blackbourn, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles N.W. of Bury St. Edmund's.

CHINEHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Monk Sherborne, in the upper halt of the hund. of Basingstoke, in the co. of Hants, 2 miles S.E. of the vil. of Monk Sherborne, and 1 N.E. of Basingstoke.

CHINE HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Piddletown, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles N.E. of Dorchester.

CHINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Waltham, in the co. of Essex, 8 miles S.W. of Epping, 9 from London, and near the Woodford station of the Great Eastern line. It is pleasantly situated between the river Lea and Epping Forest, and is adorned with many pleasant suburban residences. Its name was anciently written Cingeford, or King's Ford, from a ford across the river Lea, which bounds the parish on the W. From the earliest times there have been two manors in the parish. One belonged to the church of St. Paul before the Conquest, and was surrendered to Henry VIII. in 544; the other manor, Chingford Comitis, was, at the me of Domesday Survey, held by Ongar the thane, under tobert Gernon; it was likewise surrendered to Henry III., and afterwards granted by Queen Mary, together ith the preceding manor, to Susan, widow of Thomas ongue, Clarencieux King-at Arms. Under this grant— hich conveys, besides the right of free-warren, "the nd, ground, and soil, together with the woods, under- oods, and trees"—enclosures have been made at various imes, and hence springs the cause of so much contro- ersy between the crown and the neighbourhood, the rown claiming forest rights over the reclaimed as well s over the waste lands. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. f London, val. £568, in the patron. of the Rev. B. B. eathcote. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ncient stone structure covered with ivy, and is fast rumbling to decay, with the exception of the chancel, hich is still preserved. On the green is the new church rected in 1845, being a beautiful brick, flint, and tone edifice with spire. Here are National schools or boys and girls. The principal residences are Great riday Hall, The Mount, and White Hall. In the icinity is Pumphall, an old farmhouse, formerly a unting-lodge of King James I., at which he was re- iding when he visited Sir Thomas Boothby, and, accord- ng to tradition, rendered the event memorable by nighting the sirloin of beef.

CHINLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Glossop, in the und. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles N. of Chapel-le-Frith. Together with Bugsworth and Brown- ide it forms a chplry. The village is very consider- ble. There is an Independent chapel, which anciently elonged to William Bagshawe, an eminent Noncon- ormist divine, who was called "the Apostle of the eak."

CHINNELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitchurch, in he co. of Salop, 2 miles N. of Whitchurch.

CHINNOCK, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Hounds- orough, and union of Yeovil, in the co. of Somerset, ½ miles S.W. of Yeovil, and 7 from Ilchester. It is situated on the river Parret. The living is a rect. in he dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £140, in the patron. of he lord chancellor. The charities amount to £34 per annum.

CHINNOCK, MIDDLE, a par. in the hund. of Houndsborough, and union of Yeovil, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles from Crewkerne, and 5 from Yeovil. It is situated on the river Parret. The living is a rect. in the archdeac. of Wells, and dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £189, in the patron. of the Earl of Ilchester. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The charities pro- duce about £3 a year.

CHINNOCK, WEST, a par. in the hund of Hounds- borough, in the co. of Somerset, ½ mile N.W. of Middle Chinnock. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Chiseleborough. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

CHINNOR, a par. in the hund. of Lewknor, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles S.E. of Thame. It is pleasantly situated near the Chiltern hills, and the ancient British Icknield Street. It comprises the hmlts. of Oakley and Henton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £509, in the patron. of Sir J. Musgrave. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice, in the Norman style, with tower and a fine peal of bells; it contains several brasses, one of which bears date 1330. The Independents have a place of worship. The manu- facture of Windsor chairs and lace is the chief employ- ment of the inhabitants. A meeting for the sale of lace, locally called a "lace feast," is held here every fortnight.

CHIPCHASE, a tnshp., united with Gunnerton, in the par. of Chollerton, in the north-eastern div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Bellingham. The castle, commanding a fine view, was the seat of the Herons, and is now owned by R. W. Grey, Esq.

CHIPLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Clare, in the co. of Suffolk, 1 mile W. of Clare. Here was formerly a small priory of the Augustine order CHIPNALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Cheswardine, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Market Drayton.

CHIPPENHAM, a hund. in the N.W. portion of the co. of Wilts; contains Chippenham borough, and the pars. of Alderton, Biddestone, Box, Bromhill, Castle-Combe, Colerne, Corsham, Ditteridge, Easton-Gray, Harden- huish, Kellaways, Kingswood, West Kington, Laycock, Langley-Burrell, Leigh-de-la-Mere, Drew Littleton, Luckington, Pewsham, Sherston (Magna and Parva), Slaughterford, Sopworth, North Wraxall, Yatton-Key- nell, and parts of Christian-Malford, and Hullavington —comprising 65,160 acres.

CHIPPENHAM, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Chippenham, in the co. of Wilts, 10 miles S. of Malmesbury, and 13 N.E. of Bath. It is a station on the Great Western line, and is situated on a bend of the river Avon. This was anciently a seat of the kings of Wessex, and is styled by most ancient writers, Villa Regia. It was here that Ethelwulf, in 853, celebrated the marriage of his daughter Athel- switha with Buthred, King of Mercia; and some years later the town was held by the Danes against King Alfred, who was obliged to seek shelter in Selwood Forest. After the battle of Ethandune, in which the Danes were de- feated, Alfred concluded a treaty with their Prince, Guth- run, at Chippenham, by which they agreed to be bap- tised, and retire to Cirencester. On the death of Alfred, that monarch bequeathed the lordship and town of Chippenham, with its palace, to his daughter Elfleda. In the Domesday Survey, the manor of Chepeham, or Chippenham, is entered as belonging to Edward the Confessor, and after the Conquest it continued in the possession of the crown. In the reign of Richard II. it had passed to the Hungerfords, who rebuilt the church; and in that of Charles I. it was taxed £30 as ship-money. It had been a market town from the earliest times, as its name implies, being derived from the Anglo-Saxon word Cyppenham, a "market-place," but it received its first charter from Queen Mary. It was sub- sequently incorporated under the Municipal Corpora- tions Act, when the government was vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of the "bailiff and burgesses of the borough of Chippenham."— The principal employment of the inhabitants is agri- cultural, but many of the townspeople are engaged in the manufacture of broadcloth and silks. Chippenham is the centre of the North Wilts Agricultural Association, and there is an annual show of cattle, sheep, pigs, and poultry. The town is situated on a declivity on the S. side of the Avon, which is very wide at this place, and has a beautiful stone bridge of 20 arches, with an ornamented balustrade. It is well built, and extends for about half a mile in length, containing a townhall, market-house, two banks, savings- bank, and literary institution. In 1834 it was improved under the provisions of an Act for lighting, cleansing, and paving it. There are a few grist-mills and tanneries, and the town is connected by a short branch with the Wilts and Berks canal. It first returned two members to parliament in the reign of Edward I. The limits of the present parliamentary borough are much more extensive than the municipal, the former containing, according to the census of 1861, 1,345 inhabited houses, with a population of 7,075, while the latter comprises 300 houses, inhabited by a population of 1,603. It is also remarkable that while the municipal borough has declined 104 in the decennial period since 1851, the par- liamentary has increased 792. The population of the parish of Chippenham is 4,753.—The living is a vic.* an- nexed to which is the rect. of Tytherton Lucas, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice in the Gothic style, partly built by the Hungerfords in the 12th cen- tury, and has a beautiful spire and peal of eight bells. It contains several brasses and tombs of the Bayntons, Prynnes, &c. The district church, situated near the railway station, stands in the parish of Langley Burrell, and is dedicated to St. Paul. It is an elegant build- ing in the early English style, and was erected in 1855. There are five Dissenting places of worship, two of which are Baptist, the others Independent, Methodist, and Wesleyan. The Roman Catholics also have a chapel. Here is an endowed school for the sons of freemen, as also National and British schools. The charities produce about £200 per annum.—Bowood, the seat of the Marquis of Lansdowne, is not far from the town. In the vicinity were two chalybeate springs, formerly celebrated, but now neglected except by the poorer classes. One has recently been filled up. A paved causeway was constructed by Maud Heath in 1474, from Chippenham Cliff, through the town, to Wick Hill, a distance of 4 miles, at various points of which causeway stones have been erected, each bearing an inscription commemorative of its erection.—Friday is market day. Twice in the month the markets are for the sale of cattle and sheep, and once for cheese, of which several thousand tons are sometimes sold. There is also a corn market. Fairs are held for the sale of horses, cattle, and sheep, on the 17th May, 22nd June, 29th October, and 11th December.

CHIPPENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Staploe, in the co. of Cambridge, 4 miles N.E. of the Newmarket railway station. Ely is its post town. It was given by William de Mandeville in 1148 to the Hospitallers, who had a preceptory here. It contains the vil. of Badlingham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £240, in the patron. of John Tharp, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a neat Gothic edifice. The charities amount to £45 per annum. Chippenham Park anciently belonged to the Russell family. In the park near 2,000,000 of trees of various kinds have recently been planted, and it contains some fine exotics.

CHIPPENHURST, or CHIPPINGHURST, a hmlt. in the par. of Cuddesden, hund. of Bullingdon, in the co. of Oxford, 6 miles S.E. of Oxford.

CHIPPERFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of King's Langley, in the co. of Herts, 4 miles N. of Rickmansworth.

CHIPPING, a vil. in the par. of Buckland, in the co. of Herts, 2 miles N. of Buntingford. The Puckeridge hounds meet here.

CHIPPING, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 5 miles from Longridge, 8¼ E. of the Garstang railway station, and 12 N.E. of Preston. It is situated on a branch of the river Hodder, and contains the tnshps. of Chipping and Thornley with Wheatley. In this village is an iron-foundry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a stone edifice, with tower and a peal of six bells. The register commences in the year 1550. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel and school. A free school for the education of 24 boys stands in the village, which was endowed, in 1684, by John Brabbin; over the school door is inscribed, "Doce, Disce, vel Discede."

CHIPPING BARNET. See BARNET, CHIPPING, and the like for other Chippings not given here.

CHIPPING LAMBOURN, a par. and market town in the hund. of Lambourn, in the co. of Berks, 8 miles N.W. of Hungerford, and 25 N.W. of Reading. It is situated near Ridgeway, on the river Lambourn, and contains Woodlands, Eastbury, Hadley Blagrave, Upper Lambourn, and Bockhampton. It was anciently presented to Alfrith by his uncle, King Alfred, and has since fallen to the families of De Essex and Fitzwarren. Ashdown Park, now the seat of the Earl of Craven, is supposed by some to have been the spot where Alfred defeated the Danes, in A.D. 871. There are on the Ridge, the Blowing Stone, Uffington Castle, and the White Horse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. with the cur. of Eastbury annexed, £204, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient cruciform building, in the Norman and perpendicular styles, with stained-glass windows, two chantry chapels, an embattled tower, and a peal of eight bells. It contains brasses of J. Eastbury (1400), and tombs of the family of De Essex. There is likewise a district church at Woodlands, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £220, in the patron. of Christ's College, Cambridge. There are National and free schools for both sexes, and almshouses for poor men, founded in 1582 by John Eastbury. Market day is Friday; and fairs are held on 12th May, 14th October, and 4th December.

CHIPPING NORTON, a par., municipal borough, and market town, in the hund. of Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford, 18 miles N.W. of Oxford. It was formerly held by the Croft, De Vere, and Rodney families, and at one time possessed a castle, built by King Stephen, traces of which still remain to the N. of the church. There are ruins of a market-cross in the market-place, and of a monastery and chapel in the High-street. The town is lighted with gas, and the streets are partially paved. The houses, chiefly of stone, are in general well built, and situated on the slope of a hill. The principal street, which is in the upper part of the town, is the most modern, and contains the best houses. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and the manufacture of woollen cloth, especially shawls, druggets, horse-cloths, and a stout cloth for trousers. Here is a handsome townhall, recently erected, two banks, a literary institution, and the Union workhouse. The town is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors; the mayor and aldermen being lords of the manor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £150, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The tithes were commuted for land, under an Act of inclosure, in 1769. The church, situated in a beautiful valley, is in the decorated English style, and formerly had an elegant and highly enriched tower, which, being in a very dilapidated state, was taken down in 1819, when a square embattled tower was erected. The edifice contains a rood-loft and the chantry chapels of St. John, St James, and the Virgin, founded respectively by John Tarnes, Margaret Pynner, and M. Lee. It has recently been repaired, and possesses several very handsome monuments, with recumbent effigies, and brasses of early date. The oldest portion of the building is supposed to have been erected in 1280. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Society of Friends, Antinomians, and Roman Catholics, have each places of worship, and there are National and free schools, the former being for both sexes. The charities amount to £88 per annum, including the endowments of the Cornish and Townsend almshouses. There is a free grammar school, founded by Edward VI., with an income from endowment of £17. Chipping Norton is the seat of a Poor-law Union, comprising twenty-nine parishes in Oxfordshire and three in Warwickshire, and the head of County Court and Registration districts. Wednesday is market day, and a considerable business is done in agricultural produce. Fairs are held on the Wednesday following the 1st January, and the last Wednesday in each month, except December, when one is held on the 11th, chiefly for cattle; statute fairs for hiring servants are held on the Wednesdays preceding and following the 10th October.

CHIPPING-ONGAR, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, in the co. of Essex, 10 miles W. of Chelmsford, and N.W. of the Brentwood station of the Great Eastern line. It is a petty sessions and market town, and is situated on the river Roding. It is called Ongre in Doomsday, at which time it was held by Earl Eustace and came to Henry II., who built a castle here, of which a part yet remains. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £127, in the patron. of E. A. Bennett, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, possesses a monument to Lady Jane Cromwell, who was cousin to the Protector. There are charities to the value of £76 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. The Union workhouse which is situated here is a spacious building, erected at a cost of £4,100. There is a bridge over the river Roding, consisting of three arches. Roman remains have been found. Market day is Saturday, and there is a statute fair held on the 12th October.

CHIPPING-SODBURY, a par., market town, and municipal borough, in the lower div. of the hund. of Grumbalds Ash, in the co. of Gloucester, 1¾ mile N.E. of Yate railway station, 28 from Gloucester, and 11 N.E. from Bristol. It is situated near the river Frome, on the declivity of a hill, a spur of the Cotswolds. A considerable trade in cheese and malt was formerly carried on, but this is now transferred to Chippenham, which has become the great mart for cheese. The town contains a bank, free grammar school, with an endowment of £20 per annum, and the Union poorhouse. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £156, in the patron. of the Vicar of Old Sodbury. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, in the Gothic style, with square embattled tower, and several tombs. The Baptists, Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics have places of worship; and there are grammar and National schools. The town was incorporated by Charles II. for a mayor, &c., but the charter is now held by 1 bailiff and 12 burgesses, who have at their disposal several valuable charities. The town lands produce about £300 a year. Chipping Sodbury gives name to a Poor-law Union, comprising 26 parishes, though the Union poorhouse is situated in the par. of Yate. The petty sessions are held for the division of Sodbury once a fortnight, the Duke of Beaufort being chairman; and the County Court is held on the last Saturday of each month. Sodbury is also a registration district and a polling place for the county elections. The remains of a Roman encampment are to be seen on some hills about 3 miles distant, and near it is Little Sodbury Manor, where Tyndale began his translation of the Testament. The weekly market held on Friday has been made void by the monthly market established for cattle, pigs, sheep, cheese, &c., which is well attended, and held on the first Tuesday of each month. On Holy Thursday and 24th June fairs were formerly held for cattle, and on the Friday before the latter day, and on Michaelmas Day, for hiring servants.

CHIPPING-WARDEN, a hund. in the S.W. portion of the co. of Northampton, contains the pars. of Ashton-le-Walls, Boddington, Byfield, Chipping-Warden, Edgcott, Eydon, Greatworth, Sulgrave, and Woodford, comprising 21,370 acres.

CHIPPING-WARDEN, a par. in the hund. of Chipping-Warden, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles N. of Banbury, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Daventry. The Great Western railway passes within 6 miles of the village, and has a station at Banbury. The village, which was formerly a market town, is pleasantly situated on the turnpike road from Banbury to Daventry. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £277, in the patron. of Lady S. North. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a commodious stone edifice, in the decorated style, with square embattled and pinnacled tower, and galilee at the W. end. The Wesleyans have a place of worship here, and there is a National school, erected in 1832 by the Baroness North. There are charities arising from the town estate which amount to £81 per annum. Chipping-Warden Hall, formerly the residence of Lady North, is now a farmhouse. Here is a meet for the hounds of Mr. Drake. Lady North is lady of the manor. At Black-Grounds, a short distance from the village, is the site of the Roman station Brinavæ, covering about 40 acres, where coins and other antiquities have been found. Arbury Banks, also in the vicinity, is supposed to have been a Danish camp.

CHIPSTABLE, a par. in the hund. of Williton, in the co. of Somerset, 7 miles N.W. of the Wellington station, and 15 from Witchet. It is situated on the river Tone, which takes its rise on Brendon Hill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £340, in the patron. of C. H. Dare, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, in the Gothic style of architecture, and has been recently repaired. The register commences in 1694. Here is a National school for both sexes. Bulland Lodge is a beautiful seat, occupied by Arthur Capel, the lord of the manor.

CHIPSTEAD, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Reigate, in the co. of Surrey, 2 miles from the Merstham station of the London and Brighton line. Redhill is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £431, in the patron. of Colonel H. Jolliffe. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is supposed to be more than 800 years old. The charities amount to £16. Here the Wesleyans have a chapel. There is an endowed school with an income of about £70 a year, left by Mrs. Mary Stephen, for the apprenticing and instruction of poor children. Sir William Jolliffe is lord of the manor.

CHIRBURY, a hund. in the co. of Salop, in two divs. The upper contains the par. of Chirbury, with a portion of Church Stoke; the lower, the par. of Shelve, with parts of Worthen and Hyssington, comprising together 26,890 acres.

CHIRBURY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Chirbury, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles from Montgomery, and 18 S.W. of Shrewsbury. It is the Saxon Cyricbyrig, near Ethelfleda's Castle and Offa's Dyke. The village is very agreeably situated, in a fine and fertile valley, on the borders of Montgomeryshire. It had formerly a castle, which was said to have been built by Ethelfleda, Queen of the Mercians, and its ancient consequence is evident from its having given its name to the hundred. Here are the remains of an Austin abbey, founded by Robert de Boulers, in Henry III.'s time. The place is noted as having given the title of baron to the celebrated Edward Lord Herbert of Montgomery. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £200, in the patron. of the trustees of Shrewsbury grammar school, to whom the great tithes were granted by Queen Elizabeth. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was formerly in connection with Chirbury Priory. It is very ancient, having been restored by Humphrey de Winsbury (whose coat of arms it contains) in 1127. There are also two other churches in this parish — that at Marton, val. £45, and that at Middleton, val. £100, both of which are perpet. curs., and in the patron. of the vicar. Here is a school for boys, endowed by a former vicar, the Rev. Edward Lewis, who died in 1675. He left two farms for this purpose, out of the rent of which £20 a year to be paid to the schoolmaster, together with schoolhouse and garden, and whatever sum remained after the necessary repairs on the farms, to be equally distributed to 10 poor widows of the parish. There are likewise other charities, producing £7 per annum. Mr. Lewis left also a library for the use of the vicar and schoolmaster. This was the birthplace of Bishop Chirbury, who died 1497.

CHIRDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gaystead, in the north-western div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 5½ miles W. of Bellingham. It is situated on the Chirdon Burn.

CHIRK, a hund. in the S. portion of the co. of Denbigh, containing the pars. of Chirk, Llanarmon-Mynydd-Mawr, Llancadwalladr, Llangollen, Llanarmon-Dyrfryn-Ceiriog, Llansaintffraid-Glyn-Ceiriog, and parts of Llansilin, Llan-y-Mynech, and Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant.

CHIRK, a par. and small town in the hund. of Chirk, in the co. of Denbigh, 8 miles S.W. of Wrexham-Regis, and 191¾ from London by rail. It is a station on the Chester and Shrewsbury section of the Great Western railway, and is a petty sessions town. The great Holyhead road and the Ellesmere canal pass through the par., which includes the tnshps. of Brynkinalt, the seat of Lord Dungannon, Halton, and Pen-y-clawdd. The manor was formerly the head of a lordship, which belonged to the Mortimers. Henry II. was defeated here by Owen Gwynedd, in 1165. The modern town, which contains about 500 inhabitants, is situated on the brow of a limestone hill, in the midst of coal and lime works, and has several paper-mills, which give an aspect of considerable activity to the place. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £570, in the patron. of the bishop. The church contains monuments to several members of the Myddleton family, the chief of which is one to Sir Thomas Myddleton, the distinguished commonwealth leader in the Civil War. In the churchyard are several fine old yew-trees. The charities amount to £114 per annum. In the vicinity is a fine castellated mansion, the ancient seat of the Myddletons. It was originally built by Roger Mortimer, in the reign of Edward I., on the site of a more ancient fortress, called Castle Grogen, near the Berwyn hills, on the line of Offa's Dyke, which runs about a mile from the village. After passing through the hands of the Fitz-Alans, Stanleys, and others, it became the property of Lord St. John, who sold it to Sir Thomas Myddleton, afterwards Lord Mayor of London, in whose family it still remains. It was taken by the royalists in 1646, and afterwards by General Lambert, in 1659, who demolished a portion of the building. The castle, which was subsequently restored, is a square building, surrounding a quadrangle 160 feet by 100, and containing an oak gallery 100 feet in length, defended at each of the angles by a massive bastion tower; in the interior are several fine apartments, a chapel, and a gallery of pictures, with several good family portraits. In the tnshp. of Brynkinalt, on the river Dee, is the fine mansion of Lord Dungannon, recently rebuilt in the pointed style of architecture. Chirk is a meet for the Wynnstay hounds. Fairs for the sale of cattle, &c., are held on the 10th February and June, and the 12th August and November.

CHIRM, a vil. in the tnshp. of Wingates, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles S.E. of Rothbury.

CHIRNSIDE, a par. in the district of the Merse, in the co. of Berwick, Scotland. It is a burgh of barony, containing a vil. of the same name, 9 miles N.W. of Berwick, and 50 from Edinburgh. It has a station on the Dunse branch of the North British railway. The parish is bounded on the N. by the Billymire burn, and on the S. and W. by the Whitadder. Churnside Hill, a spur projecting from the Lammermoor hills, is remarkable for the great extent of its summit, and its gradual decline towards the Whitadder. The Rev. Henry Erskine, father of the Erskines who founded the Secession, was minister here after the Revolution of 1688. This parish is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and is in the patron. of Innes of Parsonsgreen. The stipend of the minister is £300. There is a Free church at Allanton; also United Presbyterian and Reformed Presbyterian churches at Chirnside. It has an annual fair in November.

CHIRTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tynemouth, in the eastern div. of Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 1 mile W. of Shields; it is a station on the Newcastle and Tynemouth line. The river Tyne passes through the tnshp., which is decreasing in population, owing to the collieries being worked out.

CHIRTON. See CHERRINGTON, co. Wilts.

CHISELBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Houndsborough, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles from the Crewkerne station of the London and Exeter direct line, and 5 W. of Yeovil. It is situated on the river Parret. The living is a rect.,* annexed to which is the cur. of West Chinnock, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, in the patron. of the Earl of Egremont. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a fine edifice in the Norman and early English styles of architecture; the nave was restored in 1842. The register commences in 1555. Here is a Wesleyan place of worship, and a school supported by the rector. The lord of the manor is J. M. Quantock, Esq. There is a fair for horses and cattle on the last Thursday in October.

CHISELDON, or CHISLEDON, a par. in the hund. of Kingsbridge, in the co. of Wilts, 8 miles S. of Highworth, and 4 from the Swindon railway station. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £173, in the patron. of H. Calley, Esq. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is a plain edifice, lately restored, and contains monuments to the Calley and Mellish families. The Methodists and Primitive Methodists have places of worship here and there is a National school for both sexes. The charities produce about £12 a year. T. Calley, Esq., is lord of the manor. Burdrop Park contains a substantial stone edifice, which is the seat of H. Calley, Esq.

CHISELHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Dorchester, in the co. of Oxford, 6 miles N.W. of Abingdon and 7½ S.E. of Oxford. It is situated on the river Thames. The Great Western railway passes within a few miles of the village, and has a station at Abingdon-road. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to which is the perpet. cur. of Stadhampton, val. together £155, in the dioc. of Oxford, in the patron. of C. Peers, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern edifice. Chiselhampton Lodge, a handsome mansion of red brick, with stone pilasters and pediment, surrounded by a park of 24 acres, was formerly the seat of the D'Oyly family, but is now the property of C. Peers, Esq., who is lord of the manor, and recorder of Henley-on-Thames.

CHISELHURST, a par. in the hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles E. of Bromley, and 2 from the St. Mary Cray railway station, on the Chatham and Dover line. It is pleasantly situated on the high road between Bromley and Crayford. The manor formerly belonged to the Walsinghams, of Scadbury (now a farmhouse), where Sir Francis Walsingham, Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth, and Lord Keeper Bacon, were born. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £487, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. There is also a district church at Sidcup, the living of which is a perpet cur.,* of the val. of £150, in the patron. of the rector. The parish church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a handsome flint edifice, with tower and spire, and fine peal of bells. The body of the church is in good condition, and the tower and spire new, the former having been destroyed by fire in 1857. In the church are monuments to the Berties, Walsinghams, Dr. Wallaston, Sir Philip Warwick, and other celebrities. The register dates from 1558. The charities amount to about £40 per annum. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have chapels, and there are National schools for both sexes, and also infant schools. The chief residences are Frognals, the elegant seat of Viscount Sydney, who inherits the manor through the Botetourts; Pheasant Grove, the seat of Lord Wynford, son of the late eminent Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, who was raised to the peerage for his services on the bench; and Camden Place, now the property of the Marquis of Camden, where the celebrated antiquary, Camden, wrote the annals of Queen Elizabeth, and died in 1623. In Camden Park may be seen the elegant piece of architecture which is commonly called the Lanthorn of Demosthenes, or choragic monument of Lysicrates. A pleasure fair is held on Wednesday after Whit-Sunday.

CHISENBURY, a tythg. in the par. of Enford, in the co. of Wilts, 8 miles W. of Ludgershall. It is situated on the river Avon, near Chisenbury camp, which occupied a site of 5 acres, and is 595 yards in circuit. The chief residence is Chisenbury Priory.

CHISHALL, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, in the co. of Essex, 4½ miles S.E. of Royston, and 6 from Saffron Walden. The Hitchin and Cambridge branch of the Great Eastern railway passes within a few miles of the village, and has a station at Royston. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £173, in the patron. of J. Wilkes, Esq. The parochial charities produce £6 per annum.

CHISHALL, LITTLE, a par. in the co. of Essex, as above, 1 mile to the S. of Great Chishall. The living, St. Nicholas, is a rect. annexed to that of Heydon.

CHISLETT, a par. in the hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles N.E. of Canterbury, its post town, and 10 from Ramsgate. It is situated on the river Stour, 3 miles from the Grove Ferry station of the South-Eastern line. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £231, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to

t. Mary, is a modern edifice in the early English style f architecture, with tower. Here the Independents nd Wesleyans have each a chapel; and there are free chools for both sexes, endowed with land by a former rchbishop of Canterbury, which now produces £45 per nnum. Taylor's charity, for the general benefit of the oor, produces £80 per annum.

CHISWICK, a par. in the Kensington div. of the und. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, forming sort of peninsula, nearly surrounded by the river hames, 7 miles by road, and 5 miles by the South-Western railway, from London. Chiswick is first mentioned in a record of the reign of Henry III.; and about he year 1731 a Roman urn and some silver coins were ound at Turnham Green.—There are two large reweries in Chiswick, and on the opposite side of the iver are the water-works of the West Middlesex Company. The island opposite Chiswick is the first to be et with up the Thames. Along the bank of the river re several wharves and maltings. The parish contains ,311 acres, with a population of 6,504, embracing all lasses of society. At Turnham Green and other choice situations are many pleasant villa residences, but in the ensely populated district of Chiswick New Town are great number of poor. The green has recently been nclosed by subscription, and a drinking-fountain erected. t the sole expense of J. P. Bull, Esq. Many local improvements in the drainage and paving of the town have ecently been undertaken by the Chiswick Improvement ommissioners, who are constituted a board under a pecial Act of Parliament.—The living is a vic.* in the ioc. of London, gross val. £550, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, which is edicated to St. Nicholas, has a very ancient tower, nd a recent examination of the structure has revealed very handsome roof of the 12th or 13th century, which ad been concealed by a plaster ceiling. It is much to e regretted that the vestry have resolved to destroy this ine relic of antiquity, which Mr. Scott, the architect, says might well be restored. The church, however, is unsafe till repaired, and is at present closed. It contains some ld and interesting monuments; and has two very handsome stained-glass windows. Sir John Chardin, the traveller, is buried in Chiswick churchyard; and there are monuments to Hogarth, who lived near Chiswick Field, in Hogarth-lane; to Chaloner, who worked the first alum-works in England; to Holland, the actor; Lord Macartney; the Duchesses of Cleveland and Somerset; the Countess of Falconberg, Cromwell's third daughter, who died at Sutton Court; Rose, the translator of "Sallust;" Loutherbourg, the painter; Kent, the landscape painter; Ralph, a political writer and Dunciad hero; Sharp, the engraver; Ugo Foscolo, the Italian patriot and author, and numerous other persons of eminence. There are also two other churches, viz., Christ Church, Turnham Green, a district parish church under the Marquis of Blandford's Act, in the patron. of the Bishop of London; it was built in 1843 chiefly by subscription, at a cost, with endowment, of £6,000, and is a good specimen of Gothic architecture; the other, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an elegant stone structure, erected in 1848 at the expense of J. C. Sharpe, Esq.—Chiswick is principally famous for the nursery gardens of the Horticultural Society of London, in which are raised all kinds of shrubs and flowers for the adornment of the new gardens at Kensington. Adjoining these nursery gardens is Chiswick House, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire, who owns a very large portion of the parish, which chiefly consists of market gardens. Chiswick House was built on the site of a house in which Sir Robert Carr, King James I.'s favourite, lived, in imitation of the Capra Villa, from a design by Earl Burlington. It has a double approach by two flights of stone steps, with a portico, and is crowned by an eight-sided dome; since Kent completed it, wings have been added by Wyatt. It contains some matchless works of art—as Charles I. and family, by Vandyck; Lord Clifford, date 1444, by Van Eyck; Rembrandt in his painting-room, by Douw; Belisarius, by Murillo; a Madonna, by Domenichino; Acis and Galatea, by Giordano; portrait of Mary Queen of Scots, by Zucchero, with many more by other celebrated masters, besides a fine collection of drawings and some sculpture, among which is the Hebe of Canova. The ornamental water in the park is supplied by the Thames. The gate of Beaufort House, Sir Thomas More's seat at Chelsea, is in the grounds; on it are inscribed some lines by Pope. The Emperor Alexander visited Chiswick House in 1815; and there both Fox and Canning died. There is also a mansion called Grove End, situated on the Thames, the western end of which is the terminating point of the Oxford and Cambridge rowing matches.

CHISWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Glossop, in the hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles S.W. of Glossop. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is a colliery in the neighbourhood and a cotton-spinning factory. The feast is held on the first Sunday in August.

CHITHURST, a par. in the hund. of Dumpford, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 2½ miles W. of Midhurst, its post town. It is situated on the river Rother, and is mentioned in Domesday as Titcherte, a part of Hamesford. It was the property of Peter Bottesworth in Queen Elizabeth's time. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Iping, in the dioc. of Lichfield, in the patron. of Lord Leconfield. The church is in the early English style of architecture. By the New Boundaries Act this parish is included in the borough of Midhurst.

CHITTERN. See CHILTERN, Wiltshire.

CHITTLEHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of South Molton, in the co. of Devon, 8 miles S.E. of Barnstaple, and 3 E. of the Umberleigh station of the North Devon line. South Molton is its post town. It is situated on the river Taw. The parish is chiefly agricultural, and has one lime quarry. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £575, in the patron. of the trustees of Lord Rolle. The parish church, dedicated to St. Hieritha, is an ancient stone edifice in the early English style of architecture, and possesses monuments to the Giffard and Rolle families, brasses, and a beautifully carved pulpit. There is also another church in this parish, the living of which is a perpet. cur. in the same patron. as the vic. The Wesleyans and Plymouth brethren have places of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes, besides infant schools. The annual value of the charities is about £40. There is an ancient cross on the South Molton road, not far from this place. A fair is held on the Tuesday following the 29th June. The trustees of Lord Rolle are lords of the manor.

CHITTOE, or CHITWAY, a tythg. in the par. of Bishop's Cannings, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Devizes, its post town and railway station, and the same distance from Chippenham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £90, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat modern edifice in the early English style of architecture. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes.

CHIVELSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles S. of Kingsbridge, its post town. It is pleasantly situated in a valley, and contains the hmlts. of Ford, South Allington, and Prawle. The South Devon railway passes within a few miles of the village, and has a station at Kingsbridge Road. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Stokenham, in the dioc. of Exeter, and in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Sylvester, is an old stone edifice, with a beautiful screen and curious pulpit. Thomas Newman, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHOBHAM, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Godley, in the co. of Surrey, 5 miles S.W. of Chertsey, and 3½ from the Woking station of the London and South-Western line. Farnborough is its post town. It is situated on the Bourn brook, not far from Chobham Ridge and Bagshot Heath. In the neighbourhood is the large military camp originally formed in 1800, and rendered permanent in 1853, when a royal pavilion and mess-rooms for the officers were built, round which a town has gradually been springing up. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the cur. of Holy Trinity annexed, £148, in the patron. of J. Thornton, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, partly in the Norman, Plantagenet, and Tudor styles of architecture, with square tower, and possesses an ancient font and alms-box. There is a chapel of ease at West End, which was built in 1842, by subscription and grants, and is endowed with £40 per annum. The Baptists have two places of worship and the Wesleyans one. There are charities to the amount of £100 per annum, besides £14 for the repair of the parish church. There are National schools for boys and girls. The lord of the manor is Lord Onslow, and the chief landowners are Sir William Abdy and Sir D. Le Merchant. Here coins have been found, and there are hills in the neighbourhood supposed to be barrows; also traces of Roman roads and camps. Pankhurst, Hyam's Lodge, and Westeroft are the principal seats.

CHOCKNELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, in the co. of Worcester, 6 miles W. of Worcester. It was formerly a separate parish.

CHOLDERTON, EAST, a tythg. in the par. of Amport, in the co. of Hants, 5 miles W. of Andover.

CHOLDERTON, WEST, a par. in the hund. and union of Amesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles W. of Amesbury, and 9 from Salisbury. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £225, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The charities produce about £12 per annum, and are applied to the support of a school. The principal residence is Cholderton Lodge.

CHOLLERFORD, a hmlt. in the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 1½ mile S. of Chollerton, and 5 N. of Hexham, by the Border Counties section of the North British railway, on which it is a station.

CHOLLERTON, a par. in the north-eastern div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 6½ miles N. of Hexham, its post town. It is a station on the Border Counties of the North British railway. It is situated on the river Tyne, which bounds it on the W. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Barrasford, Broomhope with Buteland, Chollerton, Colwell with Swinburn, Little Swinburn, Whitside, Low Gunnerton, and Chipchase. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £361, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Bird. The parish church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient stone structure, in the early English style, and possesses a register dating from 1647. There is a district church at Birtley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £84, in the patron. of the Duke of Northumberland. Birtley is a parochial chapelry, divided into High and Low Birtley, and has a good Sunday and day school. There are also National schools at Gunnerton. Chipchase Castle, the ancient seat of the Herons, is a fine building, commanding a view of the Tyne and surrounding country; it is at present in the occupation of H. Taylor, Esq. In the township of Gunnerton are lime works and collieries. The parish comprises several manors named after the townships, in the possession of the Duke of Northumberland, Sir John Swinburne, and others.

CHOLMONDELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, in the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 4 miles from Malpas, and 6 miles N.E. of Nantwich. Cholmondeley Castle, rebuilt in 1804, is the seat of the Marquis of Cholmondeley. It is a fine building in the Norman style, situated on an eminence, and surrounded with beautiful grounds. The old hall was garrisoned by the royalists in 1643, and taken by the Earl of Denbigh the year after. Not far from the castle stands the domestic chapel, which is a neat brick building.

CHOLMONDSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, in the hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 4½ miles N.W. of Nantwich. It is situated on the Over and Nantwich road, and is intersected by the Shropshire canal and the London and North-Western railway (Chester and Crewe branch). The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship.

CHOLSALL, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Helen, in the hund. of Hormer, in the co. of Berks, 1 mile N.W. of Abingdon.

CHOLSEY, a par. in the hund. of Moreton, in the co. of Berks, 3 miles S.W. of the Wallingford, and 1½ mile from Wallingford Road station of the Great Western line, which intersects this parish. The parish is bounded by the Thames, which is here crossed by the railway bridge. An abbey formerly stood here, which was founded by Ethelred as an atonement for the murder of his brother, which, with the manor, came to Lord Kensington through the Warwicks. The village, which is widely scattered, is about 1½ mile from the bank of the Thames. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £340, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built about the 11th century, and is in good repair. In the churchyard stands a yew tree said to be 900 years old. The charities are of the value of £3 per annum. James Morrison, M.P., is lord of the manor.

CHOLSTREY, a tnshp. in the par. of Leominster, in the co. of Hereford, 2 miles W. of Leominster.

CHOPGATE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bilsdale-Midcable, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles S.E. of Stokesley.

CHOPPINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bedlington, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles E. of Morpeth. It is situated on the river Wansbeck, which is here crossed by a bridge.

CHOPWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Winlaton, in the western div. of Chester ward, in the co. of Durham, 7 miles W. of the Blaydon railway station on the Newcastle and Carlisle line, and 8 S.W. of Gateshead, near the river Derwent. Here is a chapel of ease. The Marquis of Bute is lord of the manor, and possesses some very extensive coal-mines.

CHOREN. See CHURCHDOWN, Gloucestershire.

CHORLEY, a par. and market town, in the hund. of Leyland, in the co. of Lancaster, 32 miles S.E. of Lancaster, and 208 N.W. of London by road, or 210 by the North-Western and Lancashire and Yorkshire railways, on the latter of which it is a principal station. The town is pleasantly situated on an eminence in the centre of the country, on the great western road from London to the N., near the Leeds and Liverpool canal, which, in conjunction with the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, affords facilities for the carriage of goods to all parts of the kingdom. The small river Chor runs into the Yarrow about a mile below the town. From the former stream Chorley derives the first syllable of its name, and the last from the family of Ley, its ancient proprietors, who have also given their name to the hundred. In ancient times the town was of small importance, and Leland describes it as a "wonderful poore, rather no market town;" but of late years it has become fast rising in prosperity, and has more than quadrupled in extent and population during the present century. The town is lighted with gas, and is well supplied with water, which can be raised to the roofs of the highest buildings. Chorley has some beautiful scenery round it, and in the neighbourhood are several elegant mansions. The chief articles of manufacture are calicoes, muslins, and ginghams. The town contains nine cotton factories, two print-works, two weaving sheds, bleach-works, and a paper-mill, and in the vicinity are found, in large quantities, coal, slate, iron-ore, and millstone, all of which are worked, and afford employment to a great number of the inhabitants. Four miles from the town are several mines of lead-ore and alum shale, with carbonate of barytes. A new patent brick and drain-tile manufactory has been recently established. The government of the town is vested in a chief constable and visiting magistrates, who hold their weekly meetings in the townhall, a neat stone building, erected in 1802 at the sole expense of the late John Hollinshead, Esq. The under part of the building is open, and is used as a market-house. There are also a dispensary, established in 1828, a savings-bank, and a bath-house attached to the mineral spa, which takes its rise in the inity of the town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. Manchester, val. £1,022, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Master, incumbent. The church, dedicated to St. wrence, is an ancient edifice, with a beautiful porch in Norman style on the S. side. The tower, which is battled and has pinnacles, is of later date. It formerly possessed a relic, brought from Normandy by Sir wland Stanley, said to have been the head of its elary saint. Besides the parish church there are two w churches, one dedicated to St. George, the other to Peter; the livings of both are perpet. curs.* in the t of the rector. St. George's church is an elegant odern structure, with a square embattled tower, conning 2,012 sittings, 1,590 of which are free. It was mpleted in 1825, under the direction of the Parliantary Commissioners, at a cost of near £14,000. St. ter's church is of recent erection. The Independents, esleyans, Primitive Methodists, Baptists, Unitarians, d Roman Catholics have chapels. There is a gramar school adjoining the churchyard, with a small dowment, besides National, infant, Roman Catholic, d Dissenting schools. An almshouse for six aged perns was endowed in 1682 by Hugh Cooper, and there e other charities for the benefit of the poor. Chorley the head of a County Court district and Poor-law nion, containing 26 parishes and townships. Petty sesns for the division are held weekly, and a court-leet nually by the lord of the manor, H. H. Fazakerley, sq. Tuesday is market day, and fairs are held for rned cattle on the 26th March, and the 5th May; for orses on the 21st October; and for woollen cloth, hardare, and pedlery on the 4th September and two followng days.

CHORLEY, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Wilmslow, the hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. of Chester. It is a tation on the Manchester and Birmingham railway, and s about 13 miles by rail from the former place, 6 N.W. f Macclesfield, and 8 from Stockport. The village, which is not large, is one of the most fashionable suburbs f Manchester, and contains many fine mansions. The iving is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, in the patron. of Sir T. J. Trafford, Bart. The church, a new nd beautiful stone edifice, is dedicated to St. Philip. The Methodists of the New Connexion have a chapel, nd there is a parochial school for both sexes.

CHORLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Farewell, in the southern div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, miles S. of Stafford, and about 4 from the Armitage tation of the Trent Valley branch of the London and North-Western railway. Chorley Place, to the S.E. of his village, is a handsome modernised edifice.

CHORLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrenbury, in the hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles N.W. of Wrenbury. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The Marquis of Cholmondeley is lord of the manor.

CHORLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles N. of Cleobury Mortimer.

CHORLEY WOOD, a chplry. in the par. of Rickmansworth, and hund. of Cashio, in the co. of Herts, 2 miles N.W. of Rickmansworth. It is situated in a flat country near the Grand Junction canal, where the river Chess joins the Colne. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £40, in the patron. of W. Hayward, Esq. This place was given with the manor of Rickmansworth by King Offa to St. Alban's Abbey, and was held by bishops Ridley and Bonner. In the vicinity are several silk, paper, and corn-mills.

CHORLTON, a chplry. in the par. of Eccleshall, in the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles N. of the Standon railway station, 6 from Eccleshall, and 36 from Chester. It contains the tnshps. of Chorlton Hill, and Stableford Bridge. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £105, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which was rebuilt in 1827, is dedicated to St. Lawrence. Sir Henry Broughton, Bart., owner of the greater portion of the land, is lord of the manor.

CHORLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, in the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles W. of Malpas. Chorlton Hall, restored in 1847, is a fine building, occupied by the lord of the manor, T. C. Clutton, Esq.

CHORLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, and hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 5 miles E.S.E. of Nantwich. It is intersected by the London and North-Western railway. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

CHORLTON-BY-BACKFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Backford, in the higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. of Chester, 4 miles N. of Chester, and 1½ E. of Mollington railway station.

CHORLTON-CUM-HARDY, a chplry. in the par. of Manchester, in the hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Manchester. It is pleasantly situated about a mile from the river Mersey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £103, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is a brick edifice. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, erected in 1827. The chief employment of the inhabitants is market-gardening. The charities produce about £8 per annum.

CHORLTON HILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, in the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford.

CHORLTON-ON-MEDLOCK, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Manchester, in the co. of Lancaster. See MANCHESTER.

CHOSELEY, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Smithdon, in the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles W. of Burnham Market, and owned by C. N. Rolfe, Esq.

CHOULESBURY, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, in the co. of Bucks, 3 miles from Tring, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Aylesbury. The North-Western railway passes within 3 miles of the village, and has a station at Tring. Here is a Saxon or British camp, known as Bury Banks, 1 mile in circumference, the fosse of which, in some places, is still 20 feet deep. It is supposed to be the site of an ancient British village, subsequently used by the Romans as a military station. In 1832 the poor-rate having risen to 30*s.* in the pound, the allotment system was tried, and has been in operation in the parish ever since. It has completely succeeded in restoring property to its just value, and in redeeming the parish from its degraded state of pauperism. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £41, in the patron. of the trustees of Mrs. Neale. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The charities amount to £122 per annum.

CHOULTON, a tnshp. in the par. of North Lydbury, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles E. of Bishop's Castle. It is situated on the river Onny.

CHOWLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Coddington, in the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 1½ mile from Coddington church.

CHRISHALL, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, in the co. of Essex, 5 miles W. of Saffron Walden, and 5 from the Audley End railway station of the Great Eastern line. Royston is its post town. It is entered in Domesday Book under its present name, which it is said to have possessed in Edward the Confessor's time. A considerable part of the parish is common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £304, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, with tower, and contains some brasses, amongst which is one of a knight and his lady canopied, dated 1370. The register commences 1663. There are some small charities. Chrishall Park contains a circular earthwork and ditch.

CHRISTCHURCH, a hund. in the S.W. portion of the Lymington and Ringwood divs. of the co. of Hants, divided into upper and lower. The former contains the pars. of Hordle, Milford, Milton, and part of Boldre; the latter, the par. of Sopley and part of Christchurch, comprising 14,860 acres, exclusive of Christchurch.

CHRISTCHURCH, a par., market town, parliamentary borough, and seaport, in the Ringwood div. of the hund. of Christchurch and lib. of Westover, in the co. of Hants, 24 miles S.W. of Southampton, and 101 from London by road. The Southampton and Dorchester branch of the South-Western railway has a station at Christchurch Road, about 7½ miles from the town.—Christchurch was called by the Saxons Twynham, Twynamburne and Twoon-ea, in consequence of its situation between the rivers Avon and Stour, whose streams meet a little below the town, and fall into the sea at Christchurch Bay, forming a harbour which is accessible only to small ships, and that at high water, which, however, occurs twice every tide. It is a sub-port to Southampton, and was at an early period a place of considerable importance in respect of its situation with regard to the Isle of Wight and the coast of France. Roman and British remains have been found in the neighbourhood; but the first historical mention of it occurs in the Saxon Chronicle, where it is spoken of as the place to which Ethelwold retired during his revolt against his cousin-german, Edward the Elder. In the Domesday Book it is described as a royal manor and borough, containing 21 messuages, and paying an annual tax of 6*d*. The manor afterwards passed to the Montacutes, earls of Salisbury, who rebuilt the magnificent church in the 15th century, and it continued in their possession till the time of the famous Margaret Countess of Salisbury, who was beheaded by Henry VIII. in her 70th year. It afterwards passed through various hands till 1790, when it was purchased by the Right Hon. George Rose, whose family hold the royalties of the rivers Avon and Stour at this part of their course.—The town, which is increasing, is well supplied with water, but indifferently lighted and paved. It contains a branch bank, two breweries, and several manufactories for watch fusee chains, in which about 500 persons, chiefly women and children, are employed. The local affairs of the town are managed by a mayor, recorder, and burgesses, assisted by a town clerk; but the judicial affairs are in the hands of the county magistrates. Previous to the Reform Bill the borough returned two members to parliament, but since then only one. The electoral district contains about 5,332 acres, with 1,837 inhabited houses, and a population, according to the census of 1861, of 9,386, against 7,476 in 1851, showing an increase of no less than 1,911 in the decennial period. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, of a County Court district, and a petty sessions town, the county magistrates holding their meetings here every second Monday in the month. Courts leet and baron are also held for the manor. The par. includes the chplry. of Holdenhurst, and the tythgs. of Bure, Hinton-Admiral, Hurn, Parley, Iford, Tuckton, Winkton, and Burton.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the cur. of Holdenhurst, to which it is annexed, £166, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. There are five other churches, all of which are perpet. curs. That of Branagoro, val. £73, in the patron. of T. Jesson, Esq.; Hinton-Admiral, val. £72, in the patron of Sir G. Gervis and the vicar alternately; Bournemouth, val. £60, in the patron. of Sir G. Gervis; Highcliffe, in the patron. of Earl Canning; and Pokesdown, val. £60, in the patron. of the vicar. The parish church is a very spacious and remarkable edifice, having much the character of a cathedral, and was once the monastic church. It is a large cruciform structure, 311 feet long, with a fine embattled tower at the W. end, rising to the height of 120 feet. It consists of a nave with aisles, choir with aisles, a Lady chapel and transepts, with chapels attached, the most interesting of which is the mortuary chapel, erected by Margaret Plantagenet, Countess of Salisbury, during her life. This latter building is an exceedingly good specimen of the florid perpendicular style, with a richly carved roof of fan tracery. The church itself is of the later and decorated styles of Norman architecture, with examples of the perpendicular in the choir, and a double row of massive Norman pillars in the nave, which is 118 feet long. The interior contains one of the finest sculptured altar-pieces in England, representing the genealogy of Christ; and also several monumental effigies. Among others may be mentioned one by Sir Francis Chantrey, and another by Flaxman, to the late Viscountess Fitzharris, in which that lady is represented teaching her children the Scriptures. The designs of the stalls and seats of the priory chancel exhibit a series of satirical and grotesque carvings. At various times during the present century this venerable pile has been repaired and to a great extent restored. Of the other priory buildings, the only portion left is the lodge, a little to the S. of the church. The first foundation of the priory, originally dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is involved in obscurity; but Camden states that it was in early Saxon times founded on an ancient heathen temple. In Edward the Confessor's reign, the priory contained one prior and 24 canons, and afterwards fell into the hands of Ralph Flambard, Bishop of Durham, upon whom it was bestowed by William II., and who rebuilt the church, dedicating it to Christ. It was on this occasion that the town assumed its present appellation of Christchurch, instead of its ancient name, Twynham. This circumstance is thus accounted for by the monkish legend which relates the history of the building of the church. "In order to expedite so good a work, Heaven aided the bishop with supernatural assistance, a supernumerary workman being always observed during the hours of labour, though at the times of refreshment and receiving wages only the stated number appeared. By his aid everything prospered till the fabric was nearly finished, when on raising a large beam to a particular situation where it was intended to be fixed, it was found to be too short. No remedy appearing, the embarrassed workmen retired to their dwellings. On returning to the church the ensuing morning, they discovered that the beam had been placed in its right position, and was now extended a foot longer than was requisite. Speechless with surprise, the additional workman recurred to their thoughts, and on recovering their tongues, they agreed that no other than our Saviour could have thus assisted them; and on this account, concludes the story, was the edifice dedicated to Christ." The miraculous beam is still pointed out by the finger of credulity, though but a small portion of the original structure remains, the greater part of the present edifice having been rebuilt in the 15th century. After the fall of Bishop Flambard from power, the priory and its possessions were granted to Baldwin, son of Richard de Rivers, in Henry I.'s time, by whom the order was changed from secular to regular canons. According to Speed the annual revenue of the priory, at the Dissolution, was £544 6*s*.; but Dugdale says £317 7*s*. 9*d*. It was afterwards granted by Henry VIII. to the inhabitants for a parochial church, when only one book, "Legenda aliquot Regum, Saxonicè," was found in the library. The Roman Catholics have a chapel, and there are Independent and Wesleyan places of worship, the former having attached to it large school-rooms for boys and girls. There are likewise National, British, and infant schools, besides an endowed grammar school. Connected with the church are several charities: Clingan's gift for apprenticing poor boys—average income about £128; Admiral Brown's gift, income £80, for the poor; Magdalene charity, formerly a hospital for lepers, but now distributed to the poor—income about £58; and several others, the income of which amounts to £80.—On the site of the ancient priory is a house, which in 181 was the temporary residence of the late king of the French, Louis Philippe; and near it stand the ruins of the old castle, a portion of the keep or citadel and of the state apartments, which alone remain. In the immediate vicinity of the town, about 1½ mile to the N., at a place called St. Catherine's Hill, may be traced the lines of several ancient entrenchments, also an exploratory camp with some mounds and barrows scattered round it. The market day is Monday; and fairs are held on Trinity Thursday and October 17th, for horses and sheep.

CHRISTCHURCH, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Caldicott, in the co. of Monmouth, 2 miles E. of Newport, its post town and railway station. It is situated near the river Usk, which flows to the N. of the parish, and includes the hmlt. of Caerton-ultra-Pontem. Pett, sions are held in the village. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, united with the cur. of St. John the Evangelist, and in the patron. of Eton College. The church is chiefly in the Gothic style. There are charities to the val. of £65 per annum.

CHRISTCHURCH, a precinct in the city of Canterbury, in the co. of Kent. See CANTERBURY.

CHRISTCHURCH, a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Oxford, all comprised within the co. of Oxford, except the parish of Binsey.

CHRISTCHURCH, a par. in the city of Bristol, in the co. of Gloucester. See BRISTOL.

CHRISTCHURCH, NEWGATE-STREET, a par. in the city of London, within the walls, in the co. of Middlesex. See LONDON.

CHRISTCHURCH ROAD STATION, an ext. par. place, in the Ringwood div. of the hund. of Fordingbridge, in the co. of Hants.

CHRISTCHURCH, SOUTHWARK, a par. in the borough of Southwark, in the co. of Surrey. See SOUTHWARK.

CHRISTCHURCH, SPITALFIELDS, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex. See SPITALFIELDS.

CHRIST COLLEGE, an ext. par. place in the lib. of Cambridge University, in the co. of Cambridge. See CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.

CHRIST COLLEGE, an ext. par. place, in the borough of Brecon, in the co. of Brecon.

CHRISTIAN-MALFORD, a par. in the northern div. of the hund. of Damerham, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles N.E. of Chippenham, its post town. The Great Western line runs through it. It is called Cristemelford in Domesday Survey, at which time it was possessed by the abbots of Glastonbury. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £672, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with tower. There is a National school for both sexes. Anciently the Herberts had a seat here. It is a meet for the Beaufort hounds. The Earl of Carnarvon is lord of the manor.

CHRISTIANITY, three deaneries of this name in the dioceses of Exeter, Peterborough, and Lincoln respectively.

CHRISTIONYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruabon, in the co. of Denbigh, 2 miles N.W. of Chirk.

CHRISTLETON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 2½ miles S.E. of Chester. It comprises the tnshps. of Christleton, Rowton, Littleton, Cotton Edmunds, and Cotton Abbots. The North-Western railway passes at a short distance from the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £900, in the patron. of the Rev. E. T. Evans. The church, dedicated to St. James, was built in 1739; it is a beautiful edifice in the decorated style, and has a peal of eight bells. The Independents have a chapel, and there are National and Sunday schools for both sexes. A great deal of cheese is made in this parish.

CHRISTMAS COMMON, a lib. in the par. of Pirton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles S.E. of Watlington.

CHRISTON, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, in the co. of Somerset, 5½ miles from the Banwell station of the Bristol and Exeter railway, and 4 N.W. of Axbridge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £99, in the patron. of C. R. Wainwright, Esq. The church is a stone edifice in the Norman style of architecture, and was repaired in 1845. The register commences in 1559. The lord of the manor is C. R. Wainwright, Esq.

CHRISTOW, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles N.W. of Chudleigh, and 8 from Exeter, its post town. It is situated on the river Teign, not far from the South Devon railway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £157, in the patron. of Viscount Exmouth. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tomb of the great admiral, Lord Exmouth, who is buried here; also a Norman font and carved screen. The charities produce about £30 per annum. The silver and lead mines employ a large portion of the inhabitants.

CHRIST'S KIRK, a par., anciently distinct, but now joined to that of Kinnethmont, in the district of Alford, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. The church is in ruins. A fair called "Sleepy Market" was formerly held here during the night in the month of May, but has long been discontinued.

CHRYSTON, a vil. in the par. of Cadder, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is situated on the road from Glasgow to Cumbernauld.

CHUDLEIGH, or CHIDLEIGH, a market town and par. in the hund. of Exminster, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles N.E. of Newton-Abbott railway station, and 10 S. of Exeter. It is situated on an eminence near the E. bank of the river Teign, and was formerly the residence of the bishops of Exeter, who had a magnificent palace here, some remains of which still exist. In 1309 Bishop Stapleton procured for it the grant of a weekly market and fair. During the civil war of Charles I. the forces of General Fairfax were quartered here. In 1807 a large portion of the town, comprising 166 houses and property to the value of £60,000, was destroyed by fire. The greater part of the present town is therefore modern, and consists principally of one street, but the houses are small and only indifferently supplied with water. In the neighbourhood are large quarries of marble and limestone, which afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £350, in the patron. of trustees for the inhabitants. The church, dedicated to St. Martin and the Virgin Mary, is an ancient Gothic edifice, and possesses a beautiful font, screen, and stained-glass windows. The church has of late years undergone various repairs. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Independents have places of worship. There are National schools for both sexes, and infant schools, supported by voluntary contributions. A free grammar school was founded in 1668 by John Pynsent, a native of this parish. Lord Clifford is lord of the manor, and resides at Ugbrook Park near this place. In the park is a Roman camp, and a Danish one near it. Chudleigh Rock, commanding a beautiful view, consists of a large mass of limestone with a cavern in it, from whence an intermitting stream issues. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on Easter Monday, the third Tuesday and Wednesday in June, and the 20th October.

CHULMLEIGH, a par. and market town in the hund. of Witheridge, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles N.E. of the Eggesford railway station on the North Devon line. It is situated on the river Dart, where it joins the Taw, and was anciently called Chimleighe. The manor formerly belonged to the Courtenays, earls of Devon, one of whom, John de Courtenay, in the reign of Henry III., obtained for it the grant of a weekly market. In the reign of Henry VIII. it was granted to the Earl of Bedford, and afterwards became the property of the widow of Lord Grey. In 1645 a skirmish took place here between a company of royalists, under Colonel Okey, and the parliamentary forces, in which the latter were routed. In 1803 a large part of the town was consumed by fire. The houses are low, with thatched roofs, except a few modern edifices, which are well built. This town had once a large trade in wool-combing, which has now declined. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £415, in the patron. of the Rev. Robert Hole. The church (formerly collegiate) is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. It is a commodious building in the early perpendicular style of architecture. The Independents and Bible Christians have places of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes. Petty sessions are held in the town, which is a polling place for the northern division of the county. Friday is market day, and there is a fair on Easter Monday, and another on the last Wednesday in July. The Rev. Peter Johnson is lord of the manor.

CHUNALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Glossop, in the hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles S. of Glossop, on the Hayfield road. Here are woollen, candlewick, and paper factories.

CHURCH, a tythg. in the par. of Bishop's Lydeard, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Taunton.

CHURCH, a vil. in the bar. of Gallen, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Swineford.

CHURCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbister, in the co. of Radnor, 11 miles W. of Knighton.

CHURCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandewy Ystradenny, in the co. of Radnor, 9 miles W. of Rhayader.

CHURCH, a tythg. in the par. of Ilminster, in the co. of Somerset, near Ilminster.

CHURCH, a quarter in the chplry. of Crosthwaite, in the co. of Westmoreland, 4 miles W. of Kendal.

CHURCHAM, a par. partly in the hund. of Westbury, and partly in the lower div. of the hund. of Dudstone, in the co. of Gloucester, 12 miles E. of Ross, and 5 N.W. from Gloucester. It is situated not far from the South Wales railway. Good crops both of grain and grass are produced here, the soil being red loamy clay. The arable land is more in proportion than the pasture. The river Severn passes to the S. of the par., which includes the hmlts. of Over, Highnam, and Linton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. with the cur. of Bulley, £386, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. There is a district church at Highnam, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £130, in the patron. of T. G. Parry, Esq. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is in the Norman style, having a low spire with six bells. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The chief landowners are the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester.

CHURCH-ASTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Edgmond, hund. of South Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile S. of Newport, its post town and railway station. There are some valuable quarries. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Edgmond, in the dioc. of Lichfield, in the patron. of the Rev. J. D. Pigott. The church is a neat building with a tower. There are National schools for boys and girls. R. M. Leeke, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CHURCH BRAMPTON. See BRAMPTON CHURCH, Northamptonshire, and the like for other places with the prefix "Church," not given here.

CHURCHDOWN, or CHOREN, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Dudstone, in the co. of Gloucester, 3½ miles from the Gloucester railway station on the old road leading from Gloucester to Cheltenham. The Great Western and Midland railways pass through the parish. The village is pleasantly situated in an extensive vale, but the church is built on Marlstone Hill, about 2,500 feet in height; from this circumstance the parish was called by the Saxons Circes dune, or "The church on the down." The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £78, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure with square tower, in which is inscribed, "This belhous was buylded in the yere of our Lord God, 1601." The commuted tithe is £1,214 a year. An elegant stone parsonage-house was built in 1862 through the exertions of the incumbent, the Rev. Fred. Smithe, F.G.S. There is also a district church at Hucclecote, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of the bishop. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is a charity school, endowed in 1734 with £25 a year by H. Windowe, Esq., and four almshouses for poor widows. The celebrated Greek professor, John Harmer, was born here in 1594. He wrote Latin and Greek panegyrics on Oliver Cromwell, on Richard his son, and on Charles II., but the works for which he is remembered are "Lexicon Etymologicum," "Praxis Grammatica," and "Janua Linguarum."

CHURCH EATON, a par. in the western div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 6 miles from Newport, and 5½ from Penkridge, its post town and railway station of the Birmingham and Stafford branch of the North-Western line. It is situated near the Birmingham and Liverpool canal, and contains Marston and six other hamlets. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £976, in the patron. of the Earl of Shrewsbury. The church is dedicated to St. Edith, and is principally in the Norman style of architecture. The parochial charities produce about £202 per annum, of which £128 is the revenue of the grammar school. In the vicinity was discovered a curious slab of stone, with the imprint of the feet of cattle or deer.

CHURCH END, a hmlt. in the par. of Tidenham, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Chepstow.

CHURCH END, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunmow, in the co. of Essex, 1 mile N. of Dunmow.

CHURCH END, a tnshp. in the par. of Shenley, in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Bucks, 2 miles S. of Biggleswade.

CHURCH END, a vil. in the par. of Willesden, in the co. of Middlesex, 4 miles N.E. of London.

CHURCH END, a hmlt. in the par. of Hendon, in the co. of Middlesex. Here formerly stood a seat of the abbots of Westminster.

CHURCHENFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Church Stanton, in the co. of Devon, 9 miles S. of the Taunton railway station. The Baptists have a chapel and school. Royston House is a fine building, delightfully situated, and near it are remains of an ancient church. Cattle fairs are held on the 25th and 26th January, and on the last Friday in April.

CHURCH ENSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Enstone, in the hund. of Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford. The parish church is situated in this portion of the village. There are National schools for both sexes.

CHURCHFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Oundle, in the co. of Northampton. Formerly this place possessed a chapel.

CHURCH-GATE, a hmlt. 4 miles N.W. of Epping, in the co. of Essex.

CHURCH-GRESLEY, a par. in the hund. of Repton and Gresley, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles S.E. of Burton-on-Trent, 4 from Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and 6 from Derby. It is a station on the Midland railway. The par., which is rapidly increasing, includes the tnshps. of Drakelowe, Church-Gresley, Castle-Gresley, and Linton. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £190, in the patron. of the Rev. George Lloyd. There is also a district church at Swadlincote, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val.* £80, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Gresley. The church at Gresley is dedicated to SS. Mary and George, and contains monuments of the Gresley and Aleyne families. It was erected by Nigel de Gresley in the reign of Henry I., who founded likewise a priory of Austin monks, all traces of which have disappeared. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes. The collieries and potteries employ a great part of the inhabitants. Sir Thomas Gresley, Bart., is lord of the manor.

CHURCH-HILL, a hmlt. in the bar. of O'Neiland, in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated on the river Blackwater, near Verner's Bridge, about 3 miles from Charlemont. Adjoining the village is Church Hill, the seat of the Verners.

CHURCH-HILL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated on Lough Neagh, nearly 7 miles from Letterkenny, its post town. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and a dispensary. In the vicinity are several fine seats. Fairs are held on the 14th May, 30th August, and 30th November.

CHURCH-HILL, a vil. in the par. of Inishmacsaint, in the bar. of Magheraboy, in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 9 miles from Enniskillen. It is situated near the lakes Carrick and Erne, on the old coach road to Ballyshannon. Here is a church and district dispensary. The ruins of the old church and Tully Castle still remain. Fairs are held on the 14th May, 30th August, and 30th November.

CHURCH HONEYBOURNE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles from Evesham, its post town. The Oxford and Worcester line runs through this village, the station of which is about a mile distant from the church. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £286, in the patron. of the Rev. R. Poole. The church, dedied to St. Eegwin, is an ancient stone structure in the ly English style, with a beautiful spire of later date. has not long since been repaired and internally altered the sole cost of Mrs. Williams, widow of the late vicar, o at her death bequeathed £3,500 (Red. Three per nt. stock) for the future repair of this edifice and the ish church of Cow Honeybourne.

CHURCH HULME, or HOLMES CHAPEL, a plry. and tnshp. in the par. of Sandbach, in the hund. Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 3½ miles N. of ndbach, and 4 E. of Middlewich. It is a station on London and North-Western railway. The living is erpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120, in the ron. of the vicar. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, an ancient edifice in the Gothic style, with square battled tower, and contains monuments and a register mmencing in 1680. The Wesleyans have a place of rship, and there is a school for both sexes. The nual value of the charities is about £2 13s. Fairs horses, cattle, and sheep are held on the first Wedsday after the 13th April, on the 12th October, and 27th vember. Lawrence Armitsead, Esq., is lord of the nor.

CHURCHILL, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, the co. of Somerset, 13 miles from Bristol, 5 N. of bridge, and 5 from the Yatton station of the Great estern railway. It is delightfully situated in a valley, r the old turnpike road leading from Bristol to Bridgter. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath d Wells, val. £98, in the patron. of the Dean and apter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. John Baptist, is in the perpendicular style of architecture, d contains monuments and a brass; among the former one with some beautiful lines, said to be the comsition of the celebrated Dr. Donne. The register mmences in 1650. There are Independent and Wesyan chapels, and a National school for both sexes. urchill Court, once the seat of the Churchills, ancesrs of the celebrated Duke of Marlborough, is situated ar the church, and at Upper Langford are the remains the seat of the Jennings family, which, like Churchill urt, is now used as a farmhouse. Situated near Langrd is Langford House, a neat edifice with beautiful rounds. From the balconies of Mendip Lodge may seen the Bristol Channel and some of the Welsh ountains. On Dolberrow Hill are the remains of ancient camp, supposed to be of Danish construcn, but in which both Roman and Saxon coins have en discovered; it occupies more than 30 acres, and is rtified with a double vallum. Calamine is found, and one time afforded employment to many of the inhabits, having been used in the composition of brass, but use is now discontinued by reason of the discovery of cheaper process.

CHURCHILL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of swaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles S.E. of Worcester, its post town. The Birmingham and Bristol ction of the Midland railway passes through the parish. he living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £167, the patron. of Robert Berkeley, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a small and very ancient lifice, constructed in the early English style. There is sum of £6 annually spent on bread for the poor, left by homas Barker, Esq. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

CHURCHILL, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, in he co. of Oxford, 3 miles S.W. of Chipping Norton, its ost town. It is a station on the West Midland railway. This parish is principally remarkable for having een the birthplace of Warren Hastings, whose father as the incumbent of the parish. He was born in 1733, lucated at Westminster, and at the age of 17 went out India as a writer in the service of the East India ompany. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, al. £177, in the patron. of J. H. Langstone, Esq. The urch, dedicated to All Saints, is a fine building with wer. The charities amount to £18 per annum. Here an endowed free school for both sexes. Sir John C. eade, Bart., is lord of the manor.

CHURCHILL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 3 miles N.E. of Kidderminster. It is a railway station on the Worcester and Wolverhampton railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £255, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Turner. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small ancient edifice. Here is a free school with an annual endowment of about £30, arising from property left by Richard Penne.

CHURCH-ISLAND; there are three small islands of this name—one in Lough Sheelin, which lies between the cos. of Meath, Westmeath, Cavan, and Longford; another in Lough Beg, in the co. of Londonderry; and the third in Lough Gill, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. There are some ruins on the islands.

CHURCH-JERPOINT, or JERPOINT-EAST, a par. in the bar. of Knocktopher, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile on the road between Thomas town, its post town, and Waterford. It is bounded by the river Nore on the N.E., and contains the vil. of Stonyford. Limestone and lead have been discovered in the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, in the patron. of the crown. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Kilmanogue, and four dayschools, but no church. In the vicinity are the ruins of two churches. The principal residences are Mount-Juliet (the seat of the Earl of Carrick), Floodhall, and Jerpoint House.

CHURCH-KIRK, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Whalley, in the lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles E. of Blackburn. It includes the tnshps. of Church, Oswaldtwistle, and Huncoat, and is intersected by the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and by the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. Oswaldtwistle adjoins the township of Blackburn, on the E. side; Church being 4 miles, and Huncoat 6 miles distant on the E. from that town. The population has trebled in the last half century, and is still rapidly increasing, being now 13,000. The principal manufactures are cotton spinning, calico printing, dyeing, and chemical works. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, and was formerly in the patron. of Lord Howe, whose family obtained it at the dissolution of the monastery at Whalley. It was purchased afterwards by the Hulmean Trustees, who must present a clerk who has been on that foundation at Brasenose College, Oxford. The val. is £430 per annum, with a very beautiful residence. The church, usually called Church Kirk, is dedicated to St. James, and though a plain building, is very commodious, seating 1,300 persons. It has a very old castellated tower, with two bells. The body of the church was rebuilt and enlarged in 1802, and is now (1863) about to undergo a further enlargement, and improvement in its architectural appearance. A school-room, capable of holding 400 scholars, was erected in 1828, but this was superseded in 1861 by a new one to accommodate 900. In the township of Oswaldtwistle there is a district church, in the patron. of trustees; also schools connected with the church. To each of the Dissenting places of worship (six in number) schools are attached. The charities consist of £60, left by Ellen Darwen, of Cowhill Fold, the interest of which is to be given in bread to poor persons attending divine service at Church Kirk; and of a similar bequest in connection with Immanuel church, Oswaldtwistle, left by the late Messrs. Benjamin and Robert Walmsley.

CHURCH KNOWLE, a par in the South Blandford div. of the hund. of Hasilor, in the co. of Dorset, 3½ miles S. of Wareham, its post town and railway station, and 1½ W. of Corfe Castle. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £285, in the patron. of Lieut.-Colonel Mansel. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was formerly in the early English style of architecture, but has been greatly altered from time to time. There is a National school for both sexes. Colonel Mansel is lord of the manor.

CHURCH LANGTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles N. of the Market Harborough railway station, and 11 from Leicester. It includes the tnshp. of East Langton and the chplries. of West Langton, Langton-Thorp, and Langton-Tur. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £445, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Rev. W. Hanbury. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice. Here is a free school, endowed by the late Rev. W. Hanbury, who likewise bequeathed a large sum of money for other charitable purposes.

CHURCH LAWFORD, a par. in the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 3½ miles from the Rugby railway station. It is pleasantly situated on the river Avon. Through this parish, in a deep cutting, from which it is stated 500,000 square yards of earth were taken, runs the London and North-Western line. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with the vic. of King's Newnham annexed, £196. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, possesses a register commencing 1575. There is a school, built in 1849, supported by the Duke of Buccleuch, who is lord of the manor.

CHURCH LAWTON, a par. in the hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 4 miles S.E. of Sandbach, and 6 S.W. of Congleton. The Grand Trunk or Trent and Mersey canal passes through the parish, and the North Staffordshire railway has a station at Kidsgrove. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £360, in the patron. of C. B. Lawton, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a plain edifice, with embattled tower and highly ornamented Norman doorway. It contains monuments to the Lawton family. There are schools for boys, girls, and infants. At Lawton Heath the Methodists have a place of worship. There is a brine spring from which salt is made, and in the neighbourhood are stone-quarries and collieries. The lord of the manor is C. B. Lawton, Esq., of Lawton Hall, a fine brick edifice, situated in a beautiful spot.

CHURCH LENCH, a par. partly in the hund. of Halfshire, and partly in the hund. of Blackenhurst, in the co. of Worcester, 3 miles N. of the Fladbury station, and 7 N.E. of Pershore. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £180, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is a stone structure in the Gothic style, with tower. The whole has lately been restored. The charities amount to about £2 per annum.

CHURCH MAYFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Mayfield, co. of Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Ashborne. It is situated near the barrows of Dale and Rowlow.

CHURCH MINSHULL, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 6 miles N. of Nantwich, and 1½ mile from the Minshull Vernon station on the Grand Junction branch of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the banks of the river Weaver, which is crossed by a bridge of two arches, and near the canal belonging to the Shropshire Union Railway and Canal Company, which crosses the borders of the parish. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £108, in the patron. of H. Brooke, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a brick edifice, with tower and monuments to the Delameres and Cholmondeleys. The parish registers commence as early as 1561, and under date 1649, February 20, is entered "Thomas Damme, of Leighton, buried, being of the age of seven score and fourteen." Here is a school for both sexes endowed with about £15 per annum, being the interest of moneys left by the Rev. Christopher Minshull in 1614, and others since that period. In this parish are the halls of Lea Green and Minshull, now occupied as farmhouses, the former anciently having belonged to the Vernons, and afterwards to the Crewe family. The parish is so called to distinguish it from Minshull Vernon, which adjoins it. In former times Church Minshull formed part of the parish of Acton, and belonged to the barony of Wich Milbank, but on the division of that lordship it fell to the lot of Philip Basset, and afterwards passed to the Levels. The mesne manor for many centuries belonged to the family of Minshull, from whom Elizabeth Minshull, the third wife of Milton, was descended; it then passed by marriage to the Cholmondeleys, and was by them sold to Sir Richard Brooke, Bart., the ancestor of Henry Brooke, Esq., the present lord of the manor.

CHURCH OAKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Chuteley in the co. of Hants, 13 miles from Andover, and 5 W. the Basingstoke railway station on the South-Weste line. The village is situated between the sources of th Test and Wandle, occupying the most elevated part a valley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Wi chester, val. £311, in the patron. of Queen's Colleg Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a ancient edifice in the Gothic style, and has received t addition of a transept. It contains monuments to th Warham family. A free school was established here 1666 by G. Wither, Esq., who left a rent-charge, n realising about £16 per annum, with land and residen for the master, besides other property for apprentic children. Malshanger Hall, the ancient seat of t Warhams, is in this parish. W. Beach, Esq., of Oakl Hall, is the lord of the manor.

CHURCH OVER, a par. in the hund. of Knightl in the co. of Warwick, 1½ miles N. of Rugby stati and 4½ S.W. of Lutterworth. The village is well bu and pleasantly situated on an eminence. To the E. Watling Street, near which is a considerable barr The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, v £270, in the patron. of H. Grimes, Esq. The chur dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structu with tower and spire, and contains several monume to the Dexwell family. The Independents have place of worship, and there is a free school. Cou House, the seat of the lord of the manor, C. L. Butl Esq., is a fine stone building. The parochial charit produce about £24 per annum.

CHURCH-POOL, a natural harbour, situated on th S. side of the mouth of the river Guibarra, in the ba Boylagh, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Irelan It affords good anchorage.

CHURCH PREEN, or PREEN CHURCH, a pa in the hund. of Condover, in the co. of Salop, 6 mil from Much Wenlock, its post town, and 10 from Shrew bury. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Her ford, val. £76, in the patron. of W. H. Spanswe, Es The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a ancient stone structure, and contains a pulpit learn dated 1641. Not far from here is Plairh, where the is a curious old hall containing some fine specimens of o panelling. The Earl of Bradford is lord of the manor CHURCH-PULVERBATCH, a par. in the hund. Condover, in the co. of Salop, 8 miles S.W. of Shrew bury, and 6 N.W. of the Church Stretton railw station. This place, once a market town, is now only small village. The par. contains the tnshps. of Cas Pulverbatch, Cothercott, Churton, Wilderley, a Wrentnall. There are traces of an ancient castle. T living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £566, the patron. of G. Webb, Esq. The church, opened 1853, is a stone structure, chiefly in the early Engl style, and is dedicated to St. Edith. Here is a paroch school. A fair is held on the 27th September.

CHURCH SHOCKLACH, a tnshp. in the par. Shocklach, higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in t co. of Chester, 4 miles N.W. of Malpas. It is situat in a pleasant country near the banks of the river Dee.

CHURCH STANTON, or CHURCH STAUNTO a par. in the hund. of Hemyock, in the co. of Devo 7 miles S. of Taunton, and 10 N.E. of Honiton, its p town. It is situated under the Black Down hills the borders of Somersetshire, and contains the hml of Redlane, Churchingford, Stapley, and Burnworth The Bristol and Exeter section of the Great Weste railway passes within a few miles of the village, a has a station at Wellington. The living is a rect.* the dioc. of Exeter, val. £421, in the patron. of the R H. Edwards, Jun. The church, dedicated to St. Pet is a beautiful structure in the perpendicular style, a possesses some oak carving and stained-glass windo The Wesleyans and Baptists have places of worship, a there is a school supported by the rector. The anni duce of the charities amounts to £5. Fairs are held Churchingford on the 25th and 26th January and the Friday in April. Messrs. Bush are lords of the nor.

HURCH-STOKE, a par. partly in the hund. of rse, in the co. of Montgomery, and partly in the d. of Chirbury, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles S.E. of ntgomery. It is situated on the river Camlet, near 's Dyke. It contains Upper and Lower Hopton, mpton, Bacheldre, Mellington, Hurdley, and Weston loc. The Welshpool and Montgomeryshire railway es near the village, and has a station at Montgomery. living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Hereford, £151, in the patron. of Earl Powis. The charities luce £13 per annum. There are traces of both Roman British camps.

HURCHSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, he co. of Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Kingsbridge, its t town, and 10 from Totnes. It is situated near river Avon and the South Devon railway, which a station at Kingsbridge-road. The living is a vic.* he dioc. of Exeter, val. with the vic. of Kingsbridge xeel, £200, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone ice. It contains several stained-glass windows, and lately been repaired. P. S. Lowe, Esq., is lord of manor, and resides at White Hall, a fine mansion, tifully situated on the banks of the Avon.

HURCH STREET, a ward in the par. of West m, in the hund. of Becontree, in the co. of Essex. Includes the vils. of West Ham, Forest Gate, Can- Town, and Upton, comprising 1,600 acres.

HURCH STRETTON, a par. and market town in upper div. of the hund. of Munslow, in the co. of op, 12½ miles S. of Shrewsbury. It is a railway station the Shrewsbury and Hereford line, and is pleasantly ated in a valley. The origin of its name is supposed have arisen from its proximity to the Roman road tling Street—hence "Street Town," shortened into tton. The town mainly consists of one long street, lt at the foot of Longmynd Hill, the summit of which ,680 feet above the sea, and commands a fine view of rth Wales. It contains a subscription library, news- m, a savings-bank, and police station. The market-hall s erected a few years ago on the site of the old one. It n election and polling place for the southern division of county. The inhabitants are engaged in the woollen nufacture, the making of hop-bags, and the malt trade. living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £542, in patron. of C. O. C. Pemberton, Esq. The church, dedi- d to St. Lawrence, is a cruciform edifice, and possesses ne altar-piece and beautiful stained-glass windows. ere are free schools for both sexes, and some small rities. Caer Caradoc, or the "Mount of Caractacus," bout 2 miles distant, on the top of which are the mains of an ancient British camp; the prospect from summit is very extensive. At a short distance stands ard's Castle, which is an insulated hill, from ich may be seen the Longmynd range of mountains. urch Stretton was the birthplace of Dr. Mainwaring, chaplain of Charles I. The par. is extensive, com- sing 11,790 acres, chiefly sheepwalks. The market y is Thursday. Fairs are held in March, May, July, tember, and November.

HURCHTOWN, or BRUHENNY, a par. and vil. the bars. of Orrery and Duhallow, in the co. of Cork, v. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles N.E. of Kanturk. s situated on the road from Limerick to Cork. The rface consists of mountain, moor, and bog, and some ble land, with limestone bottom. The living is a rect. the dioc. of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, val. £475, in the ron. of Sir M. Tierney. The original church was moved in the reign of Queen Anne, but was rebuilt ut 1737 by the Earl of Egmont. It is a cruciform ilding, containing the family vault of the Egmonts. e village is neatly built, and has a dispensary and nan Catholic chapel. The seats in this parish are ton and Egmont, giving the titles of baron and earl he Percivals.

CHURCHTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Rathconrath, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated between Lough Ennel and the Royal canal, 6 miles on the road from Mullingar to Athlone. In some parts are bog and limestone, but the arable land is prolific. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Dysart and Conragh, £354, in the patron. of the bishop and crown alternately. The church is a modern structure, built at the expense of the Board of First Fruits. There are several schools and two Roman Catholic chapels in the union, one in Conragh, the other in Dysart. The principal residences are Redmonstown-House and Balrath. Here are ruins of the castles of Oldtown, Dundonnel, and Fieldtown.

CHURCHTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Newcastle, in the bar. of Glenquin, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

CHURCHTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Ballintemple, in the bar. of Imokilly, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

CHURCHTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Navan, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.W. of Navan, its post town. The living is a vic. with Ardbraccan, in the dioc. of Meath, and in the patron. of the crown. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel. The principal residences are Churchtown House and Philpotstown. Churchtown Castle is a small square tower, built by Mr. Warren.

CHURCHTOWN, a quoad sacra par. in the bar. of Forth, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the coast between Lady Island and Lough Tacumshin, upwards of 2 miles S.W. of Broadway. The soil is for the most part good. The living is a cur., val. £71, in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, in the patron. of the chancellor of the dioc. and the bishop alternately. The church was built by the Board of First Fruits in 1834, when this parish was separated from Tacumshin and Ballymore. The Roman Catholic chapels are at these latter places.

CHURCHTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Hook, in the bar. of Shelbourne, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It stands on Hook Head, near the lighthouse.

CHURCHTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Dysart, in the bar. of Upperthird, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated on the river Suir, 4 miles to the W. of Carrick-on-Suir. Here stood an ancient castle belonging to the Everards. In the village is a woollen factory, and the vicinity is very pleasantly wooded.

CHURCHTOWN, or RHEBAN, a par. in the bar. of West Narragh and Rheban, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains part of the town of Athy, and is bounded on the E. by the river Barrow, and on the W. by the Grand canal. It is supposed to be the Rheba mentioned by Ptolemy, and in the vicinity is an ancient camp. The living is a vic. united with Athy, in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, in the patron. of the archbishop.

CHURCHTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of North Meols, in the hund. of West Derby, in the co. of Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Ormskirk. It is situated near the coast, at a short distance from the mouth of the river Ribble.

CHURCHTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman, in the hund. of Williton, in the co. of Somerset, near Watchet.

CHURCHTOWN QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Rockcliffe, Cumberland ward, in the co. of Cumberland. Here is a parochial school for boys.

CHURCH WILNE, a lib. in the par. of Wilne, in the hund. of Morleston, in the co. of Derby, 7½ miles S.E. of Derby. It is situated on the river Derwent.

CHURN, or CORIN RIVER, rises at the Seven Wells and Ullin farm, about 3 miles S. of Cheltenham, in the co. of Gloucester. At Cricklade it joins the S. head of the river Thames, or Isis, of which it is the principal source, passing in its course North and South Cerney and Cirencester.

CHURSTON-FERRERS, a par. in the hund. of Hay-tor, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles S.E. of Totnes, and 1½ W. of Brixham, its post town. It is situated near the river Dart; and the Torquay branch of the South Devon railway, which has a station at Brixham Road. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Brixham, in the dioc. of Exeter, in the patron. of the crown. The church is an ancient edifice. The Independents have a place of worship, and there is a parochial school. The charities produce about £6 per annum.

CHURT, a tythg. in the par. of Frensham, in the hund. of Farnham, in the co. of Surrey, 2 miles from Frensham, and 5 S. of Farnham.

CHURTON. See CHERRINGTON, Wilts.

CHURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Church Pulverbatch, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles N. of Church Stretton.

CHURTON BY ALDFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Aldford, in the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Aldford.

CHURTON BY FARNDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Farndon, in the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles N. of Farndon, and 7 S.E. of Chester. It is bounded on the E. by the river Dee. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

CHURTON HEATH, or BRUERA CHAPELRY, a chplry. in the par. of St. Oswald, in the lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 5 miles S.E. of Chester. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of St. Oswald, in the dioc. of Chester, val. £245, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient building, called the Church on the Heath. The chplry. includes the adjoining tnshps. of Huntington, Leacum, Newbold, and Saighton. Here is a small school supported by subscription.

CHURWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Batley, in the wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S.W. of Leeds. It has railway stations on the London and North-Western and Great Northern lines. The village, which is very considerable, is situated to the W. of the river Aire. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship. The manufacture of woollen cloth is carried on at this place, and there are several collieries in the neighbourhood. The lord of the manor is W. Hill, Esq.

CHUTE, a par. in the hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles N.E. of Ludgershall, and 7 from Andover, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the Roman way from Winchester, under Chute-down, which was formerly a forest. It is principally noted for the extensive and fine domain of Conholt Park, a seat of the Pierreponts, and for the Roman causeway passing through the parish, which is considered a very fine specimen of Roman road. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £244, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a handsome building with tower. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there are National and Sunday schools, also several small charities. Corderoy, the divine, was born here. In the neighbourhood are the remains of ancient earthworks. Chute Lodge is a meet for the hounds of T. Smith, Esq.

CHUTE FOREST, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Kindwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, near the above. It was anciently a forest stretching into the co. of Hants.

CHUTELEY, a hund. in the Kingsclere div. of the N. portion of the co. of Hants, containing the pars. of Hannington and Church-Oakley, comprising 2,860 acres.

CHWYLEIRIOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanarmon, in the co. of Denbigh, 4 miles E. of Ruthin.

CILAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrillo, in the co. of Merioneth, 5 miles S.W. of Corwen.

CILCARW, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangendeirne, in the co. of Carmarthen, 4 miles S.E. of Carmarthen. It contains Pont-y-Ferem.

CILCEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws-yn-Rhôs, in the co. of Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of Abergele.

CILCEN, or KILKEN, a par. in the hund. of Colesshill, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 5 miles S. of Holywell. It is situated in the Vale of Clwyd, near the river Alwen, and contains 7 townships. The mountain, Moel-Fammau, is on the border of this parish. A branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway passes near the village, and has a station at Cefn. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £300, in the patron. of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. The roof of the church is from Basingwerk Abbey. The charities produce £7 per annum.

CILCENNIN, or KIL-KENIN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ilar, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 5 miles from Newcastle, and 4 E. of Aberaeron. It is situated on the river Aeron, a branch of the Teifi. The village is famed in Welsh history as having been the scene of a desperate battle between Maelgwyn and his nephews, Rhys and Owen, who attacked his camp in the night.

CILCOCHWIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangollen, in the co. of Denbigh, 18 miles S.E. of Denbigh.

CILGANWR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5 miles N.W. of Llandeilo-fawr.

CILGWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrillo-yn-Rhôs, hund. of Isdulas, in the co. of Denbigh, 4 miles N.W. of Conway. It is situated near the sea-coast.

CILGWYN CHAPEL, a hmlt. in the co. of Pembroke, 3 miles S.E. of Newport.

CILIE AERON, or KILIE AYRON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ilar, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 4 miles S.E. of Aberaeron. It is situated on the river Aeron, a branch of the Teifi. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop.

CILIE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfairtalhaiarn, in the co. of Denbigh, 4 miles S. of Abergele.

CILLAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanddarog, in the co. of Carmarthen, 6 miles E. of Carmarthen.

CILLMACHALLT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, 20 miles S.W. of Montgomery.

CILMARCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandefeilog, in the co. of Carmarthen, 4 miles N. of Kidwelly, on the river Towy.

CILOWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asaph, in the co. of Flint. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Elwy with the Clywd.

CILTALGARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfawr, in the co. of Merioneth. It is situated near Bala.

CILVAWR, a chplry. in the par. of Manor Divy, in the co. of Pembroke. It is situated on the river Teifi, near Castle Maelgwn. Here are the remains of a church.

CILWR, a hmlt. in the par. of Talley, in the co. of Carmarthen, 7 miles N. of Llandeilo-fawr.

CILWYCH, a parcel in the par. of Llanfihangel-cwm-dû, in the hund. of Crickhowell, in the co. of Brecon, 5 miles N.W. of Crickhowell.

CILYCWM, a par. in the hund. of Cayo, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 4 miles N. of Llandovery. It is situated on the river Towy. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £94, in the patron. of T. H. Gwynne, Esq. The annual value of the charities is about £5.

CILYGERNANT, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Aberbythych, in the par. of Carmarthen, 3 miles W. of Llandeilo-fawr.

CILY-GROESTWYD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfwrog, in the co. of Denbigh, near Ruthin.

CILYMAENLLWYD, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 7 miles N.W. of Narberth. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Castle Dwyrran annexed, £240, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. There is a Roman camp, and coins of Cæsar and Domitian have been found in the neighbourhood.

CINDER BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Rotherham, in the northern div. of Strafforth wap., in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N. of Rotherham.

CINDERFORD, a vil. and post town in the lib-

Dean Forest, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles W. of Newnham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to St. John. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship.

CINQUE PORTS, THE, an association of the seaport towns lying between Birchington, in the Isle of Thanet, and Seaford, in Sussex. It is said to have been instituted by Edward the Confessor for the defence of the S. coast, and to have been confirmed by William the Norman. The original towns were Dover, Sandwich, Romney, Hythe, and Hastings, to which Rye and Winchelsea, with several subordinate members, were afterwards added. The supreme jurisdiction is vested in the lord warden, who is Constable of Dover Castle by virtue of his office. The privileges of the inhabitants, before the passing of the Reform Act, were very considerable, and they still enjoy exemption from serving on county juries and in the militia.

CIPPEN, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Dogmel's, in the co. of Pembroke, 6 miles S. of Fishguard.

CIPPENHAM, a lib. in the par. of Burnham, in the co. of Bucks, 3 miles N.W. of Windsor.

CIRENCESTER, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Crowthorne and Minty, in the co. of Gloucester, 95 miles distant from London by the Great Western railway, 16 from Stroud, and 28 from Gloucester. It is connected by a cut with the Thames and Severn canal, and has communication with all parts of England by means of a branch line connecting the Great Western and the Bristol and Birmingham railways. Cirencester appears to have been a town of importance from a very remote antiquity. Previous to the Roman invasion it was, according to Henry of Huntingdon, a British city, called Caer-Cori, a contraction of Caer-Corin, "the Camp or Fort on the Corin." The Romans made it a military station, and from its situation at the intersection of the Fosse-way with the Ermine and Icknield Streets it soon became a place of considerable extent and importance. The site of the present is not identical with that of the Roman town, as shown by the vestiges of the vallum and rampart yet visible on the south-eastern side of the town, and which in the last century could be traced from Chesterton Farm to Citely Hill, where Roman inscriptions, tesselated pavements, and various fragments of columns have been occasionally turned up. Ptolemy calls it Corinium; Richard of Cirencester, Corinum; and Antoninus, in the Itinerary, Durocornovium. In all these names may be traced the same root as in the name of the river which intersects the town—the ancient Corin, now Churn. The Saxons added the name Ceaster, of which, and its Romano-British name, the present is a corruption. When the Romans withdrew from this portion of their possessions, Cirencester fell once more into the hands of the Britons, and became the capital of the Dobuni, who held it probably until the year 577, when the West Saxons gained a great victory at Dyrham, near Chipping Sodbury. An unsuccessful attempt to obtain possession of the town was made by Penda, King of Mercia, in 626; but his son, also named Penda, succeeded in annexing it to the Mercian kingdom in 656. Two centuries later the Danes got possession of it, and after their memorable defeat by Alfred, at the battle of Ethandune in 879, they entrenched themselves here for more than a year, during the negotiations which led to their conversion to Christianity, and their settlement in the island. Canute held a great council here in 1020, when, according to the Saxon Chronicle, "Alderman Ethelward was outlawed, and Edwy, King of the Churls." Cirencester was formerly celebrated for its abbey, which was founded by Henry I. in 1117. The seventh abbot was Alexander Neuam, or Neckam, a native of St. Alban's, who was renowned for his learning. The site of the church attached to the abbey is not now known; but on the site of the abbey itself is a mansion which takes its name. Cirencester Castle is mentioned as a fortress of some strength during and after the reign of Stephen. In the reign of Henry IV. a very formidable conspiracy was thwarted by the inhabitants of Cirencester, who fell suddenly upon the army headed by the Duke of Surrey, the Earl of Salisbury, the Duke of Exeter, and the Earl of Gloucester. The troops fled in a panic, and the Duke of Surrey and the Earl of Salisbury were taken prisoners. In the reign of Charles I. Cirencester took the side of the parliament. The town, being nearly surrounded by water and well fortified, was considered almost impregnable; but in the year 1642 the royalists, under Prince Rupert, succeeded in taking it. It was stormed in turn and retaken by the parliamentary forces under the Earl of Essex, in 1643. In the revolution of 1688 the inhabitants of Cirencester were as zealous in the cause of the Stuarts as they had previously been in the cause of the parliament. An engagement took place near the town, in which Lord Lovelace, who was on his way to join the Prince of Orange, was taken prisoner.—Cirencester has, since the reign of Elizabeth, returned two members to parliament. By the Reform Act the limits of the borough and of the parish, comprising 5,900 acres, are co-extensive, and include Wiggold, Spirringate, Oakley, Chesterton, and Barton. The town is unincorporated, but enjoys a charter granted to it by Henry IV. in consideration of its loyalty. The government was then placed in the hands of 2 high and 14 petty constables, and the town divided into 7 wards. In 1861 the population was 6,336, against 6,096 in 1851, showing an increase of 240 in the decennial period. There has also been a proportionate increase in the number of inhabited houses: in 1861 there were 1,300, and in 1851, 1,211.—The town, which is very healthy, is about 2 miles in circumference, and has eleven streets, four greater and seven lesser, besides several lanes. It has an excellent supply of water, is paved with stone, and lighted with gas. The most conspicuous building is the savings-bank, which has been recently built, and is in the Italian style. The staple of the town was formerly wool, for which the Cotswold district was celebrated. The manufacture of curriers' knives was afterwards introduced and is still carried on, but is no longer peculiar to Cirencester.—The principal trade is now in corn, but from the want of a market-building of adequate size, the sales are generally effected by sample.—County Court sittings are held monthly in the townhall, which is a portion of a building attached to St. John's church. Petty sessions are also held, and the North Gloucestershire militia have their headquarters here. Cirencester is the head of a Poor-law Union, which includes several parishes not only in Gloucestershire but also in Wiltshire. The Duke of Portland takes the title of baron from this town.—The living of St. John the Evangelist is a vic.,* val. £443, in the gift of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, within whose diocese Cirencester lies. The church dates from the 15th century, and is in the perpendicular style of architecture. At the W. end is a handsome embattled tower, 134 feet high, ornamented with pinnacles and statues. On the S. side is a richly decorated porch, 38 feet in length, and 50 feet in height. Under the parapet of the N. side of the nave, on the outside of the church, is a series of carved figures, representing the "Whitsun Ale" mummers, who hold musical instruments in their hands, and are in the costume of the 15th century. To correspond with these there is another series of figures on the S. side representing the actors in the old mysteries or scriptural plays; among them may be noticed a monk, an abbot, a king, a gladiator (with sword and dagger), an angel, and a skeleton, intended to represent Death. The interior of the church is very handsome. The roof is supported by two rows of clustered columns, five in each cluster. The E. and W. windows are of painted glass. St. Catherine's chapel, which appears to have been built somewhat later than the body of the church, bears the date 1508 on the roof, the central compartments of which are adorned with the arms of Henry VII. and of the Prince of Wales. Over a niche in the S. wall is a fresco-painting, which represents the martyrdom of St. Catherine. In an opposite niche is an effigy of Richard Osmund, the founder of the chapel.

There are besides some very rich and curious brasses and monuments. The church, both externally and internally, is one of the finest and most interesting in England. A new church (Trinity) was built at Watermoor in 1850; it is in the early English style, and has a light and graceful spire. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, which has been recently erected, and several places of worship belonging to the different denominations of Protestant Dissenters. The deanery of Cirencester is included in the archdeac. of Bristol, and in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. It contains all the benefices in the hund. of Crowthorne and Minty, besides several others.—There are several schools in Cirencester. The free grammar school was founded by Bishop Ruthall, a native of the town, and privy-councillor to Henry VI. Dr. Jenner, who introduced vaccination, was educated at this school; and Dr. Parry, the physician of Bath, and father of Sir Edward Parry, was also one of its scholars. The blue-coat school was founded in 1714, by Thomas Powell, Esq. The yellow-coat school was founded about the same time by Mrs. Powell; her object was to teach 20 boys of Cirencester reading, arithmetic, and the art of frame-work knitting, and to clothe and educate 20 girls and teach them to spin. St. John's hospital was founded by Henry I.: its revenues are not large, and the foundation is only for eight poor persons. St. Lawrence's hospital, for three widows, was founded by Edith, lady of the manor of Wiggold. St. Thomas's hospital for four poor weavers, was founded by Sir William Nottingham in the reign of Henry IV. Like most of the charities of Cirencester, it allows but a very small sum to its pensioners. There are also almshouses known as Brydges' and George's. The Royal Agricultural College, which is situated about 1¼ mile from the town, was established and incorporated by royal charter in 1845. It is a handsome building in the Tudor style, and was founded with the view of making science a branch of agricultural education. It has a principal, and professors of chemistry, geology, veterinary surgery, and surveying. A farm is attached to the college, and the students are enabled to see scientific theories verified in practice. The institution met with much opposition at first, but its utility is now generally recognised. The town possesses a mechanics' institute and a temperance hall. The latter was erected in 1846 by Christopher Fowley, a member of the Society of Friends.—Many coins and altars have been found in the vicinity of the town: a small head, decorated with a mural crown, and apparently taken off a basso-relievo, was dug up in 1723; a tesselated pavement at the same time, and several others since. The remains of a Roman hypocaust were brought to light in 1780. A brass figure of Apollo, which is now in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, was also found here. In the Querus, or Cairus, a field adjoining the town on the W., is "The Bull-ring," which is supposed to be a Roman amphitheatre. Its area is of an elliptical form, enclosed by a mound of earth about 20 feet high, and measuring about 190 in its major axis by 140 in its minor. The seats cut in the earth may, with some difficulty, still be traced. The seat of Earl Bathurst is at Oakley House, near Cirencester. The park is open to the public; its principal avenue is 5 miles in length, and about 50 yards wide.—Monday is market day. Fairs for the sale of horses, cattle, and pigs are held on Easter Tuesday, the 18th July, and the 8th November: statute fairs, locally called "mops," on the Monday before and the Monday after October 10th. The races take place in August.

CITADILLA, a hmlt. in the par. of Easby, in the wap. of East Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles E. of Richmond.

CLACHAN, a vil. in the par. of Campsie and Fintray, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Fintray.

CLACHANDYSART, a par. joined to Glenorchy, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland.

CLACHNABANE, one of the peaks of the Grampians, 2,370 feet above the level of the sea, in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland. It serves as a sea-mark, and has on its summit an enormous boulder, known as the Clachan-stone.

CLACHNAHARRY, a fishing vil. about a mile W. of the town of Inverness, in the co. of that name, Scotland. At the end of the 14th, or beginning of the 15th century, a battle was fought here between the Mackintoshes and Monroes, in which the former, though the aggressors, were defeated.

CLACHSHANT, a par. in the co. of Wigton, Scotland. It was formerly a separate par., but is now united with Stoneykirk.

CLACK, a hmlt. in the par. of Lyneham, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Wootton Bassett. Fairs are held on the 5th April and 1st October.

CLACKCLOSE, a hund. in the W. portion of the co. of Norfolk; contains the pars. of Barton-Bendish, Beechamwell, Bexwell, Boughton, Crimplesham, Denver, West Dereham, Market Downham, Fincham, Fordham, Hilgay, Holme, Marham-Cherry, Roxham, South Runcton, Ryston, Shingham, Shouldham, Shouldham-Thorpe, Southery, Stoke-Ferry, Stow Bardolph, Stowsett, Tottenhill, Wallington-cum-Thorpland, Watlington, Wereham, Wimbotsham, Wormegay, Wretton, and parts of Outwell and Upwell, comprising 91,880 acres.

CLACKETT CROSS, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Wrotham, Aylesford lathe, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles N.E. of Sevenoaks.

CLACKHEATON, a chplry. in the par. of Birstall, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles S. of Bradford. It is situated on a branch of the river Aire, and contains the hmlts. of Scholes, Oakenshaw, and Hartshead Moor. The Manchester and Leeds branch railway passes near the village, which is chiefly inhabited by weavers. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Birstall. The church is dedicated to St. John.

CLACKMANNAN, the smallest co. in Scotland, is bounded on the S. by the Frith of Forth; on the W. by the cos. of Stirling and Perth; on the N. by Perthshire; and on the E. by Perthshire and Fifeshire. Its length from E. to W. is 10 miles, with an extreme breadth of 8 miles. It has an area of 30,720 acres, about two-thirds of which are cultivated. The Ochil hills afford the best pasturage for sheep in Scotland, and the soil on the banks of the Devon is deep and fertile, but not favourable to the growth of wood. Coal and limestone are abundant and largely wrought, and at various times silver, copper, lead, cobalt, and antimony have been obtained in the Ochils. Agriculture is in a high state of proficiency, partly owing doubtless to many of the farms having been granted by the great proprietors in perpetuity to their vassals at the time of the Reformation, in gratitude for support received from them. The towns of this co. are Clackmannan and Alloa, and the principal vils., Dollar, Tillicoultry, Newtonshaw, Sauchie, Tullibody, Kennet, Cambus, Menstrie, Craigmill, and Abbey. The principal mansions are those of the Earl of Mar, at Alloa Park; of the Earl of Mansfield, at Shaw Park; of Lord Abercromby, at Tullibody House; Dollarfield, Harrieston, and Tillicoultry House. The manufacture of shawls, plaidings, and blankets has long been successfully carried on in the pars. of Dollar and Tillicoultry. Among the ancient buildings are Clackmannan Tower, Alloa Tower, and Castle Campbell. This co. contains the four pars. of Clackmannan, Alloa, Dollar, and Tillicoultry, together with part of the par. of Logie, and has seven Free churches, four United Presbyterian churches, two Independent, and one Episcopalian chapel. Alloa is more of the county town than Clackmannan, and all the law courts are held at the former place. Stirling gaol serves also as the gaol for the county. The Stirling and Dunfermline railway passes through the county, and the Scottish Central railway touches the northern boundary. This shire unites with Kinross-shire, the par. of Alva, in Stirlingshire, the Perthshire part of the par. of Logie, and the pars. of Tullibole and Culross, in sending one member to parliament. Population, 22,951 in 1851, and 21,449 in 1861.

CLACKMANNAN, a par. containing the town of it wn name, in the co. of Clackmannan, Scotland, together ith the vils. of Sauchie, Westfield, Kennet, and New- nshaw. It is bounded on the N. by the river Devon, nd on the S. by the Frith of Forth, and is 6 miles in ngth, with a breadth of from 2 to 4 miles. Three-fourths f the surface is planted, the remainder is under pas- re or tillage. Coal and ironstone have long been orked. The par. is in the presb. of Stirling, and in the tron. of the Earl of Zetland, who is one of the principal ndowners. The stipend of the minister is £284. here is a chapel of ease at Sauchie, also a Free church d an United Presbyterian church at Clackmannan. e town of Clackmannan is 2 miles E. of Alloa and 11¾ m Dunfermline, by the Stirling and Dunfermline anch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, which s a station here. It is situated on a ridge rising adually 190 feet above the level of the Forth, excepting the W., where the descent is abrupt and precipitous, d where the old tower stands. It consists principally one long street of 250 houses, having a rather mean pearance; with a school, of which Mr. Bruce, author "Lochleven," was once master. It was long the seat l possession of the family of Bruce, being granted by vid II. to Robert Bruce, who lived here, after he ame king, previously to the battle of Bannockburn, l who is said to have built the tower. The sword and lmet of King Robert Bruce were kept here until re- ved to Broomhall by the Earl of Elgin, the nearest presentative of that family, the direct line having ome extinct at the end of the last century. Near site of the prison stands a stone, or "clachan," with ich tradition connects several incidents in Bruce's e. Fairs are held in June and September.

CLACKMANNAN POW, a harbour or creek in the strict of Port Alloa, in the co. of Clackmannan, Scot- nd. It is situated between the pars. of Clackmannan nd Alloa, and is formed by the juncture of the South lvon, otherwise called the Black Devon, with the rth. Its mean depth of water at the usual shipping ace is 10 feet, and at the entrance of the harbour 20; in 12 it was much improved by Sir Laurence Dundas.

CLACTON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, the co. of Essex, 11 miles S.E. of Manningtree, and 14 m Colchester. The living (St. John the Baptist) is a v in the dioc. of Rochester, val. with the don. cur. of tle Holland annexed, £240, in the patron. of F. Nas- s, Esq. Clacton Wash is a coastguard station. The ochial charities produce £6 per annum. At Clacton Cf, in this parish, is a signal-house and martello towers. Air is held on the 29th June for toys and pedlery.

CLACTON, LITTLE, a par. in the co. of Essex, as ve. It is situated 2 miles to the N. of Great Clac- t. The living (St. James) is a vic. in the dioc. of hester, val. £115, in the patron. of F. Nassau, Esq. Air is held on the 25th July for toys and pedlery. The chief residence is Clacton Lodge.

CLADDAGH, a vil. in the par. of Kilmacteigne, in the bar. of Leney, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Ulster, land.

CLADY, or CLAUDY, a vil. in the par. of Urney, in the bar. of Strabane, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, land, 3 miles S.W. of Strabane. It is situated on the river Finn. A bridge now marks the ford where a skirmish took place in 1688. The Presbyterians have a chapel. Fairs are held on the 1st August and the 16th November.

CLADY. There are two rivulets of this name, the one in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, and the other in the bar. of Loughinsh- in, in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ire- land. Upon the latter stands the hmlt. of Clady, near which are the seats Inisrush and Glenburn.

CLADY, or CUMBER-CLADY, a vil. in the par. of Upper Cumber, in the bar. of Tyrkeeran, in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles on the road from Dungiven to Londonderry. It is situated on the river Faughn, and contains the parish church and a dispensary. The remains of O'Cahan's Castle are within a very short distance. Cumber House is the chief residence. Fairs are held on the 17th May and 7th November.

CLADY-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland.

CLAGGAN, a vil. in the par. of Kilcommon, in the bar. of Erris, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles W. of Newport-Pratt, on Ballan Bay.

CLAGGAN, a vil. in the par. of Innishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated on Lough Foyle, and is a coastguard station.

CLAGGAN BAY and HEADLAND, in the bar. of Ballinahinch, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The bay affords excellent anchorage, and the promontory is surmounted by a landmark called Claggan Castle.

CLAIFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawkshead, in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles S.E. of Hawkshead. It is situated between Esthwaite Water and the ferry over Lake Windermere to Bowness. At the village of Low Wray there is a church in the Gothic style, erected in 1856 by James Dawson. At High Wray divine service is performed in the schoolhouse every Sunday afternoon; and at Colthouse the Society of Friends have a meeting-house. Overlooking the Windermere Lake and hills is an edifice called the Station, which commands some delightful scenery. The Station possesses several stained-glass windows, which consist of views of the surrounding scenery as they appear in the various seasons.

CLAINES, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, adjoining the city of Worcester to the N. The West Midland railway goes through the parish, and has a station at Fearnall Heath. The par. is situated to the E. of the Severn, near the Worcester and Birmingham canal, and includes the tythg. of Whistons. The par. of this parish extending to the city of Worcester is united to it by the new Boundary Act. There is no village, but several scattered hamlets, pleasantly situated in the midst of picturesque scenery. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £60, in the patron. of Sir O. Wakeman, Bart., who is impropriator of the great tithes, amounting to £1,200 a year, out of which he pays £27 to the incumbent in lieu of the small tithes. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient building in the perpendicular style. There are two district churches in this parish: the one dedicated to St. George is a cur. in the patron. of the incumbent; the other, dedicated to St. Stephen, is a new church, situated at Barbourne, just outside the city boundary. The former is in the Gothic style, and was erected by the Parliamentary Commissioners at the cost of £3,345 10*s.* 8*d.* The latter was consecrated by the bishop on the 21st August, 1862. The style is early middle pointed, with a memorial east window to Miss Jane Lavender, the founder. The total cost, including endowment, was £7,500. There are two national schools supported by subscription, and funds are collected for a new school in the district of Barbourne. Here is the nunnery of Whistons, now called the White Ladies, to which, after the battle of Worcester, Charles II. retired. The island of Bevere is formed by a narrow branch of the river Severn. The citizens of Worcester took refuge on this island in Hardicanute's time, and again during a pestilence in 1637. This parish was originally a chapelry to St. Helen's, Worcester, but in 1218 became a separate parish. Perdiswell Hall is the seat of Sir Offley Wakeman, Bart.

CLAIRTOWN, ST., a vil. in the par. of Dysart, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 1 mile N. of Kirkcaldy, and 14 from Edinburgh.

CLANABOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton, in the co. of Devon, 1½ mile W. of Coplestone railway station on the North Devon line, and 5 from Crediton, its post town. There are only 12 houses in the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £156, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Petrock, is an ancient Gothic edifice with tower.

CLANAWLEY, or GLENAWLEY, a bar. in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland; contains the par. of Killesher, and parts of Boho, Cleenish, Kinawley, and Rossory, comprising 75,469 acres.

CLANDONAGH, a bar. in Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N. by Upperwoods, on the E. by Clarmallagh, on the S. by the co. of Kilkenny, and on the W. by that of Tipperary. It is the middle of the three divs. of the quondam bar. of Upper Ossory, and contains the pars. of Skirk, Kyle, Rathsarran, and parts of Erke, Coolkerry, Aghaboe, and Bordwell, with the towns of Donaghmore and Rathdowney, and the vil. of Borris-in-Ossory. Its length is 9 miles, breadth 6, and area about 43,733 acres. The inhabitants are mostly occupied in agriculture.

CLANDON, EAST, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Woking, and union of Guildford, in the co. of Surrey, 8 miles from Dorking, and 4 E. of the Guildford station on the South-Western railway. It is situated near the Clandon Downs, and comprises a large tract of common. The living is a rect. in the archdeac. of Surrey, and dioc. of Winchester, val. £152, in the patron. of the Earl of Lovelace. In the vicinity is Hatchland Park, late the residence of Admiral Boscawen, who died here in 1761.

CLANDON, WEST, a par. in the co. of Surrey, as above, 1 mile to the W. of East Clandon. The living is a rect. in the archdeac. of Surrey, and dioc. of Winchester, val. £136, in the patron. of the Earl of Onslow. The charities produce £8 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1839. In the vicinity is Clandon Park, a fine mansion, with a hall 40 feet square, and two mantlepieces carved by Rysbrach.

CLANE, a bar. in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N.W. and W. by Carbery; on the N.E. by Ikeathy and Oughterany; on the S.E. by Naas; and on the S.W. by Connell. It contains the pars. of Downings, Clane, Killybegs, Carragh, Ballynafagh, Brideschurch, and Timahoe, with the towns of Prosperous and Clane. Its length is 8 miles, breadth 7, and area about 18,736 acres, a third of which is bog.

CLANE, a par. and post town, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It lies along the E. boundary of the bar. of Clane. The soil is generally prolific, with some limestone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. with Clonshanbo, Mainham, and Killybegs, £382, in the patron. of the crown. The town, which formerly had a market, is situated on the Liffey. It was destroyed by fire in 1798. Here stands the parish church, a very ancient structure, and several schools, one of which is endowed. In the neighbourhood are Clongowe's Jesuit College, and two Roman Catholic chapels. Petty sessions are held in this town, which has a police station and a dispensary. Here are the ruins of a castle, whose date of foundation is unknown, a Danish earthwork, and the remains of a monastery founded in 1272 by Lord Ophaley. The neighbouring residences are Sherlockstown, Blackhall, Millicent, and Firmount. Fairs are held on the 28th March, 28th April, 25th July, and 15th October.

CLANEBOY, a territory comprising parts of the cos. of Down and Antrim, in Ireland. It was formerly the country of the Hugh-boy O'Neills, and from them was called Clanhugh-boy. It is divided into North and South, or Upper and Lower.

CLANFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles W. of Bampton, its post town, and 18 W. of Oxford. It is situated on the river Isis. Little Clanfield, to which it is united, stands half a mile S. of the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £90, in the patron. of J. H. Elliott, and H. Bennett, Esqrs. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is an ancient edifice, in the Roman style. The annual val. of the charities is £5. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship, and there is a National school.

CLANFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Finch Dean (upper half), in the Petersfield div. of the co. of Hants, 7½ miles from the Havant station of the London and Brighton railway, 2½ miles N. of Horn Dean, and 5 from Petersfield, its post town. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of Chelton, in the dioc. of Winchester, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient edifice. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The lord of the manor is Sir S. C. Jervoise, Bart.

CLANGERS-HERMITAGE, a hmlt. in the par. of White Lackington, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile N.E. of Ilminster.

CLANKEE, or CLONKEE, a bar. in the co. of Cavan, in the prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bar. of Tullaghgarvey on the N., by the co. of Monaghan on the E., the co. of Meath on the S., and Lough Erne on the W. Its length is 11 miles by nearly 7 broad, with an area of 64,378 acres of hilly surface. The northern portion is drained by the river Annalee, the southern by Lough Swillan and Virginia-water flowing into the Boyne. It contains the pars. of Knockbride and Shercock, and parts of Drumgoon, Bailieborough, or Moybolgue, and Enniskeen.

CLANKELLY, or CLONKELLY, a bar. in the co. of Fermanagh, in the prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated in the E. part of the co., and is bounded on the N. by Magherastephana, on the E. by Monaghan, and on the S.W. by Coole bar. It comprises an area of 36,923 acres, and contains the pars. of Galloon and Clones. The principal vil. is Rosslee.

CLANMAHON, a bar. in the co. of Cavan, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Ballintemple, Ballymachugh, Drumlumman, and parts of Crosserlough, Dean, Kilbride, and Kilmore, comprising 54,349 acres.

CLANMAURICE, a bar. in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The co. of Limerick describes its eastern boundary, the Atlantic its western, the bar. of Trughenackmy is on the S., and Iraghticonnor on the N. It is 17 miles long by 12 broad, and covers a superficial extent of 120,766 acres, comprising the pars. of Kiltomey, O'Dorney, Killury, Kilshenane, Kilnecully, Kilflyn, Killahan, Kilcaragh, Kilfeighny, Ballyheigue, and Finuge, and parts of Ardfert, Rattoo, Dunagh, and Dysert, or Desert. The interior is mountainous and boggy. This barony is believed to have been an ancient Spanish colony of the Lucani, and was called Lucania, which name can still be traced in many local names. Its present name is derived from Maurice, eldest son of Raymond le Gros, from whom are descended the FitzMaurices of Kerrys.

CLANMORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ida, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, about 5 miles on the road from New Ross to Waterford.

CLANMORRIS, a bar. in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, bounded by Gallen on the N., Costello on the E., Galway on the S., and Carra and Erremain on the W. It is over 18 miles long by 4 broad, and covers an extent of 69,252 acres. The bar. is intersected by the rivers Robe and Guishden. It contains the pars. of Crossboyne, Kilvine, Kilcolman, Balla, Taghcen, the town of Clare Morris, and parts of Kilmaine and Mayo. There is some mountain country. The soil is rich, with limestone bottom. Clanmorris gives the title of baron to a descendant of the Binghams, earls of Lucan.

CLANVILLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Weyhill, in the co. of Hants, 4 miles W. of Andover.

CLANVILLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Castle Cary, in the co. of Somerset. It is situated in a beautiful country near the town of Castle Cary.

CLANWILLIAM, a bar. in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N. by Kilnemanna, on the E. by Middlethird, on the S. by Owney and Ilta, and on the W. by Limerick. Its length is 15 miles by 12½ wide. The bar. contains the pars. of Bruis, Ballygriffin, Corroge, Cullen, Cordangan, Clonpet, Clonbullogue, Clonbeg, Emly, Glenbane, Kilshane, Kilnaclig, Killardry, Kilfeacle, Kilcorman, Rathlynin, Solloghmore, Solloghodbeg, Shronell, Tipperary, Templemore, Templeniery and a part of Clonoulty, Donohill, Da andargan, Oughterleague, Relickmurry, Templebredon, nd Toem, comprising 115,960 acres.

CLANWILLIAM, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. f Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by the Shannon on he N., by Owneybeg on the E., by Small County and imerick on the S. and W. It is 11 miles long by broad, and consists of 55,892 acres of picturesque ountry, containing the pars. of Ballybrood, Clonkeen, arrigparson, Cahernarry, Caherelly, Caherconlish, Caeravally, Dromkeen, Donaghmore, Derrygalvin, Inch t. Lawrence, Kilmurry, Killeenagarriff, Ludden, ochestown, Rathjordan, Stradbally, and parts of Agshcormick, Abington, Fedamore, Grean, St. John's, t. Lawrence, St. Patrick, St. Nicholas, and the vils. nd towns of Cahirconlish, Ballineety, Montpelier, and astle-Connell.

CLAPCOT, a lib. in the par. of Allhallows, in the und. of Moreton, in the co. of Berks, near Wallingord.

CLAPDALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Clapham, in the est div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of he co. of York, 6 miles N.W. of Settle.

CLAPHAM, a suburban par. in the eastern div. of the und. of Brixton, in the co. of Surrey, 4 miles from St. aul's. It has a railway station on the Metropolitan xtension branch of the London, Chatham, and Dover ne, and another station on Clapham Common, known s Clapham Junction, on the London and South-Western line. The village has long been considered ne of the handsomest and most respectable in the uburbs of London, comprising many elegant mansions nd villas surrounded by gardens and pleasure-grounds. The whole line of road from London to the common now built upon. On the E. side is a handsome cresent, opposite which is a range of buildings called the rove, with shrubberies in front, and on the side adoining Brixton is Clapham New Park. It is well lighted ith gas, and there is an ample supply of water, partly om the South Lambeth Waterworks, and partly from a pring on the side of the common leading to Wandsorth. The trade of the place consists merely in supplying requisites to the families resident in the vicinity. he living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £1,275, the patron. of H. A. Bowyer, Esq. The parish church, dicated to the Holy Trinity, was built in 1775. There re five other churches in this parish, viz., Christ Church, t. Paul's, St. James's, St. John's, in the patron. of the ctor, and All Saints, in the patron. of trustees. The vings are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £300 to 500. Here the Congregationalists, Baptists, United esbyterians of Scotland, and Roman Catholics have aces of worship, and there are several schools in conction with the foregoing. The parish is comprised ithin the bounds of the V district of the metropolitan olice. The Common, consisting of above 200 acres, is ell planted and kept, and surrounded by handsome villa sidences. In June, 1862, a drinking fountain was rected on the Common. On Clapham Rise stands St. ohn's church, a fine edifice, with a handsome Ionic ortico at the E. end, surmounted by a pediment. It is district church, being separated, for ecclesiastical purposes, from the mother church of the parish. There is an ting coroner for the district of Clapham, chosen at e court for the duchy of Lancaster, part of the parish ing within the jurisdiction of that court. A vestry anages the local affairs, and petty sessions are held ery Saturday by the county magistrates. Lord acaulay's father had a house at Clapham, where the outhful historian was brought up. Granville Sharp, ohn and Henry Thornton, Wilberforce, and other unders of the "Clapham sect," were residents of the mmon.

CLAPHAM, a par. in the wap. of Staincliff and wcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles . of Settle, and 20 N.E. of Lancaster. The Northestern railway has a station about 1 mile from the village. It includes the four tnshps. of Austwick, Clapm, Newby, and Lawkland. The living is a vic. in the oc. of Ripon, val. with the cur. of Austwick annexed, £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a modern edifice with embattled tower. The register commences in 1595. There are four township schools for both sexes. The annual value of the charities is about £160. Here are several naturally formed caves, the largest of which is that of Ingleborough, containing many fine stalactites and stalagmites; it is 700 yards in length. Fairs are held on the 27th September and 2nd October. The lords of the manor are S. W. and O. Farrer, Esqrs.

CLAPHAM, a par. in the rape of Bramber, and hund. of Brightford, in the co. of Sussex, 4 miles N.W. of Worthing, its post town, and 5 E. of Arundel. The Brighton and South Coast railway has a station at Goring, 2½ miles distant from the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £157, in the patron. of the Duke of Norfolk. The church contains brasses to the Shelleys of Mitchelgrove.

CLAPHAM, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, in the co. of Bedford, 2 miles N.W. of Bedford. It is situated on the N. side of the river Ouse, and was formerly a chplry. to Oakley. The North-Western railway passes at a short distance from the village, and has a station at Bedford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £270, in the patron. of Lord John Thynne. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is an ancient structure with Norman tower. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are free schools for boys and girls, supported by the Revs. J. Dawson and J. Donne. There are some small charities. Clapham Park, the seat of Earl Ashburnham, is noted as the place where Dr. Hammond, in 1648, was prisoner.

CLAPHAM-CUM-NEWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Clapham, in the western div. of the wap. of Staincliff, and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the York. co. of It contains the hmlt. of Clapdale, 6 miles N.W. of Settle.

CLAPTON, a par. in the hund, of Navisford, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles E. of Thrapston, its post town, and 3 E. of Titmarsh. The village is very small, and the inhabitants wholly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £154, in the patron. of G. and W. G. Shedden, Esqrs. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat building, in good repair, and formerly possessed a beautiful tower, which was destroyed by lightning. There are monuments in the church to the memory of the Dudley, Breton, and Williams families. The charities amount to £11 per annum. Liveden House, now in ruins, was erected by the Treshams.

CLAPTON, or CLAPTON-IN-GORDANO, a par. in the hund. of Portbury, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles from the Clevedon station of the Great Western railway, and 10 from Bristol. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £300, in the patron. of Walter Bernard, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a beautiful edifice in the early English style of the 13th century, with Norman tower. The register commences about 1558. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Near the church stand the remains of the manor-house. The lord of the manor is Walter Bernard, Esq. Naish House is a fine edifice pleasantly situated.

CLAPTON, or CLAPTON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Slaughter, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles from Northleach, its post town, and 2 miles S.E. of Bourton-on-the-Water. The Great Western railway passes near the village, and has a station at Bourton. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Bourton-on-the-Water, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, in the patron. of Wadham College, Oxford. The church is a small but ancient edifice.

CLAPTON, a par. in the hund. of Armingford, in the co. of Cambridge, 6 miles S. of Caxton. See CROYDON-CUM-CLAPTON.

CLAPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Maperton, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles S. of Bruton.

CLAPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Midsomer Norton, in the co. of Somerset, 7 miles N. of Shepton-Mallet.

CLAPTON FORMS, a hmlt. in the par. of Cucklington, in the hund. of Norton Ferris, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles E. of Wincanton.

CLAPTON, LOWER, a hmlt. in St. James's district, in the par. of Hackney, in the Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 3½ miles to the N.N.E. of St. Paul's. It is within the County Court district of Hackney, and the north-eastern postal division, and is now a suburb of the city of London, containing about 3,000 inhabitants. Near the Lea Bridge station of the Great Eastern railway is a large india-rubber manufactory. Until recently it was a pretty rural spot, chiefly inhabited by wealthy London merchants. The houses are mostly old, but well built. Here are St. John's Foundation School for the sons of clergymen, and Hackney Grammar School in connection with King's College, London. Brook House, the ancient seat of the Earls of Northumberland, is now a lunatic asylum.

CLAPTON, UPPER, a hmlt. in the par. of Hackney, Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 4 miles to the N.N.E. of St. Paul's. It is a flourishing suburban district, studded over with pleasant villa residences, extending from the banks of the river Lea on the E. to Stoke Newington Common on the W., where it is bounded by Hackney Brook; on the S. it adjoins Lower Clapton at the obelisk facing the Lea Bridge-road, and on the N.W. it unites with Stamford Hill, in which district it is partly included. There is a proprietary chapel, and a chapel belonging to the Independents.

CLAPTON WICK, a tythg. in the par. of Portbury, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles N.W. of Bristol.

CLARA, a quoad sacra par., post and market town, in the bar. of Kilcoursey, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the quoad civilia pars. of Kilmanaghan and Kilbride, in the union of Ardnurcher. The general aspect of the country is flat and boggy, and the soil for the most part is bad. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Kilmanaghan, £91, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built by Edward Armstrong, Esq., in 1770. There are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists, besides three Roman Catholic chapels, and thirteen day schools. Situated between the town and Moate-Grenogue is the great moving bog Kilmaleady. The town is neatly built on the banks of the river Brosna and the Grand canal, at the cross-roads from Kilbeggan to Banagher, and from Athlone to Tullamore. It is about 61 miles from Dublin by road, or 65 by the Athlone branch of the Great Southern and Western railway, which has a station at Clara. It may also be approached vid the Midland Great Western, which has a station at Moate. The inhabitants are principally employed in the cotton and linen trades. Here are large corn-mills, a bleach-ground, loan-fund, dispensary, and police station. Petty sessions are regularly held here. About a mile from the town is the scene of the assassination of the Earl of Norbury, in 1839, within his own demesne, Durrow Abbey; other seats in the neighbourhood are Clara House, Kilclare, and Kilcoursey. The market day is Wednesday for corn. Fairs are held on the 6th January, 1st February, 25th March, 12th May, 29th June, 25th July, 26th September, and 1st November.

CLARA, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Kilkenny, its post town. It lies near the banks of the river Nore. The soil is good. The living is a vic. annexed to that of St. John's, Kilkenny, in the patron. of the crown. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. The chief residences in the neighbourhood are Clara Castle and Clifden, the seat of Viscount Clifden.

CLARA, a valley in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland; it is a spot of extreme beauty, situated at the meeting of several streams known as Avonmore, and is celebrated by Moore in his "Meeting of the Waters." It stretches from Glenalough to the Avoca, and forms part of the road from Laragh to Rathdrum. In the vicinity are the woods of Clarabeg and Ballygannon.

CLARABEG, a demesne near the town of Rathdrum, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It joins Ballygannon near the Vale of Clara.

CLARA-BRIDGE, or CLAREN-BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Stradbally, bar. of Dunkellin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland; it is situated on the road between Galway and Gort, near the embouchure of the Moyvilla into Galway Bay. In the neighbourhood is Tyrone House, the residence of A. F. St. George, Esq. A monastery was founded here by the Redlingtons of Kilcorran, the proprietors of the village. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in February, August, and November, and the first Thursday after the 12th May (old style).

CLARACH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadarn-fawr, in the hund. of Geneur Glynn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales. It is situated near Aberystwith, on the river Clarach.

CLARBESTON, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, in the co. of Pembroke, 5 miles N.W. of Narberth, and 6 from Haverfordwest, its post town. There is no village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Davi's, val. £60, in the patron. of the executors of the late J. Phillips, Esq. There is a school situated on an eminence, which is exactly in the centre of the hundred.

CLARE, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, in the co. of Suffolk, 16 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, 8 W. of Haverhill, and 9 N.W. of Sudbury, its post town and nearest railway station. This is a place of great antiquity, having been a frontier town of the kingdom of East Anglia. Here are the remains of a castle, on the site of which Earl Aluric, in Canuto's time, founded a chapel, afterwards made a cell to Bec in Normandy by Gilbert de Clare, son of Richard de Tonbridge, to whom William the Conqueror gave the honour, which included 95 lordships. It was afterwards presented by Edward III. to his son Lionel, with the title of Duke of Clarence, a title which has ever since become appropriated to the royal family. There are likewise the remains of an Augustine priory, founded in 1248 by Richard de Clare, who removed the chapel to Stoke, and also founded a friary. It is now a market town and polling place for the western division of the county. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £245, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a handsome ancient structure in the perpendicular style, and was repaired in 1836, and enlarged in 1851. It contains an eight-sided stone font and a fine lectern. The Independents and Baptists have places of worship, and schools have been recently erected for boys, girls, and infants. The town was lighted with gas in 1853, and possesses a corn exchange, built on the site of the market-cross, a literary institute, and police station, where the petty sessions are held. Market day is Monday, and there are fairs on Easter Tuesday and 26th July.

CLARE, a quarter in the par. and borough of Tiverton, in the co. of Devon. See TIVERTON.

CLARE, a lib. in the par. of Pirton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles N. of Watlington.

CLARE, a sea-side co. in the prov. of Munster, Ireland, is situated between 52° 30′ and 53° N. lat., and between 8° 15′ and 9° 30′ W. long. It is bounded on the N. by Galway, on the E. by Tipperary, on the S. by Limerick, on the S.W. by Kerry, and on the W. by the Atlantic. In form it resembles a triangle, of which the Galway and Tipperary frontier may be considered the base, Galway Bay and the estuary of the Shannon the other two sides, and Loop-Head the apex. Its greatest length, from Loop-Head to Lough Derg, is about 80 miles, and its greatest breadth, from the Shannon to Galway, about 35 miles. Its circuit is about 205 miles, of which more than 140 are coast-line. Its area is about 1,294 square miles, or 827,994 acres, of which only about one half is cultivated. The population in 1861 was 166,275, showing a decrease since 1851 of 46,165, or 21·73 per cent.; while the decrease in 1851 compared with 1841 was 73,951, or 25·82 per cent. There has been a corresponding decrease in the number of inhabited houses to the extent of 13,458, or 29·99 per ent., between 1841 and 1851, and of 3,300, or 10·51 per nt., between 1851 and 1861. The number of houses at resent inhabited is 28,112.—The O'Briens were from ne earliest date the most powerful family in this part of ie island, in which they exercised a kind of sovereignty. t was Brien Boroihme, the head of this family, who ucceeded in expelling the Danes from the country in ie early part of the 11th century. The Normans btained a footing in this part of Ireland in the 12th nd 13th centuries, but were in their turn expelled by ie O'Briens, who ruled over Thomond, or North Mun- er, of which Clare formed a portion, until 1543. In ie reign of Elizabeth Clare became shire ground, and as included in the province of Connaught, but in 1601 was restored to Munster on the petition of the Earl of homond. From that time until the present its history resents no features of great interest. The extra- rdinary decrease in the population since 1841 may be tributed to the potato famine of 1846, and to the ream of emigration which at that time began to flow om all parts of Ireland.—The county is not poor in ntiquities. There are cromlechs at Kilnabry, Bally- een, and Ballygannor; round towers at Drumcliff, ilnabry, Inniscailtre, and Inniscattery. On the two last- amed islands are also ruins of abbeys; and at Quin is e abbey of Quin, built of black marble, and founded the 13th century.—The county is very hilly. The ost remarkable elevations are the limestone moun- ins of the barony of Burren in the N. The white cks, bare and rugged, are scattered far and wide over ie district, and give it a most desolate appearance. he supply of water is very deficient, and vegetation nsequently languishes. In the N.E. are the moun- ins of Inchiquin and Slieve-Boughta. They consist clay-slate, cropping up from the Old Red sandstone, hich in its turn seems to have broken through a stra- m of limestone. In the E. is the Slieve Bernagh nge, of which the highest point, Craig, rises 1,758 et above the sea-level. In these hills there are slate- uarries, which yield the "Broadford slates," having high reputation. In the W. is Mount Callane, in hich is a thin seam of coal, extending some distance rthwards.—The soil of Clare is generally poor and erile, but there are patches of remarkable fertility. ey seem to owe their richness, like the soil of Egypt, periodical inundations. They lie along the banks of e principal rivers, and are called "corcasses," or orcaghs." There are other tracts, called "turloughs," ich, though not situated on the banks of any river, joy a similar fertility and from a similar cause. They m temporary lakes during a considerable portion of year; and when the water dries off them a rich rbage springs up which is of almost unequalled value the grazier.—As before remarked, Clare is, especially in N., deficient in streams. The Shannon, which forms e southern boundary of the county, expands soon er passing Limerick into a noble estuary, at which int it receives the Fergus, the second river in Clare, e Fergus has its sources in a number of small loughs, which the chief are Lough Inchiquin and Lough omore; the Claren, a smaller stream, falls into it at nis. The Fergus runs southwards from the centre the county, and is navigable for some distance wards from its junction with the Shannon. The nbeg waters the south-western portion of the county, l flows from E. to W. into Dunbeg Bay. The Ennisty- nd also flows from E. to W. into the Atlantic, and ters the N.W. In addition to the "turloughs," or oghans," there are more than a hundred small loughs, which the principal are Inchiquin, Dromore, Tedane, hicronane, and Ballyally.—The coast of Clare pos- sses great attractions for the lovers of the picturesque. e rocks rise in many places vertically from the sea, and h considerable height. The Atlantic beats upon them h fury, for its force is broken only by a few isolated gments which it has itself torn from the mainland. re has, owing to its proximity to the Atlantic, a humid mate, which in a great measure compensates for the ficiency of streams. The temperature is mild, and myrtles grow luxuriantly in the open air; but in the extreme W., where it is not sheltered by hills, the county suffers from the violent gales of the Atlantic. Clare is, from the nature of its soil, rather a grazing than a corn-growing county. The land is generally too light to yield abundant crops; and though some barley, oats, and wheat are grown, the land they occupy is not equal in extent to that which produces grass and potatoes. The latter are grown in great quantities. Clare is also one of the cider-growing counties. The estates are generally large, and the farms small. The fences and the cottages are of stone, which is found in abundance close at hand.—There is no great branch of manufacturing industry in Clare. Friezes, woollens, and coarse linen are made in small quantities for home use. Fishing is carried on to a small extent along the coast and in the rivers. The boats used are called "corraghs," and made of skin stretched on a frame. From their extreme lightness and pliancy they can live on the Atlantic better than boats of a stronger build. The quarries of Killaloe and Broadford are regularly worked for slate. Lead is found in small quantities at Glendree and Tulla; manganese at Kilrush, Ennistymon, and other places. There are mineral springs at Cloneen, Kilkishen, and Lisdounvarna.—Clare is divided into eleven baronies, viz., Burren in the N., Upper Tulla and Lower Tulla in the E., Upper Bunratty and Lower Bunratty in the S.E., Clonderalaw in the S., Mogarta in the S.W., Corcomroe and Ibrickane in the W., Inchi- quin in the N. centre, and Islands in the S. centre. Two members are returned by the county, which is governed by a lieutenant, a custos rotulorum, a high sheriff, 17 deputy-lieutenants, and about 100 magistrates. It has 76 parishes, and lies within the province of Dublin, but is divided among the three dioceses of Limerick, Kilfenora, and Killaloe. There are five market towns in Clare—Ennis, the county and assize town, in the barony of Islands; Kilrush, a quarter-sessions town, in the barony of Mogarta; Ennistymon, a quarter- sessions town, in the barony of Corcomroe; Carofin, a quarter-sessions town, in the barony of Inchiquin; and Killaloe, the seat of a bishopric, in the barony of Tulla. Quarter-sessions are held also at Tulla, Milltown-Mal- bay, and Sixmile-Bridge. Clare is divided into four Poor-law Unions—those of Kilrush, Ennistymon, Caro- fin, and Scariff. It lies within the military district of Cork; and there are infantry stations at Ennis, Clare Castle, Killaloe, and Kilrush; artillery stations at the forts of Inniscattery, Donnaha, Kilcredane, Blackwater, and Kilkerrin.—There are several seats in the county, among which may be mentioned those of the families of O'Brien, Fitzgerald, Massey, Macnamara, Bourton, McMahon, Malong, and Vandeleur.—There are several roads which meet at Ennis, the county town, viz., one to Limerick, 24 miles distant, which passes through New- market and Bunratty; one to Galway, 39 miles distant, which passes through Gort; one to Scariff, 24 miles distant, which passes through Quin and Tulla; a road to the coast at Milltown-Malbay, 23 miles distant, which passes through Drumcliff and Ennistymon; and one to Loop-Head, 53 miles distant, through Kilmaley, Kilruh, and Kiltree.

CLARE, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Orior, in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Tanderagee. It is situated on the river Cusher. The village is very ancient, and was possessed by the O'Nials and the Bouchers. The castle was built in 1619 by the latter, and burnt twenty years afterwards. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels, flax and corn-mills. Clare Castle is the seat of the Hardens, and is very ancient.

CLARE, or CLAREMORRIS, a post and market town in the par. of Kilcoleman, in the bar. of Clan- morris, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 15 miles S.E. of Castlebar, and 135 from Dublin by the Midland, and Great Northern and Western, railways, the latter of which passes through the town, and has a goods terminus for the Ballinrobe and South Mayo traffic. The town is fifth in size and importance in the county, containing about 2,000 inhabitants. It has a church,

Roman Catholic chapel, sessions-house, police station, union poorhouse, and a dispensary. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the town, which is also the head-quarters of the constabulary of the barony of Clanmorris. The property belongs to several proprietors; the principal holder is Alexander C. Lambert, Esq., who resides at Brook Hill, a fine mansion in the immediate vicinity. Castlemaggarrett is the seat of Lord Oranmore, and Claremont of Murray J. Blacker, Esq. The market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on the 24th May, 22nd June, 17th August, 27th September, and 23rd November.

CLARE, a river rising in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, among some minor loughs, in the neighbourhood of Ballyhaunis, traverses Galway, and finally, after passing near the town of Tuam and some small hamlets, falls into Lough Corrib. The Moyne discharges its waters into this river. Near Clare-Galway it takes a subterraneous course of nearly 3 miles. On its banks stand the ruins of Clare-Galway Abbey.

CLARE, a bar. in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, is bounded by Dunmore on the N., Tyaquin on the E., Dunkellin on the S., and Lough Corrib on the W., and is divided from the co. of Mayo by the Black river. It is upwards of 18 miles long by 12 broad, and embraces an area of 136,870 acres. This bar. comprises the pars. of Kilkilvery, Killeany, Belclare, Cargin, Cummer or Kilmacreen, Annaghdown, Donaghpatrick, Killursa, Kilcoona, Kilmoylan, Killower, Lackagh, and parts of Clare-Galway, Tuam, Killererin, Moniver, Athenry, and Abbeyknockmoy; also the town of Headford, and the vils. of Kilrogue, Clare-Tuam, Anbally, and Clare-Galway. The interior is somewhat hilly, with pasture and arable land, but there is much bog and waste-land.

CLARE, or CLARE-GALWAY, a par. and vil. in the bars. of Clare and Dunkellin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Oranmore. The par. is traversed by the river Clare. There is some bog, but the soil is generally good. The living is a rect. united with Galway. The village, situated on the road between Galway and Tuam, contains three chapels and two day schools, but no church. Here De Cogan, in 1290, founded a friary, which is now a ruin of much beauty, and, though much defaced, still affords a very perfect specimen of Gothic architecture; lying exposed within the walls are numerous human bones. This friary was given to the Clanricardes, who built a castle here, the ruins of which stand at the foot of the bridge; it was surrendered to Sir Charles Coote in 1651. The principal residences in the neighbourhood are Waterdale, Rocklawn, Rockwood, and Lydacan.

CLARE-ABBEY, a par. in the bar. of Islands, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Ennis, and close to the Clare Castle station on the Limerick and Ennis railway. It is traversed by the river Fergus, and by the road from Clare to Limerick, Kildysert, and Ennis. The soil is good, with a limestone bottom. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh, val. £111, in the patron. of the bishop. The town, which stands upon the banks of the Fergus, is 2 miles S. of Ennis, and was formerly the county town. It contains the parish church, Roman Catholic chapel, barracks, and three day schools. In the neighbourhood, on the banks of the Fergus, stand the ruins of Clare-Abbey, built in 1195 by Donald O'Brian, who also founded a castle here. A military depôt is stationed here. Salmon abounds in the Fergus. The residences are Buncraggy, the seat of the Marquis of Conyngham, Claremount, Carnelly Island, Magrath, Barntick, and Kilbreckanbeg. Clare-Abbey gives the title of earl to the Fitzgibbons.

CLAREBOROUGH, or CLAYBORO', a par. in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 2 miles N.E. of East Retford, its post town. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincoln railway, and is situated near the Chesterfield canal, and the Roman way to Lincoln. The par. contains the hmlts. of Bolham, Moorgate, Gringley, Little Gringley, and Walham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the cur. of St. Saviour's annexed, £331, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure in the Gothic style of architecture, said to have been built in 1258 by Archbishop Sewell. The charities are of the val. of £10 per annum. G. S. Foljambe, Esq., is lord of the manor. In the hmlt. of Moorgate in this par. is a chapel of ease, dedicated to St. Saviour, recently erected.

CLAREEN, a vil. and post town, in the bar. of Ballybrit, in King's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Kinnetty. Clareen House is the principal residence.

CLARE HALL, an ext. par. place, in the lib. of Cambridge University, in the co. of Cambridge. See Cambridge University.

CLARE HILL, a mountain in the bar. of Duhallow, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, forming the northern extremity of the range called Slieve Logher.

CLARE-ISLAND, in the par. of Kilgever, bar. of Murrish, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Lewisburgh. It lies in the entrance of Clew Bay; its dimensions are 6 miles by 3. The spot is one of extreme beauty and fertility. The highest ground is 1,520 feet above the level of the sea. At the northern end is a lighthouse, having a range of 27 miles; it is 187 feet high, and was built in 1806. Tolerable landing is found at Luckny, towards the western extremity. A small pier was erected at the eastern end by the father of the present owner of this island, Sir Seosa O'Malley. Here in the 16th century was built a castle by the renowned Grace O'Malley, or Grana Uile. In the window of a ruined abbey standing near Port-a-Chonile is shown a skull, said to be that of Grana, which is held in great veneration.

CLARE ISLAND. See Clear Island, co. Cork.

CLAREMONT, the palace of his Majesty Leopold King of the Belgians, 4 miles S.W. of Kingston, in the co. of Surrey. It was built by Browne for Lord Clive, and contains in its grounds a mausoleum with a bust of the Princess Charlotte, who died here in 1817. King Louis Philippe of France died here in 1850, and it has since been the residence of the French ex-royal family.

CLAREMOUNT: there are numerous petty hamlets and seats of this name in almost every county of Ireland; but the only village of any size is in the bar. of Innishowen, in the co. of Donegal, 3 miles S.W. of Moville.

CLARENCEFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Ruthwell in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Annan.

CLARENDON PARK, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Alderbury, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles E. of Salisbury. It is situated on the Roman road to Winchester near the Great Western and London and South-Western railways. This place is celebrated as being the spot where the Constitutions of Clarendon were signed on the 25th January, 1164. Anciently it was a royal forest, and there are yet traces of a hunting-seat, supposed to have been built about the time of Henry I. It was here that Elizabeth was entertained by the Herberts, to whom the place was granted. Clarendon gives the title of earl to the family of Villiers. In the original grant of the domain by King Charles II. to the Duke of Albemarle the superficial contents of the whole park are estimated at 4,300 acres, and are valued at £1,000 per annum. At present nearly one-third of the whole demesne is appropriated as woodland, and about 70 acres surrounded by a large fosse or vallum, enclosing the foundations of a stone wall and of the palace, which is now completely in ruins.

CLARE, ST. See Clear, St., Carmarthenshire.

CLARE, ST., a hmlt. in the par. of Newchurch, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Hants, 1 mile E. of Ryde.

CLARETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Alverton Manneverer, in the upper div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles E. of Knaresborough. It is situated under Claro Hill.

CLARETUAM, a hmlt. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, near Headford.

CLAREVILLE, a vil. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.W. of Burren.

CLAREWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Corbridge, in the E. div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 4½ miles N.E. of Corbridge.

CLARINA, a vil. and post town, in the bar. of Pubblebrien, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated about 3 miles to the N. of St. Patrick's-well. Eyre Massey, brother of Hugh Lord Massey, was created Baron Clarina for military services at Culloden and Havannah.

CLARISFORD, the seat of the Bishop of Killaloe, on the river Shannon, in the co. of Clare, Ireland.

CLARK GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Batley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles N.W. of Wakefield.

CLARKSTON, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of East Monkland, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles from Airdrie, and 32 from Edinburgh. The living is in the presb. of Hamilton, and in the patron. of the male communicants.

CLARKSTON, a vil. in the par. of Cathcart, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Glasgow.

CLARMALLAGH, a bar. in Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland; is bounded by Upperwoods on the N., Cullinagh on the E., the co. of Kilkenny on the S., and by Clandonagh on the W. It is situated in the S.W. part of the co., and contains the pars. of Kildellig, Killerliogh, Aghmacart, and parts of Bordwell, Coolkerry, Attanagh, Aharney, Aghaboe, Abbeyleix, Rathdowney, Rosconnell, Glashore, Erke, and Durrow. Its length is nearly 9 miles, and its greatest width 8½, comprising an area of 43,534 acres.

CLARO, UPPER AND LOWER, a wap. in two divs., in the West Riding of the co. of York; the upper div. contains the pars. of Spofforth, Kirkby-Overblow, Kirk Deighton, Cowthorp, Goldsborough, Allerton-Mauleverer, Hunsingore, Leathley, Marton, Nun Monkton, Weston, and parts of Hammerton, Addingham, Harewood, Little Ouseburn, Ripley, Aldborough, Ilkley, Otley, Wrixley, Skipton; the lower div. contains the pars. of Topgrove, Haverah Park, Knaresborough, Fewston, Great Ouseburn, South Stainley, Hampsthwaite, Burton-Leonard, Kirkby-Malzeard, Pannal, Farnham, Staveley, and parts of Little Ouseburn, Ripon, Ripley, and Aldborough, comprising together 212,650 acres. The wap. derives its name from Clare, or Claro Hill, where the Saxon Witenagemotes were held.

CLÂS, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Harmon, in the hundred of Rhayader, in the co. of Radnor, 4 miles N. of Rhayader.

CLASARINKA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It lies near Castlemartyr.

CLASE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Llangafelach, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 3 miles N. of Swansea.

CLASHACROW, or DE GLAISHCROE, a par. in the bar. of Crannagh, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Freshford. It lies along the right bank of the river Nore, a short distance on the road from Freshford to Kilkenny, near the river Nuenna. The living is a rect. united with Aghour, in the dioc. of Ossory.

CLASHAVODIG, a vil. in the par. of Little Island, in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Cork.

CLASHCARNOCK, a small harbour in the par. of Durness, 3 miles E. of Cape Wrath, in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland.

CLASHEENNAGNAW, a hmlt. in the bar. of Carbery-West, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N.W. of Skibbereen.

CLASHMABROCK, a vil. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S. of Doneraile.

CLASHMESSIE, a vil. in the par. of Assynt, in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland, 20 miles W. of Lairg. It is situated in a wild country on Clashmessie Bay, which is 3 miles wide.

CLASHMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Dornock, in the co. of Sutherland, 2 miles W. of Dornock.

CLASHMORE, a par. and post town, in the bar. of Decies-within-Drum, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, bounded by the river Blackwater, and intersected by the road from Clonmel to Youghal-ferry. The surface has some hilly pasturage and a fair proportion of profitable soil. The living is a prebend. and vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, val. £240, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands in the village, is of modern date, and was built by the Board of First Fruits. The village is situated on the banks of the Blackwater, 10 miles S.W. of Dungarvon, and contains a Roman Catholic chapel, dispensary, and three day schools. It is the seat of a constabulary force, and petty sessions are held here. The remains of an abbey, said to have been founded in the 7th century, stand near the river. At the Dissolution this abbey became the property of Sir Walter Raleigh. The neighbouring seats are Clashmore House, the demesne of Lord Hastings; D'Loughtane, the residence of Samuel Allen, Esq.; Ballina Multina, of F. Kennedy, Esq.; and the Glebe House.

CLASHROE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, near Headford.

CLASSAGHROE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Glenamaddy.

CLATFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Preshute, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile S.W. of Marlborough. Formerly a priory stood here, which was founded by Roger Mortimer shortly after the Conquest.

CLATFORD - GOODWORTH, or GOODWORTH CLATFORD, a par. in the hund. of Lower Wherwell, Andover div. of the co. of Hants, 10 miles W. of the Andover Road station on the South-Western railway. It is situated near the canal, and includes the tythg. of Goodworth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £180, in the patron. of W. Iremonger, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

CLATFORD PARK, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Selkley, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles S. of Clatford.

CLATFORD, UPPER, a par. in the hund. and union of Andover, in the co. of Hants, 2 miles S.W. from Andover, its post town, and 5 from Stockbridge. It is situated on the canal a short distance from the South-Western railway, which has a station at Andover Road. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £458, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Froud. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a school supported by the rector.

CLATHY, a vil. in the par. of Findogask, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 10 miles S.W. of Perth.

CLATT, a par., with a vil. of the same name, in the district of Alford, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 10 miles S. of Huntley. It is bounded on the N.W. by the Bogie, and on the S. by the Suie and Coreen Hills. Three-fifths of the surface is under tillage, and the remainder is common, pasture, and wood. Granite is the prevailing rock, and one quarry is worked. It was made a burgh of barony by James IV., and formerly had a weekly market, but has now only two fairs, one in May and the other in November. This par. is in the presb. of Alford, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £135.

CLATTERCOTE, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Banbury, in the co. of Oxford, 6 miles N. of Banbury, its post town. There are still to be seen the remains of the priory founded here by the Beauchamps in the Norman period. The lib. is intersected by the Oxford canal, and has only one good house.

CLATTERFORD, or CHATTERFORD, a vil. in the par. of Carisbrook, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Hants, 1 mile S.W. of Newport.

CLATWORTHY, a par. in the hund. of Williton, in the co. of Somerset, 10 miles from Wellington station on the Great Western railway, and the same distance from Wiveliscombe. It is situated near the source of the river Tone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £310, in the patron. of G. H. Carew, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a fine structure in the decorated English style. The register commences in 1562. Here is a National school for both sexes. The lord of the manor is George Carew, Esq.

CLAUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. of Lancaster, 7 miles N. of Lancaster, and 2 from Garstang station on the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Lune. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the trustees of the late T. Fenwick, Esq. The church is a small building dedicated to St. Chad.

CLAUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Garstang, in the hund. of Amounderness, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Garstang. It is intersected by the Preston and Lancaster road, and the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. Here the Roman Catholics have a chapel dedicated to St. Thomas, and a school. The lord of the manor is T. F. Brockholes, Esq. Claughton Hall is a fine building beautifully situated in extensive pleasure grounds.

CLAUGHTON, or CLAUGHTON-CUM-GRANGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bidstone, in the lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. of Chester, 1 mile N.W. of Birkenhead. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, annexed to the perpet. cur.* of Bidstone. The church, dedicated to Christ, is a red sandstone edifice in the early English style. In this township is St. Aidan's Theological College, for the training of candidates for holy orders. The building is in the decorated Tudor style, and stands on a plot of 33,000 square yards of land, which cost £9,325.

CLAVERDON, a par. in the hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 6 miles W. of Warwick station, and 4 E. of Henley-in-Arden. It contains the tnshp. of Langley. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with the cur. of Norton-Lindsey annexed, £265, in the patron. of the archdeacon. The church, which is dedicated to St. Michael, has lately been altered. Here is a National school. In the reign of Henry VIII. certain lands were left by John Matthews for the use of the church, the rent of which in 1617 was 12 nobles, but now exceeds £100. The Birmingham and Stratford canal passes through the parish.

CLAVERHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Yatton, in the co. of Somerset, 10 miles S.W. of Bristol.

CLAVERING, a hund. in the N.W. portion of Essex; contains the pars. of Farnham, Ugley, Berdon, Manewden, Clavering, Langley, and parts of Stanstead-Mountfitchet, and Henham, comprising 18,140 acres.

CLAVERING, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles from Elsenham railway station, and 7 from Saffron Walden. Bishop's Stortford is its post town. It is situated on the river Stort, and is stated in Domesday Survey to have been held by Suene. It afterwards came to the families of FitzRoger, Clavering, Nevill, and Barrington. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. with the cur. of Langley annexed, £491, in the patron. of the Governors of Christ's Hospital. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is a stone structure, in the Gothic style, a portion of which has recently been repaired. It contains monuments to the Barlee family, and a register which commences 1558. Here are Independent and Primitive Methodist places of worship, and National schools for both sexes. The manorial rights are in the hands of Sir George Staunton, Bart., A. Majendie, Esq., and Rev. J. Sinkin.

CLAVERING, a hund. in the S.E. portion of the co. of Norfolk, contains the pars. of All Saints, Wheatacre, Burgh St. Peter, Burgh Apton, How, Norton Subcourse, Toft Monks, Hales, Heckingham, Aldeby, Gillingham, Thurlton, Brooke, Ellingham, Geldeston, Haddiscoe, Kirby Cane, Raveningham, Stockton, and Thorpe, comprising 28,880 acres.

CLAVERLEY, a par. in the hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop 10 miles S.W. of the Wolverhampton station, and 6 E. of Bridgnorth. It includes the tnshps. of Aston, Beobridge, Broughton, Dalicott, Farmcott, Gatacre, Heathton, Hopstone, Ludstone, Shipley, Sutton, and Wondell. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £300, in the patron. of T. Whitmore, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The patron has recently converted the perpet. cur. into a vic. by charging his property at Ludstone in perpetuity with £100 per annum to meet the grant of £67 from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; a rent-charge of £12 is paid also to the minister in lieu of moduses. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is in various styles of architecture, with stained-glass windows. It contains monuments to the Gatacre family and to Lord Chief Justice Brooke, who also filled the offices of Recorder of London and Speaker of the House of Commons. A memorial "Te Deum" window has been lately presented by W. Crowther, Esq., at a cost of £500. The endowed free school is now united with the National school. The parochial charities are considerable. The late John Crowther, of Wednesbury, left by will £1,000 to the poor of this parish, the interest of which to be laid out in clothing, and to be distributed annually on St. Thomas's Day. Chyknell Hall, Gatacre Park, Gatacre Hall, Dalicott House, and Ludstone Hall are the chief seats, the latter of which was built by the Whitmores in the reign of Charles I. There are three cattle fairs in the spring.

CLAVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Hampton, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Bath. It is delightfully situated in a valley through which the river Avon and the Kennet canal run, the river Avon being to the E. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £215, in the patron. of G. Vivian, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice in the later English style, and was restored in 1858. It possesses some beautiful stained-glass windows. There is a mausoleum in the churchyard of Ralph Allen, who was the friend of Pope. There are National and Sunday schools for both sexes. The charities amount to about £8 per annum. Graves, who wrote the "Spiritual Quixote," some time held the living of this parish.

CLAVERTON, a hmlt. in the city of Chester, in the co. of Chester.

CLAWDD-MADOG, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanwrtyd, in the hund. of Builth, in the co. of Brecon, 12 miles W. of Builth, its post town, and 11 from Llandovery railway station. It contains Trehengwin and Bont.

CLAWRPLWYF, a hmlt. in the par. of Mynyddyslwyn, in the lower div. of the hund. of Wentlooge, in the co. of Monmouth, 7 miles S.W. of Pontypool.

CLAWSON, LONG CLAWSON, or CLAXTON, a par. in the hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Melton Mowbray, its post town and railway station. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £105, in the patron. of T. Mitchell, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Remigius, is a handsome structure in the perpendicular style. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Baptists have chapels, and there is a free school, endowed by John Garten in 1793 with a revenue of £62 per annum, derived from lands at Frisby-on-the-Wreak. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor. A wake is held on the Sunday following Old Michaelmas Day.

CLAWTON, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles S. of Holsworthy, its post town. It is situated on the river Claw, which joins the Tamar. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £75, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Melhuish. The church is an ancient building, with a tower. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have places of worship. The charities produce about £2 per annum. Here is an excellent quarry of freestone.

CLAXBY, a par. in the wap. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 1 mile from Willoughby railway station, 3 from Alford, and 4 from Spilsby, both which are post towns. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Well, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. together £372, in the patron. of the Hon. R. A. Nisbet. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

CLAXBY, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles N. of Market Rasen, its post town, and 1 N.E. of Usselby railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the rect. of Normanby-on-the-Wolds annexed, £844, in the patron. of the Rev. S. W. Andrews. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school for boys and girls. The lord of the manor and principal landowner is the Earl of Yarborough.

CLAXBY-PLUCKACRE, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles S.E. of Horncastle. Boston is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £70, in the patron. of the Hon. H. Dymoke. The church, which was dedicated to St. Andrew, fell down about a hundred years ago, and has not been rebuilt. J. B. Stanhope, Esq. is lord of the manor. Claxby Wood is a meet for the Brocklesby hounds.

CLAXTON, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, in the co. of Norfolk, 2¼ miles N.W. of Loddon, and 2 S.W. of Buckenham railway station. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £60, in the patron. of Sir C. H. Rich, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The charities amount to £10 per annum. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a National school. Sir Charles H. Rich is lord of the manor.

CLAXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Greatham, in the north-eastern div. of Stockton ward, in the co. of Durham, 7 miles to the N.E. of Stockton-upon-Tees, its post town. The antiquary Claxton was a native of this place.

CLAXTON, a chplry. in the par. of Bossall, in the wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N.E. of York. Petty sessions for the wapentake of Bulmer are held here. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of York, annexed to the perpet. cur. of Sandhutton, val. together £200, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Durham.

CLAXTON. See CLAWSON, Leicestershire.

CLAYBARNS, a vil. in the par. of Newtown, in the p. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Edinburgh.

CLAYBROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 4 miles N.W. of Lutterworth, its post town. It includes the tnshps. of Great or Nether Claybrooke, Little or Over Claybrooke, and the hmlts. of Littesby and Ullesthorpe; the last place is a station on the North Midland railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. with the curs. of Wibtoft and Little Wigston annexed, £451, in the patron. of the Crown. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a Gothic structure, with an embattled tower. There is a chapel of ease at Whibtoft, where divine service is performed every other Sunday. There is an endowed National school and other charities. In this parish is a spot which commands a view of about sixty churches. It is supposed to have been the site of the Roman station Venonæ, where the Fosse Way and Watling Street intersect.

CLAYBROOKE, GREAT and LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Claybrooke, in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 4½ miles N.W. of Lutterworth, its post town.

CLAY-CASTLE, a rising ground on the W. of Youghall Harbour, co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Clay obtained from this spot possesses the quality of petrifying.

CLAY-COTON, a par. in the hund. of Guilsborough, in the co. of Northampton, 9 miles N.E. of Rugby, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Welford. It is situated on a branch of the river Avon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £339, in the patron. of the Rev. J. T. Smith. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is in good repair. The charities amount to £4 per annum. Here is a parochial school. Messrs. Elkins and Norton are lords of the manor.

CLAYCROSS, or CLAYLANE, a tnshp. in the par. of North Wingfield, in the hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles S. of Chesterfield, its post town. It is a station on the Midland railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £60, to which the Claycross Coal Company make a grant of £50, in the patron. of the Rector of North Wingfield. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, was erected by subscription in 1851. It is a handsome stone edifice in the early English style. The Wesleyans, New Connexion, and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. There are National schools and schools erected by the Claycross Company in 1854, for boys, girls, and infants, to which is attached a large library. These schools are supported by the Company's servants, who subscribe 1*d.* per week towards them. The coal stratum, of which the mines here form part, extends over an area of 65 miles from N. to S., and its greatest width is about 24 miles. This place is greatly improved since the opening of the Midland railway.

CLAYDON, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, in the co. of Suffolk, 7 miles from Stowmarket, and 3½ N.W. of Ipswich. It is situated on the Gipping, a tributary of the river Orwell, near the Great Eastern railway. In the parish are extensive lime-kilns, a whiting manufactory, and chalk-pits for burning lime. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the rect. of Akenham annexed, £549, in the patron. of Miss E. Drury. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a very ancient small structure partly in the Saxon style of architecture, consisting of nave, transepts, south porch, chancel, and tower. The Independents have a chapel here. Near the Hall are remains of an old Saxon castle. Sir W. T. Middleton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

CLAYDON, a chplry. in the par. of Cropredy, hund. of Banbury, in the co. of Oxford, 6 miles N. of Banbury, and 29 miles N. of Oxford. It is situated near the Oxford canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £125, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient and curious structure. The charities amount to £20 per annum. Here the Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Claydon Wood is a meet for the hounds of Mr. Drake.

CLAYDON AND BOSMERE HUNDRED. See BOSMERE AND CLAYDON, Suffolk.

CLAYDON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, in the co. of Bucks, 6 miles to the S.E. of Buckingham, and 2½ S.W. of Winslow, its railway station and post town. It contains the tnshp. of Botolph, or Bottle Claydon. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Claydon Steeple, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with square tower containing five bells. There is a charity of £5 every six years to apprentice boys.

CLAYDON, MIDDLE, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, in the co. of Bucks, 1½ mile W. of East Claydon, and 4½ S.W. of Winslow, its post town. The manor was purchased by the Verneys in 1466, and in the reign of Henry VII. they commenced building the spacious mansion, which has since become one of the most celebrated in the county, and its proprietors have frequently been returned as members to parliament for Buckinghamshire. The living is a rect., val. £540, in the dioc. of Oxford, and in the patron. of Sir H. Verney, Bart. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a monument to Sir Edward Verney, standard-bearer to King Charles I., who was killed at the battle of Edgehill, and one to the late Sir H. Calvert, by Chantrey. There are six almshouses, founded by the Verneys, and endowed with £16 per annum. The other charities, for apprenticing children of the three Claydons, and for relief of the poor, amount to £16 per annum.

CLAYDON STEEPLE, a par. in the hund., union, and co. of Buckingham, 4 miles S. of Buckingham, and adjoining East Claydon. At the time of Domesday Survey, it appears to have been more populous than at present. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. with East Claydon, £300, in the patron. of Sir H. Verney, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Roman coins of Carausius and Alectus have been found.

CLAYGATE, a manor in the parish of Thames

Ditton, in the second div. of the hund. of Kingston, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles S.W. of the Kingston station of the London and South-Western railway, and 6 N.E. of Leatherhead. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £75, in the patron. of the trustees. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a neat modern structure. Here is a National school. The Earl of Lovelace is lord of the manor, and he and the King of the Belgians are the chief landowners.

CLAYHANGER, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Devon, 8 miles N.E. of Tiverton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £273, in the patron. of the Rev. W. M. Harrison. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with tower. There are parochial schools for both sexes.

CLAYHIDON, or CLEHEDON, a par. in the hund. of Hemyock, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles S. of Wellington, its post town and railway station, and 15 E. of Tiverton. It is situated under the Black Down hills, near the source of the river Culme. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £508, in the patron. of G. Burnaud, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone edifice in the Gothic style, with tower, the interior of which has been recently restored. The Baptists have a place of worship. The charities are of the value of £18 per annum. William Gifford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CLAY-HILL, a hmlt. in the co. of Surrey, near Epsom.

CLAYHOLE, a vil. in the par. of Leswalt, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland. It is included within the parliamentary boundary of the town of Stranraer.

CLAYHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Borthwick, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland.

CLAYLANE. See CLAYCROSS, Derbyshire.

CLAYLANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster.

CLAY LOUGH, NORTH and SOUTH, two small loughs near Killyleagh, co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. There is another place of the same name in the par. of Keady, in the bar. and co. of Armagh, where lead is found.

CLAYPOLE, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln. It has a railway station on the Great Northern line, and is 4 miles S.E. of Newark, its post town. It is situated on the river Witham. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, formerly divided into two medieties, North and South, but now consolidated, and of the annual val. of £746, in the patron. of John P. Plumptree, Esq. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a handsome structure in various styles of architecture, with a tower and spire. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have places of worship. There are National and Sunday schools, also a parish library, consisting of about 500 vols., a clothing club, and a savings-bank. The charities produce £3 per annum. The workhouse for the Newark Union is situated in this parish. George Nevile, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CLAY'S GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Oxspring, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1½ mile E. of Penistone.

CLAYTHORPE, a hmlt. in the co. of Westmoreland, 1 mile N. of Burton-in-Kendal.

CLAYTHORPE, a chplry. in the par. of Belleau, and hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles from Alford, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Louth. It is a station on the Great Northern railway.

CLAYTON, a par. in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles from Hurstperpoint, its post town, and the same distance from Haywards Heath station on the Brighton and South Coast railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, with the cur. of Keymer annexed, in the patron. of Brazenose College, Oxford. The church has been recently repaired. It contains a register commencing 1714, and a brass of a priest dated 1523.

CLAYTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles W. of Bradford, its post town. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the woollen manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bradford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was erected in 1851. It is a handsome structure in the middle pointed style. The Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists have chapels, and there are National schools for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum.

CLAYTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, in the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Stoke-upon-Trent, and 2 from Newcastle, its post town. The chief residence is Clayton Hall.

CLAYTON-GRIFFITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Trentham, in the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles W. of Lane End.

CLAYTON-LE-DALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Blackburn, in the lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 2½ miles N.W. of Blackburn. It is situated near the river Ribble.

CLAYTON-LE-MOORS, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, in the lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 4½ miles N.E. of Blackburn. It is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, not far from the Bolton and West Yorkshire railway. Part of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton-mills and neighbouring collieries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £120, in the patron. of trustees. The church is modern.

CLAYTON-LE-WOODS, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Leyland, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Chorley, and 5 S.E. of Preston. It is situated on a small stream called the Lostock. Most of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton-mills. At Clayton Green, 1 mile distant, is a handsome Roman Catholic chapel. Clayton Hall, formerly the seat of the De Claytons, is an old mansion in the Elizabethan style; it is now a farmhouse.

CLAYTON, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of High Hoyland, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile W. of High Hoyland. It is situated near the North Midland railway. The manufacture of woollens and flax-spinning is carried on. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor.

CLAYTON-WITH-FRICKLEY, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles N.W. of Doncaster. The Archbp. is a perpet. cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Frickley; val. together £73, in the patron. of S. A. Ward, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was built about 1100; it is of stone, in the Norman style of architecture. The Wesleyans have an endowed chapel, and there are schools built by William Aldam, Esq., who resides at the handsome mansion of Frickley Hall. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

CLAYWORTH, a par. in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 9 miles N.E. of East Retford, and 6 S.E. of Bawtry, both of which are post towns. It is situated on the Chesterfield canal, and includes the tnshp. of Wyeston, and part of the hmlt. of Drakeholes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £604, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with tower. The Wesleyans have a place of worship and there is an endowed school. The charities produce £8 per annum. Bruce Dickenson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CLEADON, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitburn, in the co. of Durham, 3 miles N. of Sunderland. It is situated near the coast.

CLEADY, a vil. in the bar. of Glenarought, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated on the river Cleady, near Kenmare.

CLEAGHMORE, a vil. in the par. of Kilcloony, bar. of Clonmacknowen, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland.

CLEAN LOUGH, in the bar. of Dromahaire, in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, between 3 and 4 miles N. of Lough Allen, with which it is connected by the little river Duibhachar.

CLEAR ISLAND, or CAPE CLEAR, the Insula Acharmley of the Irish, and formerly Insula Sanctæ Claræ, par. in the bar. of West Carbery, in the co. of Cork, rov. of Munster, Ireland. It is the most southern oint of Ireland, lying 2 miles S. of Innisherkin, in 1° 25′ N. lat., and 9° 30′ W. long. The little land that cultivated is of a rich quality, but the general surface the island, which extends over an area of about 1,400 res, is for the most part rocky and sterile. The living a vic. united with Kilcoe, in the dioc. of Ross. There a neatly built Gothic church, and a Roman Catholic apel, with residences for the Protestant and Roman atholic clergymen of the island; also schools under e Irish Islands and Coast Society and the National oard. An excellent kind of building stone is obtained. revolving light was erected here in 1817, visible at a stance of 27 miles at intervals of every two minutes, it was extinguished on the erection of a similar light the Fastnet rock, 4 miles farther out at sea. Here is a riety of game and sea-birds, and an abundance of w-fish. There is a small lake in the interior, the ter of which is remarkable for its purifying qualities. he Capers, as the inhabitants are called, were a few years o a wild and simple race, but now differ little in their as and habits of living from their neighbours on the inland; neither are they so superstitious as they were fore the establishment of a Protestant missionary ttlement on the island. They are generally inoffensive d civil. Their principal occupations are fishing, culti- ting small plots of ground, and looking out for wrecked operty, which they can discern many miles at sea. this, and obtaining contraband goods from home- und vessels, they run a considerable trade since the land ceased being a coastguard station. There are veral unlicensed houses called Sheebeens, for the sale of toxicating drinks, which are consumed chiefly on nday. The great holiday is St. Kiaran's Day, on hich, however, any person may work who has not been rn on the island. At the extremity of a narrow neck land stretching into the sea are the ruins of Duna- re Castle, or the Golden Fort, surrendered to Captain arvey in 1601 by the O'Driscolls. There are also ruins a church at St. Kiaran's harbour, near which is a stone oss, said to be cut by the saint himself, who, according Archbishop Usher, was a native of this island. Cape ar, except a glebe of 25 acres, is the property of the tcher family, who largely contributed to the erection the pier.

CLEAR, ST., or ST. CLARE, a par. in the hund. of rllys, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales. It is ated on the river Taff, and is a nominal borough and rket town. There was anciently a Norman castle d priory, the site of which was given at the Dissolution All Souls' College, Oxford. The living is a vic. in e dioc. of St. David's, val. £133, in the patron. of J. illips, Esq. The charities produce about £20 per annum.

CLEARWELL, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of ewland, in the hund. of St. Briavel's, in the co. of oucester, 6 miles from the Lydney station of the South ales railway, and 3 from Coleford, its post town is situated near the river Wye. The living is a perpet. r.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £195, the patron. of the Dowager Countess of Dunraven. he church is built of brick. Clearwell Court, the seat the countess, is a fine edifice. In 1847, 3,000 Roman per coins were found, chiefly of the reigns of Clau- s, Posthumus, and Victorinus, but all between Gal- lus and Aurelian.

CLEASBY, a par. in the wap. of East Gilling, in the rth Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles W. of Darling- n, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Tees. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the c. of Ripon, val. £188, in the patron. of the dean d chapter. The church is a stone edifice rebuilt by John Robinson, Bishop of London, and one of the plipotentiaries at the Treaty of Utrecht; he likewise owed a school for educating six boys, and rebuilt t parsonage-house. The charities produce £11 per num. J. C. Backhouse, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CLEATHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Manton, hund. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 1½ mile N. of Kirton. Cleatham Hall, a fine mansion erected in 1855, is the residence of Matthew Maw, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

CLEATHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, in the S.W. div. of Darlington ward, in the co. of Durham, 4 miles E. of Barnard Castle.

CLEATOR, a par. and post town in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles S.E. of Whitehaven, and 2 from Egremont. Cleator Moor is a station on the Whitehaven, Cleator, and Egremont Junction of the North-Western railway. The village is large, and contains some good houses. It is situated on the river Ehen. The value of property is much enhanced, owing to the rapid rise of the population from 300 to 3,995. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £79, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a modern structure. The Wesleyans, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics have chapels, and there are National, Unitarian, and Roman Catholic schools. Within the parish are mines of coal, limestone, and iron ore. There is an extensive flax-mill for the manufacture of yarns and thread; also a forge for the founding of locomotive shafts, spades, and edge-tools. Flosh is a handsome modern Gothic edifice, the residence of Thomas Ainsworth, Esq. At Cleator Moor are the works of the Whitehaven Hematite Iron Ore Company, which since its establishment (about 20 years ago) has raised a little village for the accommodation of their workpeople. The Cleator Valley produces the Lapis hæmatites, or kidney iron ore. There was formerly a Roman causeway passing through this parish from Egremont to Papcastle, but only a few traces now remain. Ehen Hall is the residence of John Lindow, Esq., J.P. The manor of Cleator has been enfranchised; but Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor of Cleator Common, which has been lately enclosed.

CLEAUGH, a vil. in the par. of Clonmany, bar. of Inishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland.

CLEAVE-ANSTY, or CLEVEANCY, a tythg. in the par. of Hilmarton, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles N.E. of Calne.

CLEAVERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Lea, hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile S.E. of Malmesbury, its post town, and 1 E. of Lea.

CLECKHEATON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Birstall, in the wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5½ miles S.E. of Bradford, and 9. S.W. of Leeds. It has a station on the Huddersfield and Bradford branch of the East Lancashire and Yorkshire line. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Birstall. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a fine building erected in 1830 by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Wesleyans and Independents have places of worship, and there are National and British schools. Several coal-mines are worked in the neighbourhood, and the chief manufactures consist of blankets and woollen cloths. There is an unconsecrated cemetery. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in April and the last Thursday in August.

CLEDDAU, the two longest rivers in the co. of Pembroke; they are known as the East and West, the former rising under the Precelley mountains at Blaen-y-gors, in Manachlogddhu, and the latter at Llygad Cleddau, in Llanfair-Nantygof.

CLEE, a par. in the hund. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Grimsby, its post town and railway station. It comprises the tnshp. of Cleethorpe, and the hmlts. of Weelsby and Thrunscoe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £190, in the patron. of the bishop. The great tithes are held on lease by Richard Thowld, Esq., of Weelsby. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity and St. Mary, is built in the shape of a cross, in the Anglo-Norman style. It has some fine Norman piers and arches and an ancient circular font. The old custom of strewing the church with mown grass on Trinity Sunday is still preserved, in consequence of a bequest left for that purpose. There are several deep circular pits called Blow Wells, with a continual stream of pure water flowing from them, which are vulgarly believed to be unfathomable.

CLEE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles N.E. of Ludlow, its post town. It is situated under Brown Clee Hill and on Clee Brook. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £172, in the patron. of the Rev. H. T. Pelham, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure.

CLEE DOWNTON and CLEE STANTON, vils. in the par. of Stoke St. Milborough, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Ludlow. They take their name from the Clee Hills, which are amongst the highest in Shropshire, abounding in coal, ironstone, clunch, and other minerals, overlaid by a stratum of basalt.

CLEENISH, a par. in the bars. of Clanawley, Tirkenady, and Magherastephana, in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It lies along the border of Lough Erne, 3 miles N.W. of Maguire's Bridge. Enniskillin is its post town. It contains the vil. of Lisbellaw and several small loughs. The surface is boggy, with quarries of lime and freestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin, val. £569. An abbey was founded here in the 6th century by St. Synell, on Cleenish Island, or Cluan Innis, in Lough Erne. Fairwood Park is the seat of J. Denham, Esq.

CLEENISHMEEN ISLANDS, a group in Lough Erne.

CLEER, ST., a par. in the hund. of West, in the co. of Cornwall, 2 miles N. of Liskeard, its post town. It is situated on the river Fowey, and contains a great variety of minerals, as felspar, asbestos, crystals, malachite, &c. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the copper-mines, which constitute one-third of the real property in the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £245, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient structure in the early English style, with a handsome Norman doorway. At Pennant are the ruins of a vault and two crosses, and near the village is a mineral spring said to calm madness. From Sharp Torr is a magnificent view over both seas, and on the neighbouring hill of Killmarth is a pile of stones resembling the Cheesewring and Hurlers, which are in the adjoining parish.

CLEETHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Clee, in the hund. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles S.E. of Great Grimsby. It is situated at the mouth of the river Humber, near the Clee, or Clea Ness, and opposite Spurn Head. Until recently this was an insignificant fishing hamlet, but since the completion of the various railroads it has become a fashionable watering-place. It has a handsome railway station, good hotels, and more than 100 lodging-houses. The population is upwards of 1,000, and a church is about to be erected, for which the vicar, the Rev. W. P. Jones, has given a site of half an acre in the most central position. Its chief attraction is a fine sandy beach, which stretches near 2 miles. It is a coastguard station; and there are a number of pleasure-boats. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels; and there is a National school. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor.

CLEETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bitterley, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles N.E. of Ludlow.

CLEEVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Yatton, in the co. of Somerset, 7 miles N. of Axbridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £75, in the patron. of the Vicar of Yatton.

CLEEVE, a hund. in the northern portion of the co. of Gloucester, contains the pars. of Stoke Orchard, Woodmancote, Gotherington, and Southampton with Brockhampton.

CLEEVE, CHAPEL, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles W. of Watchet. Here formerly stood a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and a hospital for pilgrims. Chapel Cleeve House is an edifice of the 15th century.

CLEEVE, OLD, a par. in the hund. of Williton, in the co. of Somerset, 2¼ miles S.W. of Watchet. It is situated near the Bristol Channel, and contains the chplry. of Leighland, and several hmlts. In a secluded spot are the remains of Cleeve Abbey, founded by W. de Romare in the 12th century, and at Chapel Cleeve was a pilgrims' chapel, no traces of which now remain. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £603, in the patron. of Rev. H. H. Beamish, incumbent. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has an old cross raised on four steps. There is a district church at Leighland, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £80, in the gift of the vicar. The charities produce about £18 per annum.

CLEEVE, PRIOR'S, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles S.W. of Bidford, in Warwickshire, and 5 N.E. of Evesham. The village is situated on an eminence near the E. bank of the Avon, which frequently inundates the adjacent country. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £225, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a Gothic edifice in the early English style, with embattled square tower. There is a National school. The parish contains blue limestone, and quarries of valuable paving stone. It is supposed to have been the site of a Roman military station, there having been discovered at various times warlike weapons and armour, together with gold and silver coins of the Roman emperors. The Dean and Chapter of Worcester are lords of the manor.

CLEFDEN, or CLIEFDEN, a seat on the bank of the Thames, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles N.E. of Maidenhead. It is a noble mansion, rebuilt by Barry, on the site of the Italian villa of Villiers Duke of Buckingham, which was afterwards occupied by Frederick Prince of Wales, and was burnt in 1795, and again in 1849.

CLEGGAN LOUGH, near Enniskillen, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

CLEHEDON. See CLAYHIDON, Devonshire.

CLEHONGER, a par. in the hund. of Wolfrace, in the co. of Hereford, 3 miles S.W. of Hereford, and 4 from the Hereford railway station. It is pleasantly situated on the river Wye, and was long held by the Aubrey and Pembridge families. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure in the Gothic style, and contains several handsome painted windows. The Roman Catholics have a chapel and schools. There are National schools for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. Belmont, the residence of Francis Brosser, Esq., is a fine mansion.

CLEISH, a par. in the co. of Kinross, Scotland. It extends westward from the hills separating Fifeshire from Kinross-shire. It is 7 miles long by 1 broad, and is separated by the Cleish hills (some of which are over 1,000 feet in height) from Dunfermline. Springs and brooks are numerous, and, like the lakes among the hills, are well stocked with fish. Freestone, limestone, and whinstone are abundant. On the summit of Dumglow, at an elevation of 1,200 feet, and on other lofty eminences, are remains of ancient forts, supposed to be Roman. Near the farm of Gairney Bridge stood the tavern in which the originators of the secession first met. This par. is in the presb. of Dunfermline, and in the patron. of Young of Cleish. Stipend, £157.

CLELEY, a hund. in the S.W. portion of the co. of Northampton; contains the pars. of Ashton, Easton-Neston, Grafton-Regis, Alderton, Cosgrove, Furtho, Hartwell, Potterspury, Passenham, Roade, Wicken, Stoke Bruerne, and Paulerspury, comprising 26,620 acres.

CLEMENT, ST., a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, in the co. of Cornwall, 1½ mile S.E. of uro, in which borough part of it is included. The ing is a vic.* in the archdeac. of Cornwall and dioc. Exeter, val. with the cur. of St. Paul's, £390, in the ron. of the lord chancellor. The parochial charities duce about £12 per annum. The village, which is ated on the river Fal, contains the Union poorhouse. Iwhele, in this parish, belonged to the county historian that name. The manor of Conor forms part of the hy of Cornwall.

LEMENT, ST., a par. in the hund. of Bullington, the co. of Oxford, ⅘ mile E. of Oxford, from which it is separated only by the river Cherwell. The is small, comprising only 580 acres, but contains ny well-built houses, the population having more n quadrupled in the last half century. It includes t of Magdalen-bridge within its boundaries, and has es of a Roman way, which led over Headington Hill, oss the Cherwell, near Holywell church. An elegant of baths has been recently erected in the village. living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £120, he patron. of the lord chancellor. The church was t by subscription at the commencement of the sent century. There is a hospital, founded by liam Stone in 1685, also several almshouses. The rities produce about £400 per annum. There are a ional school and six day schools. The site of the ers' hospital, founded by Henry I. in 1126, was n, at the Dissolution, to Oriel College, Oxford.

LEMENT, ST.: there are several pars. of this ne, viz., in the boroughs of Cambridge, Hastings, wich, Norwich, Worcester, and the town of Sand- h, which see under their several heads.

LEMENT DANES, ST., a par. in the Holborn div. he hund. of Ossulstone, and lib. of Westminster, in co. of Middlesex. See WESTMINSTER.

LEMENT EASTCHEAP, ST., a par. within the y of London. See LONDON.

LEMENT'S, ST., a par. in the island of Jersey, nnel Islands, 2 miles S.E. of St. Helier. It contains village of Le Bourg, and the rocks called Croix de and Seymour Tower, off St. Clement's Point, the th-eastern corner of the island. The living is a rect. he dioc. of Winchester, val. £150, in the patron. of Governor of Jersey.

LEMENTSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kildrum- dan, bar. of Tullygarvey, in the co. of Cavan, prov. lster, Ireland. It is situated near Cootehill, and is roperty of Colonel Clements.

LEMENT'S WELLS, a vil. in the co. of Hadding- , Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Musselburgh. It is situ- under Carbery Hill, and has a large distillery.

LENCHWARTON, a par. in the hund. of Free- ge-Marsh-Land, in the co. of Norfolk, 2½ miles W. King's Lynn. This place is mentioned in Domesday delewartuana. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of wich, val. £489, in the patron. of Mrs. Goldfrap. church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an old edifice, an embattled tower and five bells. The charities unt to £5. The New Connexion Methodists have a el. A National school was erected here in 1846.

LENNELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Allenton, or inton, in the western div. of the ward of Coquetdale, e co. of Northumberland, 9 miles N.W. of Rothbury, 1 N. of Alwinton, its post town. It is situated on iver Alwine. In Edward I.'s reign the Clennells essed this place, and its present owner, Anthony kinson, Esq., is a descendant of that family.

LENORE, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. ork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated on the kwater, about 1½ mile on the road between Doneraile Mallow. The soil is of medium quality, with a stone bottom. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of , Cloyne, and Ross, val. with four others, £526, ing the corps of the chancellorship of Cloyne edral, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was ed at the commencement of the present century, at xpense of the late Board of First Fruits. Here is a an Catholic chapel. Castle-Kevin, the seat of E. nhill, Esq., marks the site of Roche's Castle.

CLENT, a par. in the hund. of Seisdon, in the co. of Worcester, 4 miles S.E. of Stourbridge, its post town and railway station. It was formerly included in the co. of Stafford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £417, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is an ancient stone edifice in the Gothic style of architecture. The following are its charities:—the interest of £500, left by Mr. Waldron for a Sunday school, books, and clothing to be distributed on the 1st of January annually; the interest of £500, left by Mr. Harris to the poor; the interest of £200, left by John Amphlett, for the education of fifteen boys; besides various sums for the poor left by Esther Cardiwen, William Cole, Gilbert Cole, William Taylor, and John Moris. There are National schools for both sexes. The repairs of the church are provided for by a bequest of 40 acres of land, and the inhabitants have the right of common over 500 acres on the Walton and Clent hills. Lord Lyttelton is lord of the manor.

CLEOBURY, a div. of the hund. of Stottesden, in the south-eastern portion of the co. of Salop; containing the pars. of Burwarton, Cleobury Mortimer, Cainham, Hope Baggot, Kinlet, Neen Savage, Aston-Botterell, Coreley, Dowles, Hopton Wafers, Wheathill, and parts of Stottesden and Chetton.

CLEOBURY MORTIMER, a par. and market town in the Cleobury div. of the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 8 miles W. of Bewdley, its post town, and 11 E. of Ludlow. It is situated on the river Rea, near the Tenbury and Bewdley line of railway, on which it has a station. It is a market, union, and petty sessions town, and a polling place for the southern division of the county. A County Court for the recovery of small debts is held here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £553, in the patron. of W. L. Childe, Esq. There is a district church, dedicated to St. John, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £50, in the patron. of B. Botfield, Esq. The parish church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure in the early English style, and possesses monuments and stained-glass windows. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics have chapels, and there are endowed schools for both sexes, as well as infant schools. Near the church anciently stood a castle, erected by the Mortimers, which was reduced by Henry II., and there are Roman encampments in the neighbourhood. In the vicinity are the Clee hills, which abound in limestone, coal, and iron ore, but the trade carried on is comparatively small in consequence of the difficulties in the way of transit. The horticultural and agricultural societies hold their shows in the town. Pierce Plowman, author of "Visions," was a native of this town. Wednesday is market day, and there are cattle fairs held on the 21st April, Trinity Monday, and 27th October, and a fair for pleasure and hiring of farm servants on the 2nd May.

CLEOBURY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 7½ miles S.W. of Bridgnorth, its post and union town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £180, in the patron. of the Rev. J. B. Webb, incumbent.

CLEREWOODCOTT, a tythg. in the par. of Kingsclere, in the co. of Hants.

CLERIHAN, a vil. in the par. of Newchapel, in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated 5 miles to the N.W. of Clonmel, its post town. There are a police station and a Roman Catholic chapel. A fair is held on the 30th September.

CLERKENWELL, a par. and suburban district of London, in the Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 1 mile N. of St. Paul's. At the time of the Conquest this parish is supposed to have formed part of the great forest of Middlesex, and to have been included under the name Isendone, as it does not appear separately in Domesday Survey. The first mention of it as Fons Clericorum, or Clerkenwell, is made by Fitz-Stephen, under the reign of Henry II., when describing the mysteries or sacred dramas, which were acted by the clerks and inferior clergy of London, who selected the well in Ray-street, now covered by the pump, as their stage, it being in the centre of gently-rising grounds, which formed an extensive natural amphitheatre for the accommodation of the numerous spectators who attended on such occasions. The most celebrated of these festivals took place in 1391, in the reign of Richard II., and continued for three days, during which several sacred dramas were performed by the clerks in presence of the king and queen, attended by the whole court. In 1461 Edward IV. was proclaimed king here; and in 1603 a new way was cut through the fields, nearly in a line with the present Northampton-street, to welcome the entry of James I. into London. The manor, which includes parts of this and the neighbouring parishes, retains the Saxon custom of "borough English," and has for many generations belonged to the Comptons, who formerly resided at Northampton House, a mansion occupying the site of the modern square of that name.—Clerkenwell forms part of the borough of Finsbury, for which it is a place of election, and includes St. John-street, with the whole district lying between St. Sepulchre Without, the Charterhouse, and Goswell-street, covering an area of 320 acres of very uneven ground, and containing 7,088 inhabited houses. There are six squares, viz., Wilmington, which was once Spa Fields, Granville, Myddelton, Lloyd, Claremont, and St. John's. The whole is now built over, and is considered a healthy spot, having a gravel soil. Its population, according to the census of 1861, was 65,681 of whom several thousands are engaged in the watch and clock manufacture, besides jewellers, goldsmiths, enamellers, and other branches of manufacture. Here are Reid's brewery; Nicholson's and other distilleries; Sadler's Wells Theatre, where Grimaldi acted; the county sessions-house, on Clerkenwell Green, built by Rogers, in place of Hick's Hall, in 1782; the county house of correction, built in 1794, at the cost of £70,000; the new prison, now called the House of Detention, on the separate system, for prisoners awaiting trial; the police station and court for the G division of the metropolitan police force, near Bagnigge Wells; the Finsbury dispensary, reformatory, London Female Mission House, &c. The space formerly occupied by the reservoir of the New River Company is now levelled and built over.—Clerkenwell was anciently celebrated for its ecclesiastical establishments, especially for the priory of the Knights Hospitallers in St. John's-square, founded about 1110 by Jordan Brisset. Its prior was head of his order, and took precedence of all lay barons; scarcely less celebrated was the Benedictine nunnery, which occupied the site of St. James's church, founded by Muriel Brisset. The beautiful gateway of the former is all that now remains of the monastic buildings, and has been recently restored. Its appearance is well-known from the woodcut which has appeared for a century on the covers of the Gentleman's Magazine, which, on its first appearance in 1731, was printed at Cave's printing-office in the gatehouse, now the "Jerusalem Tavern."—The mother church is St. James's, built in 1792, on the site of the nunnery church, in which Lady Sackville, the last prioress, Weaver, author of "Funeral Monuments," Bishop Burnett, and the musician Britton, are buried. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £300, in the patron. of the ratepayers. Pentonville chplry., formerly annexed to St. James's, is now a district par., with two churches and schools. The living, val. £100, is in the patron. of the Incumbent of St. James's. St. John's church, which stands on the site of the priory, was one of the fifty new churches built by Queen Anne, and has underneath the old crypts of the priory church. Its living is a rect.* val. £260, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. St. Mark's church, built in 1828, cost £16,000; its living is a perpet. cur., val. £535, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. St. Philip's church is situated in Granville-square, and is in the patron. of the Incumbent of St. Mark's. Besides the churches most of the Dissenting bodies have chapels. There are numerous schools; the principal are:—Lady Owen's free grammar school and almshouses, founded in 1613, and lately rebuilt in the Elizabethan style; the National and infant schools for 1,500 children, the Society of Friends' school, and the Pentonville schools. Clerkenwell is a registration district for births, deaths, and marriages, and is included in the Islington County Court district. Connected with this parish are many literary associations, it having been the frequent haunt of Johnson and Goldsmith while writing for the Gentleman's Magazine, and for several years the residence of Dibdin, who lived in a cottage near Sadler's Wells, but which no longer exists. Many other distinguished persons were also connected with this parish, as Bishop Burnett, Sir Thomas Challoner, Oliver Cromwell, Lord Cobham the martyr, Lady Huntingdon, who built her first chapel here, William Huntingdon, S.S. ("Sinner Saved"), Valangin, who sold the "Balsam of Life," and Swedenborg, who died in Great Bath-street. Dubourg and Handel also frequently played at Mr. Britton's house in Jerusalem Passage.

CLERKINGTON, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, now joined to Temple.

CLERMONT, a demesne, giving titles of baron, viscount, and earl to the Fortescues. It is situated on the river Fane, in the bar. of Dundalk, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Sir Richard Le Fort, from whom the above family are descended, was shield-bearer to William the Conqueror, and present at the battle of Hastings.

CLETHER, ST., a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, in the co. of Cornwall, 6 miles E. of Camelford. It is situated on the river Inny. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £165, in the patron. of J. Carpenter, Esq. The Trevelyans formerly resided at Basil.

CLETTERWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Buttington, in the borough of Pool, in the co. of Montgomery, South Wales, 2 miles E. of Welshpool, its post town, and railway station, on the Shropshire and Welshpool section of the London and North-Western line.

CLEUGHBRAE, a hmlt. in the par. of Mouswald, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland.

CLEVEDON, a par. in the hund. of Portbury, in the co. of Somerset, 11 miles W. of Bristol. It is a railway station of the Great Western line, and is resorted to in summer as a pleasant watering-place. The town is situated on the cliffs at the mouth of the river Severn, commanding a fine view of the channel. It was called Clevedun by the Saxons, from the cliff (clev) on which it stands at this point in a valley (dun). It contains a hydropathic establishment, public baths, numerous hotels and boarding-houses, and is well lighted with gas. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The tithes are commuted for a rent-charge of £500 per annum. There are two district churches, both of which are perpet. curs., viz. Christ Church, in the patron. of trustees, and East Clevedon, in the patron. of Sir A. H. Elton, Bart. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient building in the mixed style, with monuments. Christ Church is a modern stone building in the early English style. The church at East Clevedon, dedicated to All Saints, is a fine edifice, in the decorated style. The Plymouth Brethren, Congregationalists, and Society of Friends have places of worship. There are National and infant schools, as well as those of the British and Foreign Union, and a servants' school, supported by ladies. The charities produce about £21 per annum. Clevedon Court, the seat of Sir A. Hallam Elton, Bart., is a fine specimen of the Elizabethan style of architecture. Here are exhausted lead-mines, and the refuse ore is often found near the surface. The air is so mild in winter that the most delicate plants may be reared, and the village is consequently well suited as a residence for invalids. The poet Coleridge once resided here.

CLEVELAND-PORT, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ormsby, in the co. of York, 7 miles N.W. of Guisborough, at the mouth of the river Tees. It is a small port to Stockton, and is situated near the Stockton and Darlington railway. The line of coast to which it gives name extends from Whitby to the river Tees, abounding in fossils. The Cleveland hounds hunt here.

ves name to an archdeac. and deanery in the dioc. of ork.

CLEVELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Garstang, in the
nd. of Amounderness, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles
E. of Garstang. It is situated on the river Wyre, ar the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

CLEVELEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Enstone, in the
nd. of Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles
W. of Woodstock. Neat Enstone is its post town.

CLEVELOAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Powick, in the ver div. of the hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Wor-ster, 2 miles S. of Worcester. It is situated on the er Severn.

CLEW-BAY, on the W. coast of the co. of Mayo, in prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It runs up between the rs. of Burrishoole and Murrisk. It is a spacious and mmodious harbour, being about 7 miles wide by 10
ng. Its peculiar formation with countless islets and ets, presents a very interesting and remarkable appear-ce.

CLEWER, a par. in the hund. of Ripplesmere, in the of Berks, 1 mile from Windsor, its post town, d 6 from Maidenhead. It is situated on the S. bank the Thames. The living is a rect.* in the dioc.
Oxford, val. £460, in the patron. of Eton College.
e church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a substantial lding in the Norman style of architecture, with re. It contains a curious and beautiful font, and a nument to Field-Marshal the Earl of Harcourt. The rities produce £21 per annum. There is a chapel of e, a Roman Catholic chapel, National schools, and a itentiary, called the House of Mercy, founded in 49, and recently enlarged. St. Leonard's, the seat of Harcourt family, and St. Leonard's Hill, the seat of T. Brinkman, Bart., are the chief residences. Arthur nsittart, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LEWILSEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanvair-aterdine, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the N.W. of nighton.

LEY-NEXT-THE-SEA, a par. in the hund. of lt, in the co. of Norfolk, 10 miles E. of Wells, and 3½ N.W. of Holt. The village is situated near a channel ich joins Blakeney Harbour, and is resorted to in mmer as a watering-place. The inhabitants are chiefly gaged in agriculture and the coasting trade; the latter rried on by 180 vessels and one small steamer. The t is resorted to by many foreign vessels, being superior Cromer and Mundesley, but the custom-house has n recently removed to Blakeney. The living is a t. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £400, in the patron.
Rev. Thomas J. Bewsher, incumbent. The church, icated to St. Margaret, is a Gothic structure, built the reign of Henry VI., and is considered a fine imen of that style of architecture, consisting of e, chancel, aisles, and square tower. The clerestory r the nave is pierced with rose and pointed windows.
e church has lately been restored and reseated with n benches, all free. It contains numerous old tombs l three brasses, the earliest 1429, besides a beautiful t of the 13th century. A rectory house, and schools able of holding 150 children, have recently been built.
e Methodist Freé Church and Primitive Methodists
e each a chapel. Prince James (afterwards James I.)
Scotland was captured here on his way to France in 9, and detained in England till 1424. Formerly a rket was held here on Saturday, but it has recently n discontinued. A fair is held on the last Friday Saturday in July. W. H. Hardy, Esq., is lord of manor.

LIBURN, a par. in West ward, in the co. of West-reland, 6 miles from Penrith, its post town, and 5 E. e Clifton station of the Preston and Lancashire rail-
y. It is situated on the rivers Leeth and Lyvennet, has a station on the Eden Valley branch of the kton and Darlington railway. The manor formerly nged to the Talebois, Harvey, and Cliburn families. living is a rect. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £188, e patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to Cuthbert, is an ancient stone structure in the Norman style. The register dates from 1565. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are endowed schools for both sexes. The charities are small. Cliburn Hall, built by the Cliburn family in 1577, is now a farm-house. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

CLICUDEG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-in-Kinmerch, in the co. of Denbigh, near Denbigh.

CLIDDESDEN, a par. in the hund. of Basingstoke (upper half), in the co. of Hants, 2 miles S.E. of Basingstoke, its post town and railway station, both for the Great Western and South-Western railways. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the rect. of Farleigh Wallop annexed, £685, in the patron. of the Earl of Portsmouth. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Leonard. Here is a school for children of both sexes of this parish, and of Farleigh Wallop, endowed in 1656 with £10 per annum by Ann Doddington. This parish is said to have formed part of King Harold's estates. The chief landowner is the Earl of Portsmouth, who is lord of the manor.

CLIFDEN, a post and market town, in the par. of Omey, in the bar. of Ballynahinch, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated 46 miles N.W. of Galway, at the head of Clifden Bay; is a considerable seaport and the chief town of Connemara. Here are police and coastguard stations, and petty sessions are held in the town. This town was founded as recently as 1822, through the influence of John D'Arcy, of Clifden Castle, who disposed of a large property to further its completion, under the supervision of Alexander Nimmo, Esq. It subsequently rose into consequence, and an extensive export trade was carried on principally in grain and butter. This sudden prosperity was mainly due to the opening of the new lines of road from the interior, and the attempt to divert the American commerce to the W. coast of Ireland, but in 1846 and the subsequent years the town experienced a sudden reverse of fortune, owing to the potatoe blight and the consequent famine of 1848, when the amount expended in the relief of the poor within the Clifden Union amounted to £22,317 0*s.* 10½*d.*, being equal to the whole Poor-law valuation. The harbour is safe and commodious for small vessels, but the town is a mere ruin of its former self. It contains the parish church, Methodist and Roman Catholic chapels, a monastery, nunnery (of recent foundation), two schools, a bridewell, market-house, hotel, fever hospital, Union poorhouse, and dispensary. The town, together with the remainder of the D'Arcy estate, has lately been sold in the Encumbered Estates' Court. A monument, in an unfinished state, dedicated to the late John d'Arcy, stands on an adjacent eminence. Two copper-mines and a marble quarry are worked. The neighbouring heights afford one of the most imposing views in all Ireland. The principal residence is Clifden Castle. Fairs are held on the 14th January, the 12th March, the 25th June, the 6th July, the 1st September, the 15th October, and the 17th November.

CLIFDEN, the seat of Viscount Clifden, in the hund. of Brixton, in the co. of Surrey, 1 mile from Putney, and 7 miles S.W. of St. Paul's. It is situated near the Thames and the South-Western railway.

CLIFDEN, a vil. in the par. of Blanchvilleskill, in the bar. of Gowran, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The Ellises, of Gowran, take the title of viscount from this place.

CLIFDEN, the name of several seats in the cos. of Clare, Down, &c., Ireland.

CLIFF, a demesne, in the bar. of Tyrhugh, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, on the river Erne, the residence of T. Conolly, Esq., M.P., whose name is associated with the recent extensive public improvements in the surrounding district.

CLIFF, a hmlt. in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles S. of Tamworth. It is pleasantly situated near the river Tame and the Trent Valley railway.

CLIFF, or CLIVE, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, in the hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles W. of Middlewich, its post town. It is situated on the Grand Junction railway, near the river Weaver.

CLIFF BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Monk Bretton, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N. of Barnsley.

CLIFF-CUM-LUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Hemingbrough, in the wap. of Ouse, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles E. of Selby, its post town.

CLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Manfield, in the wap. of West Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles W. of Darlington, its post town. It is situated on the river Tees.

CLIFFE-AT-HOO, a par. in the lathe of Aylesford, in the hund. of Shamwell, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles from the Higham station of the North Kent line, and 6 N. of Rochester, its post town. It is situated near the Thames, at the end of a chalk range. The village is a coastguard station, and belongs to Earl Darnley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £1,297, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a large cruciform structure, with a tower and good peal of bells. It contains several effigies and stained-glass windows. Here are National schools for both sexes. This was anciently a place of great importance, and possessed as many as seven churches. A fair is held on the 28th September.

CLIFFE, EAST, an ext. par. place adjoining the town and port of Dover, in the co. of Kent.

CLIFFE, NORTH, a tnhsp. in the par. of Sancton, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S. of Market Weighton, its post town, and 16 from York.

CLIFFE PYPARD, a par. in the hund. of Kingsbridge, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles S. of Wootton Bassett, its post town and railway station. It passed to the Goddard family from Roger de Cobham, to whom it was granted in 1305 by Edward I. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £450, in the patron. of H. M. Goddard, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with tower. It contains tombs of the Goddard family, and a monument to Thomas Spackman. The register commences in 1668. There are National schools. The manors of Thornhill and Broadtown were bequeathed by Sarah Duchess Dowager of Somerset, in 1686, for the education and apprenticing of boys, and a school for boys was endowed by Thomas Spackman. H. N. Goddard, M.A., is lord of the manor, and resides at the manor-house, an Elizabethan edifice.

CLIFFE REGIS, or KING'S-CLIFFE, a par. in the hund. of Willybrook, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles N. of Oundle. Wansford is its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Nen, and contains the ext. par. district of Spa Lodge. Its Saxon name was Cyningesclive, and the manor still belongs to the crown. The village, which is still considerable, was once a market town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £525, in the patron. of the Earl of Westmoreland. The charities produce about £500 per annum, being chiefly the endowment of Hutcheson's free school and Thorpe's almshouses. This village was the birthplace of Law, the Non-juror, and author of the "Serious Call."

CLIFFE'S END, GREAT and LITTLE, hmlts. in the par. of St. Lawrence, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles W. of Ramsgate.

CLIFFE, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of North Cave, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from the vil. of North Cave, and about 3¼ miles from Market Weighton.

CLIFFE, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles N.E. of Dover. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £34, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small structure. The manor once belonged to the ancestors of Gibbon, the historian.

CLIFFONY, a vil. in the par. of Ahamlish, in the bar. of Carbery, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated on the coast, about 12 miles on the road from Sligo to Ballyshannon. Here are a post-office, dispensary, Roman Catholic chapel, and schools. Lord Palmerston has for some time been doing much for the improvement of this spot. Fairs are held on the 16 May, the 18th June, the 5th October, the 6th Novemb and the 15th December.

CLIFFORD, a par. in the hund. of Huntington, the co. of Hereford, 3 miles N. of Hay, its post tow and 9 W. of the Hereford railway station. It is sit ated on the river Wye, and contains the tnshp. of Ve mine. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Herefor val. £300, in the patron. of W. W. Trumper, E There is a district church at Hardwick, the living which is a perpet. cur., val. £40, in the patron. of M Penoyre. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mar is an ancient structure in the Norman style, and co tains several monuments. The charities amount to £ per annum. Here are free schools for both sexes. T ruins of the ancient castle are still visible. It w built by W. Fitzosborne, became the seat of the C fords, and tradition says that here Fair Rosamond w born. The place gives name and title of baron to t Cliffords of Ugbrooke. There are several gentlem seats in the neighbourhood.

CLIFFORD CHAMBERS, a par. in the upper div the hund. of Tewkesbury, in the co. of Gloucester miles S. of Stratford-on-Avon. The village is pleasa situated on the river Avon. The living is a rect. in dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £172, in the patro of the Rev. T. G. Tyndall. The church, dedicated St. Helen, is an ancient stone edifice with tower.

CLIFFORD-CUM-BOSTON, a tnshp. in the par Bramham, in the upper div. of the wap. of Barkston-As in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S.E. Wetherby, 12 N.E. of Leeds, and 2 S. of Thorp Arch r way station. Tadcaster is its post town. A large numb of the inhabitants are employed in the twine and sh thread factory of Messrs. Grimston. The living perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £65, in the patro of G. L. Fox, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Lud a modern edifice in the Gothic style of architecture. T Roman Catholics have a chapel, with school and c vent attached. It possesses a beautiful Carrara marb statue of the Virgin Mary, by Hoffman. The Wesleyan have a place of worship; and there is a Church s with a good set of apparatus for illustrating natur philosophy and chemistry. The parochial charities pr duce about £20 per annum. Clifford Moor, where battle was fought between the English and Scots, is meet for the Bramham Moor hounds. The lady of th manor is Mrs. Gascoigne.

CLIFFORD'S INN, an ext. par. place, in London, the co. of Middlesex.

CLIFTON, a par. and suburb of the city of Bristol, the hund. of Barton Regis, in the co. of Gloucester, mile to the W. of Bristol, of which city it is general reckoned a part, being included within the borough l name is derived from its situation on the cliffs overlo ing the river Avon, which, rising at St. Vincent's Ro to the height of 308 feet, command extensive prospe of sea and land, varied with highly picturesque scen The rocks abound in fossils, and a variety of quar called Bristol diamonds. Many rare and delicate plan as the Arabis stricta, Geranium sanguineum, &c., are fou growing wild, especially round St. Vincent's Rocks. Clifton is supposed to have been resorted to by th Romans on account of its waters, and to have been t site of the station Abone, as traces of a large camp 5 feet by 300 are met with on Clifton Down. It continue neglected, however, till 1695, when the Hot Well pump-room was built; it then rose rapidly into favou and continues to flourish, not only as a fashionable watering-place, but as the favourite residence of th Bristol merchants and other persons in affluent circum stances. The waters of its springs are sulphurous, an are considered medicinal in cases of scrofula, inflamm tion, and stomachic complaints; at the time of the Lisb earthquake they turned red as blood, and the river, whi ordinarily rises 45 feet at high water, went back. I order to accommodate the numerous visitors, the Ne Victoria Pump-rooms were built by a private company This building is a noble structure in the Grecian sty architecture, with a richly sculptured portico of Corinthian columns; it contains a fine hall, 117 feet by 4, in which concerts and public meetings are held, and all-room, 70 feet by 30. The town is designed in handsome squares, crescents, and terraces, as Lansdowne-mare, Cornwallis and York-crescents, the Paragon, West Mall, and several broad streets, as Queen's-ad, in which most of the public buildings are situated. this street is the Bristol Academy and School of actical Art, erected in 1857, in the Italian style, con-ining a fine bust by Flaxman. It is attended by wards of 2,000 pupils. A college has been lately cted by a company styled the "Clifton College Com-ny," with very handsome buildings, the schoolroom ing one of the largest in England; the education en is of the highest character. Clifton also contains blind asylum, in the early English style; Bishop's Col-le, in the Elizabethan style; assembly-rooms, libraries, hs, Union poorhouse, dispensaries, besides numerous els and boarding-houses. On Cliff Down is West's servatory, under which is a cave, or hermitage, 80 deep, called the Giant's Hole; and near Durdham wn, where is a fossiliferous bone cave, are the zoo-cal gardens. Crossing the river to Leigh Woods is elegant suspension bridge removed from Hunger-ll-market in 1862. The first of the wire coils, 1,100 in length and weighing 2 tons, was successfully pended across the chasm at St. Vincent's Rocks the 3rd of June, 1863. The huge stages on either of the river, together with the anchorage, have cupied between five and six months in their erection. The temporary bridge, of which the present coil of wire is first support, will occupy about a fortnight in comple-th, and all this will be only the preliminary operation ecessary for the men to work over the immense span 700 feet. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. with the curs. of Dowry and St James's annexed, £782, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees. The parish church is a modern building, erected in 1822, and is calculated to accommodate 1,700 persons. There are also the following district churches in this parish, all of which are perpet. curs.: St. John the Evangelist, at Redland, val. £140, in the patron. of the bishop; Trinity Church, in the patron. of trustees; Christ Church, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees; and St Paul's and St. Peter's, in the patron. of the incumbent. The Roman Catholics have recently erected an elegant cathedral, and the Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship, all of which are ornamental buildings of modern erection. Schools are attached to most of the churches and chapels, and spacious National and British schools have recently been built on the most approved plans.—Clifton enjoys all the literary advantages of a large city from its proximity to Bristol, and has one newspaper of its own, the Clifton Chronicle (Conservative), established in 1850, and published on Wednesday.—Clifton is the head of a Poor-Law Union and registration district, but is included in the Bristol new County Court district. The races which took place in April are discontinued.

CLIFTON, a hund. in the S.E. portion of the co. of Bedford, contains the pars. of Clifton, Stondon, Campton, Henlow, Arsley, Holwell, Stotfold, Moppershall, and part of Shillington, and the town of Shefford.

CLIFTON, a par. in the hund. of Clifton, in the co. of Bedford, 1½ mile E. of Shefford, its post town, and 4 from Biggleswade. The Great Northern railway has a station at Shefford-road, and the Leicester and Hitchin section of the Midland one at Snefford. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Ivel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £439, in the patron. of H. Mees, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure, and contains a brass dated 1528. The charities amount to £12 per annum. Henry Palmer, Esq., is lord of the manor. Clifton Spinnies is a meet for the Oakley hounds.

CLIFTON, a par. in West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2½ miles S. of Penrith, its post town. The junction of the Eden Valley railway with the Lancaster and Carlisle line is here. The village is situated on an eminence commanding fine views, and there is an extensive pottery, but the inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a small stone structure in the early English style. It is fitted up similar to a cathedral, and possesses some beautiful stained-glass windows. The register commences in 1675. Here are schools for both sexes with a small endowment. Clifton Moor, enclosed in 1812, is celebrated by Sir Walter Scott, in the novel of "Waverley," as the scene of a skirmish in 1745, between the troops of the Duke of Cumberland and the rebels. This circumstance is supported by an entry in the parish register of the burial of "ten dragoons." Here is a mineral spring. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor and chief landowner. His northern residence, Lowther Castle, is close to the village. The old castellated mansion built by the Engaines is now a farmhouse. Hugh's Crag Bridge, the viaduct of the Lancaster and Carlisle line over the river Lowther, is a noble structure.

CLIFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ashborne, in the hund. of Morleston, in the co. of Derby, 1 mile S.W. of Ashborne, its post town. It is bounded on the W. by the river Dove. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £85, in the patron. of the Vicar of Ashborne. The church is a modern building. There is an Independent chapel, and schools for both sexes.

CLIFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Deddington, hund. of Wootton, in the co. of Oxford, 1½ mile E. of Deddington, its post town. It is watered by the river Cherwell. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Deddington, in the dioc. of Oxford, and in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. Roman coins and pottery have been discovered here, and are preserved by a gentleman in the neighbourhood.

CLIFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccles, in the hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Bolton, and 6 N.W. of Manchester. It is a railway station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire line. The trustees of the late J. F. Fletcher, Esq., are lords of the manor. The district is hilly and contains several collieries and iron-mines.

CLIFTON, a tnshp. in the pars. of St. Olave Mary-Gate and St. Michael-le-Belfrey, city of York. It comprises part of the N.W. suburb of the city, and contains the county lunatic asylum, a fine edifice, under the management of Dr. S. Hill.

CLIFTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Otley, in the upper div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N. of Otley, its post town. It is situated on the river Wharfe.

CLIFTON, a vil. in the par. of Killin, in the co. of Perth, Scotland.

CLIFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Fewston, in the lower div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N. of Otley, its post town. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

CLIFTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Conisborough, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles W. of Tickhill.

CLIFTON, or ROCK SAVAGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, in the hund. of Bucklow, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles N.E. of Frodsham. It is situated on the river Weaver. Here are the ruins of a fine seat of the Marquis Cholmondeley, erected by his ancestor, Sir John Savage, in 1565.

CLIFTON CAMPVILLE, a par. partly in the N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, and partly in the hund. of Repton, in the co. of Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Tamworth, its post town and railway station on the London and North-Western line. It is situated on the river Mease, and includes the tnshp. of Haunton, and the chplry. of Chilcote. Previous to the Conquest it belonged to Earl Alfgar, and was subsequently given to the Campvilles, from whom it took the suffix to its name. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, in the patron. of H. J. Pye, Esq. The tithes are commuted at £717, independently of Chilcote, which is commuted at £258; there are also 103 acres of glebe. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, possesses a beautiful spire, and contains a monument to the family of the Vernons. The register dates from 1594. There is a school supported by the lord of the manor and by the rector. Clifton Hall, an ancient edifice, is now the seat of H. J. Pye, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

CLIFTON-CUM-HARTSHEAD, a chplry. in the par. of Dewsbury, in the wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N. of Huddersfield. It is situated on the river Calder, near the Leeds and Manchester canal and railway, and contains the vil. of Kirklees. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £202, in the patron. of the Vicar of Dewsbury. Near the vil. of Kirklees was a Cistercian nunnery founded in the reign of Henry II., where Robin Hood was bled to death in 1247 by the treacherous nun to whom he applied for medical aid. His tombstone is still preserved in the grounds of Kirklees Hall, the seat of Sir G. Armytage, Bart.

CLIFTON, GREAT and LITTLE, two tnshps. in the par. of Workington, in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles from Workington, its post town, and 6 from Cockermouth. Great Clifton is situated on the S. bank of the Derwent, adjoining Little Clifton, which is likewise watered by a branch of the Derwent. The tithes of the two townships were commuted in 1814.

CLIFTON-HAMPDEN, a par. in the hund. of Dorchester, in the co. of Oxford, 3½ miles E. of Abingdon, its post town. It is situated near the Thames. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £287, in the patron. of H. H. Gibbs, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small building situated on a cliff, and has been recently restored. Here are National schools for both sexes.

CLIFTON-MAYBANK, a par. in the hund. of Yetminster, in the co. of Dorset, 4 miles W. of Sherborne, its post town. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic.* of Bradford-Abbas, in the dioc. of Salisbury, and in the patron. of Winchester College. The church, dedicated to All Saints is in ruins. In the vicinity are the rivers Ivel and Yeo.

CLIFTON, NORTH, a par. in the wap. of Newark, in the co. of Nottingham, 12 miles N. of Newark, and 7 from Collingham railway station. It includes the tnshp. of South Clifton, and the hmlts. of Spalford and Harby, where Queen Eleanor died in 1291, and the first cross was erected by Edward I. The village is a subport to Gainsborough, and had formerly a chantry. There is a ferry here over the Trent, which, until recently, was free to parishioners, except that the ferryman and his dog were entitled to dine at the vicarage on Christmas Day upon roast beef and plum-pudding. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the cur. of Harby annexed, £176, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. George. The charities, consisting of church lands and Nicholson's bequest, produce £40 per annum. White gypsum occurs in some places, and ancient pottery and urns have been found in the cliffs.

CLIFTON REYNES, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Bucks, half a mile from Olney, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Newport Pagnell. It is situated on the banks of the river Ouse, and belonged to the Reynes family. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £360, in the patron. of the Rev. H. A. Small. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is partly in the early English style of architecture. There is a parochial school. Joseph Robinson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CLIFTON, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of North Clifton, in the co. of Nottingham.

CLIFTON-UPON-DUNSMORE, a par. in the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles E. of Rugby, its post town and railway station. It is situated on an eminence S. of the river Avon, close to the Oxford canal. The Rugby and Stamford railway passes through the parish. It includes the tnshp. of Newton-cum-Biggin and the chplry. of Brownsover. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with the cur. of Brownsover annexed, £119, in the patron. of the Earl of Bradford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure in the early English style, with an embattled tower. The register commences in 1540. The charities produce about £50 per annum. This was the birthplace of Carte, the historian, who died here in 1754. The Atherstone hounds meet here.

CLIFTON-UPON-TEME, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles N.W. of Worcester, and 9½ S.E. of Tenbury. It is situated on the cliffs near the river Teme, and was anciently a borough and market town. Part of the parish is in hop-grounds and orchards. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £172, in the patron. of Sir T. E. Winnington, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Kenelm, is an ancient structure with tower and spire. The charities produce about £20 per annum. Here is a National school.

CLIFTON-UPON-URE, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton Watlass, in the wap. of East Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile S.W. of Thornton Watlass. Clifton Castle, delightfully situated, is the seat of Timothy Hutton, Esq., the lord of the manor.

CLIFTON-WITH-COLDWALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Stannington, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles S. of Morpeth.

CLIFTON-WITH-GLAPTON, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, in the co. of Nottingham, 4 miles S.W. of Nottingham, and 16 N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. It is situated on an eminence near the river Trent, whence there is a fine view, and contains the hmlt. of Garby Thorpe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £405, in the patron. of Sir R. J. Clifton, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure with embattled tower, in good repair, and contains monuments and brasses of the Clifton and other families. Here are almshouses for poor widows, and a free school for girls. Clifton Hall, situated on a rock, and surrounded with groves, is the seat of Sir R. J. Clifton. A small college for priests was founded by Sir Robert Clifton in Edward IV.'s reign.

CLIFTON-WITH-SALWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkham, in the hund. of Amounderness, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles E. of Kirkham, and 5½ W. of Preston. It is situated on the river Ribble. The charities amount to £33 per annum. Colonel J. Clifton is lord of the manor.

CLIMPING, a par. in the hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 4 miles S.E. of Arundel, its post town, and 1½ from the Arundel station on the Brighton and South Coast railway. It is situated near the ferry on the W. bank of the river Arun, and includes the remaining portion of Cudlow which has escaped the encroachments of the sea, being about 8 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £304, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is a cruciform structure in the early English style, with Norman tower, built 1253. The governors of Christ's Hospital are the chief landowners.

CLINCH, a tythg. in the par. of Milton Lilbourne, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles S. of Marlborough.

CLINCH-CUM-HARTSIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ingram, in the N. div. of the ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 9 miles S.E. of Wooler, and 1½ S.E. of Ingram. Alnwick is its post town and railway station. The river Breamish flows through the parish of Ingram, which is mountainous. Near Cinch Hill is a circular camp.

CLINK, a lib. in the par. of St. Saviour's, Southwark, in the co. of Surrey. It is a possession of the bishops of Winchester, whose palace formerly was here.

CLINT, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripley, in the lower div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile W. of Ripley station. There is a free school endowed by Rear-Admiral Long in 1760. The charities include the Winsley Hall estate and a legacy £140. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the nor.

CLIPPESBY, a par. in the hund. of West Flegg, in e co. of Norfolk, 7 miles N.W. of Yarmouth, and from Norwich. It is situated near the river Bure. ie living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £250, the patron. of the Rev. H. J. Muskett, who is lord of e manor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an d structure.

CLIPSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Oakham Soke, in e co. of Rutland, 9 miles N.W. of Stamford. It for- rly belonged to the Zouch family, and possessed a all chantry. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of terborough, val. £210, in the patron. of J. M. Paget, q., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower, and ntains stained-glass windows, said to have been trans- red from the church of Pickworth, which has been ig in ruins. There are some excellent stone quarries the neighbourhood.

CLIPSTON, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, in the of Northampton, 4 miles S.W. of Market Har- rough, and 14 N. of Northampton. Red ochre is nd in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. Peterborough, val. £334, in the patron. of Christ's llege, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All ints, is in good repair. The Baptists have a chapel, l there are a free school and almshouses, endowed 1667 by Sir George Buswell, Bart., with £381 per num. The manorial rights are in the hands of Thomas ldecott, Esq., and Lady Horton. Here is a meet for Pytchley hounds.

CLIPSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Edwinstowe, in Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of ttingham, 5 miles E. by N. of Mansfield, and 4 S.W. Ollerton, its post town. It is situated in Sherwood rest, on the river Mann, or Maun. Here King John sided, and ruins of his palace are still visible. A tree, lown as the Parliament Oak, commemorates the par- ment held by Edward I., A.D. 1290. Divine service performed at Clipstone Park, the seat of the Duke of rtland, who allows an annuity to the Vicar of Edwin- we to preach every Sunday. The Wesleyans have a apel.

CLIPSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Plumtree, in the uth div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Not- ngham, 6 miles S.E. of Nottingham, and the same dis- nce S.W. of Bingham. Earl Manvers is lord of the nor.

CLISHEIM, a mountain in the island of Harris, in Outer Hebrides, nearly 3,000 feet in height.

CLIST, BROAD. See BROAD-CLIST, Devonshire.

CLIST-HONITON, or HONITON'S CLYST, a par. the hund. of East Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 3 les N.E. of Topsham, its post town, and 4 E. of eter. The Great Western, and London and South- estern railways both pass within a few miles of the lage. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of eter, val. £125, in the patron. of the dean and chap- r, who are lords of the manor. The church, an old dfice with tower, possesses monuments and a Saxon nt. There is a school with a small endowment, and e charities are of the value of £4 10*s.* per annum. A ir is held on Michaelmas Day.

CLIST-HYDON, a par. in the hund. of Cliston, in e co. of Devon, 4 miles S. of Collumpton, its post wn, and 3 N. of the Hele station on the Great West- n railway. It is situated on the river Clyst, which es in the vicinity. The living is a rect. in the dioc. Exeter, val. £440, in the patron. of Mrs. Huyshe, who lady of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. ndrew, is an ancient stone edifice, with stained-glass ndows. There is a school, called Hall's school, en- wed with £17 per annum, and other charities to the ne amount.

CLISTON, a hund. in the east portion of the co. of von, contains the pars. of Clist-Hydon, Broad Clist, st St. Lawrence, Butterleigh and Whimple, com- ing 19,260 acres.

CLIST ST. GEORGE, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 1 mile N.E. of Topsham, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Exeter. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £327, in the patron. of the trustees. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient edifice in the perpendicular style; and has been lately repaired. It contains a brass to J. Osborne, 1614. Here is a free school with an exhibition at either University, endowed by Lady Seaward, in 1704, with £40 per annum. J. Beague, Esq., is lord of the manor. The charities are of the value of £35 per annum.

CLIST ST. LAWRENCE, a par. in the hund. of Cliston, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles S. of Collumpton, its post town, and 2½ N. of the Hele station on the Great Western railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £299, in the patron. of the trustees of St. John's Hospital, Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone edifice, in the perpendicular style; it contains stained-glass windows, and a statue of the Virgin and Child. In the churchyard are the remains of an ancient cross. The charities are of the value of £5 per annum. The trustees of Hele's charity are the lords of the manor.

CLIST ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Exeter, and 1 from Topsham, its post town. It is situated on the river Clyst. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £190, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Strong. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an old building with tower. There are National schools for both sexes, and the charities are of the value of £8 per annum. It was at this place that Lord Russell defeated the insurgents under Arundell in 1549.

CLIST SATCHFIELD, a tythg. in the pars. of Faringdon and Sowton, in the co. of Devon, near Topsham. It was anciently possessed by the Sackvilles, and has ruins of a palace of the bishops of Exeter.

CLITHEROE, a tnshp., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the par. of Whalley, upper div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 10½ miles N. of Blackburn, and 217 from London by road, or 224 by railway. It is a station on the Bolton, Blackburn, and Clitheroe branch of the Lancashire and West Yorkshire railway. It was anciently called Cliderhow, and is supposed to derive its name from the British Cled-dwr, signifying the hill or rock by the waters, and the Saxon word how, a hill. The town is pleasantly situated to the S. of the Pendle hills, on the picturesque banks of the Ribble. At the Conquest the honour of Clitheroe, including the greater part of the hunds. of Blackburn and Salford, and the manor of Slaidburn, in Yorkshire, were granted to Ilbert de Lacey, Lord of Pontefract, whose son Robert, in the reign of William Rufus, built the castle, and Henry de Lacey, in 1149, obtained for Clitheroe its first charter from the crown. It reverted, through the marriage of Blanch, heiress of the De Laceys, with John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, to the crown, and was subsequently granted by Charles II. to General Monk for his services in bringing about the Restoration. The manor is now held by the Duke of Buccleuch. The town was formerly governed by two bailiffs; but on the passing of the Municipal Reform Act, in 1835, it was incorporated under a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. It is well supplied with water, and the gasworks were established in 1837. Petty sessions are held in the townhall, and the mayor and recorder hold a borough court. It is the head of a County Court district, and of a Poor-law Union. The board of guardians meet weekly. The town contains several cotton-mills and an iron foundry. The limits of the parliamentary borough were considerably extended by the Reform Act, and now include besides Clitheroe, the tnshps. of Chatburn, Coldcoats, Downham, Henthorne, Mearley, Mitton, Pendleton, Twiston, Whalley, Wiswell, and Worston, comprising an area of 2,375 acres, with a population, according to the census of 1861, of 10,864, inhabiting 2,247 houses, while the municipal borough contains only 7,000, inhabiting 1,433 houses. Previous to the passing of the Reform Bill it returned two members to Parliament, but now only one. In the town stand the two churches of St. Mary Magdalene and St. James. The former is an ancient stone structure in the Gothic style of architecture, with a fine tower and spire, containing a peal of eight bells. It contains several ancient monuments and a stained-glass window. The latter is modern, in the pointed style, with a tower but no spire. The livings of both are perpet. curs. of the respective vals. of £200 and £90. They both have houses and glebe. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive and Association Methodists, and the Roman Catholics have chapels. There is a royal free grammar school, founded by Philip and Mary in 1554, and endowed with £100 per annum, besides National, British, and Roman Catholic schools. There is a reading-room and a subscription news-room at the townhall. Tuesday is market day for corn, meat, and provisions, and every alternate Monday for cattle. Fairs are held on the 24th and 25th March, the 1st and 2nd August, the 4th Friday after Michaelmas, and the 7th December.

CLITSOME, a hmlt. in the par. of Nettlecombe, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles S. of Watchet.

CLITTERWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Buttington, in the co. of Montgomery, 3 miles E. of Welshpool. It is situated on the river Severn and Offa's Dyke.

CLIVE. See Cliff, co. Chester.

CLIVE, a chplry. in the par. of St. Mary, in Albrighton div. of the co. of Salop, 3 miles S. of Wem, and 8 N. of Shrewsbury, its post town. It is situated on the road from Shrewsbury to Chester, and commands a good view from the top of Clive Hill. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £111, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure. The Independents have a chapel. In the neighbourhood are good freestone quarries. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor. Wycherley and Ireland were born here.

CLIVIGER, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, in the higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 3½ miles S.E. of Burnley. It is situated near the source of the river Irwell, and is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire line. Several Roman coins have been found. Here are coal, iron, and lead-mines. The country, which is hilly, affords several rare botanical specimens, and was anciently noted for its falcons.

CLIXBY, a chplry. in the par. of Caistor, in the south div. of the hund. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Caistor. Brigg is its post town and railway station. The village, which consists of a few scattered houses, is situated on the Wolds. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Caistor, in the dioc. of Lincoln, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small plain edifice. Richard Hannam, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CLOANMINES, a vil. in the bar. of Bear, co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Castletown.

CLOATLY, a tythg. in the par. of Hankerton, in the hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, half a mile E. of Hankerton, and 3 N.E. of Malmesbury, its post town.

CLOCAENOG (Isa and Uchа divs.), a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of Ruthin, its post town. It is situated among the hills, on a branch of the river Clwydd. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £292, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The charities amount to £57 per annum. Pool Park, the seat of Lord Bagot, contains the stone mentioned by Camden as bearing the inscription Amullen Tancatac.

CLOCKEN-STOOKEN, a remarkable rock situated in the bar. of Glenarm, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It has been erroneously called the most northerly point of Ireland, and a superstitious belief attaches to this mass of limestone, which bears some resemblance to a human figure.

CLODDIE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kerry, in the co. of Montgomery, 2 miles E. of Newtown.

CLODOCK, a par. in the hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles W. of the Pontrilas station of the Newport and Hereford line, and the same distance S.W. of Abbey Dore. It is situated on the river Munnow, under the Black mountains, and contains the chplries. of Crasswall, Llanveynoe, Longtown, and Newton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £222, in the patron. of W. Wilkins, Esq. There are four distinct churches, all perpet. curs. in the patron. of the vicar. The parish church, dedicated to St. Clodock, is a stone edifice in the early English style, with square tower. The charities produce £20 per annum. On Watling Street is a Roman camp and an old castle. Fairs are held on the 29th April, 22nd June, and the 21st September.

CLOE, ST., a hmlt. in the par. of Amberley, in the co. of Gloucester, near Minchinhampton.

CLOFFOCKS, an ext. par. place in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 1 mile from Workington, its post town. It is situated near the river Derwent.

CLOFORD, a par. in the hund. of Frome, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles from the Wanstrow station of the Great Western railway, and 4 S.W. of Frome. It is situated on the Frome and Bruton high-road. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £7[illegible], in the patron. of the Rev. J. S. Horner. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone edifice in the old Norman style of architecture, recently restored, and possesses a register dating from 1564. There is a National and Sunday school. Harris' charity, value £46 per annum, is paid annually to women born in the parish and married the preceding year. The lord of the manor is the Rev. J. S. Horner.

CLOGAN, there are two hmlts. of this name, the one in the bar. of Upper Duleek, Eastmeath; the other in the bar. of Moycashel, Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland.

CLOGH, a vil. in the bar. of Fassadinin, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Castlecomer.

CLOGH, or CLOUGH, a postal vil. in the par. of Dunaghy, in the bar. of Kilconway, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It stands on the banks of the river Ravel, 6 miles N. of Ballymena, at the meeting of the road from that place with four others. The town of Oldstone has a court-house here. On a steep mound stand the ruins of a castle, formerly belonging to the earls of Antrim. Fairs are held on the 8th February, 4th April, 27th May, 5th August, 8th November, and 9th December for cattle.

CLOGHAN, a vil in the par. of Gallen, in the bar. of Garrycastle, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It lies 16 miles to the W. of Tullamore, on the road from Banagher to Dublin. This village formerly belonged to the O'Coghlans; the old manor-house is now used as a barrack. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a police station. Within a short distance, though without the parish, is Cloghan or Lusmagh Castle; it was reduced in 1595, by the Lord Deputy, Sir William Russell, when in possession of O'Madden, who founded here a friary of the Franciscan order. Fairs are held on the 16th March, 15th May, 15th August, and 29th October.

CLOGHANE, or CLAHANE, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiney, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles from Dingle, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Tralee. It lies within a short distance of Brandon Bay, and contains the vils. of Cloghane and Ballyquin. The surface is boggy and mountainous, partly forming the wall of the bay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. £146, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is of modern date, built by the late Board of First Fruits. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel. Brandon Lodge is the principal residence.

CLOGHANEELY, a district including the western portion of the bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. This district deserves to be better known, for it offers a wide field both for naturalist and painter. Lying to the S.W. is the mountain called Muckish, from its similarity to the back of a pig.

CLOGHEEN, a post and market town in the par. of Shanrahan, in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 13 miles to the S.W. of Clonmel, and 119 from Dublin. It is situated on the river Tar, at the cross roads from Dublin to Cork, and from Cahir to Lismore. Rising immediately over the town are the Knockmealdown mountains. Here are a church, Roman Catholic chapel, fever hospital, dispensary, Union poorhouse, bridewell, cavalry and constabulary barracks, flour-mills, and market-house. Petty and general sessions are held here. At the distance of 4 miles, near Skiheenarinky, is an interesting stalactite cave. The principal residence is Shanbally Castle, the seat of the Earl of Lismore. Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on Whit Monday, 1st August, 28th October, and 12th December.

CLOGHER, a par. in the bar. of Lower Kilnamanagh, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated near the river Suir, 6 miles S.W. of Thurles, on the road between Holycross and Tipperary. The soil is good, but the surface is mountainous. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with three others, £451, in the patron. of the bishop.

CLOGHER, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Clogher, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated near the Londonderry and Enniskillen railway, 15 miles to the S.S.E. of Omagh, and 98 N.N.W. of Dublin. The parish extends along the Blackwater river, and is traversed by the road between Aughnacloy and Enniskillen. It was formerly a separate diocese, said to have been founded by St. Patrick, before A.D. 444, including Ardstrathy, Clones, and Louth, and the seat of the bishopric; it is now annexed to the diocese of Armagh, but still remains a distinct charge, including 45 parishes, with an equal number of benefices. The chapter consists of a dean, precentor, chancellor, archdeacon, and five prebendaries. The parish covers an area of 49,761 acres, and contains Fivemiletown, Newtown, Augher, and Saville. The soil is good, with limestone and freestone bottom; the surface hilly, the highest ground being on Slieve Beagh, which rises 1,255 feet above the sea-level. The interior is watered by numerous minor loughs. The living is a rect. annexed to the deanery of Armagh and Clogher, val. £786, in the patron. of the crown. The town, supposed to be the Regia of Ptolemy, is now but a mere village, consisting principally of one straggling street. It was formerly a borough, governed by a portreeve and twelve burgesses, and returned two members to the Irish parliament before the Union. Here stand the episcopal palace, built by Lord Beresford, Primate of Armagh, and the cathedral church, which also serves as the parish church. It was built and dedicated to St. Macartin in 1744. It is a plain cruciform structure, and contains several fine monuments of the bishops. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian meeting-house, police station, workhouse, dispensary, deanery, bridewell, savings-bank, and free school founded by Bishop Garnett. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, and petty sessions are held in the town. In the cathedral lies the Cloghor, or golden stone, supposed by some to be the celebrated Lec Fail, which in Druidical times, according to the legend, was used for oracular purposes—hence the name Clogher; previous to this the town, so says tradition, was called Errigal, from its having been the capital of the petty principality of that name. An abbey is said to have been founded here by St. Patrick, to which was added a cell and monastery, and some other foundations by his disciple, Macartin, in 506, but no traces whatever remain of these antiquities, and their existence is doubted by many. The principal seats in this parish are Augher Castle, the residence of Sir J. R. Bunbury, Bart., the Deanery, Daisy Hill, Carrick, and Glessinbourne Cottage. The market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the 20th of every month.

CLOGHER, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ross, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland.

CLOGHER, or KILCLOGHER, a par. and post-town in the bar. of Ferrand, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It lies about 6 miles N.E. of Drogheda, and is rendered conspicuous by Clogher Head, rising about 181 feet above the sea-level. On the N. side of the Head is a small natural dock, entered by a gut not above 20 feet wide. The village is a favourite watering-place, built near the site of an abbey, of which it is said Nectan, a nephew of St. Patrick, was abbot. There are also ruins of a castle and a half-finished pier. The soil is generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, united with Termonfeckan.

CLOGHER, a vil. in the bar. of Tyrawley, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Though no more than a fishing village, it is interesting as having been the spot where the French landed, under Hubert, in 1798.

CLOGHER, a bar. in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N., E., and W. by the bars. of Omagh and Dungannon, and on the S. by the cos. of Monaghan and Fermanagh. It contains the pars. of Errigal Kerogue and Clogher, with parts of Errigal-Trough, and Donagheavy, comprising 97,569 acres. The general aspect of the barony is barren and uninteresting, if we except the valley of the Blackwater, the Knockmany Hill, and the Vale of Lumford.

CLOGHERBRIEN, a par. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Tralee. It is situated near the bay. The living is a rect. united with Ballinahaglish.

CLOGHEREEN, a vil. in the par. of Killarney, in the bar. of Magunihy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It stands near Mucross Abbey, at the foot of the Mangerton Mountain, near Killarney and the Turk lake and waterfall. It affords good hotel accommodation and conveyance for visitors to the lakes. The dispensary and the Poor-law Union house are situated in the village.

CLOGHERMORE, a tnshp. in the bar. of Carbery, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated near Lough Gill. Here stood a nunnery and cemetery, of which some ruins remain.

CLOGHERNEY, or DONAGHANEIGH, a par. in the bar. of Omagh, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Omagh, where there is a station on the North-Western railway. It is traversed by the road from Dublin to Londonderry. The soil is of medium quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher, val. £553, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The post town is Dungannon. Here are places of worship for Roman Catholics and Presbyterians. The parish is watered by the Struel, a tributary of the river Foyle, and by Lough Patrick. The chief seats are Leskinore-Lodge, Perrymount, Somerset, and Greenmount.

CLOGHGRENAN, a chain of hills in the bar. and co. of Carlow, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, forming the eastern extremity of the Comer range. They are beautifully wooded, and gradually slope into the valley of the Barrow. Cloghgrenan Castle, now a picturesque ruin, was founded in the 15th century by the earls of Ormond. It was reduced by Sir Peter Carew in 1568, when Sir Edmund Butler, who held the castle as son of the ninth Earl of Ormond, resisted the government of Queen Elizabeth; it was again besieged a century later by the Irish. It was here that the Marquis of Ormond collected his troops before the battle of Rathmines. Some interesting specimens of ancient armour have been collected from the bed of the river.

CLOGHJORDAN, a district par. and postal vil. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The village is about 5 miles on the road from Borrisokane to Dunkerrin, near the frontier of the county, and contains the church, erected in 1827 by gift and loan from the late Board of First Fruits, a hospital, dispensary, and a distillery. There are places of worship for the Baptists and Wesleyans, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The surface of the parish is well cultivated and prolific. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kiltenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh, val. £76, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Modreeny. In the neighbourhood are Sopwell, a seat of the Trenches; Lettyville, Ballin, Castlesheherd, and Northland. Fairs are held on the 12th May, 12th August, and 1st December.

CLOGHMILLS, a vil. in the pars. of Killagan and Dunlermot-Grange, bar. of Kilconway, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated 9½ miles on the road from Ballymeny to Coleraine.

CLOGHORNA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Innishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Cardonagh.

CLOGHPRIOR, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Borrisokane. It lies along the bank of the river Nenagh, and is traversed by the road from Nenagh to Borrisokane, its post town. It contains parts of loughs Ourna and Claree. The surface is partly common; the soil light, with limestone subsoil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, united with Finnoe, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal seats are Carney Castle and Ashley Park.

CLOGHRAN-HIDART, or BALLYCOOLANE, a par. in the bar. of Castleknock, co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Dublin. It is regarded ecclesiastically as a separate par., but contains only 778 acres and about 100 inhabitants.

CLOGHRAN-SWORDS, a par. and post town in the bar. of Coolock, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N. of Dublin. It is situated on the road from Swords to that city. The soil is good, on a limestone bottom. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. £176, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in the beginning of the 18th century. Here once existed a rath, near the site of which stands Castle Moat.

CLOGHY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ards, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.E. of Portaferry. Cloghy Bay, or Creek, affords anchorage for fishing smacks.

CLOGLEAGH CASTLE, an ancient stronghold near Kilworth, in the bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It stands in Moor Park, the demesne of Earl Mountcashel, near the meeting of the waters of Funcheon and Araglin. This fort has been the scene of several struggles. In 1588, during Desmond's rebellion, it was yielded to the Fleetwoods; but in 1641 it was restored to its ancient possessors, and again wrested from them by Lord Barrymore. It was eventually reduced by Sir Charles Vavasur, when the families occupying the garrison were cruelly slaughtered.

CLOGMORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Moycullen, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 16 miles to the S.W. of Oughterard.

CLOGSCOLTIA, a hmlt. in the bar. and co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles from Galway.

CLOHAMAN, a vil. in the par. of Kilrush, in the bar. of Scarewalsh, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles from Newtown-Barry. It stands upon the banks of the river Barrow, on the road between Dublin and Wexford. In the vicinity is Clohaman House.

CLOMANTA, or CLOMANTAGH, a par. in the bar. of Cranagh, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the W. of Freshford. The surface is low, lying between the rivers Nore and Suir. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Urlingford. Two castles were built here by the Shorthalls, the ruins of which may still be seen. This parish takes its name from Cleigh-mann-Ta, i.e. "Stone of God," the name of some Druidical remains in this locality.

CLONAGANE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Third, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Waterford. It lies near the banks of the Suir. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel and Waterford, val. with Newtown Lennan, £640, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which contains tombs of the Beresford family, was built in 1794. The parish belongs to the Marquis of Waterford.

CLONAGH, or CLOUNAGH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Rathkeale, its post town. The soil is good, and it is watered by the Deel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Rathkeale, £1,027, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel and a day school.

CLONAGHLIS, a par. in the bar. of South Salt, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the E. of Clane. It is situated near the Grand canal. For ecclesiastical purposes it forms part of the parish of Kill.

CLONAGOOSE. See CLONYGOOSE, Carlow.

CLONAKILTY, a post and market town, in the par. of Kilgariffe, in the bar. of East Carbery, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 30 miles on the road from Cork to Skibbereen. It is situated at the head of Clonakilty or Sandy Bay, and was anciently called Clouncallow and Tough M'Gilti. It was formerly a borough, founded by Sir Richard Boyle, first Earl of Cork, and returned two members to the Irish parliament before the Union. During the insurrection of 1641, when a detachment under Lord Forbes was entirely cut up by the Irish, it was greatly devastated, and never again rose to its ancient importance; yet as late as the close of the 16th century, the linen trade here was the most important in the district. A sand bar, spanning the entrance of the bay, renders it accessible for small craft only. The Foilagh rivulet passes through the town, and is crossed in two places by bridges. The town contains the parish church, which was rebuilt in 1818, and to which transepts were added in 1861, several schools, three chapels, a bridewell, shirehall, dispensary, bank, linen-hall, brewery, market-house, barracks, public library, newsroom, and chief police station. Petty sessions are held in the town by the county magistrates. A seneschal court is also held for the recovery of minor debts. Bishop Collins was born here. About a mile to the N. of the town is an interesting Druidical temple. Friday is market day for poultry and yarn. Fairs are held on the 5th April, 30th June, 10th October, 12th November, and on the first Monday in each month.

CLONAKILTY BAY, in the bar. of Ibane and Barryroe, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The entrance lies between the two promontories Dunowen Head and Seven Head. At the extremity is the harbour, navigable for small craft only. The depth of water in the bay ranges from 7 to 20 fathoms. Inchydoney Island lies in the centre.

CLONALLAN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Iveagh, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N. of Warrenpoint, its post town. It lies along Carlingford Bay and the Newry river. The surface is hilly, with some tolerably good arable land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dromore, held in conjunction with the chancellorship of Dromore Cathedral, val. £607, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The church is very ancient. There are Roman Catholic chapels at Mayo and Burn. The oyster fisheries afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The principal seats are Clonallan House and Narrow Water, with its ruined castle.

CLONALVEY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Delvin, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.E. of the town of Dublin. The soil is good, with freestone bottom; the highest ground being Fearknock Hill, which rises to a height of 505 feet. The road from Dublin to Drogheda passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Julianstown, £363, in the patron. of the Marquis of Drogheda. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, annexed to that of Ardcath. The seats in the neighbourhood are Bodingtown, Beshellstown, Clashford, Naul Park, Flemington, Miskinanstown, and Grange.

CLONAMERY, or CLUIN, a par. in the bar. of Ida, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It lies along the banks of the Nore, and contains the vil. of New Ballygub. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, val. with Innistiogc, £426, and constitutes the prebend of Clonamery, in the Cathedral of St. Canice. Here are the ruins of Clowen Castle and church. Two or three fine seats adorn the locality.

CLONARALYNAGH, LOWER and UPPER, two hmlts. in the bar. of Rathcornath, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles from Ballymore.

CLONARD, a par. in the bar. of Upper Moyfenrath, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is 1½ mile from Hill-of-Down station on the Mullingar railway, at which place the post office is now for the more convenience, though formerly at Clonard. The parish lies along the banks of the river Boyne, which here separates it from the county of Kildare. It contains the vils. of Longwood, Harwood, and part of Lough Crobog, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Connaught, and by the Royal canal. The lands, formerly subject to overflow from Boyne river, are not so now, but are rendered most profitable by drainage. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Killyon, £330, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is of considerable size, with steeple and four minarets. It contains many handsome monuments and tombs. The glebe house is pleasantly situated in a demesne of 40 Irish acres, largely planted, and further improvements are progressing. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and several schools. The history of ancient Clonard, which signifies "Western height," is very obscure; tradition attributes its foundation to St. Finian, who built a monastery and nunnery, and founded here the abbey church in 520. It continued as a bishopric, alike independent of England and Rome, till the 12th century, when, with other parts of Ireland, it was subjugated by Henry II. It was a great seat of religious learning, and resorted to by divines from distant shores. In the steeple of the church is preserved the old head, cut in rude stone, of St. Finian, believed to be of very early date.

CLONARD, a vil. in the bar. of Balrothery, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Balbriggan.

CLONARNEY, a par. in the bar. of Delvin, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N. of Castletowndelvin, its post town. It is situated on the roads from Athboy and Trim to Granard, and is bounded on the N. by Lough Dele. The surface is boggy, with limestone subsoil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Castletowndelvin, £230, in the patron. of the crown and the Marquis of Drogheda.

CLONASLEE, a district par. and post vil. in the bar. of Tinnehinch, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 13 miles N.W. of Maryboro'. The surface is mountainous and boggy, and is intersected by the road from Dublin to Birr. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. £120, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Oregon. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1814. Here is also a Roman Catholic chapel. The village, formerly part of Kilmannan, stands on the rivulet Barradois, near the Slievebloom mountains. Petty sessions are held here. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of Castle-Cuff, the former residence of the Cuff family, but which was taken about 200 years ago by Sir Charles Coote, in whose family it has remained ever since. The handsome mansion named Brittas is the property of Colonel Dunne, M.P. for Queen's County, whose family trace back their pedigree further than almost any of the old Celtic families. The woods at Brittas are very beautiful, being composed of old oaks that have stood there in succession for centuries. Fairs are held on the 3rd May and 7th November.

CLONASSY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Iverk, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles from Mullinavat, and 89 from Dublin.

CLONATTIN, a demesne in the bar. of Gorey, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The original mansion was destroyed during the insurrection of 1798. Here are some interesting church ruins, with a Saxon portal of curious workmanship.

CLONBAR, CASTLEGROVE, or CLARE-TUAM, an extensive bog, in the bars. of Dunmore and Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It lies along the banks of the river Clare, near Tuam, and has been partially reclaimed.

CLONBEG, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Tipperary. It lies at the foot of the Galtee mountains, on the river Aperlow. The surface is boggy and mountainous; the highest ground being on Galtee-More, which rises 3,015 feet above the sea-level. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, and Waterford, val. with Killaldriff, £608, in the patron. of the bishop. The neighbourhood abounded in deer some years ago. Here is a police station, and to the S.W. of the parish stand the ruins of More Abbey. The principal residences are Ballywire, Castlereagh, Woodville, and Ballincourty.

CLONBERN, a par. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.E. of Tuam. The surface has much bog, and contains parts of loughs Mackeeran and Doo. It is traversed by the road from Ballinamore to Dunmore. Bracklintown is the principal village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Kilkerrin, £417, in the patron. of the bishop. There are ruins of four castles in this parish. The mansions are Clonbern House and Park Lodge.

CLONBRONY, a par. in the bars. of Ardagh and Granard, in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N. of Edgeworthstown, its post town. It lies near the eastern bank of the river Camlin. The surface is boggy, with some limestone. The interior is traversed by roads from Ballinalee to Longford, Granard, Carrick-on-Shannon, and Edgeworthstown, and contains the loughs Currygrane and Gurteen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £181, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1826 by loan from the late Board of First Fruits, and by gifts from Lady Rosse, Colonel Palliser, and the vicar. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels. A nunnery is said to have been founded here by St. Patrick, but destroyed by fire in 778. The principal residences are Kilshruly, near Cairne Hill, the seat of the Edgeworth family, of which was Maria Edgeworth; Firmount, once the demesne of the celebrated Abbé Edgeworth, who was present at the execution, and was the confessor of Louis XVI.; and Lissard, the seat of the O'Ferrals, descendants of the original possessors of the parish.

CLONBULLOGE, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Coolestown, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Edenderry. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Figile and Philipstown, which run into the bog of Allen. The surface is very flat and marshy, and is traversed by the road from Rathangan, its post town, to Philipstown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Ballinakill and Clonsast, £520, in the patron. of the bishop and the Duke of Leinster. The church was built about 1713, and there are two Roman Catholic chapels in the parish. The village, which is sometimes called Purefoy's Place, was wholly destroyed during the rebellion of 1798, and was rebuilt on a much smaller scale. Here are two National schools. The principal residences are Hollywood, Clonbrin, Chevy Chace, Kilcloncorky, Clonsast, Cushina, Cloncant, and Ballydermot.

CLONBULLOGE, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Tipperary. The surface is hilly, lying along the bank of the river Arra, and is traversed by the road from Tipperary to Cahir. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, val. with Tipperary, £810, in the patron. of the bishop. The chief residences are Lismacue, Banshaw, Grallagh, and Clonbulloge.

CLONCA, a par. in the bar. of Inishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the town of Malin, at a short distance from Malin Head. This parish, which is barren and hilly, is situated in the most northern part of Ireland; the land rising at Crocknamara to the height of 868 feet. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry and Raphoe, val. £664, in the patron. of the Marquis of Donegal. Malin Hall is the principal residence. In the vicinity are Druidical remains.

CLONCAGH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.W. of Ballingarry. Clarina is its post town. The soil is rich, consisting of pasture and arable land. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. with Clonelty, £134, in the patron. of the Vicars Choral of Limerick. An abbey is alleged to have been founded here by St. Maidoc, of Ferns, where now stands the parish church in ruins.

CLONCARRAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Inchiquin, co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Carofin.

CLONCAT, a vil. in the par. of Girley, in the bar. of Upper Kells, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N. of Athboy.

CLONCREW, a par. in the bar. of Upper Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles S.E. of Newcastle. It is a small place, belonging to the see of Limerick, but is without church or chapel.

CLONCURRY, a par. in the bar. of Ikeathy and Oughterany, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the W. of Kilcock, its post town. The river Blackwater separates it from the county of Meath, while the Grand canal and Dublin road bound it on the N. The hamlet of Cloncurry was formerly a place of some consequence, but has now sunk into utter insignificance, giving place to the hamlet of Newtown. The general character of the surface is boggy and flat, with a poor soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, at present suspended, in the patron. of the crown. Near the hamlet of Cloncurry is an ancient moat, and the traces of a fortification which, in 1643, was yielded to Colonel Monk. A friary was founded here in the middle of the 12th century, by John Roche, but it was, together with the hamlet, destroyed during the disturbances of fifty years later. It was soon after restored, and its remains are still ruins of some interest. The remains of Mac Gelan, Bishop of Kildare, who died in 1223, were deposited in the church of Cloncurry. The manor was held of the earls of Ormond by the Aylmers, and passed from them to the family of Sir Nicholas Lawless, to whom it gives title of baron. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and two or three day schools.

CLONCURRY, a district par. in the bar. of Offaly, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Rathangan. This parish lies on the Grand canal, and is bordered on the N.W. by the river Feagile. The Lullymore bog takes up a considerable portion of this district.

CLONDAGAD, a par. in the bar. of Islands, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Clare. This parish, which lies along the bank of the river Fergus, is boggy and mountainous. The river Owenslieve passes through the greater part of the interior, and the road from Ennis to Kildysart describes its eastern boundary. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh, val. £138, in the patron. of the bishop. The expenses of building the church, in 1810, were defrayed by the late Board of First Fruits. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Clondagad House, Annfield, Cagbrien, and Racket Hall.

CLONDAHORKEY, a par. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It lies partly along the shores of the Atlantic, near the promontory of Hornhead. The surface is hilly, the highest ground being on the Muckish, which rises 2,190 feet above the sea-level. It has much bog and waste land, with numerous lakes and some slate-quarries. It includes the post town of Dunfanaghy, and the vil. of Creeslough. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry and Raphoe, val. £290, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The church was erected in 1778, partly at the expense of the late Board of First Fruits. There are Roman Catholic and Presbyterian places of worship. In this parish is the remarkable rock known as M'Swine's Gun, through which in rough weather the sea rises with considerable force and noise, and in the neighbourhood is an extensive rabbit-warren. There are ruins of an ancient friary. The principal residences are Marble Hill, Doe Castle, and Ards.

CLONDALKIN, a par. and vil. in the bars. of Upper-cross and Newcastle, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.W. of Tallaght. It is a station on the Cork railway. The parish is situated on the river Camma, and contains a vil. of the same name. The surface is low, but highly cultivated, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Naas; the Grand canal passes by its northern border. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. with six others, £410, in the patron. of the archbishop. The village contains the present church, and the ruins of the former one, which was evidently a fine building, together with a school, post-office, almshouses, and dispensary. In 1797 a fearful gunpowder explosion took place in the vicinity, the effects of which were felt a considerable distance. Here stood the palace of the Danish king, Awliffe, known as Dunawley, and a monastery of early foundation. A monastery and school were founded here in 1813, dedicated to St. Joseph. In the burial-ground of the old church is an ancient stone cross, and near this spot stands a round tower 100 feet high, of plain architecture, and from the upper stories commands an extremely fine view. The principal residence is Newlands.

CLONDAVADOG, or CLONDOVADOCK, a par. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Ramelton is its post town. It lies partly open to the Atlantic, with Mulroy Bay and Lough Swilly on either side, and contains Fanad Head with a lighthouse, and the vils. of Ballyroosky, Drumbeg, and Tawney. The surface has much upland, the highest point being on Knockalla, which rises 1,196 feet above the sea-level. The soil is of medium quality, and slate is quarried. The road to Letterkenny passes along the coast. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry and Raphoe, val. £543, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The church is of ancient foundation, but has been restored within the last century. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, Sunday and day schools. Creaghan House is the principal residence.

CLONDAW, a vil. in the par. of Skreen, in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Enniscorthy.

CLONDERALAW, a bar. in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is about 12 miles long by 10 broad, and is bounded by the bar. of Islands on the N. by the Fergus on the E., the Shannon on the S., and the bars. of Moyarta and Ibrickane on the W. It includes the pars. of Killadysert, Kilfiddane, Kilchreest, Kilrin, Killimer, Kilmurry, and Kilmihil. The surface is boggy, but the abundance of lime renders easy the improvement of the soil. The interior is intersected by several small streams falling into the river Fergus and Clonderalaw Bay. The bay, which opens to a width of about a mile at the entrance, penetrates the interior for a distance of 3 miles. On its shores stand the post village of Knock, Kilmore House, and Clonderalaw House. In the neighbourhood is a very fine marble quarry.

CLONDERMOT, or GLENDERMOT, a par. in the bar. of Tirkeeran, in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The river Foyle passes the western boundary, and the Faughan traverses the interior. It contains a part of the city of Londonderry, and the vil. of New Building. The living, with Templemore, is a part of the corps of Derry Cathedral, in the dioc. of Derry. The church was built about 1790. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Lower Cum-ber, two Presbyterian meeting-houses, four Sunday and one day schools.

CLONDROHID, a par. in the bar. of West Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Macroom, its post town. The surface is extremely hilly and boggy, the chief summits being Muskerrybeg, Muskerrymore, and Croomcarrig. The parish contains several quarries of slate and freestone. The rivers Sullane and Foherish, and the road from Cork to Killarney, pass through the parish. The soil is poor and strewn with fragments of rock, involving great labour in their removal before the land can be ploughed. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, val. £780, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built about a century ago and is in good repair. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels and Sunday and day schools. The large stones used upon the farms for fences are obtained from the surrounding rocks in rather a novel manner. The surface having been heated by keeping up peat fires upon it, is suddenly cooled, when it immediately splits into sections, and easily yields to the hands of the workman. Some Danish and Druidical remains exist within 3 or 4 miles of Macroom and Carrig-a-Phouca, or M'Carty's Castle. Hanover Hall is the principal residence.

CLONDUFF, or CLANDUFF, a par. in the bar. of Upper Iveagh, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Rathfriland. It contains 22,000 acres, of which about 9,000 are picturesque mountain, the principal heights being Eagle Mountain and Spelgy, rising out of the Mourne range. The interior is intersected by the roads from Rosstrevor to Rathfriland, and from Newry to Castle-Wellan and Downpatrick. The river Bann, which has its source in the Mourne ridge, and on whose banks the post town of Hilltown stands, passes through the whole length of the parish. In the mountainous district is a considerable extent of valuable bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £189, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built about 100 years ago, partly by the late Board of First-Fruits and partly by the Earl of Hillsborough, ancestor of the Marquis of Downshire. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, two Presbyterian meeting-houses, and ten day schools. About 2 miles from Hilltown are some Druidical remains, and a kind of stone sarcophagus, alleged to have been the burial-place of Finn MacCoul. According to the legend Finn threw this stone from a mountain 4 miles distant, and his finger-marks impressed upon its sides are still pointed out.

CLONDULANE, a par. in the bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile to the E. of Fermoy. It is situated upon the river Blackwater. The land is generally of excellent quality, with limestone bottom, and the interior is traversed by the road between Fermoy and Cappoquin. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £283, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a neat building, standing 2½ miles from Fermoy, and built in 1812 at the expense of the late Board of First Fruits. There is a National school. Here stood Ballymacpatrick Castle, taken in 1642; on its site is Farey's-ville. There are also ruins of some other castles in the neighbourhood.

CLONE. See CLOONE, and the like for its compounds, when not occurring in their order.

CLONE, a par. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S. of Ferns. Enniscorthy is its post town. The soil is productive, and slate and freestone are obtained here. The parish is traversed by the road from Dublin to Wexford, and the rivers Bann and Slaney. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £308, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern structure, built by a donation from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools.

CLONE, a townland in the bar. of Ardagh, in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the E. of Longford. It is situated on the river Camlin. An abbey is alleged to have been founded here as early as the middle of the 5th century, but its existence is entirely traditional.

CLONEA, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Dungarvon. Stradbally is its post town. This parish lies partly along the coast of Clonea Bay. The soil is light, and a fine hard turf is obtained on the beach below the sands. Limestone is quarried in the interior. Copper and lead ores are also found on the beach. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Stradbally, £499, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel united to those of Colligan and Kilgobnet, and a day school. Clonea Castle is the principal seat.

CLONEA, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Third, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the W. of Portlaw.

CLONEE, a postal vil. in the bar. of Dunboyne, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Dublin. It is situated upon the road from Dublin to Navan, near the river Ballybough. In the neighbourhood is Summerseat.

CLONEEN, or CLONYNE, a par. in the bar. of Slievardagh and Middle Third, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Fethard, its post town. The soil is good, distributed nearly equally between pasture and arable. The surface is hilly, the principal summits being Slievenaman, Knocknaman, and Carrickabrook. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Fethard, £1,076, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united with that of Drangan. There is a day school. The principal seats are Kilburry, Ballinard, Cloneen, and Claran.

CLONEGALL, a postal vil. in the bar. of Upper St. Mullins, co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 15 miles S. of Carlow, and 3 miles on the road from Newtownbarry to Wicklow. It is situated on the river Derry, near the eastern border of the county. The manor of Clonegall came into the possession of Lord le Poer through the Esmonds. Clonegall is a Roman Catholic par. in the dioc. of Kildare and Leighlin. It contains the parish church of Moyacomb. Here is a police station. Fairs are held on the 31st July, the 12th and 22nd November, and 11th December.

CLONELTY, a par. in the bar. of Glenquin, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the E. of Newcastle. It contains the vil. of Knockaderry. The soil is good, disposed in pasture and arable. The river Deel passes along the northern boundary. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Clonea, £134, in the patron. of the Vicars Choral of Limerick Cathedral. This parish has no church. There are Roman Catholic chapels at Knockaderry and Cloncah, and three schools. Ruins of a castle and of the church still remain.

CLONENAGH, CLONAGHEEN, or MOUNTRATH, a par. in the bars. of Cullenagh and East and West Maryborough, in Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Maryborough. It is situated on the river Nore, and the Ownass stream, a tributary to the Barrow, which describes its northern boundary. It contains the post town of Mountrath. The soil is second-rate quality; the surface somewhat boggy and mountainous, containing some minor elevations of the Slievebloom range, and intersected south-westerly by the road from Dublin to Limerick. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £1,125, in the patron. of the crown. At Mountrath stands the church, built in 1796 chiefly at the expense of the late Earl of Mountrath. This par. includes the two chplries. of Ballyfin and Roskelton. There are five or six chapels and meeting-houses for Quakers and Presbyterians. There are 19 day schools, nine of which are National. Clonenagh and Clonagheen, though formerly separate parishes, are now united. A monastery is alleged to have been founded here by St. Fintan. The principal seats are Ballyfin, Woodbrook, Newpark, Woodbine, Forest House, Springmount, Shanahoe, Anngrove Abbey, Mount Eagle, Raheen, and Tinnakill.

CLONES, a par., post, and market town, in the bars. of Dartry, Monaghan, and Clankelly, in the cos. of Fermanagh and Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It has a station on the Dundalk and Enniskillen railway, and is the terminus of the Ulster line, which connects it with Belfast. The par. extends from the river Fin on the S.W. to an extensive range of hills on the N. and N.E., which it includes, being 12 miles by 9, gradually ascending from the Valley of Lough Erne. The surface is undulating, and in some portions well timbered, and watered by numerous rivulets and small loughs. The soil is generally good, particularly in the vicinity of the town. The bog, which formerly extended over a considerable portion of the parish, is fast disappearing, and being drained and cultivated. That part of the parish which is within the bar. of Clankelly contains the vils. of Rossdea and Magheravedy; that within Monaghan, Smithsborough.—The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, gross val. £1,486, in the patron. of Sir T. B. Lennard, Bart. The church stands in the town and is of modern date, built by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It has been recently much enlarged and beautified by the exertions of the Rev. Thomas Hand, the rector, and is now, with its chaste chancel window and handsome organ, worthy of such a parish. There are two chapels of ease, one at Clough and another at Aghadrumsee, the curates of which are paid by the rector of the parish; also meeting-houses for Wesleyans at Clones and Smithsborough; Roman Catholic chapels at Clones, Aghadrumsewards, Rossdea, and Magheravedy, and numerous schools.—The town of Clones formerly belonged to the M'Mahons, and is within the Dartry section of the parish. It is situated on the cross roads from Monaghan to Belturbet, and from Enniskillen to Cortshill, 4 miles N.W. of Newbliss. According to the census of 1861 it comprised 448 houses, inhabited by a population of 2,388; of whom 1,311 were returned as Roman Catholics, 937 Established Church, 108 Presbyterians, and 32 Methodists. The town is composed of five streets, and notwithstanding that many of the houses are still thatched, it has a tolerably thriving appearance, but from its position is capable of further improvement. The principal buildings stand in the market-place, which is in the form of a triangle, with a stone cross in the centre, of curious workmanship. It is the chief seat of a constabulary force, and quarter and petty sessions are regularly held in the town, which has a handsome court-house and bridewell. Here are also a bank, dispensary, fever hospital, and workhouse. The principal industry is connected with the manufacture of crochet lace, so successfully introduced in 1850 by Mrs. Hand, and which, though declining in value, still supports numerous families. The market for agricultural produce is large, and there are several extensive corn-mills, also an iron-foundry at Stone Bridge. The Poor-law Union of Clones has in Monaghan and Fermanagh 8 electoral divisions with 18 guardians. Its ancient name was Cluan-Ihais ("Island of Retreat"). Near the town are the ruins of an abbey, alleged to have been founded in the 6th century by St. Tierny, the second bishop after St. Patrick. According to tradition, he died of the plague and was buried in Cluanois church; the manor still bears his name, and is the property of Sir Thomas Barrett Lennard, Bart. There are also the walls of a chapel, and an enclosed cemetery, with a round tower, and several curious monuments. In the vicinity are some earthworks of supposed antiquity; the principal one is a steep mound surrounded by a parapet and wet moat. There are three market days in the week—Wednesday and Friday for the sale of grain, and Thursday for general purposes. Fairs are held on the last Thursday in every month.

CLONFAD, or CLONFADFORAN, a par. in the bar. of Fortullagh, in the co. of West Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the W. of Rochfortbridge. Tyrell's Pass is its post town. The surface is flat, and there are limestone and marble quarries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £153, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Milltown. The Wesleyans have a meeting-house, and there are three day schools. The chief residences are Calverstown, Newcastle, Templeoran, and Guildford.

CLONFEACLE, a par. partly in the co. of Armagh, but chiefly in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Armagh. The surface is picturesquely diversified; and the parish, which is very extensive, is watered by the Ulster canal and the river Blackwater. It contains the market town of Moy, and the vils. of Blackwatertown, Benburb, Clontcacle, and Derryscollop, the three first being post towns. This par. was the scene of three battles, viz., in 1597, when the great rebel, the Earl of Tyrone, defeated and killed the Earl of Kildare, who commanded the English forces for Queen Elizabeth; in 1601, when Tyrone in his turn was defeated by the Lord-Deputy Mountjoy; and again in 1641, during the Great Rebellion, when General Monroe was completely routed by the O'Nials, on which occasion the castle of Benburb was dismantled. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The income from rent charge is £770, and from glebe land £526. The church of Clonfeacle is situated in the vil. of Benburb, within the co. of Tyrone. Besides the parish church there are two district churches, one in Moy, and one in Derryscollop. The two Roman Catholic chapels are both within the co. of Tyrone, one in the village of Clontcacle, the other in the town of Moy. The Wesleyans have a meeting-house at Benburb. There are four schools under the Church Education Society and one under the National Board. The glebe-house is situated in the townland of Tobermesson, but in the par. of Clonfeacle. A Culdee monastery was founded here in 589, by St. Lugaid, the first abbot, which received the name of Cluain-Fiacal, "The Church of the Tooth;" it having been asserted that a tooth of St. Patrick was preserved in the church, from this root the present name of the parish is derived.

CLONFERT, a par. in the bar. of Longford, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Eyrecourt. The parish is very extensive, comprising nearly 25,000 acres on the banks of the river Shannon and the Grand canal. Its population, however, is but scanty, and a large portion of the surface is covered with bog. In 588, St. Brendan is related to have founded an abbey here, which was afterwards converted into an episcopal see, comprising 38 parishes, or 17 benefices, 12 of which are unions. The diocese, which is in the province of Armagh, is now united to the sees of Killaloe, Kilfenora, and Kilmacduagh, but retains its separate cathedral establishment of a dean, archdeacon, and 6 prebendaries. The cathedral, restored by Bishop Dawson in 1650, now serves for the parish church. The living is a vic. val. £341, separate from the revenue of the see, which is derived from 7,794 acres of land. Clonfert is also a Roman Catholic diocese, suffragan to Tuam. Fairs are held on the 12th May, the 12th August, and the 22nd November.

CLONFERT, or TRINITY CHRISTCHURCH, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Allua and Dallua, tributaries to the Blackwater, and contains the post towns of Kanturk and Newmarket. The surface is very hilly and the soil indifferent. The parish is traversed by the new road through the Bogra mountains from Cork to Abbeyfeale. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £—, in the patron. of the bishop. The Rev. W. Maziere Brady, D.D., author of "Clerical and Parochial Records of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross," is vicar. The church was built in 1830 by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It is a fine structure in the later English style. There are Roman Catholic chapels at Newmarket, Meelin, and Rockhill, which are mutually united, and one at Kanturk. There are several day schools under the National Board, a Sunday and a parochial school within the parish. A good description of culm is profitably worked here. About two miles to the N.E. of Newmarket are the ruins of Carrigacushin Castle, formerly belonging to the MacAuliffes. The MacCartys had a castle at Curragh. Newmarket, in this parish, was the birthplace of the celebrated John Philpot Curran, whose daughter, Sarah, immortalised by Moore, sleeps in the village churchyard. The manor of Newmarket was granted by James I. to the Aldworth family, now represented by Richard Oliver Aldworth, Esq., D.D., of Newmarket House.

CLONGEEN, a par. in the bar. of West Shelmaliere, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Taghmon. The road between Taghmon and Dunbrody passes through the parish, and the river Owenduff flows near the western frontier. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Owenduff, Tintern, and Horetown, £92, in the patron. of R. Colclough, Esq. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and two schools. Sir John Moore had a conflict here with the insurgents in 1798. The principal residences are Long Graigue, Abbeyville, and Brianstown.

CLONGESH, a par. in the bar. and co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.W. of Longford. It lies along the bank of the Shannon, and contains the town of Newton-Forbes. The surface is low and boggy, and the river widens out into Lough Forbes. The par. is traversed by the road from Longport to Carrick-on-Shannon. The soil is good, and limestone is procured in some places. The Royal canal passes within a few miles. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardagh, and with some others, £402, in the patron. of the bishop. Newton-Forbes is the post town, where stands the church, a building of modern erection. At Drumlish, in Killoe, is also a church. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel and nine day schools. Castle-Forbes is the residence of Earl Granard.

CLONGILL, a par. in the bar. of Morgallion, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to E. of Kells. Navan is its post town. The soil is rich, and principally taken up in pasture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Kilshane, £219, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. There is no church in this parish, but a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Castletown-Kilpatrick, and a day school. Here are some remains of a castle. Arch Hall is the principal residence.

CLONGOREY BAWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Connell, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Newbridge.

CLONKEEHAN, a par. in the bar. and co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N. of Ardee, its post town. It is situated on the river Glyde, and is a pleasantly wooded spot. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Charlestown, £365, in the patron. of the primate.

CLONKEEN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of the town of Louth. The surface is hilly, with quarries of stone for building. A tributary to the Dee divides this parish from the co. of Meath. The parish is traversed by the road between Ardee and Carrickmacross. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £270, in the patron. of the primate. The church is ancient, and there are two schools. The chief residences are Black, Cromartin, and Cardistown.

CLONKEEN, or CLONKEEN-KERRILL, a par. in the bar. of Tiaquin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles from Athenry. The soil is good, but the surface rather boggy. It lies along the banks of the river Moyne. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Ballymacward, £250, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. Woodlawn is the post town. In 1435 the church was made a Franciscan abbey under the Mall-Kerrill family. At Gorteen is the Roman Catholic chapel within the above union, and four day schools.

CLONKEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Carbury, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Robertstown.

CLONKEEN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Castle-Connel. The living is a mensal to the see of Cashel. The church is in the Norman style. Here is a police station. The land is well cultivated.

CLONLEA, or CLONLEIGH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S. of Tulla. Six-Mile Bridge is its post town. The surface is mountainous and boggy, with a large proportion of limestone. The principal loughs are Clonleigh and Clonbrick. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with O'Mullod, £123, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1811 at the expense of the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a classical, and six day schools. The principal residences are Belvoir, Glenwood, Sunville, Kilkishen, Scart, Killeen, Lakeview, and Kyle House. The ruin of Stackpoole Court gives the title of baron to the earls of Limerick.

CLONLEIGH, a par. in the bar. of Raphoe, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, three-quarters of a mile W. of Strabane, and 3 miles to the S.E. of Raphoe. The surface is pleasantly hilly, with a soil varying in quality, but the system of tillage is excellent. This parish is intersected by the river Dale, and the roads from Lifford to Raphoe, St. Johnstown, and Letterkenny. It contains the post town of Lifford, which is the county town of Donegal and the headquarters of the militia staff, and the vil. of Ballindrait. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £1,080, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, situated at Lifford, was built at the end of the 17th century, with funds bequeathed by Sir Richard Hansard, whose monument is on the S. side of the chancel. There is a Presbyterian meeting-house at Ballindrait, and a Roman Catholic chapel at Murlog, 1 mile from Lifford. There are eight schools in the parish, including that in Lifford, founded by Sir Richard Hansard in the reign of James I. The ruins of the abbey church still exist, on a rising ground 1 mile from Lifford. It is said to have been founded by St. Columba, and to have been placed by him in charge of his disciple, St. Lugadius, who was its patron saint, his festival being held on the 24th of March. It was originally a monastery, and is spoken of as a "Collegiate House" in the time of Henry VIII. It was suppressed by King Edward VI. The county infirmary is in Lifford, as well as the county gaol and assize buildings. There is also a branch dispensary within Strabane Poor-law Union. The principal seats are Clonleigh House, Cavanacor, Combermore, Croaghan Lodge, Belmont, and Porthall. The rivers Finn and Foyle, forming the eastern boundary of the parish, separate it from those of Urney, Camus-juxta-Mourne, and Leckpatrick, in the county of Tyrone. The North-Western railway, from Dundalk to Londonderry, passes through the parish, in which is the Porthall station, distant about 12 miles from Londonderry. The Finn Valley railway also passes through it, the Clady station on which is about a mile from its S.W. boundary.

CLONLEIGH. a par. in the bar. of Bantry, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.E. of New Ross, its post town. The soil is generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with St. Mary's, New Ross, £864, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Templeludigan, and a hedge-school.

CLONLISK, a bar. in King's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated at the extreme S. of the co. and is bounded on the S.E. and W. by the co. of Tipperary, and on the N. by the bar. of Ballybritt. It contains the pars. of Dunkerrin, Castletownely, Kilcomin, Finglass, Shinrone, Kilmurryely, and Templeharry, and parts of Borrisnafarney, Aghancon, Corbally, Ettagh, Cullenwaine, Kilcolman, and Roscrea. This barony is about 13 miles long, and its greatest breadth 6 miles. It has an area of 49,053 acres, including parts of Lough Nahinch and the Devil-bit mountains. The soil is of varied quality, on a substratum of limestone gravel. There are several streams, which fall into the Shannon.

CLONLOGHAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Newmarket-on-Fergus. It is situated on a peninsula between the mouths of the Shannon and Fergus. The soil is good, disposed in arable and pasture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kiltinaghta, £277, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish has neither church nor chapel. Six-Mile Bridge is its post town.

CLONLONAN, a bar. in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N., E., and S. by the bars. of Kilkenny-West, Moycashel, and King's co. respectively, and on the W. by the Shannon. It contains the pars. of Kilcleagh and Ballyloughloe, and parts of Kilmanaghan and Kilcumreragh. It extends 6½ miles in length by a breadth in some parts of 5 miles, embracing an area of nearly 32,118 acres. In the vicinity of the river the surface is somewhat marshy, but its general character is pleasing and well cultivated.

CLONMACDUFF, a par. in the bar. of Upper Navan, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.W. of Meath. Navan is its post town. The surface is boggy, and for the most part arable. The roads from Trim to Kells, and Dunderry-Bridge to Athboy pass through the parish. It contains the tnshps. of Countstown, Meadstown, Moneystown, Little and Great Balardin, and Tullaghanstown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ardbraccan, £684, in the patron. of the crown. The parish has neither church nor chapel.

CLONMACKNOWEN, a bar. in the co. of Galway, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The bar. of Kilconnel forms its W. and N. boundaries; the co. of Roscommon, its eastern; and the bar. of Athenry its southern boundary. Its length is 10 miles by 7 wide, embracing an area of 35,467 acres. It contains the par. of Kilcloony, with parts of Aughrim, Ahascragh, Fohanagh, Clontuskert, Killallaghtan, Kilgerrill, and Killoran, and the town of Ballinasloe. The surface has a large proportion of bog, and is partly bordered on the N. by the little river Ahascragh, a tributary to the Suck, which flows along the whole of the Roscommon boundary.

CLONMACNOISE, or the SEVEN CHURCHES, a par. in the bar. of Garrycastle, in King's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Ferbane. It is situated on the banks of the Shannon, and contains the vil. of Shannon Bridge. The surface is chiefly bog with limestone. In the middle of the 6th century St. Kieran founded an abbey here, which became a famed seat of learning and theology, and was subsequently made the head of a diocese, united to Meath in 1568. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £303, in the patron. of the bishop. The church contains several curious old monuments, and is still much venerated as a burial-place. In the vicinity are the magnificent ruins of the cathedral, with its ten affiliated churches, of the two round towers above 60 feet high, of the venerable abbey, and of the bishop's palace—all eloquently recalling the grandeur of this once famed seat of learning. A fair is held on the 9th September.

CLONMANY, a par. in the bar. of Innishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Cardonagh. It lies along the coast, on the border of Lough Swilly, near Dunaff Head. The surface is very mountainous; the principal summits being Binnion, Raehtion, Dunaff, Bulbion, Crackaughrim, and Cracknakeeragh. Whinstone and clay slate are quarried here. The rivulets Clonmany, Ballyhallen, and Cracknakeeragh traverse the parish, and eventually unite in their passage to the sea; the latter of these streams has a fall of 50 feet. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £376, in the patron. of the Marquis of Donegal. The church was built in 1772, partly by gift of the Marquis of Donegal. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, several schools, and a dispensary within the Carndonagh Poor-law Union. Among the rocks on the coast are some curious caverns. At Leenan Head is a natural tunnel over 200 feet long, through which boats frequently pass, and at Tullagh there is a hole, through which at certain times the sea is ejected to a considerable height. The view from Mamore-Gap will well repay a visit. St. Columb is alleged to have founded a monastery here. There are ruins of two castles, and some Druidical remains.

CLONMEEN, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Kanturk, and 5½ W. of Mallow. The parish, which lies partly along the banks of the Blackwater and the Glynn, is mountainous and boggy, but has recently been much improved by drainage. The principal summits are the St. Hillary mountains. It is traversed by the road from Mallow to Mill-street, and contains the vils. of Naad and Banteer. At Gurtmore there are extensive lime-quarries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with two others, £276, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure, situated on the site of a monastery of Austin Friars. It is at present (1863) undergoing considerable repairs. The Roman Catholic cure is united to that of Kilcorny. There are three National schools within the parish. In 1641, Clonmeen Castle was nearly destroyed during the wars of that period, and ten years later an action took place on the hill of Knockhidashy, near the church. This parish is alleged to have been the site of a monastery founded by the O'Callaghans. The forfeited estate of Clonmeen was granted to Sir Richard Kyrle, who established iron-works and made many improvements. The principal residences are Clonmeen House, Bantyrr, Gurter Naad, Killarush, and Gurtmore.

CLONMEL, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, sometimes treated as one with Templerobin. It contains a part of the town of Cove, or Queenstown, and the vil. of Whitepoint. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, united with Templerobin, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church is situated at Cove, and was built partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels, besides a Methodist, and a military chapel; the latter is on Spike Island, where is also an hospital. There are several day schools within the parish.

CLONMEL, an inland town, municipal and parliamentary borough, partly in the co. of Waterford, and partly in the South Riding of the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 103 miles S.W. of Dublin, and 28 miles N.W. of Waterford, by the Waterford and Limerick railway, on which it is a station. It is situated in a beautiful valley on the banks of the river Suir, surrounded by picturesque mountains. The greater portion of the town is on the Tipperary side of the river, and is connected with the Waterford portion by three stone bridges. More and Long Islands are included within the limits of the municipal borough, which, according to the census of 1861, comprised 1,557 houses, inhabited by a population of 11,104, of whom 9,982 were returned as Roman Catholics, 863 Established Church, 78 Presbyterians, 45 Methodists, 85 Society of Friends, and 51 of all other persuasions. It returns one member to the imperial parliament, and in 1832 had a constituency of 253. The corporation have estates comprising 4,800 Irish acres, and the mayor's court besides pleas of debt under 40s. The corporation have the management of the local affairs of the town, and a borough rate is levied for public works and repairs. The whole town has thus a cheerful and prosperous appearance; the streets are well paved and lighted with gas, and the public pumps in the various streets afford an ample supply of water. The main street is above a mile in length, and is intersected by several other good streets, with a number of smaller ones. At the E. end of the town is a handsome new room, called the County Clubhouse. In the same quarter are extensive barracks for artillery, cavalry, and infantry, with a small military hospital. The other public buildings are a market-house, a new court-house (a light elegant structure), the prison for the South Riding of Tipperary (a large stone building), the Union poorhouse, a large district lunatic asylum for the co. of Tipperary, an infirmary, ver hospital, dispensary, and various charitable institions, also a savings-bank, extensive brewery, and ree private banks, viz., branches of the Bank of eland, the Provincial Bank, and the National Bank. e butter-market is a commodious building, with all ilities for traffic in that commodity, which is exported large quantities to London, Liverpool, and Bristol. considerable trade is also done in corn, cattle, and on. In the neigbourhood are large corn-mills, and fore the Union, in 1800, the woollen manufacture was ensively carried on, but it has now wholly disppeared. At the W. end of the town stands the parish rch, a venerable structure, in the early English le, with a picturesque octagonal tower. It is deated to St. Mary, and contains a beautifully painted window. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lisre, val. £360, in the patron. of Rev. J. Prior. The man Catholics have three chapels and two convents, there are places of worship belonging to the Presbyterians and other Protestant Dissenters. There are tional and parochial schools, and a boys' school under Incorporated Society. More's grammar school has evenue from endowment of £370. Two newspapers published in the town, the Clonmel Chronicle and Tipperary Free Press. In the vicinity are many dsome mansions, as Knocklofty (the seat of Earl noughmore), Marfield, Barn, Heywood, &c. Also ruins of the old town walls and of the castle, with e ancient effigies in the friary chapel yard. Sterne Lady Blessington were born here. The market is Tuesday and Saturday, and fairs are held on the May, the 5th November, and the first Wednesday in every alternate month for cattle and pigs.

CLONMELAN, a post and market town, in the par. of Killua, in the bar. of Delvin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.E. of Castletowndelvin. It is situated on the road from Athboy to Finnea, and contains the parish church, a very neat building. Here is a police station, and petty sessions are held in the town. The dispensary is within the Kells Poor-law Union. The Roman Catholic parish of Clonmelan is in the dioc. of Meath. In the vicinity of the town is Killua Castle, the seat of Sir M. L. Chapman, Bart.; also the ruins of a castle and church. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 28th January, 2nd May, 25th July, and 29th September.

CLONMELSH, or CLONMULSK, a par. in the bar. and co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Carlow, its post town. It lies along the banks of the river Barrow, the soil is generally good, and the road from Carlow to Leighlin Bridge intersects the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £178, in the patron. of the bishop. The seats in the neighbourhood are Garryhunden, Clonmulsk, and Derrybar.

CLONMETHAN, a par. in the bar. of Balrothery, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles NW. of Swords, and 8 from Dublin. The surface consists of good land, with limestone subsoil. It contains the vil. of Oldtown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Ballymacdun, Ballyboghill, Finnerstown, and Westpalstown, £494, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is of modern date, and was built principally by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are Roman Catholic chapels in the two first named sections of the benefice, and another united to that of Killossory; there are also four schools within this parish.

CLONMINES, a par. in the bar. of Shebburne, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles S.W. of Enghmon. It is situated near the coast of Bannow Bay, and belongs to the Annesleys of Bletchington, in Oxfordshire. It was anciently called the Seven Castles of Clonmines, and returned two members to the Irish parliament before the Union, but is now an insignificant village. The living is an impropriate cur. with Tintern. The church, founded by the Kavanaghs, is in ruins. There are also remains of the abbey, and of a tower built by Sir Roger Destton in the 12th century.

CLONMORE, a par. in the bars. of Bantry and West Shelmaliere, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Enniscorthy, its post town. The parish lies along the right bank of the river Slaney, and is traversed by the road from Enniscorthy to Wexford, and the Clonmore rivulet. The surface consists of good soil, with stone for building purposes. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £292, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Enniscorthy. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1827. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballyhoge. There are Protestant Sunday schools and four day schools within the parish. An abbey is alleged to have been founded here in the 6th century by St. Madoc, which was several times destroyed by the Danes. St. Dichulla was the first abbot who presided here. The principal seats are Wilton, Clonmore House (near Bree), Macmine, Kilgibbon, and Barrymount.

CLONMORE, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Rathvilly, in the co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S. of Hacketstown. Baltinglass is its post town. The surface is somewhat boggy and heathy, but has a soil of general good quality. The parish is bordered on the N. by the road from Hacketstown to Tullow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £237, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, built in 1809 by the late Board of First Fruits, is situated in the village, which contains also the glebe-house and a school. The ruins of Clonmore Castle are of some interest. The principal residences are Clonmore Lodge, Eaglehill Lodge, and Castleview. Clonmore gives the title of baron to the Howard family.

CLONMORE, a par. in the bar. of Iverk, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Piltown, its post town. The parish is bordered on the N. by the river Suir, and is traversed by the road from Carrick-on-Suir to Waterford. It contains the hmlts. of Clonmore and Skelpstown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Ballytarsey, £224, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1817. Clonmore was formerly a seat of the bishops of Ossory.

CLONMORE, a par. and hmlt. in the bar. of Ferrand, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Dunleer, its post town. The surface is hilly, but highly cultivated. The parish is traversed by the road from Dunleer to Dunany Point. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £206, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1795. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Wyanstown, united to those of High Lane and Dysart. There are several day schools, and a police station. The ruins of a church, and of a castle once belonging to the Verduns, stand near the village.

CLONMULT, a par. and vil. in the bars. of Imokilly, Kinataloon, and Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles to the S.E. of Rathcormack. Middleton is the post town. The surface is very mountainous. The parish is intersected by the road from Fermoy to Castle-Martyr. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £175, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to those of Dungourney and Mogeely, also a day school, but no church.

CLONNEARL, a vil. in the bar. of Kiltartan, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Gort.

CLONODONNELL. See KILLASHEE, Longford.

CLONOE, a par. in the bar. of Dungannon, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S. of Stewartstown. The parish lies along the banks of the Blackwater and Lough Neagh, and has much marsh and bog. It is traversed by the road from Brockagh to Stewartstown and Coal Island. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £372, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Mountjoy. Here are four day schools. The Annesleys are proprietors of the manor.

CLONONY, or CLONANA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Garrycastle, in King's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 16 miles W. of Tullamore. It is situated near the river Shannon.

CLONOULTY, a par. in the bars. of Clanwilliam and Lower Kilnamanagh, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Cashel, its post town. It lies near the river Suir, and is traversed by the road from Thurles to Tipperary. The surface, which is generally of fair quality, with limestone subsoil, rises to an elevation of 1,188 feet above sea-level on Knockbane. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £384, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Clonoulty, and another at Rossmore. Several schools are within the parish. Clonoulty House is the principal residence. Fairs are held on the 5th July and 12th November.

CLONPET, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.W. of Tipperary. The surface is very mountainous, the principal summit rising 1,000 feet above sea-level, among the Slievenamuck range. The living is a vic., united with Lattin, in the dioc. of Emly. Ballyglass and Brookville are the chief residences.

CLONPRIEST, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the W. of Youghal, and within a short distance of Inchiquin Castle. The parish extends along the Atlantic seaboard, and consists of very excellent soil, interspersed with marsh and bog. Limestone is procured from the interior. The road from Youghal to Castle-Martyr, the nearest post town, traces the coast line. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £574, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built about 1742. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Youghal. There are two or three day schools within the parish.

CLONPRIEST, EAST and WEST, tnships. in the above parish.

CLONROCHE, or STONEPOUND, a vil. and post town, in the par. of Chapel, bar. of Bantry, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 14 miles to the N.W. of Wexford. Petty sessions are held here, and there is a police station. The dispensary is within the Poor-law Union of Enniscorthy. Cattle fairs are held on the 26th January, 13th February and March, 14th May and July, 25th September, 24th October and November, and 26th December.

CLONRUSH, a par. and townland, in the bar. of Leitrim, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles to the E. of Mountshannon. It is situated at the S.E. extremity of the county, on Lough Derg and the river Shannon. The surface is hilly and dotted with several small lakes, rendering the locality extremely picturesque. The parish is traversed by the road from Woodford to Scariff, and contains iron ore. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Inniscalthra, £111, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a post-office at Whitegate. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Inniscalthra. There are several schools. The chief residences are Tintrim, Meelick, Nutgrove, Williamstadt, and Kilcooney.

CLONSAST. See CLONBULLOGE, King's County.

CLONSHANBO, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Ikeathy and Oughterany, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N. of Clane, its post town. The surface is boggy, and the soil poor. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Clane, £349, in the patron. of the crown. This parish has neither church, chapel, nor school.

CLONSHIRE, or CLOUNSHIRE, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Lower Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of Adare. The parish consists of good land, and is traversed by the road from Tralee to Limerick. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Rathkeale, £1,027, in the patron. of the bishop. Clonshire House is the chief residence. The ruins of a castle may be seen near the village.

CLONSILLA, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Castleknock, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles to the N.W. of Dublin. It is a station on the Mullingar railway. The surface is flat, consisting of good land with limestone subsoil. The parish is traversed by the Royal canal and the road from Dublin to Trim. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Castleknock and Mullahidart, £606, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was erected in 1710, and underwent some improvement about 80 years later. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Castleknock and Chapel-Izod. There are day and National schools within the parish. The village stands on the Liffey, and was anciently called Lattrells.

CLONSKEAGH, a hmlt. and townland, in the par. of Donnybrook, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated 2 miles to the S.E. of Dublin, on the river Dodder. There are extensive corn-mills. Clonskeagh Castle is the principal residence.

CLONTARF, a par. and post town in the bar. of Coolock, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Dublin. It is a police and coast-guard station. The parish lies along the N. shore of Dublin Bay, is highly cultivated, and contains the vils. of Bellamount and Clontarf-Sheds, the latter a favourite bathing-place. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £168, in the patron. of the crown. The original church was destroyed during the wars of Elizabeth; the present one was built in 1609. It is a neat structure, containing several monuments, and the family vault of the Vernons of Clontarf. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Coolock, Santry, and Drumcondra, and there are two day schools in the parish. The village is a delightful suburb of the city of Dublin, situated on the shores of the bay; it contains numerous handsome villas, and several hotels for the convenience of visitors who resort to this spot during the bathing season. A level mine here penetrates beneath the sea. This village is celebrated as having been the scene of Brian Boru (Brian the Brave's) death and victory over the Danes in 1014. The village was again destroyed in 1641. A priory, dating from 550, was founded here, which came into the possession of the Knights Templars, and a Carmelite monastery now occupies the site. Clontarf Castle, recently burnt, was one of the most perfect specimens of antiquity within the British Isles: it passed from the hands of the Knights Templars into those of the Knights Hospitallers of St. John, and was restored in 1835. The present building was erected a few years ago by J. E. V. Vernon, Esq., the proprietor of the manor. It is a handsome mansion in the Elizabethan style.

CLONTEAD, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Kinsale, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Kinsale, its post town. The parish is traversed by the river Bandon, and consists of good and well-cultivated land. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Tracton, £97, in the patron. of the Countess of Carnwath. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballyfeard. The manor formerly belonged to Tracton Abbey. Palacetown is the principal residence.

CLONTIBRET, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Cremorne, in the co. of Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N.W. of Castleblaney. Monaghan is its post town. The surface is boggy and mountainous. The parish is bounded on the E. by Lough Muckno, and the road from Dublin to Londonderry passes through. There are several lakes, the principal being Carraghdergan and Team. Slate and limestone are found. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £681, in the patron. of the bishop. It forms the corps of Clogher deanery. The church is an old and rudely finished structure. There are Wesleyan and Roman Catholic chapels, and several day schools. The neighbouring residences are Millmount, Braca, and Rossfield.

CLONTUBRID, a par. in the bar. of Galmoy, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Freshford. It is now annexed to the par. of Balleen, and contains an ancient well called Tubbrid-na-Draoith.

CLONTULLAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles of Carrickar.

CLONTURK, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Coolock, the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile the N. of Dublin. The parish is bounded on the S. the river Ballybough, or Tolka. It consists of a rich il, highly cultivated, and includes the vils. of Drumndra, Ballybough, and Richmond. The living is a rpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £69, in the tron. of the Rev. B. H. Johnston. The church, long ruins, is now restored, and is well attended; within are monuments of the poet Furlong, of Grose the tiquary, and of the Coghill family, of Belvidere use. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those Clontarf, Santry, and Coolock. There are two ools within this parish. Communication with the tropolis is maintained by Ballybough and Annesley dges, the latter a handsome and substantial structure. rino is the magnificent seat of the Earl of Charlent, with its casino, erected from the designs of mbers. At Clonturk House an artificial mineral ing was constructed by Dhuval, who having resorted arious modes of puffing his supposed discovery, drew usands of visitors to the spot. Other seats are Drumdra Castle, Hampton Lodge, and Drumcondra House.

CLONTUSKERT, a par. in the bars. of Clonmacriven and Longford, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Aughrim. The parish is divided from the county of Roscommon by the river Suck, and is traversed by the road from Ballinasloe to Eyrecourt, the nearest post town. The Grand canal passes by the northern boundary. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Clonfin, £91, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. A monastery is alleged to have been founded here in the 9th century by Boaden. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1818. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, and a friary at Boula. There are several schools in the parish.

CLONTYGLASS, a bog 2½ miles from Maryborough, Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It lies adjacent to the bogs of Derrygale and Ross, and has an area of 198 acres, lying upon limestone, gravel, and clay.

CLONYGOOSE, CLONAGOOSE, or CLONEYARD, a par. in the bar. of East Idrone, in the co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The parish is bordered by the river Barrow, and contains the post town of Borris. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £163, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern; previous to its erection public worship was held in a part of Borris Castle. The Roman Catholic chapel is united with those of Kintennel and Shillins. There are several schools. Just without the boundary of the parish is the demesne of Kilcaldrum.

CLONYGOWAN, a town in the par. of Ballykean, in the bar. of Upper Philipstown, King's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Portarlington. It is situated on the road from that town to Killeigh. Clonygowan House is the principal residence. A fair is held on the 22nd July.

CLONYHURK, CLONECHORKE, or CLONECHURCH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Philipstown, in King's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The parish is situated on the river Barrow. It contains the post town of Portarlington, and the Grand canal passes within a short distance. The living is a rect. in the dio. of Kildare, val. with Geashill, £1,126, in the patron. of Earl Digby. The chapel was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1827. The surrounding residences are Garryhinch, Barrowbank, Clonehorke, Benfield, and Kilen.

CLOONACOOL. See CLOONOGHILL, co. Sligo.

CLOONAGH, a small lough, in the co. of Roscommon, Ireland.

CLOONAGHLIN, a hmlt. on Bear Island, in the bar. of Bear, co. of Cork, Ireland.

CLOONAGHMORE, a stream, in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, falling into Rathran Bay.

CLOONALANE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Granard, in the co. of Longford, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Granard.

CLOONAMINE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. of Mayo, Ireland, 2 miles from Crosmolina.

CLOONASCRAGH, two hmlts. of this name in the bars. of Clare and Longford, in the co. of Galway, Ireland.

CLOONBRENNANN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Glenamaddy.

CLOONCAH, a hmlt. in the southern div. of the bar. of Ballintober, in the co. of Roscommon, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Roscommon.

CLOONCLARE, a par. in the bars. of Drumahaire and Rosclogher, in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles to the E. of Manor-Hamilton, its post town. The surface is hilly and boggy, with substratum of lime and freestone. Its general contour is extremely picturesque, being rich in lake and mountain scenery. The principal summits range from 1,000 to 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. Lough Macnean divides the parish from the county of Fermanagh; and the road from Enniskillen to Sligo traverses the interior. The living is a vic., val. with Manor-Hamilton, £381, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is situated at Manor-Hamilton. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Glenfarn, and several schools within the parish. Glenfarn Hall is the seat of the Tottenhams, and O. Wynne, Esq., claims the tithes as "Titular Abbot of Cloonclare."

CLOONCORHA, a vil. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Kilrush.

CLOONCRAFF, or CLONAFF, a par. in the bar. and co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the E. of Elphin. The parish is bordered by the loughs Bodarig and Nablahy, and consists principally of bog and marsh. The road from Strokestown to Drumsna passes through it, and numerous small lakes exist in the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Aughrim, £368, in the patron. of the bishop. The post town is Carrick-on-Shannon. Clonaghee House is the principal residence.

CLOONDARAGH, an island, containing a vil. of the same name, situated between the rivers Shannon and Camlin, in the bar. and co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is about 2 miles long by 1 broad. Bridges carry the thoroughfare across either river to the mainland. Here is the depôt of the W. terminus of the Royal canal.

CLOONE, or CLONE, a par. and post vil. in the bars. of Carrigallen and Mohill, in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles to the E. of Mohill. The surface is marshy, hilly, and bleak, abounding with numerous small lakes, the principal of which is Lake Rhynn. Limestone and lead-ore are found here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £1,137 12*s.*, in the patron. of the bishop. The village is within the Mohill section of the parish, near the river Clone. It contains a police station, court-house where petty sessions are held, and the parish church, which was built in 1821 by the late Board of First Fruits, on the alleged site of an abbey, founded in the 6th century by St. Frioch. There are also a chapel of ease, three Roman Catholic chapels, four Sunday schools, and over thirty day schools. Rhynn Lodge is the seat of the Earl of Leitrim; other residences are Lakefield, Cottagevale, Brooklawn, Willowbrook, Lurga, and Mount-Ida. Fairs are held on the 12th February, 5th April, 26th May, 13th June, 10th July, 26th August, 29th September, 2nd November, and 20th December.

CLOONEE, GREAT and LITTLE, hmlts. in the bar. and co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, between 3 and 4 miles to the N.E. of Longford.

CLOONEENBEG, a town in the par. of Athleague, in the bar. of Athlone, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated on the river Suck.

CLOONEENMORE, two hmlts. of this name—one in the bar. of Athlone and co. of Roscommon; the other in the bar. of Tireragh, and co. of Sligo, Ireland.

CLOONEY, or CLOUNEY, a par. in the bar. of Corcomroe, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile to the S.E. of Ennistymon. The surface being very hilly, a large proportion is in pasture. In the valleys the soil is good, on a bottom of whinstone rock. The parish is traversed by the road from the post town Ennistymon to Corrofin and Ennispass, and by the river Forsett, with its tributaries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. with Kiltoraght, £74, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is also united to that of Kiltoraght, and there are three hedge schools within the parish.

CLOONEY, CLONEY, or CLONIE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Bunratty, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N. of Quin. The surface has much bog and hilly ground; the arable portions consist of soil of a medium quality. Lead-ore exists at Ballyliskey. The par. contains the vil. of Spancelhill, and is intersected by the road from Ennis to Killaloe. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Quin, the post town, £279, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Quin and Dowrie. There are two hedge schools. Clooney House, standing near the old castle, is a handsome mansion; other seats are Castleview, Toonagh, Danganville, Wellpark, Corbally, Classagh, and some others. The old church and castle are in ruins.

CLOONEY, a lough in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, about 7 miles to the N.W. of Glenties.

CLOONFAGHNA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Ballymoe.

CLOONFARIS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tiaquin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the E. of Newtown Bellew.

CLOONFINLOUGH, a par. in the bar. and co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile to the S. of Strokestown. The surface is diversified with hill and lake; the principal summit being Slievebawn, which rises 857 feet above the level of the sea. It includes the hmlts. of Ballinafad, Cloonfinlough, and some others. The road from Roscommon to Strokestown traverses the parish. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, united to the vic. of Clontuskert. There is a Roman Catholic chapel within this parish, and four hedge schools, but no church. The principal residences are Mount Pleasant, Cloonfinlough Lodge and Cottage, Clonfree House, and Fair Valley Lodge.

CLOONFUSH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles from Tuam.

CLOONISH, a harbour in the bar. of Ballinahinch, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It lies on the western sea-board of Joyce country. Mr. Nimmo erected a pier here to facilitate the export of turf.

CLOONKEEN, there are four hmlts. of this name in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland.

CLOONKEENCLARE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles from Newtown Bellew.

CLOONLARA, a vil. in the lower div. of the bar. of Tulla, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of O'Briensbridge.

CLOONLARA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Glennamaddy.

CLOONLOGHER, a par. in the bar. of Drumahaire, in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated within a short distance of Manor-Hamilton, at the embouchure of the rivers Shannon and Fergus. The surface consists of good soil, with limestone and much upland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilfinaghty, £277, in the patron. of the bishop. Sixmilebridge is the post town. The tithes are partly taken by the Wynnes, as titular "Abbots of Cloonclare." Larkfield is the seat of the O'Donnells.

CLOONLOOSKAUN, there are two vils. of this name in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland; one within 3 miles of Tulla, and the other 3 miles N. of Kilrush.

CLOONLOUGH, a small lake 12 miles to the N.W. of Kenmare, in the southern part of the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

CLOONLYON, a hmlt. in the bar. of Dunmore, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Tuam.

CLOONMORE, there are three hmlts. of this name in the cos. of Galway, Mayo, and Roscommon, Ireland.

CLOONNAGRO, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Tulla, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Tulla.

CLOONOGHILL, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Corran, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Ballymote, its post town. The surface consists of good arable land, with a proportion of bog and some limestone. It is bounded on the E. by the river Awinmore, and is traversed by the road from Ballymote to Tobercurry. It contains Lough Cloonacleigha and the hmlt. of Bunnanaddan. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, and forms part of the benefice of the bishop. There are remains of the castle of the M'Donoghs, who founded a monastery in 1190, of which some vestiges remain.

CLOONPROHUS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, in the co. of Kerry, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Listowel.

CLOONTEEN, two hmlts. of this name; one in the bar. of Dunmore, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, about 7 miles to the N.W. of Tuam; the other in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4½ miles to the S.E. of Carrick-on-Shannon. At the latter is a seat of the Marquis of Westmeath.

CLOONTUSKERT, or CLOONTWISCAR, a par. in the bar. of Ballintober South, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles to the N.E. of Roscommon. The parish, which is partly bordered by the river Shannon and Lough Ree, consists of a large proportion of bog, with a poor soil. It is traversed by the great road between Lanesborough and Roscommon, and contains the vils. of Clontuskert and Ballybeagan. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, united to Clonfinlough. There are three hedge schools. According to Archdall a monastery was founded here by St. Faithlee, which passed into the hands of the O'Farrells, and entirely disappeared after the Dissolution.

CLOONTYSHANE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Rosclogher, in the co. of Leitrim, Ireland, 11 miles to the N. of Manor-Hamilton.

CLOONYCARNEY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tireragh, in the co. of Sligo, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Easky.

CLOONYGORMICAN, or ARDCLARE, a par. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Roscommon. Strokestown is its post town. The surface consists principally of pasture, with a little bog, and limestone abounds. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with several others, £162, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1720, as a chapel of ease, by Charles Hawkes, Esq., of Briarfield. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to those of Glinsk and Ballymoe, and there are three day schools in the parish.

CLOPHILL, a par. in the hund. of Flitt, in the co. of Bedford, 8 miles S. of Bedford, and 3 E. of Ampthill, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the Ivel, a tributary to the river Ouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £422, in the patron. of Earl de Grey. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1848. It is a handsome Gothic structure. There is a National school. Earl de Grey is lord of the manor. Here was formerly a priory, and there are still remains of the old castle of the Albini at Castle Hill. The tower and nave of the old church are left standing for the purpose of performing burial service. The Church Estate produces £16 per annum, applied to the repairs of the church. The poor's land produces about £35 per annum, and the common rights about £18, which is distributed to the poor.

CLOPTON, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, in the co. of Suffolk, 3½ miles N.W. of Woodbridge, and

E. of Ipswich. There is a small tract of common. he living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £720, the patron. of Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor. The church, dicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient structure. he charities amount to £34 per annum, chiefly derived om the rent of the town-lands. Fossil remains, in rge quantities, are found in the sand-pits.

CLOPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Mickleton, in the per div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Glouster, 3 miles from the Campden station of the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway.

CLOSE, an ext. par. place in the city of Lichfield, the co. of Stafford.

CLOSE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Dewisd, in the co. of Pembroke.

CLOSE OF ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL, a precinct in the city of Exeter, in the co. of Devon.

CLOSE OF THE CANONS, a lib. within the precinct of the cathedral church of Salisbury, in the par. of rum, and city of Salisbury, in the co. of Wilts.

CLOSE OF WINCHESTER, an ext. par. place in lib. of Winchester Soke, in the co. of Hants.

CLOSEBURN, a par. in the district of Nithsdale, in co. of Dumfries, Scotland. It is bounded on the N. by narkshire, and extends southward 10 miles, between rivers Nith and Ae, with an extreme breadth of 8 les. The land near the Nith is fertile, but a large rtion of the surface is moorland. Amongst the most markable natural features is the waterfall called the ey Mare's Tail, some 90 feet in height, with Crichup lm, lower down the same hill-side. Lime has been tensively burnt here since 1772. Closeburn Castle, a ry ancient fortified tower, formerly belonging to the rkpatricks, is still inhabited. Closeburn Hall, a endid Grecian building, is the most remarkable edifice the parish. The village of Closeburn stands 3 miles E. of Thornhill. This par. is in the presb. of Penpt, and in the patron. of Baird of Closeburn. The nister has a stipend of £235. Wallacehall School, nded in 1723 by a Glasgow merchant, is free to the ldren of parishioners. There are also private schools d a Free church.

LOSEHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Heddon-on--Wall, in the eastern div. of the ward of Tindale, in co. of Northumberland, 7 miles W. of Newcastleon-Tyne, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Wylam tion of the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. There free schools, supported by Mrs. Bewick, of Close use, which is a fine building.

LOSE HOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Giggleswick, of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of rk, 1 mile N.W. of Settle. It is situated near the r Ribble.

LOSE, WEST, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Carlton ghdale, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 les S.W. of Middleham.

LOSEWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Houndsough, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles N.E. of the ston station on the London and Exeter direct line, and miles S. of Yeovil, its post town. It is situated on river Yeo. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of th and Wells, val. £220, in the patron. of Lord Portm. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone dice in the perpendicular style. The register dates rm 1685. There are a dame and Sunday schools. The pory is an ancient edifice, of the time of James I. The l of the manor is Lord Portman.

LOTHALL, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, in the co. of Hts, 2 miles S.E. of Baldock, its post town, and 11 S.W. of Royston. At the former place is a station on the Gt Northern railway. Several tributaries to the river Bne take their rise in this parish. It is situated to the E. f the Roman way and to the S. of Icknield Street. T living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £661, in patron. of the Marquis of Salisbury. The church, dicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient stone structin with tower. It has a chapel, monuments and brasses, so as early as 1404. There are National schools.

LOTHERHOLME, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.W. of Ripon, its post town.

CLOTTON HOOFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, in the second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles N.W. of Tarporley, its post town, and 8 from Chester.

CLOUGH, a vil. or small town in the par. of Loughinisland, in the bar. of Kinelarty, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles on the road from Newry to Downpatrick, and 26 from Belfast. There is a police station, also some remains of an old castle, on the site of a Danish rath, which, from its position, appears to have been built for defensive purposes. Seaforde House is the principal residence. Fairs are held on the 27th May, 5th July, 21st October, 22nd November, and 23rd December.

CLOUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Almondbury, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Huddersfield.

CLOUGH-MOR, or SLIEVE-BANE MOUNTAIN, one of the smaller summits of the Mourne range, near the vil. of Rosstrevor, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Its height is 1,595 feet, and half way up its side is a remarkable block of granite, called the Clough-Mor, or "Great Stone;" it weighs about 30 tons, and though bearing every appearance of having been placed there by human hands, is probably a boulder dropped by an iceberg. The view from this summit is one of imposing grandeur.

CLOUGHOUGHTER, a ruined castle in the western district of the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It stands upon a small island in Lake Killikeen. Within its walls Captain Bedell was confined by the rebels in 1641.

CLOUGHTON, a chplry. in the par. of Scalby, in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, in the North Riding of the co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Scarborough. In the village are a chapel of ease, a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and a free school. In the vicinity are several large stone-quarries. The Rev. J. R. Hill is lord of the manor.

CLOVA, formerly a par., but now joined to Cortachy, in the district and co. of Forfar, Scotland. It is situated in a beautiful valley, only one mile broad, and is almost shut in by lofty hills branching off from the Grampians. Near the church are the ruins of an ancient castle.

CLOVELLY, a par. in the hund. of Hartland, in the co. of Devon, 11 miles W. of Bideford, its post town, and 5 from Hartland. The village is built on the side of a steep rock, and formerly belonged to the Giffords and Careys, who erected a harbour and pier. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £244, in the patron. of Sir J. H. Williams, Bart., lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone edifice, chiefly in the Saxon style. It was made collegiate in Richard II.'s time by the Careys, and possesses a brass and other monuments of the Carey and Williams families. Lady Williams supports a school for girls. There is an ancient encampment situated above the church, on a lofty height, called Clovelly Dyke, and in the vicinity is Clovelly Court, the fine mansion of Sir J. H. Williams, commanding extensive views. In former years this place was celebrated for its herring fishery; and in the roads is anchorage in 4 to 6 fathoms water.

CLOVENFORDS, or WHYTBANKLEE, a hmlt. in the par. of Stow, in the co. of Selkirk, Scotland.

CLOVER HILL, there are numerous farms and small places of this name in all parts of Ireland.

CLOWN, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 6 miles S.W. of Worksop, 8 E. of Chesterfield, its post town, and 4 from the Staveley station of the Midland railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £311, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice, partly in the Norman, and partly in the early English style. The Primitive Methodists, Wesleyan Association, and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship. There is an endowed school. The charities produce about £20 per annum. The lord of the manor is the Duke of Portland.

CLOY, a tnshp. in the par. of Overton, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 6 miles N.E of Clark.

CLOYDAGH, CLODY, or CLOGRENNAN, a par. partly in the bars. of Carlow and West Idrone, in the co. of Carlow, and partly in the bar. of Slievemargy, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Carlow, its post town. The parish is partly bounded by the river Barrow and the road from Carlow to Leighlin Bridge. It is very hilly. The Clogrennan hills, lying at the foot of the Slievemargy range, here slope down into the valley of the Barrow. The principal peak is 1,038 feet above the level of the sea. The soil is good, with limestone. Coal is procured at the Bilboa colliery, which lies to the W. of the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £179, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the expense of the late Board of First Fruits in the year 1800. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Cillinane, Wells, Clonmulsk, and old Leighlin. There are several day schools. The hamlet of Millford, within this parish, is celebrated for its extensive flour-mills.

CLOYGIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandefeilog, in the co. of Carmarthen, 3 miles N. of Kidwelty. Here are the ruins of a chapel.

CLOYNE, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Imokilly, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 15 miles E. by S. of Cork, and 160 miles S.S.W. of Dublin. This place, which gives its name to the merged bishopric of Cloyne, is but a comparatively small town, consisting of about 350 houses, with a decreasing population. In ancient times it was of more note, and was made the seat of a bishopric by St. Colman in 604, and of an abbey in 707. At the commencement of the 14th century this see had become so impoverished that Edward III. wrote to Pope John XXII. recommending its union with that of Cork, which was effected near a century later by Pope Martin V. It again formed a separate see for a short period in the middle of the 17th century, but was finally consolidated with Cork and Ross by the statute 3 and 4 William IV., c. 37, s. 121. The income of the bishop of the united dioceses is under £3,000, including the bishop's lands. The cathedral church, a small cruciform building of the 13th century, is in the later English style, and contains monuments of the Longfields, of Castle Mary, and an epitaph by Mrs. Piozzi. It stands in the main street, and a little to the W. is a very perfect five-storied round tower, 92 feet in height, surmounted by a modern battlement, the original conical roof having been destroyed by lightning in 1749. The town, which consists chiefly of one street of old houses, contains a chapel, fever hospital, dispensary, loan-fund, Diocesan school, and almshouses. It has a police station, and petty sessions are held in the town. The living is a rect. val. £1,317, appropriated to the vicars choral, &c. The diocese of Cloyne comprises 90 benefices, of which 20 are unions, and all in the patron. of the bishop, except 13, which are in the gift of the crown; it was formerly in the province of Cashel, but is now included in that of Dublin. Adjoining the town is Cloyne House, the former palace of the bishops; it is a plain mansion, built at the commencement of the last century by Bishop Crowe, and stands in a fine demesne. Rostellan is a seat of the Marquis of Thomond. At Castle Mary is a cromlech. The Roman Catholic diocese comprises 57 parishes in Cloyne and Ross, and the bishop's seat at Queenstown. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 24th February, Easter and Whit Tuesdays, 1st August, 12th September, and 5th December, and are generally well attended, Cloyne being the only market town for a considerable distance.

CLUCHAN ST. JOHN, a vil. in the par. of Dalry, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 6 miles N. of New Galloway.

CLUDDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrockwardine, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile S.W. of Wellington.

CLUDEN, a vil. in the par. of Holywood, in the co of Dumfries, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Dumfries. Near the village, on the Cluden rivulet, are several large flour mills, and the ruins of Lincluden College, celebrated in story as "Cluden's silent towers."

CLUID, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co of Galway, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Dunmore.

CLUMBER PARK, the seat of the Duke of Newcastle, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles S.W. of Worksop. The mansion is surrounded by an extensive park of 11 miles in compass, adorned with many large plantations, and a spacious lake. The mansion contains some fine sculptures, and a magnificent gallery of paintings by Rubens, Vandyck, Correggio, Poussin, and other ancient masters. In the dining-room, which is 60 feet by 34, are some originals brought from Herculaneum and Pompeii.

CLUN, a hund. in the south-west part of the co of Salop. It includes the pars. of Clun and Mainstone, and comprises about 25,190 acres.

CLUN, a par., market town, and borough, in the hund of Clun, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles from Knighton, and 14 from Ludlow. The parish, which is very extensive including 13 townships besides Clun, which is the most populous, derives its name from the river Clun, on which In the Norman times it belonged to the Fitz-Alans, earls of Arundel, who erected a castle on an eminence overlooking the river, and exercised the power of life and death. This castle was destroyed by Owen Glendower during his rebellion against Henry IV. In the reign of Henry VIII. the parish was annexed to the new-erected county of Montgomery, but was afterwards separated and joined to that of Salop.—The town, which is situated on both banks of the Clun, is surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills. The main street extends along the northern bank of the river, which is here crossed by a handsome bridge of five arches; on the S. side stand the church and the older part of the town, the houses of which are built of rag-stone, with thatched roofs. The town-hall is a modern erection of stone, built upon arches. It contains one large upper room for the holding of the courts, with an area below for the use of the market. The town is well supplied with water, but is imperfectly drained and paved. It is a borough by prescription, having been incorporated by charter granted by the lords-marchers, and afterwards confirmed and augmented by Thomas Earl of Arundel, in the reign of Edward II. The government is now administered by two bailiffs, 30 burgesses, and a recorder appointed by Earl Powis, as lord of the manor. There is no manufacture carried on in the town. It is the head of a deanery, of a Poor-law Union, and of a sub-registration district, embracing 19 parishes and townships. Until recently it was the seat of a hundred court, held every three weeks, for the recovery of small debts, but is now included in the new County Court district of Bishop's Castle.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. with the cur. of Chapel Lawn annexed, £680, in the patron. of Earl Powis. The church, dedicated to St. George, was once dependent on Wenlock Priory. It is a very ancient edifice, chiefly in the Norman, but in some parts in the Saxon style of architecture, containing many interesting monuments and a fine old font. The original oak ceiling is still preserved in the N. aisle. There is a district church at Newcastle, in the same patron., the living of which is a perpet. cur. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have chapels, and there are several schools. The charities are very considerable, producing £1,554 per annum. The principal is a hospital founded in 1614 by Henry Howard, Earl of Northampton, who endowed it with tithes and lands in various parishes producing a clear annual revenue of £1,200. Out of this endowment the chplries. of Church Stoke and Knighton have been from time to time augmented. The hospital itself is a plain quadrangular building, with a large garden in front and a chapel. The warden has a salary of £80 a year with house, and the brethren, who consist of 14 poor men, have each two or three rooms, with a garden, besides clothing, and fuel.

ith 10s. per week allowed them.—The district in which lun is situated formerly constituted a distinct hundred, lled the hund. of Clun, and formed part of Wales. coording to Leland, in the reign of Henry VII. it comrised a great forest of red deer and roes, belonging to ie Earl of Arundel, and until recently there was a large ommon known as Clun Forest; but disputes arising as the enjoyment of the common rights, an Act of Parament was passed in 1837 for its enclosure. Within a uarter of a mile of the town, in a north-westerly direcon, is a single entrenchment raised by Owain Glyndwr shelter his troops whilst attacking Clun Castle, and at short distance to the S. is Walls Castle, from which it as battered. In the vicinity are the Bury ditches, a ritish camp, and Caer Caradoc, where the Roman eneral Ostorius defeated Caractacus. The fortification the latter is one of the most curious and interesting the country, and is in a good state of preservation, ving to the care taken of it by Earl Powis of Walcot, ho has the manor and is owner of the property.—The eekly market, held on Wednesday, is well attended. airs for sheep and cattle are held on Whit-Monday and uesday, the 23rd September, and the 22nd November.

CLUNBURY, a par. in the Stow div. of the hund. of urslow, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles E. of Clun, and 7 E. of Bishop's Castle. Shrewsbury is its post town. is situated on the river Clun, and contains the tnshps. Clunton, Kempton, and Obley. The living is a perpet. r.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £120, in the patron. Earl Powis. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, an ancient stone structure. The charities produce 8 per annum. The Independents and Wesleyans have apels. There are National schools. Earl Powis is lord the manor. A Roman camp was stationed here.

CLUNGUNFORD, or CLUNGERFORD, a par. in e hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 6½ miles E. Clun, and 4 from the Craven Arms railway station. rewsbury is its post town. It is situated near Watng Street and the river Clun, and contains the tnshps. Abcott, Beckjay, Broadward, Broom, and Shelderton. he living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £530, the patron. of the Rev. J. Rocke. The church, dedited to St. Cuthbert, is an ancient stone structure in e early decorated style. There are two Dissenting apels, and endowed schools for boys and girls. The rochial charities produce about £58 per annum. The incipal residences are Broadward Hall and Clungunrd House, the latter occupied by John Rocke, Esq., ho is lord of the manor. In the vicinity is a barrow d some supposed Druidical remains.

CLUNIE, a par. in the district of Stormont, and co. Perth, Scotland. It extends southward 9 miles, with readth of 4 miles. The surface is very uneven, inding part of the Grampians and of Strathmore. out one-third of the parish is arable, and a considerle part of the waste land has recently been planted. he most remarkable natural features are the Craig of unie, a mass of trap 600 feet in height; Benachally ountain, 1,800 feet high; and Loch Clunie, 4 miles E. of Benachally, 2¾ miles in circumference, with an treme depth of 84 feet. A beautiful little wooded and, 200 yards from the western shore of the loch, has ruined remains of a castle built in the 16th century, d in which the Admirable Crichton is said to have en born. The island has been formed at some unown ancient period on a heap of stones thrown into e loch. On the western shore, opposite the island, and a ridge or mound, are the remains of another very cient castle, which probably was connected with the and. The principal streams are the Droothy, the ckney, the Lornty, and the Lunan, which, like the h, abound in excellent fish. Many cairns are found, d are said to mark the locality of the great battle tween Agricola and the Caledonians, mentioned by itus. This par. is in the presb. of Dunkeld, and in patron. of the Duke of Atholl and the Earl of Airlie. minister's stipend is £173. There are also a Free urch and a Free Church school. Amongst the hills found some rare plants and several mineral springs.

CLUNIE, or CLUNAIDH WATER, a stream which takes its rise in the Grampians, and, after a course of 10 miles, falls into the Dee at Castletown, in Braemar, Scotland.

CLUNIE, or CLUAMY, a loch in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles long by 1 wide. It is situated at the head of the river Moriston, about 10 miles W. of Fort Augustus.

CLUNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Clunbury, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles E. of Clun.

CLUNY, a par. in the district of Kincardine O'Neil, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It extends eastward 10 miles, with a breadth of 2 miles, and four-fifths of the surface is cultivated. Cluny Castle and Castle Fraser, both built in the 15th century, are the principal edifices. This par. is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Neil, and in the patron. alternately of the crown, Gordon of Cluny, and Fraser of Castle Fraser. The minister's stipend is £174. There is also a Free church, and a girl's school in addition to the parish school.

CLUSTYBLAIDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Cerrig-y-Druidion, in the co. of Denbigh, 11½ miles W. of Ruthin.

CLUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Chew, in the co. of Somerset, 9 miles S. of Bristol, and 12 W. of Bath. The projected railway to Bristol will have a station at Clutton. This is a polling place for the eastern div. of the co. of Somerset. The workhouse of the Clutton Union is situated in this parish, which gives name to the new County Court, though the latter is situate at Temple Cloud, a hamlet in the adjoining parish of Camely. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring collieries and stone-quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £340, in the patron. of the Earl of Warwick. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, is an ancient Norman edifice, with a modern tower. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Independents have places of worship, and there is a National school for both sexes. The charities produce about £30 per annum. The sum of £300 left for the endowment of a free school was taken by the churchwardens to build the church tower in 1728. Since that time £20 per annum has been paid by the parish from church property, to the National school. The lord of the manor is the Earl of Warwick.

CLUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Farndon, in the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 3 miles E. of Farndon.

CLWT-Y-BONT, a vil. in the par. of Llanddeiniolen, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 4 miles S. of Bangor. In the village is a factory where writing slates are manufactured. Clwyd, or Voryd, a river, which, rising in the south-western part of the co. of Denbigh, flows through the rich vale of Dyffryn Clwyd, past Ruthin and St. Asaph, and falls into the sea at Rhyl.

CLYDACH, a par. and chplry., partly in the par. of Cadoxton, and partly in that of Llangafelach, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 5 miles N. of Swansea. The two streams called the Upper and Lower Clydach here join the river Tawe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

CLYDACH, a hmlt. in the par. of Ystrad-dyfodwg, hund. of Miskin, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 9 miles N.W. of Llantrissant.

CLYDACH, a hmlt. in the pars. of Llangattock and Crickhowell, in the co. of Brecon, South Wales, 2 miles from Crickhowell. It is situated on the river Usk, at the point where the Brecknock canal crosses the Clydach rivulet by an aqueduct 80 feet high. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the iron-works.

CLYDE, a river traversing for the most part the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It takes its rise in the Lowther hills, near the sources of the Nith and the Annan, and flows first in a northerly and afterwards in a north-westerly direction to the Firth of Clyde. The upper part of its course before reaching Lanark is through a mountainous district composed of crystalline rocks, from which it emerges into the lower country by a series of romantic descents over sandstone strata, known as the Falls of Clyde. Douglas Water and the Avon are among its principal tributaries. From Bothwell the river becomes broad and majestic, with banks beautifully clothed with orchards and plantations, interspersed here and there with busy factories. Below Uddingstone the banks cease to be precipitous, and spread out into luxuriant and arable plains, which terminate at Glasgow in Glasgow Green, a green and level park with an area of 140 acres. Here the river begins to be spanned by elegant bridges, below which the labours of man have, for upwards of a mile, converted the channel into a great dock, lined with spacious quays, alongside of which vessels of all sizes, ranged three or four abreast, take in or discharge their cargoes. Eighty years ago the channel was comparatively shallow, but mighty have been the labours which since that time have been expended in deepening and straightening the water way between the Broomielaw and Dumbarton, and in rendering the old labyrinth of shallows navigable for the largest vessels.

CLYDESDALE, or STRATHCLYDE, in modern times is that part of the Valley of the Clyde lying within the co. of Lanark, Scotland. This district is celebrated for its orchards and its breed of horses. The orchards extend from the lowest fall of Clyde to Bothwell, a distance of 16 miles, and are well protected from E. winds by the high ground on the right bank of the river. The orchards consist chiefly of apple trees, with some pears and plums. At present they occupy some 1,200 acres, and realise about £3,000 a year. The Clydesdale horse is supposed to owe its good qualities to inter-breeding with Flanders mares, but this, like other breeds of draught horses in Scotland, is believed by competent judges to have degenerated.

CLYDEY, a par. in the hund. of Kilgerran, in the co. of Pembroke, 5 miles S.W. of Newcastle-Emlyn. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £101, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Clydai. Fairs are held on the 13th May, the 17th September, and the 30th October.

CLYGYROG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadrig, in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, in the co. of Anglesey, 4 miles N.W. of Llanerchymedd.

CLYNACARTEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Iveragh, in the co. of Kerry, 8 miles S.W. of Cahersiveen.

CLYNE, a par. in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland. It is 24 miles long with a breadth of 4 to 8 miles. The northern part is lofty and mountainous, and presents very attractive features. Not more than a sixtieth part of the surface is arable, the remainder being devoted to sheep-pasture. The Duke of Sutherland is the sole landowner, and most of the inhabitants on the coast are fishermen. Freestone and limestone are abundant. Craigbar, a fortified hill on the S. side of Loch Brora, is supposed to be of Pictish origin, as is also Cole's Castle, a remarkable fortification on a rocky island in the Blackwater of Strathbeg, near the junction of that river with the Brora. It is circular in form, with an external circumference of 54 yards, and has a diameter of 18 yards, it is built of large stones, well joined together without cement. This par. is in the presb. of Dornoch, and in the patron. of the Duke of Sutherland. The minister's stipend is £145. There are also a Free church and three non-parochial schools.

CLYNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lower Lantwit, hund. of Neath, in the co. of Glamorgan, 1½ mile N.E. of Neath, its post town, and 4 from Swansea.

CLYNNOG VAWR, a par. in the hund. of Uwch Gorfai, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 9 miles S.W. of Carnarvon, its post town and railway station. This pretty little village is situated about 10 miles from the foot of the Rivals, near the sea-shore. Its church, as Pennant truly remarks, is the most remarkable structure of its kind in North Wales. It is built in the form of a cross, and is a fine specimen of the late perpendicular style of Henry VII. Its length from E. to W. is 130 feet, and its breadth, from N. to S., 70. It consists of a nave, transept, and chancel, with a tower, and at the western end a porch surmounted by a muniment room, and a sacristy, also surmounted by a room. The church contains tombs of the Glynne and Twisleton families, and a curious oak chest, carved out of a solid tree, which was once used for the reception of offerings to St. Beuno or Beuno, to whom the church is dedicated, and who is supposed to have founded an abbey in 616. Adjoining the church, to the S.W., is the chapel of St. Beuno, who communicates with the tower, and in which the saint was buried. An elaborate article on the architecture of this chapel will be found in No. 14 of the "Archæologia Cambriensis," written by the Rev. H. Longueville Jones. The church has been admirably repaired through the indefatigable exertions of the worthy vicar the Rev. Robert Williams; but funds are still required for the restoration of the chapel, near which is St. Beuno's Well. About a mile from the church, on a farm called Bachwen, is a cromlech, remarkable for its large capstone incumbent stone, which has numerous small holes on its surface and two large ones, and for having four instead of three supporters. Within a short distance of the sea-shore, all the way to Carnarvon, are numerous British posts. The most remarkable one is Dinas Dinlle, which can be distinctly seen from Dinas Dinorddwig.

CLYNYNNOS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5½ miles N.W. of Llandeilo-fawr.

CLYRO, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 1 mile N.W. of Hay, its post-town. It is bounded on the S. and E. by the river Wye. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Bettws-Clyro, £330, in the patron. of the bishop. The church contains an ancient piscina and font. Here are traces of a castle.

CLYST. See CLIST, Devonshire.

CLYTHA, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarth, in the lower div. of the hund. of Ragland, in the co. of Monmouth, 5 miles S.E. of Abergavenny, its post town. It is situated on the river Usk. Clytha House is a handsome structure, near which stands Clytha Castle, being a mausoleum to the memory of the heiresses of the house of Tredegar. Here the Monmouth hounds meet. The charities produce £54 per annum.

CLYTHENESS, a hmlt. in the par. of Latheron, in the co. of Caithness, Scotland, near Clytheness Head.

CNWC, a tythg. with Llawr-y-dref, in the par. of Aberffraw, in the co. of Anglesea. It is situated near Aberffraw.

COACHFORD, a vil. in the bar. of East Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Macroom.

COACH-GRANGE, a hmlt. in the par. of South Elkington, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles W. of Louth.

COAGH, a postal vil. in the par. of Tamlaght, in the bar. of Dungannon, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 28 miles to the E.N.E. of Omagh. It is situated on the river Ballinderry, and on the road from Stewartstown to Magherafelt. Here are a police station, Presbyterian meeting-house, and a dispensary, the latter within the Cookstown Poor-law Union. The village is the property of the Conynghams of Springhill, descendants of the Stewart family, to whom it was given by James I. Coagh was the native place of Barrs, the giant, whose height was 8 feet 2 inches. Fairs are held once every month.

COAL-ASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Dronfield, in the hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 1 mile S.E. of Dronfield, and 5 from Sheffield, its post town and railway station. The Wesleyan Reformers and Methodists have places of worship. There are extensive collieries in the neighbourhood. Charles Cammel, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COAL-CASTLE, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Aboyne. It is situated near the river Dee.

COALHILL, a postal vil. in the par. of Moydow, in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated 4 miles to the N.E. of Ballymahon, on the road from Dublin to Strokestown.

COALHILL, a point at the embouchure of the rivers White and Shannon, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

COAL-ISLAND, a postal vil. in the pars. of Donaghenry and Tullyniskan, in the bar. of Dungannon, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles on the road from Armagh to Stewartstown. Coal is worked, and a short canal facilitates its conveyance to the river Blackwater. There is a good trade in iron goods, bricks, pottery, linen, and grain.

COALPIT HEATH, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Westerleigh, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles W. of Chipping Sodbury. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop.

COALPORT, a vil. in the par. of Broseley, in the co. of Salop, 13 miles S.E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on the Severn, and contains a large china factory.

COALSNAUGHTON, a vil. in the par. of Tillicoultry, in the co. of Clackmannan, Scotland. It is chiefly inhabited by colliers.

COALTON, a vil. in the par. of Ceres, in the co. of Fife, Scotland.

COALTON, EAST and WEST, two neighbouring vils. in the par. of Wemyss, 4 miles N.E. of Kirkcaldy, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. They are inhabited chiefly by colliers.

COALTON OF BURNTURK, a vil. in the par. of Kettle, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Falkland.

COALVILLE, a vil. in the par. of Ibstock, hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 4 miles N. of Market Bosworth. It is situated near the river Anker on the Midland railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, and in the patron. of Rev. J. W. Clinton.

COALY, or COWLEY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Dursley, its post town and railway station, and 12 from Stroud. The Gloucester and Berkeley canal passes through the parish, as does also the Gloucester and Bristol railway. The staple trade of this place was anciently the manufacture of woollen cloth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £158, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient edifice in the decorated style. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are parochial schools for boys and girls. The charities produce about £34 per annum, and there is an endowment of £30 a year for the repairs of the church. Earl Fitzhardinge is lord of the manor.

COALYLAND, a colliery vil. in the par. of Alloa, in the co. of Clackmannan, Scotland.

COANWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Haltwhistle, in the western div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles S. of Haltwhistle, its post town. It is situated near the Haltwhistle branch of the Newcastle and Carlisle line. The Society of Friends have a place of worship.

COATBRIDGE, a town in the par. of Old Monkland, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 9 miles N.E. of Glasgow. It is situated on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, near the Monkland canal, and has a station on the Glasgow branch of the Caledonian railway. From being situated near the large iron-works of Gartsherrie, Summerlee, Dundyvan, Calder, and Langloan, it has suddenly increased in population and opulence. It has a free church, an United Presbyterian church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and an Episcopalian chapel.

COATDYKE, a vil. in the par. of Old Monkland, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland.

COATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Durrington, in the hund. of Brightford, and rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles N.W. of Worthing.

COATE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles E. of Bampton.

COATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Martock, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Ilchester.

COATE, a tythg. in the par. of Bishop's Cannings, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles E. of Devizes.

COATE, a tythg. in the par. of Liddington, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile S.E. of Swindon.

COATES, a hmlt. in the par. of Winchcomb, in the co. of Gloucester, 14 miles N.E. of Gloucester. It is situated under the Cotswold hills, on the river Isborne.

COATES, a par. in the western div. of the wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 6½ N. of the Saxelby station of the Gainsborough and Lincoln line. It is situated on the river Till. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £50, in the patron. of Sir J. N. Ramsden, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Edith, is an ancient structure, partly in the Norman style of architecture.

COATES, a par. in the hund. of Crowthorne, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles W. of Cirencester, and 2 from the Tetbury Road station of the Great Western railway. The Thames and Severn canal and the Great Western railway pass through this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £369, in the patron. of the Rev. William Dewe, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice. There is a National school. The charities produce £1 per annum.

COATES, a par. in the hund. of Bury, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 4 miles S. of Petworth, its post town. It is situated on the river Rother, near the Mid-Sussex branch of the Brighton and South Coast railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Barton, in the dioc. of Chichester, in the patron. of George Wyndham, Esq. The church is in the early English style of architecture, with spire.

COATES, a tnshp. in the par. of Barnoldswick, in the E. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles S.W. of Skipton.

COATES, a hmlt. in the par. of Applesthorpe, in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles S. of Gainsborough. It is situated on the river Trent.

COATES MAGNA, a par. in the wap. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles W. of Grimsby, and 9 N.E. of Caistor. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £580, in the patron. of Sir J. Sutton. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas, and has a register commencing 1653. Sir John Sutton is lord of the manor. This is a meet for the Laceby harriers.

COATES, NORTH, a par. in the wap. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles from North Thoresby station, and 10 from Louth, its post town. The living is a rect. in the archdeac. and dioc. of Lincoln, val. £382, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster.

COATES PARVA, a par. in the wap. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 1 mile S.E. of Caistor. It is separated from Coates Magna, its post town, by the river Freshney. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln. val. £120, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small neat building.

COATFLATT, and COATGILL, hmlts. in the par. of East Orton, in the co. of Westmoreland, 8 miles S.W. of Appleby.

COATHAM, EAST and WEST, hmlts. in the tnshp. of Kirk Leatham, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N. of Guisborough. Here is a coast-guard station.

COATHAM MUNDEVILLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Haughton-le-Skerne, in the south-western div. of Stockton ward, in the co. of Durham, 4½ miles N. of Darlington, its post town and railway station, and 2½ N.E. of Haughton-le-Skerne. Coatham Hall Garth is a handsome edifice.

COATHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Wetheral, in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Carlisle. It has quarries of gypsum.

COATS, EAST and WEST, two connected vils. in the par. of Cambuslang, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Glasgow.

COATSAWMOOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Heighington, in the south-eastern div. of Darlington ward, in the co. of Durham, 6½ miles N.W. of Darlington, its post town.

COATYARDS, a tnshp. in the parochial chplry. of Nether Witton, in the western div. of the ward of Morpeth, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles W. of Morpeth, and 3 N.W. of Nether Witton.

COBBIN END, a hmlt. in the par. of Waltham Abbey, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles N.E. of Waltham Abbey.

COBHAM, a par. in the hund. of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 1 mile N.E. of the Sole Street station of the North Kent line, and 4 from Gravesend, its post town. The village was anciently a market town, and belonged to the Cobham family, but afterwards came to the Bligh, through the Stewarts, to whom it was presented by James I. on its forfeiture to the crown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £391, in the patron. of the Earl of Darnley. The church, which was formerly collegiate, is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene; it is an ancient structure in the early English style, with a square tower, and contains several monuments and brasses, chiefly to the Cobham and Brook families, some of them dated as early as 1320. There is a parochial school supported by the Earl of Darnley, and a college founded by Sir John Cobham in 1407, consisting of twenty almshouses for the poor. It is a good specimen of the smaller hospitals of the middle ages. Cobham Hall, the residence of the Earl of Darnley, was designed by the celebrated Inigo Jones, and restored by Wyatt; the picture gallery of which contains, among other pictures, Rubens' "Death of Cyrus," and portraits by Vandyck. This building also contains a beautifully gilded hall, which is open to visitors on certain days by the kind permission of the Earl. The park, which consists of 1,800 acres of ground, well stocked with deer, possesses some beautiful and romantic spots. The mausoleum, which was erected in the park in 1783, has not been used. There is a fair held on the 2nd August.

COBHAM, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Elmbridge, in the co. of Surrey, 5 miles S.W. of the Esher station of the South-Western line, and 10 N.E. of Guildford. It is situated on the river Mole, which abounds in pike, carp, trout, and other fish, and its banks are much resorted to by anglers. There were formerly large iron-works by this river, but the place is now chiefly used for carding woollen rags. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150, in the patron. of Charles Combe, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure partly in the early English and partly in the Norman styles of architecture, with spire, and contains brasses of early date. The Wesleyans have recently erected a chapel. The charities amount to about £80 per annum. There are parochial schools and two infant schools. Cobham Park, the seat of Charles Combe, Esq., is in the Italian style, and was built in 1725. The Rev. F. Mount is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the 17th March and 11th December.

COBHAM, an island in the par. of Yarmouth, in the borough of Great Yarmouth, in the co. of Norfolk.

COBLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Tardebigg, in the hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles E. of Bromsgrove. It is situated on the Birmingham canal, and was, until recently, included in the co. of Warwick.

COBRIDGE, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Burslem, and partly in the par. of Stoke-on-Trent, in the co. of Stafford. It was formerly called Rushton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £108, in the patron. of the Rector of Burslem. Here is an endowed school. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in the potteries.

COCK, a small river in the co. of York, which rises above Abberford, and after a course of 10 miles falls into the sea below Tadcastle. The memorable battle of Towton was fought on its banks in 1461, when its channel was choked with the slain.

COCKAYNE HATLEY, a par. in the hund. of Biggleswade, in the co. of Bedford, 2¼ miles E. of Potton, its post town and railway station, and 6 N.E. of Biggleswade. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £151, in the patron. of the Rev. H. C. Cust. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a handsome structure in the Norman style of architecture, with tower, and contains stained-glass windows. There are some small charities.

COCKBURNSPATH, a par. in the co. of Berwick, Scotland, 18 miles N.W. of Berwick, and 36 from Edinburgh. It has a station on the North British railway. The parish is of a quadrangular form, presenting angles to the cardinal points of the compass. Its greatest length, from the eastern angle on Redheugh shore to the western angle at the source of the river Eye, is 7½ miles, and the greatest breadth, from the northern angle at Dunglas Bridge to the southern angle at the point where the Eye turns in a south-eastern direction, is 5 miles. The parish of Auldcambus was, at some unknown period, incorporated with it. The southern part of the parish, being a continuation of the Lammermoor hills, is lofty and bleak; the northern section is comparatively low and level, and well cultivated. The coast-line is bold and precipitous. Peasedean, one of several ravines or deep gullies, is remarkable for having an average depth of 150 feet for about 2 miles of its length, and for a bridge thrown across it in 1786, with a length of 300 feet, 15 feet in breadth, and a height of 120 feet. Two of the arches are supported on a pier rising from the bottom of the valley. The cove, near Dunglas Bridge, at the north-eastern limit of the parish, is a small bay, surrounded by rocks 100 feet in height, and looking out seaward on an insulated rock caverned by the waves, and resembling a cathedral. At Siccar Point, a spot of rare beauty, a remarkable conjunction of the greywacke with more modern rocks is observable, and moraines, or traces of ancient glaciers, were discovered in 1839 by Dr. Buckland in the valleys through which the road passes to Ayton. More than half the parish is cultivated. The above-mentioned ravines were important passes during former unsettled times, and forts and encampments are numerous in the district, some of them being of British and Roman origin. Cockburnspath Tower, on the road from Berwick to Edinburgh, now a venerable ruin, was formerly esteemed one of the keys of Scotland. The old church of the parish of Auldcambus, a Saxon structure, now in ruins, is supposed to have been built in the 7th century. The North British railway traverses the parish. The village of Cockburnspath stands on the Edinburgh and Berwick road, a mile from the N.E. boundary of the parish. The par. is in the presb. of Dunbar, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £246. The parish church dates from 1163. There is a Free church for Cockburnspath, and an United Presbyterian church at Stockbridge.

COCKBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Winchcomb, in the co. of Gloucester.

COCKEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, in the northern div. of Easington ward, in the county Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Durham, its post town, and 1 W. of the Leamside station of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated on the S. side of the river Wear. Cocken Hall is the seat of S. C. Standish, Esq., the lord of the manor. It is built on an eminence, surrounded on the E. by deep dells, and on the other three sides by the river Wear, which here flows through a rocky channel. A nunnery of the order of St. Theresa was established here about the beginning of the present century by nuns from Antwerp. The ruins of Finchale Abbey stand opposite. There is much coal in this neighbourhood.

COCKENZIE, a quoad sacra par. in the pars of Tranent and Preston-Pans, in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, 1 mile N.E. of Preston-Pans. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, and ranks as a subport to Leith. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the salt-works and fisheries. The living is in the presb. of Haddington, and in the patron. of the male communicants.

COCKERHAM, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. of Lancaster, 5½ iles S. of Lancaster, and 1¼ W. from Bay Horse station. is situated on the river Cocker, near the Preston canal nd railway, and contains the districts of Shireshead, llel, and Dolphinholme, each of which have their own urch and ecclesiastical establishments. The parish urch, dedicated to St. Michael, is in the pointed style f architecture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of anchester, val. £640, in the patron. of the lords of the anor. There is a parochial school for both sexes, ith an endowment of £11 per annum; also a Sunday hool. The population are principally employed in riculture, but there are two cotton mills and one silk ill in the parish. At Cockerham Point and Plover Rock, ar the entrance of the bay, are two fixed lights, which ay be seen at 9 miles distance, put up in 1847, to direct ssels entering the channel. At Thurnham is a fine d mansion, the seat of the Daltons. Thomas Green, . A. Clarke, J. Villiers Dent, and the Rev. R. Atkinn are lords of the manor. A fair is held on the 24th larch for horned cattle.

COCKERINGTON, NORTH, a par. in the Wold v. of the hund. of Louth-Esko, parts of Lindsey, in e co. of Lincoln, 4 miles from Louth, its post town, nd 3¾ from the Louth station of the Great Northern ilway. The living is a perpet. cur. united with lvingham. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The arities produce about £30 per annum. There is an dowed school, founded by the Scropes.

COCKERINGTON, SOUTH, a par. in the co. of Lin-ln, adjoining North Cockerington, and 5 miles from e Newark station of the Great Northern railway. he living is a discharged vic. in the archdeac. and dioc. f Lincoln, val. £163, in the patron. of the bishop. The urch is dedicated to St. Leonard. The tithes were comuted in 1765. This place for many generations has been e seat of a branch of the Scrope family, one of whom, ir Adrian Scrope, was a warm adherent of Charles II., nd was left for dead on the field of Edgehill, but was covered through the skill of Dr. William Harvey, the iscoverer of the circulation of the blood. Another ember of this family, a relative and namesake of the receding, fought on the side of the parliament, and fterwards signed the warrant for beheading the king, r which, in October, 1660, he suffered death.

COCKERMOUTH, a parliamentary borough, market wn, and chplry., in the par. of Brigham, in the ward f Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, miles E. of Workington, and 15½ N.W. of Whiteaven. It has a station on the Cockermouth and Workgton branch of the North-Western railway. A new e is in course of construction from Cockermouth, rough the vale of the Derwent, to join the Lancaster nd Carlisle line near Penrith. It was a place of great ntiquity, as proved by a stone font recently dug up the neighbourhood of the town, which bears an scription in mingled Saxon and Runic, implying at "here Ekard was converted to Christianity, and this man's example were the Danes brought." hortly after the Conquest, a strong castle was built n a precipitous eminence to the N. of the town, the alls of which are about 600 yards in circumference, nd of great thickness. The honour was at that me held by Waltheof, Lord of Allerdale, son of the arl of Northumberland, and subsequently came into e possession of Piers Gavestone. Between the reigns f Edward I. and Charles I. the borough returned no presentatives to parliament. The castle and town ere held during the civil war of the 17th century for e parliament, and in August, 1648, were besieged by 00 Cumberland royalists, but Lieut.-Colonel Ashton, nder the command of Cromwell, soon relieved it.—The wn, which, from its situation at the confluence of the vers Cocker and Derwent, has always enjoyed a conderable trade, especially in woollen cloths, hats, stockngs, and such like manufactures, is well built. It rincipally consists of two streets, with several cross reets, which are well lighted with gas, but badly paved, cept the High-street. The houses are of stone, with ate roofs, and there is a fine promenade of a mile in length along the N. bank of the river Derwent, bounded at the one end by wooded cliffs, and at the other by the ruins of the old castle. The rivers Derwent and Cocker are crossed by several stone bridges. The town, which has recently been much improved, contains a markethouse, court-house, literary institution, Agricultural Society, and Union workhouse. It is a parliamentary borough, returning two members, but not a municipal, being under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold petty sessions here every Monday. The parliamentary borough comprises, according to the census of 1861, 1,546 houses, inhabited by a population of 7,056, against 7,275 in 1851, showing a decrease of 219 in the decennial period.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £120, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was burnt down in 1850, but a handsome new church was erected on the same site in 1854. The foundation-stone of another church, situated in the lower part of the town, and dedicated to Christ, was laid in 1863. It will contain 1,000 sittings, the body of the church being free for the poor, but the galleries are to be let to help to pay the clergyman, who will receive the interest of £1,700, generously presented by two friends of the Bishop of Carlisle, as an endowment fund. The funds for the building were chiefly raised through the exertions of the Rev. H. B. L. Puxley, curate to the incumbent of All Saints. The register is of early date. The Wesleyans, Independents, Primitive Methodists, Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics have chapels. There is a free grammar school, founded in 1676, besides National and infant schools. Wordsworth, the poet, was a native of this town. The barony, now called the honour of Cockermouth, belongs to the Wyndham family, and gives the title of baron to the earls of Egremont. Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor, and owner of the site of the castle and chief part of the soil. In the town is the Old Hall, the seat of the Fletchers, where Mary Queen of Scots was hospitably entertained after her escape from Dunbar Castle. Market day is on Monday. Statute fairs are held on Whit-Monday and Martinmas Monday for the hiring of servants, and cattle fairs on every other Wednesday from May to September, and on the 10th October.

COCKERSAND ABBEY, an ext. par. place in the co. of Lancaster, 6 miles S.W. of Lancaster. It was founded in 1190, and is in ruins, except the chapter-house.

COCKERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Darlington, in the south-eastern div. of Darlington ward, in the co. of Durham, 1 mile N.W. of Durham. It is situated on Cockerbeck stream, a branch of the river Skerne. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Clare Abbey and Carmel House Convent (late Cockerton Field House) both possess handsome chapels; the latter is occupied by Carmelite nuns. There are endowed National schools.

COCKET, a vil. in the par. of Swansea, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 1 mile from Swansea.

COCKEY. See AINSWORTH, Lancashire.

COCKFIELD, a par. in the south-western div. of Darlington ward, in the co. of Durham, 6 miles N.E. of Barnard Castle, and 7 from Staindrop, its post town; both which places are railway stations. The river Gaunless flows on the S. of the village, near which are several coal-pits. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. with the vic.* of Staindrop annexed, £354, The church is an ancient stone edifice. There is also a district church at Ingleton, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £165. Both are in the gift of the Duke of Cleveland, whose seat is Raby Park. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

COCKFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, in the co. of Suffolk, 5½ miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, and 8 W. of Stowmarket. It contains the hmlts. of Windsor Green, Cross Green, Chester Green, Old Hall Green, Button Green, Parsonage Green, Stow's Hill, Earl's Court, and Great Cockfield Green. The manor formerly belonged to Bury Abbey, and was afterwards held by the De Veres, earls of Oxford, who resided at Earl's Court. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £635, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an old flint structure in the perpendicular style, consisting of nave, chancel, aisles, and tower, and contains a beautiful monument to the Harveys. The charities amount to £9 per annum. Here is a chapel for the Independents and a National school. The Messrs. Manning are lords of the manor. Cockfield Hall was the seat of the Brookes.

COCK FOSTERS, a hmlt. in the par. of Chipping Barnet, hund. of Edmonton, in the co. of Middlesex, 1½ mile E. of Barnet.

COCK HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Moor Monkton, in the Ainsty of the city of York, in the co. of York, 6 miles N.W. of York.

COCK HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Castle Cary, in the co. of Somerset, 21 miles E. of Bridgwater.

COCKING, a par. in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles S. of Midhurst, its post town. It is situated on the Chichester road, and before the Conquest formed part of the domains of the crown. It was anciently a market town, and having passed through various hands is now the property of the earls of Egmont. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £250, in the patron. of the Bishop of Oxford. The church is a small building in the early English style. The register dates from 1558. This place is celebrated for its pippins.

COCKINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles from Torquay, its post town. It was anciently a market town, and is situated near Tor Bay. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Tor Mohun, in the dioc. of Exeter, joint val. about £400, in the patron. of C. H. Mallock, Esq. The church possesses a curious octagonal font, and several tombs of the Carys of Tor Abbey. The charities are worth about £41 6s. per annum, chiefly for almshouses. Cockington Court is the seat of C. H. Mallock, Esq.

COCKLAKE, a small lake in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles S. of Axminster.

COCKLAW, a tnshp. in the par. of St. John Lee, in the southern div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles N. of Hexham, its post town. Cocklaw Tower, now in ruins, was formerly the fortified seat of the Erringtons. Rowland Errington, Esq., is chief landowner.

COCKLE GAT, the N. passage to Yarmouth Roads, near the entrance of which is a lighthouse, 36 feet in height, erected in 1844, visible above 60 miles.

COCKLE PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Hebburn, in the western div. of the ward of Morpeth, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles N. of Morpeth, its post town. It was part of Bothal barony. Cockle Park Tower, now a farmhouse, was formerly a stronghold of the Bertrams. The Duke of Portland is the chief landowner.

COCKLEY CLEY, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 3½ miles N. of Swaffham railway station. The village is small, and the inhabitants solely engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £158, in the patron. of T. R. Buckworth, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an old edifice in the early English style of architecture, consisting of nave, chancel, and low round tower. The parsonage was formerly St. Mary's Chapel. The charities amount to £16 per annum. T. R. Buckworth, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COCKMAN. See COLMAN, Tipperary.

COCKPEN, a par. in the district and co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of Edinburgh. Its length in a northerly direction is 3½ miles, and its breadth 2½ miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Lasswade, Newbattle, and Carrington, and is traversed for about a mile by the South Esk. The surface, which is for the most part flat, is highly cultivated, and coal and freestone abound. The Marquis of Dalhousie is the principal landowner. Dalhousie Castle and the mansion of Cockpen both belong to the noble family of Ramsay. There is a large powder factory and a paper-mill at Westmill. The Hawick branch of the North British railway passes through the E. part of the parish, and has a station at Dalhousie. This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and in the patron. of the Marquis of Dalhousie,– stipend, £157. There is a Free church in the vil. of Bonnyrigg.

COCKSHOT, a spot near Keswick, in the co. of Cumberland, from which there is a fine view of Derwentwater.

COCKSHUTT, a tnshp. with Crosemere, in the par. of Ellesmere, in the co. of Salop, 4½ miles S.E. of Ellesmere. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £86, in the patron. of the Vicar of Ellesmere.

COCKTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of North Greenhoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Wells, and 3½ N.E. of Walsingham. The village, which is extremely small, is situated near the coast. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of Blakeney, in the dioc. of Norwich, in the patron. of Lord Calthorpe, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is partly in the early English style of architecture, and contains a font, beautifully sculptured. This was the birthplace of Sir John Narborough, Sir Christopher Mynnes, and Sir Cloudesley Shovel, three of the greatest admirals of the 17th century.

COCKTHORPE, a chplry. in the par. of Ducklington, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles S. of Witney. It is situated on the river Windrush. Cockthorpe Park is a meet for the old Berks hounds.

COCKWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Dawlish, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles E. of Chudleigh.

CODDENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, in the co. of Suffolk, 2½ miles S.E. of Needham Market station, and 6 S.W. of Debenham. In the village is a savings-bank, and part of the parish is in common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the cur. of Crowfield annexed, £1,006, in the patron. of the Rev. Robert Long. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a fine specimen of Gothic architecture, with a tower containing a peal of eight bells. The interior is rich in monuments, and there is a stained-glass window of considerable merit. The charities amount to £80 per annum. The Independents have a chapel. There is a free school for the education of boys and girls, with an endowment of £80 per annum, bequeathed by Lady Gardeman. Sir F. F. Middleton, Bart., is lord of the manor, who resides at Shrubland Hall, a modern residence in the midst of a fine grove of chesnuts. A fair is held on the 2nd October.

CODDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, in the co. of Hereford, 3½ miles N.E. of Ledbury, its post town and railway station, on the West Midland branch of the Great Western line. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £170, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a wooden tower and steeple, and contains a curious font. The charities produce £30 per annum.

CODDINGTON, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Newark, in the co. of Nottingham, 2½ miles E. of Newark, its post town and railway station. The parish contains a considerable tract of moorland. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower. The charities amount to about £80 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National schools.

CODDINGTON, a par. in the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 5½ miles S. of the Tattenhall railway station on the North-Western line, and 10 S. of Chester, its post town. It comprises the tnshps. of Aldersey, Chowley, and Coddington. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £262, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an edifice of red sandstone, built in 1633. Here is a Sunday school. The charities produce about £2 10s. per annum. Richard Massie, Esq., is lord of the manor. This was once a market town, and the ancient seat of the Botelers, Coddingtons, and Massies. There is a tumulus of sandstone near the church, 85 yards in circumference.

CODFORD ST. MARY, a par in the hund. of Heytesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 7 miles S.E. of Warminster, and 3 from Heytesbury, its post town. It is situated on the river Wiley, and has a railway station on the Wilts and Somerset branch of the Great Western line. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £306, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church is in the perpendicular style of architecture. The Independents have a chapel and schools. On the top of Codford Hill is Ogbury camp, or circle, covering several acres, and supposed to have been used for heathen rites. Henry Biggs, Esq., of Stockton House, is lord of the manor.

CODFORD ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles S.E. of Heytesbury, its post town. It has a railway station on the Wilts and Somerset branch of the Great Western line. The par. contains the tnshps. of Ashton-Gifford and Codford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £380, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The church is chiefly in the Norman style of architecture. With a stone pulpit. There is a National school.

CODHAM HALL, in the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles N. of Braintree, and 14 N.E. of Chelmsford. It was at this house, then the seat of Sir Lukes, that Butler wrote his satirical poem, called "Hudibras."

CODICOTE, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, in the co. of Herts, 3 miles from Welwyn, its post town and railway station on the Great Northern line, and 8 S.E. of Hitchin. It is situated on the high road between Hatfield and Hitchin, and was formerly a market town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £149, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient structure, with square tower, and contains a small chapel called Dacre Chapel. The register commences in 1559. The charities produce about £15 per annum. There are National schools. In the vicinity are traces of a Roman camp. A fair is held on Whit-Monday.

CODNOR, a district par. in the par. of Heanor, hund. of Morleston, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles E. of Belper railway station, and 9 from Derby, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a modern stone building. The Wesleyan Reformers and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship. There are National schools, and the parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. The chief employment of the inhabitants is in the ironstone mines and collieries.

CODNOR PARK, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Morleston, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles S.E. of Alfreton, it has a railway station on the Erewash Valley branch of the Midland railway. Codnor Castle, the seat of Richard de Grey in the reign of Henry III., and afterwards of the Zouches, is now in ruins. Francis Wright, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are coal-mines and smelting-works, and the land is rich in ironstone and other minerals. Near the village is Aldercar Hall, a mansion erected in 1668.

CODRINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wapley, in the lower div. of the hund. of Grumbald's Ash, in co. of Gloucester, 2 miles S. of Chipping Sodbury. Here is Codrington Court, from which the Codringtons, of Dodington Park, derive their name. The hamlet of Codrington anciently formed a separate parish. The Beaufort hounds meet here.

CODSALL, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Seisdon, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Wolverhampton, its post town. It has a station on the Birmingham and Shrewsbury branch of the Great Western railway. The par. includes the tnshp. of Oaken. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £146, in the patron. of Lord Wrottesley. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was rebuilt in 1848 with the exception of the tower. It is in the early English style. The charities produce about £80 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor.

CODSHEATH, a hund. in the lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the north-western portion of the co. of Kent: contains the pars. of Leigh, Brasted, Otford, Halstead, Chevening, Seven Oaks, Kemsing, Sundridge, Shoreham, and Seal, comprising about 37,720 acres.

COEDANA, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wales, 2 miles S.E. of Llanerchymedd, and 10 from the Gaerwen station of the Chester and Holyhead section of the North-Western railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llaneilian, in the dioc. of Bangor, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Anne, is an ancient edifice.

COEDCANLASS, a par. in the hund. and union of Narberth, South Wales, 6 miles from Haverfordwest, its post town, and 5 from Pembroke. The South Wales branch of the Great Western railway has stations at Haverfordwest and New Milford. The parish is situated on an estuary of the Bristol Channel, near Milford Haven. The living is a don. cur. in the archdeac. and dioc. of St. David's, val. £25, in the gift of Sir John Owen. There is no church, and only about thirty houses. The remains of the ancient residence of the Perceval family is now a farmhouse.

COED CHRISTIONYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruabon, in the hund. of Bromfield, in the co. of Denbigh, 2 miles N.W. of Chirk, its post town.

COED-DHU-CHURCH. See COYCHURCH, Glamorganshire.

COEDENLOE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawardine, in the co. of Flint, 2 miles W. of Harwadine. Here the English were defeated in 1159. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the potteries and iron-works.

COEDFRANK, a hmlt. in the par. of Cadoxton, hund. of Neath, in the co. of Glamorgan, 1 mile from Neath, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the canal.

COEDGAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangwnor, in the co. of Carmarthen, 4 miles from Carmarthen.

COEDKERNEW, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, in the co. of Monmouth, 3 miles S.W. of Newport, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of St. Bride's, Wentllooge, in the dioc. of Llandaff, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

COEDLASSON, or COEDGLASSON, a tnshp. in the par. of Nantmel, in the hund. of Rhayader, in the co. of Radnor, 4 miles E. of Rhayader, its post town.

COEDTALOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanerfyl, in the co. of Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Llanfair.

COEDWRG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandysilio, in the co. of Denbigh, near Llangollen.

COED-Y-CUMAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Vainor, in the co. of Brecon, 5 miles N.W. of Merthyr-Tydvil. The inhabitants are engaged in the extensive iron and copper works on the river Taff.

COED-Y-PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandegai, in the co. of Carnarvon, 2 miles S.E. of Bangor.

COEDYRALTH, a tnshp. in the chplry. of Dudleston, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Ellesmere.

COFFINSWELL, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, in the co. of Devon, 3½ miles N.E. of Torquay, and 3 S.E. of Newton-Abbott, its post town, both which places are railway stations on the South Devon branch of the Great Western railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of St. Mary-Church, in the dioc. of Exeter, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient edifice, with tower. Sir W. P. Carew, Bart., is lord of the manor.

COFTON, a chplry. in the par. of Kenton, hund. of Exminster, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles S.S.W. of Topsham, and 6 S.S.E. of Exeter. It is situated near the river Ken and the South Devon railway. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, and in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire.

COGAN, a par. in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 4 miles S. of Cardiff, its post town and railway station. There is no village, but only a few scattered farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of Leckwith, in the dioc. of Llandaff, in the patron. of the Marquis of Bute. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

COGDEAN, a hund. in the East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset. It contains the pars. of Hamworthy, Corfe-Mullen, Canford-Magna, Lytchett-Matravers, Lytchett-Minster, Sturminster-Marshall, and Charlton-Marshall, comprising about 32,960 acres.

COGDEAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Sturminster-Marshall, hund. of Cogdean, in the co. of Dorset, 2 miles S.W. of Wimborne Minster.

COGENHOE, or COOKNOE, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, in the co. of Northampton, 5 miles E. of Northampton. It is situated on the river Nen, which separates this parish from that of Ecton. The Peterborough railway passes near the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £245, in the patron. of G. Burnham, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is in a mixed style of architecture. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels.

COGGESHALL, GREAT, a par. and market town in the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 15 miles N.E. of Chelmsford, and 3 from the Kelvedon station of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated on the river Blackwater, and was a very ancient place, as proved by the discovery of a Roman villa and other remains. Some antiquaries suppose it to have been the station Ad Ansam, on the Roman road to Colchester, but it is more probable that it was the Canonium of Antoninus, with which its distance from Cæsaromagus exactly corresponds. At the Norman Survey it was held by Eustace Earl of Boulogne, whose heiress married King Stephen; hence it became a royal manor, and was made part of the demesne of the abbey of the Virgin Mary, founded here by Stephen's Queen Maud in 1142. At the Dissolution it was valued at £298 8s., and was given by Henry VIII. to Sir Thomas Seymour, brother of the Duke of Somerset. The bridge of three arches across the canal was built by King Stephen; and the inhabitants received the grant of a market and annual fair from Henry III. At one time Coggeshall had a large woollen manufacture, which has now entirely ceased, and the inhabitants are engaged in the silk-mills and agriculture. The great factory is for silk throwing, and fine velvet is to a small extent manufactured. The town, though irregularly laid out, contains good houses, and supports two banks. The old part is situated on low ground along the left bank of the river Blackwater, but the more recently built portion is on rising ground. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £260, in the patron. of Charles Du Cane, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a spacious building in the later English style, with square tower. It contains a handsome painted window in the N. chancel aisle, and some early brasses, one of 1470. The Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Quakers have chapels, and there are National, British, and infant schools. The parochial charities produce about £150 per annum. The market is on Thursday.

COGGESHALL, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Witham, in the co. of Essex, adjoining Great Coggeshall, of which it is generally considered a hamlet. It contains some ruins of the ancient abbey, and a church, built by the monks, now converted into a barn. The charities produce £11 per annum, and most of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring silk-mills.

COGGS, or COGGES, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, in the co. of Oxford, 1 mile E. of Witney, its post town. It is situated on the river Windrush. A black priory was founded here, A.D. 1160, as a cell to Fescamp, in Normandy. After the Conquest the manor was held by the Arsics, and passed from them to the Greys, of Rotherfield. In James I.'s time it was possessed by the earls of Downe, whose seat is now a farmhouse. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £64, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small Gothic structure, and contains monuments of the Blake family. The charities amount to £96 per annum. Here is a parochial school, and the Wesleyans have a chapel.

COGHLANSTOWN, COTLANSTOWN, or TULLY, a par. in the bar. of South Naas, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W.N.W. of Ballymore Eustace. It is situated on the river Liffey, and the road from Kildare to Castledermot. The living is incorporated with Ballymore, and forms part of the corps of Kildare bishopric; in the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is included in the union of Kildare and Rathangan. A house of the Knights Hospitallers existed here, of which some interesting ruins remain. In this parish lived General Sarsfield, who acted under James II. Some curious relics were found on removing his old house.

COGRAN, an island in Lough Erne, in the co. of Fermanagh, Ireland, 2 miles to the W. of Boa Island.

COGSHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, in the hund. of Bucklow, in the co. of Chester, 3 miles N.W. of Northwich, its post town. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Weaver.

COILANTANGLE, a ford on Loch Vennachar, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Callander.

COILSFIELD, a seat of the Earl of Eglinton, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Mauchline, and 10 N. of Ayr. It is situated in a pleasant spot, near the river Ayr, and is celebrated by Burns as the "Castle of Montgomery," where his "Highland Mary" lived. Coilsfield is derived from a neighbouring barrow, which was opened in 1837, and designated by tradition as the grave of "Auld King Coil," or "Cole."

COKEHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Inkberrow, in the co. of Worcester, 4 miles from Alcester. Here are traces of a nunnery, founded in 1260 by Isabella Countess of Warwick.

COKER, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Houndsborough, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Yeovil, its post town and railway station. It appears from the numerous specimens of tesselated pavement to have been a Roman settlement. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £212, in the patron of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a handsome cruciform structure. The income of Helyar's almshouses is £46 per annum. This village was the birthplace of Dampier, the celebrated navigator, who was born in 1652. Coker Court is the ancient seat of the Helyar family, who have another residence, called Sedgehill House, in Wilts. In the Civil War William Helyar raised a body of horse for King Charles I., at his own expense, and was afterwards obliged to compound for his lands by a fine of £1,522.

COKER, WEST, a par. in the co. of Somerset, adjoining the above. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £430, in the patron of R. Raven, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. The charities consist of Ruddock's almshouses, with an endowment of £15 per annum.

COLAN, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, in the co. of Cornwall, 3 miles S.W. of St. Columb, its post town, and 4 N. of St. Enoder. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £163, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Colan, is an ancient stone edifice, said to have been built by Bishop Bronescomb, of Exeter, about 1252, and contains brasses to the Cosworth and Blewitt families. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have places of worship. There are schools connected with the church. The principal landowner is Sir Richard Vivian, Bart. The Feast of St. Colan is held on the Wednesday following the first Sunday in May.

COLATON, or COLYTON RALEIGH, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Ottery St. Mary, its post town, and 11 S.E. of Exeter. It is situated on the river Otter. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £101, in the patron of the Dean of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a large Gothic building, with tower.

he Independents have a place of worship, and there a National school for boys. There are some small arities. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are lords f the manor.

COLBOURN, or COLBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of atterick, in the wap. of East Hang, in the North iding of the co. of York, 1½ mile from Hipswell, and from Richmond, its post town. It is situated on the ver Swale. Sir William Lawson is lord of the manor.

COLBY, or COLEBY, a par. in the hund. of South rpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 14 miles from Norich, and 2½ N.E. of Aylsham, its post town. It is tuated on a branch of the river Bure. The living is a ct.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £271, in the patron. Lord Suffield. The church is dedicated to St. Giles, d has an east window of ancient stained glass. The thes were commuted in 1839. The charities amount £20 per annum.

COLBY, a vil. in the par. of Kirk-Arbory, in the Isle Man, 1 mile from Castletown, and 11 miles S.W. of ouglas. The principal residence is Bell Abbey, near hich is part of a Druidical circle of stones.

COLBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleby St. Lawnce, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 1½ mile W. of Appleby, its post town and railway station. is situated on Colby Beck, a tributary of the river len. The charities produce about £3 per annum.

COLCATTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Steyning, in the of Sussex, 2 miles N. of Steyning.

COLCHESTER, a div. of the hund. of Lexden, in the of Essex. It contains the borough of Colchester, and pars. of Birch, Mount-Bures, Fordham, Dedham, rgholt, Boxted, Wivenhoe, East Donyland, Wormingrd, Horksley, Easthorpe, Langham, and Stanway, mprising about 32,240 acres.

COLCHESTER, a market town, parliamentary and unicipal borough, locally situated in the hund. of xden, in the co. of Essex, but exercising a separate risdiction. It is 22 miles from Chelmsford, and 51 m London, by the Great Eastern railway. There are anch lines to Ipswich and Bury, Sudbury, Harwich, d Norwich.—Colchester, according to all accounts, is a wn of the most remote antiquity, having been in existce prior to Julius Cæsar's invasion. It was called by e Romans Camelodunum, or Colonia; and if we may lge by the latter name, they must have regarded it as ir colony par excellence in Britain, in the same way that ovence was their province par excellence in Gaul. It pears that the name of Camelodunum was given before t of Colonia, and was derived from an altar dedicated Mars under the name of Camulus, by which also that inity is designated on some coins still extant of nobeline (the Cymbeline of Shakspeare), King of the inobantes, who, according to Dion Cassius, had his resiuce here. The name of Colonia does not occur till er Claudius's victories, which acquired for him the rname of Britannicus, and who, according to Tacitus, rrisoned Colchester with the second, ninth, and fourenth legions, which he designated the conquerors of itain. From this circumstance the name of the town s probably changed from Camelodunum to Colonia, it ing the first military colony in Britain. It is to be narked that both the Britons and the Saxons mutiled the word Colonia rather than the word Camelodunum, en adopting the Roman name. In Cymric it becomes er-Colun, and in Saxon Colne-Ceastre. It seems, hower, equally probable that the name of the place is rived from the river Colne, on which it stands, less this also be a contraction of Colonia. After the urn of Claudius to Rome, the Iceni, under Boadicea, ained temporary possession of the settlement; but m the extent of the Roman works, and from the mber of antiquities discovered, there is very good dence that the Romans again became masters. In hands of the Saxons, Colchester does not appear to ve been a place of very great importance; but it was a ourite stronghold of the Danes, who defended it ainst Edward the Elder in 921. The Saxon king was torious and the Danes were nearly all put to the sword. After the Conquest, it appears from Domesday Book that Eudo Dapifer, William's steward, was possessed of a great portion of Colchester and its neighbourhood. He built the castle, or, as seems more probable, rebuilt it on the site of a more ancient fortress. In the reign of John, Saher de Quincy, Earl of Winchester, seized the town, plundered it, and placed a garrison in the castle, which was, however, soon compelled to surrender to the king. In 1216, Colchester was occupied by the forces of Prince Louis, son of Philip II. of France, who had been invited into England by the barons to assist them against John. But after the first confirmation of the Magna Charta by Henry III., and the general pacification which ensued upon it, the position of Louis became untenable, and he retired to France. After the death of Edward VI., the inhabitants of Colchester displayed great zeal in the interest of Mary, and presented her with a silver cup and £20 in gold. She requited their enthusiasm with an enthusiasm of her own, and endeavoured to free the town from the pollution of heresy by the aid of the stake. A great variety of sects flourished, or at least existed, in Colchester at this time, and among them that of "The Family of Love," of which Sir Christopher Vitels was the chief apostle in Colchester, and Henry Nicholas, of Delft, the original founder. In the reign of Elizabeth many of the Flemings, driven from their own country by the Duke of Alva, found a resting place in Colchester, where they introduced the manufacture of "bays and says." At the commencement of the Civil War, Colchester took the side of the king—Lord Goring and Sir Charles Lucas defended the town against Fairfax, who attempted to carry it by a coup de main. The suburbs were forced after a long and bloody conflict; but the town itself was not taken until it had sustained a siege of eleven weeks. The provisions of the defenders were then exhausted, and the most favourable terms which could be obtained from the besiegers were "quarter to all below the rank of captain." Sir Charles Lucas and Sir George Lisle were shot; and Lord Capel was executed, after trial and condemnation. Colchester suffered severely from the plague in 1348, 1360, and 1665.—The town is built on the slope and summit of a hill, which rises gently from the Colne. The houses are generally well-built, and some of them have the appearance of antiquity. The approach to the town by the old London road is adorned with elegant modern houses, and forms the principal promenade of the inhabitants, commanding extensive views of the town itself and of the surrounding country. There is a good supply of water from the springs at the foot of Balkerne Hill. There are three bridges across the river Colne, which is navigable from the North Sea, 15 miles distant, to Hythe, the port and suburb of Colchester. A little town of neat and commodious dwellings has recently sprung up between St. John-street and Mill-street. The town-hall has been rebuilt by the architects, Blore and Brandon, on the original site chosen by Eudo Dapifer. The borough sessions are held here, and the basement is used as a gaol. A new corn-exchange has recently been erected, to meet the increasing demand for space. The building is an ornament to the town, and bears testimony to its prosperity. Of the other buildings, the principal are the theatre, the debtor's gaol, the Essex and Colchester Hospital, and the Asylum for Idiots. This last is close to the railway station, and was built as a railway hotel, but it proved to be too large for that purpose. It is now the great asylum for the eastern counties, Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk, and Cambridgeshire, and has accommodation for 100 patients. The Camp, which has accommodation for about 2,500 men, is now (1863) being largely increased, and barracks erected for cavalry.—The population of Colchester has been steadily increasing during the whole of the present century. In 1801 there were only 11,520 inhabitants; in 1851 there were 19,443; and in 1861 there were 23,809. In 1861 there were 4,447 inhabited houses, 180 uninhabited, and 31 building.—The oyster-fishery is an important branch of the trade of Colchester; the oysters of Colne-water have long been celebrated. The principal manufacture is silk; but malting, iron-founding, brass-founding, rope-making, and some minor branches of industry are likewise carried on. The borough was incorporated by Richard I. It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I. The municipal and parliamentary limits are co-extensive, including the twelve town parishes, and Berechurch, Greenstead, Lexden, and Mile-end. By the Municipal Act, the borough is divided into three wards; the municipal government is in the hands of a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors. Colchester has also a high steward, a recorder, deputy-recorder, and 6 justices of the peace. A county court, quarter sessions, and petty sessions are held at Colchester. The justices meet in the town-hall on Monday and Thursday in every week.—The borough of Colchester is divided into sixteen parishes—eight within the walls, four without, and four in the suburbs—all in the dioc. of Rochester. The living of All Saints is a rect.,* val. £240, in the gift of Balliol College, Oxford. The church was built before the year 1356; it is remarkable for a tower constructed almost wholly of flint. It has lately been extensively restored, both externally and internally. St. Botolph is a perpet. cur., val. £130, in the gift of Balliol College, Oxford. There was formerly a priory of St. Botolph, the church of which, built in the Norman style, is now in ruins. St. Giles's is a rect., val. £190, in the gift of Thomas Gepp, Esq. St. James's is a rect.,* val. £150, in the gift of the lord chancellor. It is the principal church within the walls, and was probably founded in the reign of Edward II. In the S. aisle is a monument to Arthur Winsley, Esq., alderman of the town, who founded almshouses for 12 poor persons in St. Botolph's parish. St. Leonard's is a rect.,* val. £130, in the gift of Balliol College, Oxford. St. Martin's is a rect.,* val. £147. The church, which has been recently rebuilt, is a cruciform structure of flint and Caen stone, consisting of nave, chancel, transepts, bell-tower, and porch. St. Mary's-at-the-Walls is a rect.,* val. £242, in the gift of the Bishop of Rochester. The church was destroyed during the siege of the town by the parliamentarians, but was rebuilt in 1713. It has a nave, two side aisles, and a square tower. St. Mary Magdalene's is a rect.,* val. £330, in the gift of the lord chancellor. St. Nicholas's is a rect.,* val. £135, in the gift of Balliol College, Oxford. St. Peter's is a vic.,* val. £285, in the gift of Simeon's Trustees. The church was founded before the Conquest, and is mentioned in Domesday Book. St. Runwald's is a rect.,* val. £140, in the gift of C. G. Round, Esq. The church was rebuilt in 1760, having previously been in ruins nearly 100 years. The Holy Trinity is a rect.,* val. £158, in the gift of Balliol College, Oxford. In the church is a monument to the Rev. William Gilberd, principal physician to Queen Elizabeth and James I. There is also one place of worship for Roman Catholics, two for Baptists, three for Independents, one for Wesleyans, one for Primitive Methodists, one for Unitarians, and one for the Society of Friends. Colchester has a free grammar school, founded in 1586; it receives twenty pupils, and sends a scholar to Cambridge. Parr was a master of this school; and Archbishop Harsnet, a native of Colchester, was educated here. St. Mary Magdalene's Hospital, originally founded by Eudo Dapifer as a hospital for lepers, is now united to the living of St. Mary Magdalene. There are several almshouses in Colchester, and the Union poorhouse.—Of the walls of Colchester only a small portion now remains; they appear to have been 7 or 8 feet in thickness, and to have enclosed an area of about 108 acres. On the high ground, to the N. of High-street, stands the castle; the outer walls of which are almost perfect, and are of very great thickness. The castle was built by Eudo Dapifer, probably on the site of a still older fortress; the materials are stone and pieces of Roman bricks. Of the abbey, also founded by Eudo, nothing now remains but a gateway, built in the 12th century. Many Roman remains have been found at Colchester and in the neighbourhood, especially coins and tesselated pavements. On the W. of the town a line of entrenchments, probably Roman, extends some distance from N. to S.—The new cattle market is situated at the foot of North Hill. The principal market day for corn and cattle is Saturday; there is also a market for poultry and fruit on Wednesday. Fairs are held on the 5th, 6th, 23rd, 24th, and 25th July, and on the 20th October.

COLD ASHBY. See Ashby, Cold, Northamptonshire.

COLD-ASHTON, a par. in the hund. of Pucklechurch, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles from Bath, its post town and railway station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £192, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Sayres. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone edifice in the perpendicular style. The charities produce £10 per annum, of which £5 is the revenue of a free school. W. Gore Langton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COLD ASTON. See Aston Blank, Gloucestershire.

COLD BLOW, the name of two hmlts., one in the co. of Pembroke, 1 mile S.E. of Narberth; and the other in Queen's co., Ireland, near Mountrath.

COLDCOATS, a tnshp. in the par. of Ponteland, in the W. div. of Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles N. of Ponteland, and 8 S.W. of Morpeth.

COLDCOTES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Little Mitton, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Clitheroe.

COLDCOTES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Seacroft, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles E. of Leeds.

COLD-DUNGHILLS, an ext. par. place in the borough of Ipswich, in the co. of Suffolk.

COLDEN COMMON, a vil. and district par. in the par. of Owsleybury, in the co. of Hants. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £13*, in the patron. of the Vicar of Twyford and Incumbent of Owsleybury alternately.

COLD HANWORTH, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 9 miles N.E. of Lincoln, its post town, and 5 from Wickenby railway station. It is situated on the river Langworth. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Hackthorn, in the dioc. of Lincoln, in the patron. of Colonel Cracroft. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice. Robert Amcotts, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COLD HARBOUR, the name of several homesteads and small places in various parts of England, but chiefly in Surrey and Herts.

COLD HATTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ewell Magna, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles N. of Wellington.

COLD HENLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Whitchurch, in the co. of Hants, 4 miles N. of Whitchurch.

COLD HESLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalton-le-Dale, in the northern div. of Easington ward, in the co. of Durham, 2 miles S.E. of Seaham, its post town and railway station. The charities produce £35 per annum. R. Pemberton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COLD HIENDLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Felkirk, in the wap of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1¼ miles N.W. of the Cudworth station of the North Midland railway. G. Wentworth, Esq., is lord of the manor. Here is a large reservoir which supplies the Barnsley canal.

COLD HIGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Towcester, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles N.W. of Towcester, its post town, and 5 from Blisworth railway station. It contains the hmlts. of Fosters-Booth, Grimscote, and Potcote. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £467, in the patron. of the Earl of Pomfret. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is a stone building in the Gothic style of architecture. The Duke of Grafton is lord of the manor.

COLD-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Almondbury, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile S.E. of Huddersfield.

COLDHURST, a vil. in the par. of Prestwich, in the co. of Lancaster, near Manchester. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

COLDINGHAM, a par. in the co. of Berwick, Scotnd, 10 miles N.W. of Berwick, and 44 from Edinrgh. It is bounded on the N. and E. by the German ean and the pars. of Eyemouth and Ayton; on the S. the pars. of Chirnside and Buncle; and on the W. the pars. of Abbey St. Bathans, Oldhamstocks, and ckburnspath. It extends 9 miles from E. to W., d 8 miles from N. to S. The surface is generally even, being traversed by valleys running E. and W., e ranges of hills bounding the valleys terminate in the ffs at St. Abb's Head. The road from Berwick to Edinrgh passes through the parish, and the North British ilway traverses the S.W. side, and has stations at ant's House and Reston. Coldingham Loch, a mile W. of St. Abb's Head, is remarkable for maintaining e same level, although without any apparent supply outlet for its waters. At Coldingham Sands the seaast is smooth, but near St. Abb's Head the coast is gged, and has many caves, formerly the resort of nugglers. On the hills to the W. and S. of St. Abb's ad, are remains of ancient camps; one of these, on nsheuch, is surrounded by lofty precipices; another, Wardlaw Bank, is surrounded by four trenches. The ins of Fast Castle, on an insulated rock near St. Abb's ad, are interesting from their antiquity, and from ving been the stronghold, in the reign of James VI., Logan of Restalrig, one of those engaged in the wrie conspiracy. On the S. side of the village of ldingham are some remains of the celebrated Priory Coldingham, founded in 1098 by Edgar King of Scotnd, and which, after passing through many fortunes, s destroyed by the English in 1545, under the Earl Hertford. The village of Coldingham stands in a lley one mile W. from the sea. It consists of a few rows houses, and is a burgh of barony under the Earl of me. In ancient times it seems from the remains of uses to have been more extensive. Some of the inbitants are fishers. The living is in the presb. of Chirn-, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has stipend of £167. The parish church is supposed to ve been built in the 12th century. There are also chapel of ease and a Free church at Houndwood, and United Presbyterian church in the village of Coldgham.

COLD KIRBY, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, in North Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles E. of Thirsk, post town, and 6 W. of Helmsley. The living is a pet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £63, in the patron. the Hon. T. Duncombe. The church, dedicated to Michael, was rebuilt in 1842 at the expense of the Thomas Duncombe, Esq. The Wesleyans meet in schoolroom. There are week-day and Sunday ools. The Hon. T. Duncombe is lord of the manor.

COLDMEECE, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, in northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of fford, 3 miles W. of Stone, 7 from Stafford, and 1½ of the Norton Bridge station of the London and rth-Western railway. It is situated near the river ece.

COLD-NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, in co. of Essex, 6 miles S. of Maldon, its post town and way station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of chester, val. £328, in the patron. of the Charterse, London, the governors of which possess the morial rights. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is neat structure, erected in 1855. There is a National ool.

COLD-NORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chebsey, in southern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of fford, 2 miles E. of Hilcot. The Norton Bridge railway station on the London and North-Western line is his township. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There a National schools, and several small charities.

COLD-NORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Chipping rton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles N.E. of Chipping rton. An Austine Priory was founded here in the n of Henry II. by William Fitz-Alan, the site of h was given at the Dissolution to Brasenose Colge, Oxford.

COLD OVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 4 miles W. of Oakham, its post town and railway station, and 7½ S.E. of Melton Mowbray. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £340, in the patron. of T. Frewen, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure, with tower and steeple. There is a school and an asylum for female orphans.

COLDRED, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 5 miles N.W. of Dover, its post town and railway station. It is spelled Colret in Domesday Book, and is supposed to have been named after Ceolred, King of Mercia, who fought a battle here with Ina of Wessex. The living is a vic. annexed to the vic.* of Sibertswold, in the dioc. of Canterbury, and in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Pancras, is a small structure, situated on the site of a Roman or Saxon camp covering two acres. Tradition relates that this camp was formed by Ceolred, but Roman remains have been found in the vicinity, and recently, whilst making a road, a well above 300 feet deep was discovered.

COLDREY, an ext. par. place in the Alton div. of the upper half of the hund. of Alton, in the co. of Hants, 5 miles N.E. of Alton.

COLDRIDGE. See COLERIDGE, Devon.

COLD ROWLEY, a vil. in the co. of Durham, 6 miles N. of Walsingham. It is a station on the Stockton and Darlington and South Durham and Lancashire Union railway.

COLDSTEAD, an ext. par. place, in the hmlt. of Newbell, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles W. of Wragby.

COLDSTREAM, a par. containing a town of the same name, in the co. of Berwick, Scotland, 14 miles S.W. of Berwick, and 48 from Edinburgh. It was anciently called Lennel or Leinhall, and is bounded on the E. and S. by the par. of Ladykirk and the river Tweed, on the W. by the par. of Eccles, and on the N. by that of Swinton. Its greatest length in a northerly direction is 6 miles, and its extreme breadth 4 miles. The soil is rich and fertile, and for the most part brought into cultivation. The district is less rainy than others in the neighbourhood, as the clouds which would otherwise discharge themselves over it are attracted by the Cheviot and Lammermoor hills. There are several quarries of good sandstone. In the neighbourhood the Tweed is fordable, and by that passage many English and Scottish armies have passed in former times. Here a truce was concluded in 1491 between the two nations; and here also General Monk had his headquarters before marching into England at the Restoration, and here he raised the regiment which still bears the name of the Coldstream Guards. The principal seats are Lennel House, belonging to the Earl of Haddington; Lees, the seat of Sir J. Majoribanks, Bart.; The Hirsel, that of the Earl of Home; Castlelaw, and Milne-Graden. This par. is in the presb. of Chirnside, and in the patron. of the Earl of Haddington. The minister has a stipend of £233. The town of Coldstream contains a Free church, and two United Presbyterian churches. The town stands on the road from Kelso to Berwick, at the five-arched bridge over the Tweed. It is well built, has an agreeable appearance, and is well supplied with water by the bounty of Sir J. Majoribanks. A handsome mechanics' institute was erected in 1862. Coldstream is a burgh of barony, the bailie being appointed by the Earl of Haddington and the Earl of Home, the two superiors. Irregular marriages used to be contracted here as at Gretna Green. A market is held every fourth Monday.

COLDSTREAM, NEW, OR LENNEL NEW TOWN, a vil. in the par. of Coldstream, in the co. of Berwick, Scotland.

COLDSWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, in the lathe of St. Augustine, and hund. of Ringslow, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Ramsgate.

COLD WALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Stannington, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles S. of Morpeth.

COLD WALTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bury, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 4 miles S.E. of Petworth, and 2 S.W. of the Pulborough station of the Mid-Sussex line. It is situated on the river Arun, and contains the tythg. of Watersfield. The living is a cur.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £56, in the patron. of the bishop. The register commences with the year 1560.

COLD WELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkwhelpington, in the co. of Northumberland, 9 miles S.W. of Rothbury, and 1½ N.E. of Kirkwhelpington. The Duke of Northumberland is the owner of the soil.

COLD WESTON, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Lower Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles N. of Ludlow, its post town. There is no village and the parish contains only 670 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £100, in the patron. of F. H. Cornewall, Esq. The church is an ancient stone structure.

COLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Pitcombe, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Bruton.

COLE, a tythg. in the par. of St. Paul, Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile S. of Malmesbury.

COLE, a tributary of the river Tame, rising on the N.W. border of Warwick.

COLEBATCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop's Castle, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile S. of Bishop's Castle.

COLEBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Crediton, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles W. of Crediton, its post town and railway station. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £200, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an old building. In this parish are ruins of the five chapels of Coplestone, Land's Head, Horwell, Hooke, and Wolmstone. There are parochial schools for both sexes. The charities produce £8.

COLEBROOK, or DRUMANY, a river rising on the borders of Monaghan, Ireland, which, after a course of 25 miles, falls into Lough Erne. On its banks are Brookeborough, Maguiresbridge, and Lisnaskea.

COLEBROOKDALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Broseley, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile N. of Broseley. It is situated on the river Severn, under the Wrekin, and is rich in iron, coal, limestone, and other minerals. The glen is crossed by a handsome cast-iron bridge, erected in 1779. It has a span of 100 feet, with a rise of 40 feet, and weighs 380 tons.

COLEBURY, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, in the co. of Hants, 4 miles W. of Southampton.

COLEBY, a par. in the higher div. of the wap. of Boothby Graffo, part of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 6½ miles S. of Lincoln. It is situated upon the Roman road Ermine Street, and to the E. of the river Brant. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £126, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is partly in the Norman and partly in the early English styles of architecture, with several additions of later date, and is in good repair. It possesses a beautiful spire and font. The charities amount to £6 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are free schools for both sexes. Coleby Hall, the residence of G. Bland, Esq., is the property of Sir Charles Tempest, Bart., who is lord of the manor. It is a handsome mansion in the Elizabethan style, and possesses a temple, by Sir W. Chambers, in imitation of that of Romulus and Remus, at Rome, and also one in the Doric style to the Earl of Chatham's memory. Roman remains have been found here.

COLEBY, a hmlt. in the par. of West Halton, in the northern div. of the hund. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles W. of Barton-on-Humber. It is situated near the creek at the mouth of the river Trent.

COLEDALE, or PORTINGSCALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosthwaite, in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 1½ mile N.W. of Keswick, its post town. The heights command good views of the Bassenthwaite and Derwent lakes.

COLEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Leyny, in the co. of Sligo, Ireland, 2 miles from Aclare.

COLEFORD, a market town and district par. in the par. of Newland, hund. of St. Briavel's, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles E. of Monmouth. It is situated in Dean Forest, near Offa's Dyke, and was the scene, in 1643, of a skirmish between Lord Herbert and a party of Roundheads, in which the latter were dispersed. The town is small, but well built, with a market-house and schools. It is one of the polling-places for the county and a petty sessions town. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries and iron-mines. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £160, in the patron. of the bishop. The old church was destroyed in the Civil War, and not rebuilt till the time of Queen Anne. The present church is a stone edifice, with tower, dedicated to St. John. The Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans have places of worship, and there are several schools. The market day is Friday. Fairs for cattle and wool are held on the 20th June and the last Friday in August.

COLEFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilmersdon, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles N.W. of Frome. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £120, in the patron. of the vicar.

COLEHAM, a tnshp. and chplry. in the borough of Shrewsbury, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile from Salop. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, in the patron. of the Earl of Tankerville.

COLEHILL; there are two hmlts. of this name: one in the co. of Longford, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Ballymahon; the other in the co. of Meath, 3 miles S.W. of Innfield.

COLEMAN'S LEAP, a ravine near the upper lake of Killarney, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland; so called from the tradition that a man named Coleman leaped the chasm, and there are marks pointed out in the solid stone which bear some resemblance to the impressions of human feet.

COLEMERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Ellesmere.

COLEMORE, or COLMER, a par. in the hundred of East Meon (upper half), in the co. of Hants, 5 miles N.W. of Petersfield, and 6 S. of Alton, its post town. It is pleasantly situated near Wolmere Forest, and possesses some beautiful scenery. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the cur. of Privett Dean annexed, £550, in the patron. of Mrs Hervey. The church is a small building, with tower. Here is a National school. Sir James Tichbourne holds the greater part of the land, which is principally arable.

COLE-ORTON, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 9 miles W. of Loughborough and 2 E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town. It is situated near the Leicester railway and Charnwood Forest. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £267, in the patron. of Sir G. H. Beaumont, Bart. The church, dedicated to St Mary, is a stone edifice, with a fine spire, and contains tombs of the Beaumont family. It has been recently restored, and possesses a handsome stained-glass window from Rouen; also one by Harceman of the Transfiguration. The floor of the chancel is laid with Minton's tiles, and a stone screen, erected to the memory of William Sherwin, Esq., separates the belfry from the nave. The church contains a handsome stone pulpit, the gift of the widow of Archbishop Howley, and a font given by the parishioners. Here are free schools for both sexes, with a hospital for six widows attached, founded by Thomas Viscount Beaumont in 1701. There are several small charities. Cole-Orton Hall, the seat of Sir G. Beaumont, is a fine edifice, and has been recently much improved by the addition of an extra story. On the seats in the grounds are engraved some of Wordsworth's productions, and lines to the memory of the poet Beaumont.

COLE PARK, a tythg. in the par. of St. Paul, Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile S. of Malmesbury.

COLERAINE, a bar. in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The Atlantic bounds it on the N., the co. of Antrim and the libs. of Coleraine on the E., the bar. of Loughinsholin on the S., and that of Keen-ght on the W. It contains the pars. of Agivey, Aghadowey, Dunboe, Desertoghill, Killowen, Errigal, nd Macosquin, and parts of Tamlaght O'Crilly and Kilrea. Its length is 17 miles, its greatest breadth ver 8 miles, and it has a superficial extent of nearly 6,308 acres. The soil is for the most part good, with me barren and cold upland. The Bann traverses the astern boundary.

COLERAINE, the north-eastern libs. of, in the co. f Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, comprise the orth-eastern portion of the county, surrounding the wn to the extent of 3 Irish miles, and are bounded y the ocean on the N., by the co. of Antrim on the E. nd S., and the bar. of Coleraine on theW. They con-in the pars. of Coleraine and Agherton, and parts of allyrashane, Ballymoney, Kildollagh, and Ballywillin.

COLERAINE, a par., maritime town, and parlia-entary borough, in the north-eastern libs. of Coleraine, the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 27 iles to the E. of Derry, 47 N. of Belfast, and 145 N. Dublin. It is situated on the river Bann, about 4 iles from its influx into the sea, and 5 miles from ortrush, which serves as its shipping port, though ssels of 200 tons can discharge at the quay of Cole-ine. Steamers go to Liverpool, Londonderry, and asgow. A bridge unites the Ballymena and Portrush d the Londonderry and Coleraine railways, imme-tely below the town, thus connecting it with Belfast d Dublin. The 3,000 acres that are in the town and s. of Coleraine, were taken off the co. of Antrim in 13, when they were purchased by the Hon. Irish ciety of London from Sir Randall McDonnell. At e Revolution the town was taken by James II.—Pre-ous to the Union it returned two members to the ish parliament, but subsequently, its limits being uch reduced within "the liberties," it returns one mber to the imperial parliament. The constituency 1859 was 274. The municipal area comprises 207 tute acres, including 1,079 houses, inhabited by a pulation of 5,628, which, according to the census 1861, were thus distributed: Established Church, 24, Roman Catholics, 1,455, Presbyterians, 2,178, thodists, 202, Independents, 113, Baptists, 127, other suasions, 29. The town was anciently governed by corporation, chartered in 1613, but its powers were nsferred to a board of 18 commissioners, under the wns Improvement Act. The property of the ex-tinguished corporation, amounting in 1844 to £1,335, efly arising from rents, and the tolls and customs, now vested in the Town Commissioners, who have management of the paving, lighting, water sup-, &c. The gas-works have lately been erected.—e town itself is large, and on the whole well lt, consisting of five principal streets, a spacious are, called the Diamond, formerly used as a market-ce, and several smaller streets. A new townhall been erected in the Diamond, at a cost of £5,000, d a new bank on the N. side by the Northern Bank-g Company; the Provincial Bank and the Belfast nking Company also have branches in the town. e other public buildings are a court-house, market-use, Union-workhouse, custom-house, savings-bank, endowed school, and a very handsome National del school in Waterside, adjoining the town. On W. side of the river are the suburbs of Killowen d Waterside, with which Coleraine is connected by a ndsome stone bridge of three arches, 96 yards in gth by 32 feet in breadth, which cost £14,500. The w market-place is situated on the E. side of the town, d is commodiously fitted up for the various descrip-ns of agricultural produce brought there for sale.—eraine has two parish churches, two Roman Catholic apels, three chapels for Presbyterians, and one ch for Methodists, Baptists, and Independents. The ing is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £414, the patron. of the Hon. Irish Society. The church, ch was built in 1614, has several tombs and monu-nts of the first English families who settled here. e church of Killowen, also situated within the town, is built on the site of an ancient priory, close to where the castle stood. Besides the Irish Society's free school and the Model National school, there are several denominational and private schools.—This town has been long celebrated for its manufacture of a fine kind of linen, known by the name of "Coleraines," the annual sales of which were estimated to amount to about £600,000, but latterly this branch of manufacture has fallen off, being principally transferred to Belfast. The other manufactures carried on here are those of hard and soft soap, candles, and leather. There are also a large ale brewery and a distillery in the town. The general trade of the port, which is a bonding port, with Portrush as a sub-port, is very considerable, chiefly in grain, meal, pork, butter, linen-cloth, whisky, and salmon; this last is very productive, the number of salmon taken in the river Bann being in 1843, 21,660, and in 1844, 15,011, of which latter number 13,464 were exported. There are upwards of 300 persons employed as water-bailiffs in the protection of the river and its tributaries; the fishing of which is farmed by the Irish Society to Mr. Allen for £1,200 per annum. The imports are timber, iron, barilla, ashes, coal, and salt.—Coleraine is a quarter sessions and chief police town, head of an excise district, and bonding port, with its customs, excise, and stamp offices. Petty sessions are held by the magistrates of the district every alternate Friday, and the board of guardians meets every Saturday. Two newspapers are published in the town.—Coleraine is the seat of a presbytery, consisting of twenty congregations, and head of a Poor-law Union of twenty electoral divisions.—Market days are Monday, Wednesday, and Friday for grain, besides a general market on Saturday. Fairs, for the sale of cattle, &c., are held on the 12th May, 5th July, and 3rd November.

COLERIDGE, a hund. in the southern portion of the co. of Devon, contains the boroughs of Dartmouth and Totnes, and the pars. of Ashprington, Blackawton, Charleton, Chivelstone, Cornworthy, Dittisham, Dodbrooke, Halwell, Harberton, St. Petrox, South Pool, East Portlemouth, St. Saviour, Sherford, Slapton, Stokefleming, Townstall, and part of Loddiswell, comprising 50,090 acres.

COLERIDGE, or COLDRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton, in the co. of Devon, 10 miles N.W. of Crediton, its post town, and 3 S. of the Eggesford station on the North Devon branch of the South-Western railway. It is situated near the river Taw. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £142, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone edifice in the perpendicular style. There are schools for boys and girls. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor.

COLERNE, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, in the co. of Wilts, 8 miles S.W. of Chippenham, and 2 N. of the Box station of the Great Western line. The vil. is situated on the ancient Fosse Way, and was burnt in 1770, but has been rebuilt. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £92, in the patron. of the Warden of New College, Oxford. The church, which is situated on a hill, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It is an ancient edifice, partly in the Gothic and partly in the Norman styles of architecture. The charities amount to £32 per annum, besides 25 acres of allotment ground. The Independents have a place of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes. The manorial rights are vested in the scholars of New College, Oxford. There are ancient camps at Colerne Down and Colerne Park.

COLESBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 7½ miles from Cheltenham, its post town, and the same distance from the Cirencester railway station. It is situated near the head of the river Thames, and under Colesborne Pen Hill, one of the highest in the county. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £127, in the patron. of J. H. Elwes, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure in the early perpendicular style of architecture, and has been recently repaired. Here is a free school, built and maintained by John H. Elwes, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Colesborne House is a fine structure in the Elizabethan style. Remains of a Roman villa have been found.

COLESHILL, a par. in the hund. of Shrivenham, in the co. of Berks, 4 miles W. of Faringdon, its post town. It is situated on the river Cole, near the Great Western railway, which has a station at Faringdon-road, about 6 miles distant. Part of the par. extends into Wiltshire. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £311, in the patron. of the Earl of Radnor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a beautiful ancient edifice. It contains stained-glass windows, and a monument by Rysbrach. Here are schools for both sexes, supported by the Earl of Radnor and the rector, also a charity for the apprenticing of youths. Coleshill House, delightfully situated, is the seat of the Earl of Radnor, to whom it gives title of baron; it was built in 1650 by the celebrated Inigo Jones, and contains some good paintings.

COLESHILL, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Amersham and partly in the par. of Beaconsfield, in the hund. of Dacorum, in the co. of Bucks, 1½ mile S.W. of Amersham, and 4 from Windsor, its post town and railway station. It is situated on an eminence near the river Cole, from which it derives its name. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of earthenware. From the summit of the hill there is an extensive view over six counties, including the seat of the Earl of Bridgwater, Windsor Castle, Bushey Heath, Harrow-on-the-Hill, Hampstead, St. Paul's Cathedral, Ascot racecourse, and the Surrey hills. The chief residence is Coleshill House, the seat of Major Eyles, which occupies the site of a still more ancient mansion, known in history as "Ould Stock," the property of the famous Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford. The manor afterwards passed to the Waller family, and Edmund Waller, the poet, was born here. Near the manor-house stands Waller's Oak, a fine old tree measuring 10 yards in circumference, and under its shade the poet is said to have written some of his choicest pieces.

COLESHILL, a par. and market town in the hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 10 miles E. of Birmingham, and 11½ N.W. of Coventry. It has a railway station on the Midland line. It is a small market, post, and petty-sessions town, and a polling and election place for the northern parliamentary division of Warwickshire. The town, which mainly consists of one long street, running from N. to S., is pleasantly situated on an eminence near the river Cole, over which is a bridge. It is well lighted with gas, and contains a market-house, bank, Union poorhouse, and police station, besides a handsome reading-room, built by the vicar for the use of Coleshill Institute. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £718, in the patron. of G. D. W. Digby, Esq. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a commodious and ancient structure in the decorated English style, with octagonal crocketed spire. It contains monuments and brasses of the Clinton and Digby families, and a beautiful Norman font. It was restored in 1858 at the cost of Mr. Digby and his brother, the vicar. There is a free grammar school, founded by the Digbys, and National and infant schools for boys and girls. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel, and there are almshouses for poor widows. This place gives the title of viscount to the Earl of Digby, who is the chief landowner. Market day is Wednesday, and there are cattle fairs held on the Monday before Shrove Tuesday, the 6th of May, and the first Monday in the months of January, July, and October.

COLESHILL, a hund. in the co. of Flint, contains the boroughs of Flint and Holywell, and the pars. of Northop, Cilcen, Halkin, Whitford, and Holywell.

COLESHILL FAWR, a tnshp. in the par. of Holywell, in the co. of Flint, near Holywell.

COLEY LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Brampton Bierlow, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N. of Rotherham.

COLEYS, a chplry. in the par. of Halifax, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N.E. of Halifax. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150 in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax.

COLFORD, a postal vil. in the hund. of Crediton, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles from Crediton, and 6 from Exeter.

COLGAGH, a small lough in the co. of Sligo, Ireland.

COLHAM GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Hillingdon in the co. of Middlesex, 2 miles S. of Uxbridge. At the Conquest it was granted to Roger de Montgomery.

COLINSBURGH, a small town in the par. of Kilconquhar, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 10 miles S.E. of Cupar. It is a burgh of barony under the Balcarres family, and received its name from Colin, third Earl Balcarres. This town is noted for its salubrity. Here is an United Presbyterian church. A weekly corn market is held on Wednesday, and two annual fairs on the second Friday in June and October.

COLINTON, or COLLINGTON a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Edinburgh. It is bounded by the pars. of Currie, Penicuick, Glencross, Lasswade, Corstorphine, St. Cuthbert's, and Liberton. It is about 4 miles in length from N. to S., by 3¾ miles from E. to W. The surface descends in a northern direction from the northern branch of the Pentlands, which bound the parish on the S., and is for the most part highly cultivated. Sandstone is quarried at Redhall and at Hailes. The water of Leith intersects part of the parish, and the Union canal crosses the northern district. At Slateford there is a station of the Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. The village of Colinton is situated near the centre of the parish, which contains corn, paper, flax, and other mills. This par. is in the presb. of Edinburgh, and in the patron. of the male communicants. The minister has a stipend of £267. There is a Free church at Colinton, and an United Presbyterian church at Slateford. The chief seats are Colinton House, Bonally Castle, Craig Lockhart House, Comiston House, and Dreghorn Castle.

COLIPOLE, a vil. in the par. of Kilbrandon, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is situated on the coast of Luing Island, opposite the Isle of Mull.

COLKIRK, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles S. of Fakenham, its post town, where is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The height on which this village is situated commands a fine view. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the rect. of Stibbard annexed, £788, in the patron. of the Marquis of Townshend. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small structure with a nave and chancel, and contains memorials of the Timperley family. The charities amount to £33. Marquis Townshend is lord of the manor.

COLL, one of the Hebrides islands, in the district of Mull, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, 9 miles W. of Ardnamurchan Point. It is 14 miles long, with a breadth of about 2½ miles. One-third of the surface is pasture, meadow, or corn land, the remainder being for the most part barren. None of the hills are more than 300 feet in height, and there are numerous shallow lakes. Loch Iron and Breachacha, at the S. side of the island, afford tolerable anchorage; the rest of the coast is rocky. The possession of this island was long and stoutly contested by the Macleans of Coll and the Macneils of Barra. Remains of Danish forts and religious houses exist. The greater part of the island was lately purchased by Mr. Stewart, who has greatly improved the land by draining, and erected comfortable farmhouses. The Ayrshire cattle are fast taking the place of the native black cattle, so that there is now a great deal of dairy produce exported, and many sheep and pigs are annually reared for the Glasgow market. An assistant to the parish minister of Tyree officiates as minister, at a stipend of £95. There is also a Free church.

COLL AND TYREE, a par. in the district of Mull, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It includes the islands of Coll and Tyree, together with a few adjacent small islands. There is steam communication twice a week between these islands and Glasgow. The par. is in the

esb. of Mull and synod of Argyle, and in the patron. of e Duke of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of 347. There are two Independent and two Baptist apels in Tyree, with accommodation for 800 persons. hey are under a pastoral charge. There are two rochial and five non-parochial schools. The parishes ere united in 1818. They contain many remains of old urches or chapels.

COLLACE, a par. and vil. in the co. of Perth, Scotnd. The vil. of Collace is 8 miles N.E. of Perth. The r. is bounded by Forfarshire on the N.E., and on the her sides by the pars. of Cargill, St. Martin's, Kinird, and Abernyte, and is 2 miles in length by the me in breadth. The northern div. is flat and highly ltivated, while the southern div. includes part of the dlaw hills, which, with the exception of Dunsinnan, are vered with heath. The latter hill, rising 800 feet from base in a conical form, is verdant, and commands a e view of Blairgowrie, Strathmore, and the Carse of wrie. On its summit there was formerly a stronghold, ces of which still exist. It is attributed to Macbeth, ose supposed grave is still pointed out, and known the name of the "Long Man's Grave." Two quarries sandstone are worked. Some of the inhabitants are ployed in weaving linen, but the greater part in ricultural pursuits. The road from Perth to Cuparigus crosses the parish, and the Woodside station of e Scottish Midland Junction railway is within an easy stance. This par. is in the presb. of Perth, and in the tron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of 56. There is also a Free church. Dunsinnan House is e seat of J. M. Nairne, Esq., sole heritor of the parish.

COLLATON, a hmlt. in the par. of Broadhembury, the co. of Devon, 6 miles E. of Collumpton.

COLLATON, a hmlt. in the par. of Malborough, in co. of Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge.

COLLAVEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Sourton, in the of Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Okehampton.

COLLEGE, a par. in the district of Glasgow city, in co. of Lanark, Scotland. See GLASGOW.

COLLEGE MILL, an ext. par. place in the Winster Soke lib. of the co. of Hants.

COLLEGE OF ROSEISLE, a hmlt. in the par. of ffus, in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of gin. It is situated near the coast of Burghead Bay.

COLLEGE PRECINCTS, an ext. par. place in the y of Worcester, in the co. of Worcester.

COLLEGE PRECINCTS, an ext. par. place in the y of Gloucester, in the co. of Gloucester.

COLLEGE WHARF, an ext. par. place in the Winster Soke lib. of the co. of Hants.

COLLESSIE, a par. in the district of Cupar, in the co. Fife, Scotland. It extends in a south-easterly direction 7 miles from the town of Auchtermuchty, which nds it on the W. The river Eden forms part of southern boundary, and was straightened in 1787. e north-western districts slope upwards towards the ndary, and are very fertile; the central division is ly, and has several square miles of fir plantations. adow and pasture lands occupy the site of the Rossie h, which was drained in 1740. Whinstone, sandne, and shell with clay marl are found, whinstone being gely used for building. The climate is very salubous. The principal mansions are Rankeilour, Pitlair, loch, Lochie Head, and Rossie. The road from chtermuchty to Cupar traverses the parish in an terly direction, and the Perth section of the Edinburgh Northern railway traverses it to the N.W., and has ions at Ladybank and Collessie. Sir James Melville, courtier, in the time of Queen Mary, had an estate this parish, and Dr. Hugh Blair commenced his istry here in 1742. The village of Collessie is half a S. of the northern boundary of the parish, and 5 s to the W. of Cupar. This par. is in the presb. of par, and in the patron. of Johnston of Lathrisk. The ister has a stipend of £250. The parish church is dern, and seated for 600. There is also a Free church. salary of the parochial schoolmaster is £60, with more from fees.

COLLEYWESTON, a par. in the hund. of Willybrook, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles S.W. of Stamford, its post town, and 6½ from Wansford. It is situated near the river Welland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £252, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was built in the 14th century of barnack stone, and is in good repair. Here are several slate-quarries. The Marquis of Exeter is lord of the manor.

COLLFRYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, in the hund. of Deythur, in the co. of Montgomery, 7 miles E. of Llanfyllin.

COLLIER LAW, a collier vil. in Darlington ward, in the western div. of the co. of Durham, about 4 miles N.W. of Wolsingham. It is situated on a bleak common, which lies about 1,700 feet above the sea.

COLLIERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, in the western div. of Chester ward, in the co. of Durham, 10 miles S.W. of Newcastle, and 11 N.W. of Durham. Gateshead is its post town. It is situated near the Stanhope and Tyne railway, and includes the hmlts. of Pontop and Dipton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. Pontop Pike lies nearly 1,000 feet above the sea.

COLLIER'S END, a hmlt. in the par. of Standon, in the co. of Herts, 4 miles N. of Ware.

COLLIGAN, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Dungarvan. The parish extends along the Colligan rivulet, and is traversed by the road from Dungarvan to Clonmel. Limestone exists in some parts. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £33, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Clonea and Kilgobinet. There is no church.

COLLIN, a mountain situated at the extremity of the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Lisburn. On its summit, which is 1,419 feet above the sea, is a very large cairn, built of small stones, entirely overgrown with verdure.

COLLIN, a vil. in the par. of Torthorwald, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 3½ miles E. of Dumfries. It is situated on the road from that town to Annan.

COLLINGBOURNE DUCIS, a par. in the hund. of Elstub, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Ludgershall. It has acquired the suffix "Ducis" from its having at one period belonged to the duchy of Lancaster, before it came to the Seymours. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £716, in the patron. of the Marquis of Aylesbury. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with tower, for the repair of which the late rector left £100. The chief residence is Collingbourne Lodge, situated 2 miles E. of the village.

COLLINGBOURNE KINGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles N. of Ludgershall, and 11 S.E. of Marlborough, its post town. It is situated on the river Bourne, and contains the hmlts. of Southton, Brunton, Kingston, and Augton. At one time it belonged to the Collingbournes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £261, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a brick and stone building, with tower. It contains monuments to the Pile family. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes. Here is a meet for Mr. A. Smith's hounds. John Norris, the divine, was born in the rectory-house, the living at that time being held by his father.

COLLINGBOURNE SUTTON, a hmlt. 1 mile S. of the above.

COLLINGHAM, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles S.W. of Wetherby, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Wharfe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £414, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Wheler. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient stone edifice; it was restored in 1841. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village, and there are endowed schools for both sexes, in which sixteen children are gratuitously instructed. The parochial charities produce £31 10s. per annum. The manorial rights are held by the trustees of the late Lady Hastings.

COLLINGHAM, NORTH, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Newark, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles from Newark, its post town, and 8 from Southwell. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway, and is 1½ miles from the Newark station on the Great Northern line. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £190, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and was formerly included in the archdeac. of Nottingham and dioc. of York, but now belongs to Lincoln. The parochial charities produce £25 per annum. In the village is a foundation school, with an endowment of £30 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1790.

COLLINGHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the wap. of Newark, in the co. of Nottingham, close to the Collingham station of the London and North-Western railway, and 5 miles from the Newark station of the Great Northern line. Newark is its post town. It is situated on the ancient Fosse Way, and contains the hmlts. of Deanthorpe and Brough, the latter occupying the site of the Roman Crocolana. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £418, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and was formerly included in the dioc. of York. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. British antiquities were found when the barrow at Pottershill was opened. The chief residence is Collingham Hall, situated about half a mile S. of the village.

COLLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Boxash, in the co. of Hereford, 12 miles from the Woofferton railway station, and 4 N. of Bromyard, its post town. The subsoil is limestone, and part of the land is in hops. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Edwin Ralph, in the dioc. of Hereford, in the patron. of W. L. Childe, Esq. The old church, dedicated to All Saints, having fallen into decay, a new church was erected in 1856 in the early English style, on a more central site. Edmund Higginson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COLLINGTREE, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles S. of Northampton. The North-Western railway passes near the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £331, in the patron. of the Rev. B. Hill. The church, dedicated to St. Columb, is a well-built structure in the Saxon style of architecture, with a tower. The charities amount to £3 per annum. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel.

COLLIN'S GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Poulton-le-Fylde, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles W. of Newton, and 18 miles from Manchester. It is a station on the Liverpool and Manchester railway, and is near Parr Moss.

COLLINSTOWN, a small market town in the par. of Kilcumney, in the bar. of Fore, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Castle Pollard. It is situated near Lough Lene, and contains a police station, market-house, and dispensary; the last is within the Mullingar Poor-law Union. The principal residence is Barbavilla. Petty sessions are held here. Saturday is market day, and fairs are held on the 8th May and the 30th October.

COLLISTON, a vil. in the par. of Slains, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, a short distance N. of Newburgh. The inhabitants are fishers, and cure great quantities of cod and haddock.

COLLISTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Vigeans, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Arbroath. It has a station on the Arbroath and Forfar railway. There is a Free church. Colliston House, in the neighbourhood, is an old mansion now belonging to the family of Chaplin, and said to have been built by Cardinal Beaton.

COLLITON ROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Holy Trinity, borough of Dorchester, in the co. of Dorset, half a mile N. of Dorchester.

COLLOCHBURN, a vil. in the par. of Cambuslang, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Glasgow. It is chiefly inhabited by weavers.

COLLON, a par. and post vil. in the bars. of Ferrard and Upper Slane, in the cos. of Louth and Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Ardee, and 37 from Dublin. The surface is hilly, the highest ground at Bellpatrick rising 789 feet above the level of the sea. Tributaries to the Boyne flow through the parish. About 5,000 acres of waste land were reclaimed by Anthony Foster, father of the late Lord Oriel, and were converted into prolific plantations. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Mosstown and Donaghmore, £374, in the patron. of the primate. The town is situated on a confluent of the river Boyne, which is here crossed by a stone bridge. It has a remarkably neat appearance, and has recently been much improved. It contains a Roman Catholic chapel, Methodist meeting-house, several schools, police station, and a dispensary. The greater number of the inhabitants are labourers. The church, which stands in the town, was built in 1813 by private subscription and by aid from the late Board of First Fruits. It contains the family tomb of the Fosters. Oriel Temple is the seat of Viscount Ferrard.

COLLONSAY and ORONSAY, islands in the par. of Jura, and district of Islay, in the co. of Argyll, Scotland. These islands lie W. of Jura and Islay, and are separated by a narrow channel, which is dry at low water. Collonsay is the most northerly of the two, and they are together 12 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 3 miles. The sheltered valleys are warm and fertile: the breed of cattle is excellent. Macneil of Collonsay is the only landowner. In Collonsay there are remains of ancient chapels, but the ruins of the abbey of Augustine Friars were lately removed. The priory of this monastery, still existing in Oronsay, is reputed the finest relic of religious antiquity in the West of Scotland, next to Icolmkill. Collonsay has a good harbour, called Portnafeamin, where vessels can be repaired. Cod and flat fish are extensively caught. A permanent assistant minister serves the church for the two islands at a stipend of £50. St. Columba is said to have had an establishment in Collonsay before he went to Iona.

COLLOONEY, a post and market town in the par. of Ballysadare, in the bar. of Tirerill, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the S. of Sligo. It is situated on the river Ballysadare. In the village stands the parish church of Ballysadare, a handsome structure with spire; also a Roman Catholic chapel and a dispensary, within the Sligo Poor-law Union. Annaghmore is a seat of the O'Haras, and Longford House that of Sir J. Crofton, Bart. Thursday is market day, and fairs are held on the 3rd May, 5th September, 21st November, and 16th December.

COLLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Legsby, hund. of Wraggoe, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Market Rasen.

COLLY CROFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Bedworth, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles N. of Coventry.

COLMAN, or COCKMAN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.W. of Fethard. It is situated a little to the W. of the road from that place to Clonmel. The surface abounds in low hills. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with St. John's, Cashel, £417, in the patron. of the crown. Cashel is the post town.

COLMAN CHAPEL, or CAPEL COLMAN, a par. in the hund. of Kilgerran, in the co. of Pembroke, 6 miles S.W. of Newcastle Emlyn. The parish is small, and contains only a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £72, in the patron. of Miss Jones.

COLMANSWELL, or CLOONCORAGH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov.

of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the W. of Kilmallock. The parish extends along the right bank of the river Maigue, and is intersected by the road from Charleville to Rathkeale. It consists of a soil of medium quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to two others in Bruree. This parish takes its name from a sacred well.

COLMONELL, a par. in the district of Carrick, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It is 20 miles long, from Galloway westward to the Firth of Clyde, with an extreme breadth of 7 miles. The valleys, comprising much of the surface, are fertile. Knockdolian, a conical hill of considerable height, is a conspicuous landmark to vessels entering the Firth of Clyde. The hills on both sides of the Stinchar consist for the most part of mountain limestone. The Duchess de Coigny is the principal landowner. By far the greater part of the surface is moorland or pasture. The principal mansions are Drumlamford, Penmore, Knockdolian, Dalgerrock, and Ballochmorie. Craigneil is a fine ruined castle of the 13th century. The various roads from Girvan to Galloway traverse the parish. The village of Colmonell stands on the right bank of the Stinchar, 5 miles N.E. of Ballantrae. This par. is in the presb. of Stranraer, and in the patron. of the Duchess de Coigny. The minister has a stipend of £257. There is a chapel in connection with the Establishment at Barrhill, served by a missionary at a salary of £80. There are also in the parish two Free churches, an Original Secession, and a Reformed Presbyterian church. Fairs are held in February, May, August, and November.

COLMULLIN, or CULMULLIN, a par. in the bars. of Ratoath and Upper Deece, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Summerhill, and 24 from Dublin. The living is a vic. united with that of Knockmark. Culmullin House is the principal residence.

COLMWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Barford, in the co. of Bedford, 6 miles S.W. of St. Neot's, its post town, and the same distance S. of Kimbolton. It is situated on a branch of the river Ouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £179, in the patron. of the Rev. R. W. Gery. The church, dedicated to St. Dennis, is a neat structure in the early English style of architecture, with a handsome spire. It contains a monumental brass of the year 1380. There are National schools for both sexes. Mrs. S. Elye is lady of the manor.

COLN, a small river of Gloucestershire, which, rising near Barnsley, after a course of 12 miles falls into the Isis near Lechlade.

COLN. See COLN ST. ALDWIN, and COLN ST. DENIS, &c., Gloucestershire.

COLNBROOK, a chplry. partly in the par. of Horton, in the co. of Buckingham, and partly in the par. of Stanwell, in the co. of Middlesex, 17 miles W. of London. It is a place of great antiquity, and stands upon the river Colne, which here flows in four streams, over each of which is a small bridge; a circumstance which Camden thinks decisive proof that it is the Pontes of Antoninus. It was once a market town, and was incorporated in 1543 by the style of "bailiff and burgesses of Colnbrook." The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Baptists have a chapel. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on the 5th April and 3rd May.

COLNE, a chplry. and market town in the par. of Whalley, in the higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 30 miles N. of Manchester, and 20 S.E. of Lancaster. It comprises the tnshps. of Colne, Great and Little Marsden, Barrowford, Foulridge, and Trawden, together containing a population of 21,196. The market town of Colne is situated on Colne Water, a tributary of the Calder, and near the Leeds and Liverpool canal. It is the terminus of the Lancashire and Yorkshire, and also of the Midland system of railways. It contains a cloth-hall, a branch of the Craven bank, a savings-bank, gas and water works, besides several extensive cotton factories. The population is chiefly employed in the manufacture of fabrics suited for the Manchester and Bradford markets. Coal, excellent freestone, flags, and slate are abundant in the neighbourhood. There are two churches, St. Bartholomew's and Christ Church, both perpet. curs.,* in the patron. of Hulme's Trustees, val. £179 and £180 respectively. St. Bartholomew's is an ancient structure in the perpendicular style, built in 1515, and restored and enlarged in 1857. It has two chantry chapels, an ancient font, and a screen, in good preservation. Christ Church was built in 1836. The charities amount to £103 per annum. Here are Baptist, Inghamite, Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist, and Independent chapels. There is a grammar school, with a small endowment, at which Archbishop Tillotson is said to have been educated; besides National and British schools. In the vicinity many Roman antiquities have been discovered, which has led to the supposition that Colne was the Roman Colunio; this is supported by the existence of an extensive camp, 360 feet by 340, with double trench and vallum at Castor Cliff. A weekly market is held on Wednesday, and a monthly market for cattle on the same day. Fairs are held on the 7th March, 13th May, 11th October, and 21st December.

COLNE, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 5½ miles N.E. of St. Ives. It was a chplry. to Amersham, and belonged to the Drurys. It was given by Edward III. to his kinswoman, Lady Wake. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Somersham, in the dioc. of Ely. The tithes are appropriated to the Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge. The church is an ancient structure in the early English style, dedicated to St. Helen. It has several stained-glass windows, and contains an ancient piscina, and the remains of a brass attributed to the reign of Henry III. In 1844 a large fire destroyed a great part of the village. George Day, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COLNE, a river which, rising near Hatfield, in the co. of Herts, runs 30 miles in a south-westerly direction, and finally discharges itself into the Thames near Staines.

COLNE, a river which, rising near Steeple Bumpstead, in the co. of Essex, runs 36 miles in a south-easterly direction, past Halstead and Colchester, and discharges itself into the North Sea at Mersea Island.

COLNE EARL'S, or GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles to the S.E. of Halstead, its post town, and 52 from London. It is a station on the Colne Valley branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on the river Colne, over which is a bridge, and near the line of the Roman road to Cambridge, which passed through the parish. At the time of the Domesday Survey the manor belonged to the family of the De Veres, Earls of Oxford. In 1100 a monastery was founded here by Aubrey de Vere as a cell to Abingdon Priory. At the Dissolution it was inhabited by a prior and ten monks, and had a revenue of £175 14*s.* 8*d.* The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £494, in the patron. of H. H. Carwardine, Esq., who is lord of the manor, and resides at Colne Priory. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £242 14*s.* 9*d.*, and the vicarial for one of £670. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a massive tower, partly of flint, and is ornamented with tombs of the De Veres, which were removed from the priory, of which some ruins still remain. There are places of worship for Particular Baptists and the Society of Friends. In the village is a grammar school founded by the De Veres, and further endowed, by the Rev. Christopher Swallow, with lands producing £188 per annum; there are also National schools. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum. Lord Chancellor Audley was born in this village in 1488. A fair is held on the 25th March.

COLNE ENGAINE, or COLNE PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 2½ miles E. of Halstead, its post town, which is a station on the Great Eastern railway, and 6 N. of Coggeshall. This parish derived the suffix to its name from the Engaine family, who held the manor in the 14th century. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in wool-spinning and in the manufacture of baize. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £680, in the patron. of the governors of Christ's Hospital. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is situated on an eminence. The charities produce about £4 per annum. There are National schools. The governors of Christ's Hospital, and Robert Hills, Esq., are lords of the manor. The principal residence is Colne Park, which formerly belonged to the De Veres. Near it is an Ionic pillar by Soane.

COLNE, WAKES, a par. in the Witham div. of the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 5 miles to the S.E. of Halstead. It is situated on the river Colne, and formerly belonged to the Wakes, from which circumstance it received the affix to its name. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £458, in the patron. of Earl Verulam. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The charities produce about £17 per annum. In the vicinity is a curious old mansion, surrounded by a moat, called Creping Hall.

COLNE, WHITE, a par. in the Witham div. of the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 1 mile to the N.W. of Wakes Colne, and 4 S.E. of Halstead. The manor anciently belonged to the Whites, from which circumstance it took the affix to its name. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £130, in the patron. of Rev. W. E. Hume, incumbent. A part of the parish is in common.

COLNEY, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, in the co. of Norfolk, 3½ miles W. of Norwich. It is situated on the river Yare, in the eastern portion of the county. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £199, in the patron of J. Scott, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small structure with a round tower. It contains a fine font, and an epitaph to Sir T. Bettys (1481). The chief attraction is the Hall, a fine building, commanding an extensive and magnificent view, the property of Joseph Scott, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

COLNEY CHAPEL, an old seat on the river Colne, in the co. of Herts, 3 miles S.E. of St. Alban's. It was built by Governor Bourchier, and was afterwards the residence of the Margrave of Anspach.

COLNEY HATCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Fryern Barnet, in the Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 1 mile N.E. of Finchley, and 3 miles S.E. of Chipping Barnet. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. Many pleasant villas have recently been built, and there is a good hotel. Here is the Pauper Lunatic Asylum for the county of Middlesex, designed to accommodate 1,000 patients. It was built in 1850, after designs by S. Daukes, and has a frontage of 1,884 feet.

COLNEY HATCH-LANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Clerkenwell, in the Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, adjoining Muswell Hill, and 1½ mile from the Colney Hatch railway station.

COLNEY HEATH, a chplry. within the borough of St. Alban's, hund. of Cashio, in the co. of Herts. It is situated on the Colne, close to St. Alban's, and near the London and North-Western railway. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £67, in the patron. of trustees. Being near the site of the Roman Verulamium, many antiquities have been found here.

COLNEY, LONDON, a hmlt. in the hund. of Cashio, in the co. of Herts, 3 miles S.E. of St. Alban's. It is situated on the river Colne.

COLNEYS, a hund. in the S.E. portion of the co. of Suffolk; contains the pars. of Felixstow, Hemley, Bucklesham, Falkenham, Kirton, Levington, Nacton, St. Martin's Frimley, St. Mary's Frimley, and Walton, comprising 17,460 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Suffolk and dioc. of Norwich.

COLNEY STREET, a chplry. in the hund. of Cashio, in the co. of Herts, 3 miles S. of St. Alban's. It is situated on the river Colne. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Countess of Caledon. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

COLN-ROGERS, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, in the co. of Gloucester, 3½ miles S.W. of Northleach, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Cirencester. It is situated on the river Coln. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £225, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure in the Norman and other styles of architecture. Here is a school for poor children. The Dean and Chapter of Gloucester are lords of the manor.

COLN ST. ALDWIN, a par. in the hund. of Brightwells Barrow, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles N.W. of Fairford, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Northleach. It is situated on the river Coln and the ancient Icknield Street. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £103, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an old edifice in the early English, Norman, and perpendicular styles of architecture, and was repaired in 1853. It possesses some fine stained-glass windows. A National school has recently been erected. The charities produce £12 per annum.

COLN ST. DENIS, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Deerhurst, in the co. of Gloucester, 8 miles N. of Cirencester, and 3 S. of Northleach, its post town. It is situated on the Roman Fosse Way and the river Coln. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £400, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St James, is an ancient stone edifice in the early Norman style of architecture. There is a parochial school, chiefly supported by the minister. The lady of the manor is Mrs. Jeffries.

COLP, or COLPA, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Lower Duleek, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles to the N.E. of Duleek. The par. extends along the sea-coast and the mouth of the Boyne. It consists of good land, and contains the vils. of Beamore, Donocarney, Betaghstown, and Mornington. The road from Balbriggan to Drogheda, its post town, passes through the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val., with two others, £131, in the patron of the Marquis of Drogheda. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1809. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of St. Mary's, Drogheda. An abbey was founded here in 1182 by Hugh de Lacy. It afterwards became subject to the abbey of Lanthony. There are yet some church ruins, thought to be remains of this abbey. In a prominent position on the headland stands an old tower known as the Maiden Tower. The principal residences are, Colp Abbey, the seat of the Wellesley family, Betaghstown, Pilltown, and Eastham.

COLSTERWORTH, a par. partly in the wap. of Beltisloe, but chiefly in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles S. of Grantham, and 4½ W. of the Corby station of the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on the Great York road, in a beautiful valley, through which winds the river Witham. It contains the hmlts. of Twyford and Woolsthorpe. In the latter the immortal Sir Isaac Newton, who first demonstrated the laws by which the Almighty governs the Universe, was born on Christmas Day, 1642. He received his early education at the neighbouring grammar school of Grantham, from whence he was admitted to Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1660. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £680, in the patron. of the Prebendary of South Grantham, in Salisbury Cathedral. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents, under the Enclosure Act, in 1805. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is partly in the Norman and partly in the early English styles of architecture. It has a good tower, and a gallery erected at the expense of Sir Isaac Newton. There are two Wesleyan places of worship, and an endowed National school for both sexes, besides a school for infants. The lord of the manor is Christopher Turner, Esq. In this parish is an old house once the residence of Sir Isaac Newton, whose father was lord of the manor, and died here three months before the birth of the great philosopher, whose remains are interred in Westminster Abbey, but a marble tablet has been erected to his memory in Colsterworth church.

COLSTON BASSET, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 4½ miles S. of Bingham, and 10 S.E. of Nottingham, the former being its post town. It is situated on the river Smile, near the Nottingham and Grantham canal. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £270, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure in good repair, with a square tower. Here the Primitive Methodists and Catholics have each a chapel, and there is a free school. Colston Hall, a substantial building, delightfully situated, is the seat of Henry Martin, Esq., who is lord of the manor. In 1604 this place was visited by the plague.

COLSTRY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's Castle, in the hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles S. of Bishop's Castle, and 20 S.W. of Shrewsbury.

COLTBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the borough and co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Edinburgh. It is situated on Leith Water, and was the scene in 1745 of an engagement between the royal troops and the forces of the Pretender, Charles Stuart, in which the latter defeated the dragoons.

COLTFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Alves, in the co. of Moray, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Elgin.

COLTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Spofforth, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles N.E. of Wetherby.

COLTISHALL, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles from North Walsham, and 7 from Norwich. It is situated in the eastern portion of the county, on the river Bure. The chief occupation of the inhabitants is the carrying trade. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £299, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a tower 70 feet high, embattled, and curiously ornamented with rude figures. The body of the church is thatched, and of a much earlier date. The charities amount to £23 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Chapman's school. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school. A fair is held on Whit-Monday.

COLTON, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 1 mile N. of Rugeley, its post town, and 2 miles E. of the Colwich station of the Trent Valley line. It is situated on the river Trent and Grand Trunk canal. It contains the hmlt. of Lea Lane and the vil. of Newland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £461, in the patron. of the Rev. C. W. Landor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1851, with the exception of the tower. It is a stone structure, with beautiful stained-glass windows. Here are schools for both sexes, partly endowed. T. B. Horsfall, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor, and resides at Bellamour Hall, a fine stone mansion.

COLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton Percy, in the Ainsty of the city of York, in the co. of York, 4 miles S.E. of Tadcaster, its post town, and 3 from the Bolton Percy station of the Great Northern railway. Divine service is performed in the village school-room.

COLTON, or COULTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Pettlecombe, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles S. of Watchet.

COLTON, or COULTON, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Ulverstone, and 21 S.W. of Kendal. It is situated near the rivers Leven and Crake, and contains the chplries. of Rusland, Finsthwaite, and Haverthwaite. In the vicinity are the beautiful lakes of Windermere and Coniston, which may be seen to great advantage from many points in this parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cotton and wood trades, and in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £110, in the patron. of certain landowners. The parish church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a plain stone structure. There are the following district churches in this parish: Finsthwaite, a perpet. cur., val. £76, in the patron. of the landowners; Haverthwaite, a perpet. cur.,* val. £127, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Colton and the bishop alternately; and Rusland, a perpet. cur.,* val. £64, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Colton. The charities amount to £81 per annum. The Baptists have a chapel at Tottlebank. There are two endowed schools called Sandys' and Dixon's schools, besides parochial and Sunday schools. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

COLTON, or COULTON, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 7½ miles W. of Norwich. It is situated on the river Blackwater. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £348, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a flint-stone structure with a square tower. The charities amount to £36 per annum. There is a National school, with an endowment of £9 per annum.

COLTON, or COULTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hovingham, in the wap. of Ryedale, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles S.E. of the Gilling railway station, and 6 S. of Helmesley. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship. The lord of the manor is C. G. Fairfax, Esq.

COLTON, or COULTON, a vil. in the tnshp. of Templenewsam, in the pars. of Whitkirk and Leeds, West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S.E. of Leeds.

COLTS HILL, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Brenchley, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles S.E. of Tunbridge.

COLTSTON, a vil. in the par. of New Monkland, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland.

COLUMB, JOHN'S, a chplry., 5 miles to the N.E. of Exeter, in the co. of Devon, anciently the seat of the Acklands, of Killerton.

COLUMBKILLE, a par. in the bar. of Granard, in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Granard. Edgeworthstown is the post town. The surface is hilly and boggy, with a proportion of limestone. The parish is intersected by the road from Granard to St. Johnstone and Killeshandra, and includes a portion of Lough Gawnagh, the supposed source of the Erne. Iron mines exist here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £249, in the patron. of Richard Greville, Esq. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1830. It stands upon an eminence 440 feet above the level of the sea. There are 10 Roman Catholic chapels within the parish, and as many hedge schools. On the island of Inchmore are some church ruins, the supposed remains of a monastery founded by St. Columb. Opposite these stands Ernehead, the beautiful residence of H. Dopping, Esq. Several other seats add beauty to this parish, which is one of the most picturesque spots in the county.

COLUMBKILLE, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. This par., which includes part of the postal vil. of Thomastown, extends along the bank of the river Nore. Its general character is hilly, with a poor soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Thomastown, £416, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Mung, which is united to those of Thomastown, Kilfane, and Kilminogue. There are also two day schools and one Sunday school.

COLUMB, ST., MAJOR, a par. and market town in the hund. of Pyder, middle div. of the co. of Cornwall, 29 miles S.W. of Launceston. The parish is of large extent, and the surface rests on igneous rocks containing tin, copper, cobalt, bismuth, and various minerals. The town contains about 1,400 inhabitants, and is situated on a hill. There are a market-house, bank, five chapels, and Union poorhouse. It is the head of new County Court and registration districts, which coincide with the limits of the Poor-law Union, comprising 17 parishes. Petty sessions are held in the town, which is one of the polling places for the county elections. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and the mines. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £1,515, in the patron. of the Rev. Dr. Walker. The church, dedicated to St. Columba, is a fine old structure, with pinnacled tower, and was formerly collegiate. It contains a brass and other monuments to the Arundells of Llanherne, who formerly held the manor, and of which family was Bishop Arundell, who died in 1504. The charities produce £50 per annum. In the vicinity are many interesting antiquities of the early Britons—as, Retallock barrow, Castle-an-Dinas camp, the Coyt, King Arthur's stone, with the imprint of four horses' hoofs upon it, the stones called the Nine Maidens, and other Druidical remains. Thursday is the market day, and fairs are held on the Thursday after Mid-Lent Sunday, and the third Thursday in November.

COLUMB, ST., MINOR, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, middle div. of the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles to the W. of St. Columb Major, its post town. It is situated near Towan Bay, and contains the hmlt. of New Quay, and part of Watergate. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £117, in the patron. of Lord Churston. The church is a spacious edifice, with an ancient rood loft. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Here are some remains of Rialton Priory.

COLVA, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Radnor, in the co. of Radnor, 5 miles S.W. of Radnor. It is situated on the river Edwy. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Glascomb, in the dioc. of St. David's, in the patron. of the bishop. This place is in the possession of the crown.

COLVEND AND SOUTHWICK, a par. in the district and co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It is bounded on the S. by the Solway Frith, on the W. by the Urr, and on the E. by Southwick Water. Its greatest length, from Thorter Fell on the N. to Castle Hill Old Fort on the S., is 9 miles, and its greatest breadth from E. to W. 7½ miles. The surface is hilly and chiefly pasture, and the sea-coast bold and rocky. To the E., however, at the mouth of the Southwick, the coast is flat. The caverns and amphitheatres which occur along the coast are large fissures in the rocks, stretching back from the entrance in one instance to about 80 or 100 feet; in the largest of these natural caves is a shaft of some 16 feet deep, and 3 or 4 feet broad, which is said to have been sunk by miners in search of copper ore, of which there are many indications along the coast. There are five lakes in the western division. The chief landowners are M'Kenzie of Auchensheoch, Hilton of Fairgirth, Stewart of Southwick, and Oswald of Auchencruive. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries, and in the patron. of the crown and the Duke of Buccleuch. The minister has a stipend of £235. The eastern division formerly composed the parish of Southwick. There is an United Presbyterian church at the eastern extremity of the parish.

COLVESTON, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 8 miles S.W. of Swaffham, and 5½ N. of Brandon station on the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Didlington, in the dioc. of Norwich, and in the patron. of Lord Berners. The church is in ruins.

COLWALL, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Malvern, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Ledbury. It has a station on the West Midland branch of the Great Western railway. It is situated on the western side of the Malvern hills, under the Herefordshire Beacon. Part of the parish is in hops. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £540, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure in the early English style, with tower and several ancient monuments. The charities amount to £33 per annum, and there are free schools for both sexes. The bishop of the diocese and H. Bright, Esq., are lords of the manor. Many brass coins and a gold ornament were found a few years back in the neighbourhood.

COLWAY, a tythg. in the borough of Lyme Regis, in the co. of Dorset.

COLWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Chollerton, in the north-eastern div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles N. of Hexham, and 3 N.E. of Chollerton. It is situated on Watling Street. Here the Roman Catholics have a chapel, dedicated to St. Mary, and also a day school, which are supported by Thomas Riddell, Esq., of Felton Park.

COLWELL, a bay near Freshwater, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Hants, opposite Hurst Castle.

COLWICH, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles N.W. of Rugeley, its post town, and 6 E. of Stafford. It has a station on the Trent Valley branch of the North-Western railway. It is beautifully situated on the river Trent and Grand Trunk canal. It includes the hmlts., and tnshps. of Bishton, Great and Little Heywood, Wolseley, Moreton, and Shugborough, and parts of Fradswell, Drointon, and Hixon. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £514, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient and handsome structure. It contains monuments of the Sparrow, Wolseley, and Anson families, of which last was the great navigator, George, Lord Anson, who was born here, at his father's seat, in 1697. There are also the following district churches, the livings of which are perpet. curs., viz. Fradswell, val. £120, and Hixon, val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop; Great Heywood, val. £110, in the patron. of the Earl of Lichfield. Here are National schools for both sexes, and an infant school. The lords of the manor are the Marquis of Anglesea, the Earl of Lichfield, and Sir Charles Wolseley. A fair is held on the Wednesday before Mid-Lent Sunday.

COLWICK, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 2 miles E. of Nottingham. It is situated on the river Trent. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £220, in the patron. of J. Musters, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has tombs of the Byron, Musters, Newstead, and other families.

COLWINSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, in the co. of Glamorgan, 4 miles W. of Cowbridge, and 4 S.E. of Bridgend. It is situated on the Roman way called the Via Julia Maritima. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £135, in the patron. of D. Thomas, Esq. There are some small charities, and traces of camps in the neighbourhood.

COLWITH FORCE, a beautiful waterfall on the Brathay, in the co. of Westmoreland, about 4 miles S.W. of Ambleside.

COLWORTH, a tythg. in the par. of Oving, in the rape of Chichester, and hund. of Box, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles E. of Chichester.

COLWYN, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Llandrillo-yn-Rhôs, in the co. of Denbigh, 5 miles W. of Abergele. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £170, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is dedicated to St. Catherine.

COLWYN, a hund. of the southern portion of the co. of Radnor; contains the pars. of Glascomb, Bettws-Disserth, Llansaintfraed, Disserth, Aberedw, Llanbadarn-y-Garregg, Rhulen, Cregrina, Llanelwedd, and Llanvareth. It is included in the deanery of Elwell.

COLYFORD, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Colyton, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles from Lyme Regis.

COLYTON, a hund. in the eastern portion of the co. of Devon; contains the pars. of Colyton, Cotleigh, North and South Leigh, Farway, Offwell, Shute, Branscombe, Seaton, Widworthy, and Monkton; comprising 27,110 acres.

COLYTON, a par. in the hund. of Colyton, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles W. of Lyme Regis, 7 S. of Honiton, and 20 E. of Exeter. It is situated in a fertile valley near where the river Coly joins the Axe. The par. includes the tythg. of Colyford. The houses are principally built of flint with thatched roofs. There are paper-mills and tanneries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with the perpet. cur. of Monckton annexed, £403, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an old edifice in the later English style, with monuments of the Courtenay, Yonge, and Pole families. The Unitarians, Wesleyans, and Independents have places of worship. There is an endowed grammar school founded in Henry VIII.'s time, and several Sunday schools. The charities, including the school lands, produce £400 per annum. Here "Honiton lace" is manufactured in large quantities. Some ancient seats of this parish are now converted into homesteads. The market is on Thursday, and fairs for cattle are held on the 1st May and 30th November.

COMADERRY, a mountain situated in the W. of the bar. of Ballinacor, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, in the midst of Glenmalure and Glenanasane. Its height is 1,567 feet above the level of the sea, and at its foot runs the little river Glaneola.

COMBE, COMB, or CWM, signifying a hollow or valley, is frequently used either as the name, or affix to the name, of many places in the West of England and Wales. All places of any importance will be found under one or other of these forms, but as they are frequently variable, it is impossible to determine which is the most approved spelling. Besides the places given, there are many farms, gentlemen's seats, and valleys, especially in the counties of Somerset, Wilts, Devon, Surrey, and in Wales, to which this name is given, as Combe Lodge, Combe Wood, &c., but too insignificant to require a separate notice.

COMBE, a par. in the hund. of Pastrow (lower half), in the co. of Hants, 6 miles S.E. of Hungerford, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Newbury. It is situated in a well-wooded valley, and contains the hmlt. of East Wick. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £107, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is a small ancient edifice, with wooden tower. There is a free school. The manor is held by King's College, Cambridge. Here formerly stood a convent, supposed to have been connected with a priory in Picardy.

COMBE, a tnshp. in the par. of Presteigne, in the hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 2 miles E. of Presteigne.

COMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Endford, in the co. of Wilts, 7 miles W. of Ludgershall. It is situated on the river Avon. In the vicinity are several British camps and barrows.

COMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Chipping-Campden, in the co. of Gloucester.

COMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Wotton-under-Edge, in the co. of Gloucester, 1 mile N.E. of Wotton.

COMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Woodnesborough, and hund. of Eastry, in the co. of Kent.

COMBE ABBEY, or COMBE FIELDS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles E. of Coventry, and 1 mile N. of the Brandon railway station. The modern abbey, the seat of the Earl of Craven, is an elegant mansion, built on the site of one founded by Richard de Camville, for Cistercian monks, in the reign of Stephen, about 1150. There are still remains of the cloisters, consisting of Norman pillars and arches. The abbey, which by the liberality of the noble owner is open to public inspection, contains portraits of the Stuart family by Vandyck and Honthorst, and pictures by Rubens, Rembrandt, Lely, &c. Here is a meet for the Atherstone hounds.

COMBE DOWN, a vil. in the par. of South Stoke, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles S. of Bath. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the quarrying of Bath stone.

COMBE ENGLISH, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Bath, its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £185, in the patron. of the bishop. In the vicinity are Barrow Hill camp, and traces of the ancient Belgic boundary wall called by the Saxons Wodensdic, now Wandsdyke.

COMBE FLOREY, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, in the co. of Somerset, 6½ miles N.W. of Taunton, its post town, and 1½ mile W. of Bishop's Lydeard station. The West Somerset line passes through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £263, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a neat building, with tower; the living of which was held at one time by the Rev. Sydney Smith. Here are National schools for both sexes. The annual val. of the charities is about £11. Mrs. Helyar is lady of the manor, who resides at Combe Florey House.

COMBE HOLLAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Dulverton, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile N.E. of Dulverton. It is situated on the river Ex.

COMBE-IN-TEIGNHEAD, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Teignmouth, and 3 E. of Newton Abbot, its post town, both which places are stations on the South Devon line. It is situated near the mouth of the river Teign. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £324, in the patron. of J. W. Harding and W. Long, Esqrs. The church is an ancient stone edifice recently restored. There are National schools and an almshouse. The charities amount to £3 7*s.* per annum. Henry Michel More, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COMBE LONG, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles S.W. of Woodstock, its post town. It is situated on the river Evenlode. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £90, in the patron. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The church, built in the 14th century, is in the early English style of architecture, with good niches and a carved stone pulpit. The charities produce £10 per annum.

COMBE-MARTIN. See COMBMARTIN, Devon.

COMBE, MONCKTON, a par. in the hund. of Bath-Forum, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the S. of Bath, its post town. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the paper mills and in the Bath stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, and in the gift of the Vicar of South Stoke. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

COMBEND, a vil. in the par. of Colesbourne, in the co. of Gloucester, 6 miles N.W. of Cirencester. It is situated on the line of the Roman way, called Ermine Street, and was the site of a villa with bath attached, the remains of which were discovered in 1800.

COMBER, or CUMBER, a par. and small town, in the bars. of Lower and Upper Castlereagh, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 16 miles N.W. of Downpatrick, and 104 from Dublin. It is a station on the Belfast and County Down railway. The parish extends along the upper part of Lough Strangford. It is hilly, with bog and moorland, much of which has been reclaimed; the soil is of middling quality. The highest ground is at Scrabo Hill, which rises 534 feet above the sea-level. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Down, val. £109, in the patron. of the Marquis of Londonderry. The church, which is built on the site of an old abbey, is in the later English style. Comber is the seat of a presb., and contains three Presbyterian meeting-houses—one in the town, another at Moneyrea, and the third at Gransha. There is a Wesleyan chapel and several schools, one under the governor of Erasmus Smith's schools. The town, containing 1,700 inhabitants, stands on the cross roads from Belfast to Killyleagh, and from Donaghadee to Ballinahinch, near the Comber river, which here falls into Lough Strangford. It consists of four well-built streets and a square, in the centre of which is a monument to General Gillespie. There are flour mills, a flax spinning mill, a police station, house of industry, breweries, distilleries, and bleach-grounds. A Cistercian abbey is alleged to have been founded here in the 12th century by St. Patrick, which was rebuilt in 1201 by Brien Catha; but he being slain by John de Courcy, the abbey was given to the Clandeboys, from whom it came to Viscount Ardes, first Earl of Mount Alexander. The viscount erected on an eminence near the town a castle known as Mount Alexander, now in ruins. In the neighbourhood are several handsome seats, and some stone ruins supposed to be Druidical. Fairs are held on the 14th January, 5th April, 28th June, and 19th October.

COMBE RAWLEIGH. See COMBRAWLEIGH, Devon.

COMBERBACH, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, in the hund. of Bucklow, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles N.W. of Northwich, its post town. It contains a small lake called Comberbach Water.

COMBERMERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, in the co. of Chester, 3 miles N.E. of Whitchurch. It was the site of an abbey founded by Hugh Malbanc at the commencement of the 12th century. The Cottons, to whom the site was granted, rebuilt the abbey as a family mansion, the present seat of Viscount Combermere, who takes his name and title from the beautiful lake which winds for above a mile through the park.

COMBERTON, a par. in the hund. of Wetherley, in the co. of Cambridge, 5½ miles N.W. of Harston, and 4 S.W. of Cambridge. The manor was anciently held by the peculiar tenure of king's falcon-keeper and baker. The parish is watered by the Bourn brook, and contains a section of common. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £153, in the patron. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure in the perpendicular style of architecture. The charities amount to £35. Here is an endowed National school for both sexes. Coprolites are found lying near the surface. G. Foster, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COMBERTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of Wolphy, in the co. of Hereford, 5 miles N. of Leominster.

COMBERTON. See COMMERTON, Worcestershire.

COMBERTON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Upper Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles S. of Pershore, its post town, which is a station on the West Midland railway, and 3 from the Eckington station of the Great Western line. It is situated under Bredon Hill on the river Avon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £254, in the patron. of the Rev. C. H. Parker. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1818.

COMBERTON, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Upper Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 1 mile to the N.E. of the above, and 1½ S. of Pershore. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £258, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Parker. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charities produce about £2 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1803.

COMBE ST. NICHOLAS, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Kingsbury, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles from the Chard-road station, and 2½ N.W. of the town of Chard. At Walton, in this parish, was formerly a nunnery. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £440, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient stone edifice in the perpendicular style, with aisles, chancel, nave, transept, and low embattled tower. It contains a richly carved screen. The Forest charity produces £150 per annum, arising out of one-third of the lands of Roch Forest, disafforested by Charles II. Here is a National school for both sexes. Fairs are held on the 18th June, and the Wednesday after the 11th December.

COMBHAY, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Bath, its post town. It is situated on a tributary of the river Avon, near the Kennet canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £307, in the patron. of the Hon. H. H. Tracey. The church is a stone edifice. Here are parochial and Sunday schools for both sexes. The Roman Fosse Way runs through the village.

COMB HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Nether Witton, in the western div. of the ward of Morpeth, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Nether Witton.

COMBMARTIN, a par. and considerable vil. in the hund. of Braunton, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles E. of Ilfracombe, its post town, and 10 N. of Barnstaple. It is situated on a creek of Combmartin Bay, in the Bristol Channel, and was given to Martin de Tours by William I. In former times it was noted for its silver mines, which were worked from the reign of Edward I. to that of Elizabeth. A loving cup of 137 oz., wrought of silver from these mines, bearing the date 1593, was presented by Sir B. Bulmer to the city of London, and is still used on Lord Mayor's Day. Several of these mines have been re-opened, and have yielded 40 oz. silver per ton of lead ore. The stratum in which they occur is a variety of killas or clay slate, containing veins of galena, lead, quartz, and iron. The county magistrates hold petty sessions in the village on the first Monday in every month; but the market is discontinued, and the market-house fallen into decay. The houses extend along the dale upwards of a mile from the sea-shore. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £387, in the patron. of the Rev. William Toms. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a fine edifice. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes. An endowed school was founded by George Ley in 1716, and was rebuilt by his grandson. The charities produce £25 per annum, being the endowment of Ley's school. Harding, the Roman Catholic divine, who for some time conformed to the Protestant religion, and was tutor to Lady Jane Grey, was a native of this place. There is anchorage in the small bay under the Hangman hills in 8 fathoms water.

COMBPYNE, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, in the co. of Devon, 3½ miles S. of Axminster, its post town and railway station on the South-Western line, and 4 from Lyme Regis. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £127, in the patron. of Messrs. Knight, Cuff, and Edwards. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, possessing a chalice anterior to the Reformation. H. Knight, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COMBRAWLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, in the co. of Devon, 1 mile N.E. of Honiton, its post town and railway station. The manor formerly belonged to the Baunton and Matthews families. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £272, in the patron. of E. S. Drewe, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient stone edifice, with monuments and stained-glass windows. There are free schools for boys and girls. William Bernard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COMBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Rochester, in the co. of Strafford, 5 miles N. of Uttoxeter.

COMBROOK, a chplry. in the par. of Kineton, in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles W. of Kineton, its post town, and 7 from Stratford-on-Avon. It is situated near the ancient Fosse Way. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, annexed to the vic.* of Kineton, in the patron. of Lord Willoughby. The church is dedicated to God, the Blessed Virgin, and St. Margaret. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a free school. The tithes were commuted in 1772.

COMBS, a par. in the hund. of Stow, in the co. of Suffolk, 2½ miles from Needham Market, and 1½ S. of Stowmarket. It is situated on the river Orwell. There is a large tannery where a great number of men are employed. The parish is divided into two manors, Bevants and Combs; the Rev. R. Daniel is lord of the former, and the Earl of Ashburnham of the latter. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £880, in the patron. of the Earl of Ashburnham. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to £3 per annum.

COMBS, ST., a vil. in the par. of Longmay, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Fraserburgh.

COMBWICH, or CUMMIDGE, a subport to Bridgwater, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Bridgwater. It is situated at a ferry on the river Parret.

COMELY BANK, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, 1 mile from Melrose, and 35 from Edinburgh.

COMER MOUNTAINS, a chain of hills in Queen's co., Carlow, and Kilkenny, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland. They separate the valleys of the Nore and Barrow, and are rich in coal.

COMLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Cardington, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Church Stretton.

COMME-DHUV, or THE BLACK VALLEY, a mountain pass leading to the glen or ravine bearing the same name, in South Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated about 5 miles on the road from Kenmare to Killarney, and in the vicinity of the great lakes of that district. The view obtained from this point is one of exceeding grandeur.

COMMERTON, or COMBERTON, a hmlt. in Kidderminster Foreign quarter, 2 miles S.E. of Kidderminster.

COMMITMAEN, a hund. in the south-western part of the co. of Carnarvon; contains Bardsey-Isle, Llanllegwning, Rhiw, Aberdaron, Bodferin, Pen-llech, Llangan, Mylltyern, Bryncroes, Llan-faelrhys, and Llangwnadle.

COMMONDALE, or COLMONDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Guisbrough, in the eastern div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles S.E. of Guisbrough. This place is so called after Bishop Colman, who had a hermitage here.

COMMON SIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Walton, in the first div. of the hund. of Elmbridge, in the co. of Surrey.

COMP, a hmlt. in the par. of Leybourne, in the hund. of Larkfield, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles W. of Malling, and 5 N.W. of Maidstone.

COMP GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrotham, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Wrotham. In the vicinity is Mereworth Wood.

COMPSTALL, a vil. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. of Chester, 5 miles E. of Stockport. The houses are modern, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring cotton-mills and in the collieries.

COMPTON, a hund. in the middle portion of the co. of Berks; contains the pars. of Farnborough, Chilton, Aldworth, East and West Ilsley, Catmore, and Compton, comprising 18,190 acres.

COMPTON, or COMPTON PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Compton, in the co. of Berks, 2 miles E. of East Ilsley, and 6 from the Goring station of the Great Western railway. The village lies in a hollow or valley under Compton Down, hence its name. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £270, in the patron. of J. P. Wasey, Esq. The church is an ancient Norman structure. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

COMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Buddlesgate (lower half), in the Winchester div. of the co. of Hants, 7 miles S.W. of Winchester, its post town, and 10 N. of Southampton. It is situated on the river Itchen, and is intersected by the South-Western line. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £329, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is partly in the Norman style of architecture. There are National schools for both sexes. The charities amount to £9 per annum. On the Down are traces of the camp which Cromwell pitched previous to the siege of Winchester Castle, then defended by the royalists. The Dean and Chapter of Winchester are lords of the manor.

COMPTON, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Godalming, in the co. of Surrey, 4 miles N.W. of Guildford, its post town, and the same distance from Godalming. It is situated under Hog's Back Hill, and has attached to it the manors of Eastbury, Westbury, and Field Place. There is a large common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £380, in the patron. of J. M. Molyneux, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice, partly in the early English style. It has a chapel over the chancel, which has been recently restored. The charities amount to £13, and there is a National school.

COMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, Chichester rape, in the co. of Sussex, 10 miles N.W. of Chichester, and 7 S. of Petersfield. It is mentioned in King Alfred's will as Cumtune, and is entered in Domesday as Contone. The living is a vic.* annexed to Upper Harden, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £487, with 30 acres of glebe, in the patron. of Rev. G. A. Langdale. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was restored and enlarged in 1849. The register dates from 1558. Here are National schools for both sexes. Admiral Sir Phipps Hornby is lord of the manor.

COMPTON, a lib. in the par. of Tettenhall, in the N. div. of the hund. of Seisdon, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles W. of Wolverhampton. It is situated on the Stafford and Birmingham canal. Wrottesley Hall is the seat of Lord Wrottesley, whose ancestors possessed it in the reign of Henry III. The present hall was erected in 1696. Here are vestiges of a British town.

COMPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kinfare, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles W. of Wolverhampton. It is situated on the Stafford and Birmingham canal.

COMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Compton Dundon, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles N.E. of Langport.

COMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Henbury, in the upper div. of the hund. of Henbury, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Bristol.

COMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Newent, hund. of Botloe, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Newent.

COMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ashborne, hund. of Morleston, in the co. of Derby, 1 mile from Ashborne. It is joined to Clifton. Miss Frances Hayne is lady of the manor.

COMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Enford, in the co. of Wilts, 7 miles N. of Amesbury.

COMPTON ABBAS, a par. in the hund. of Sixpenny Handley, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles S. of Shaftesbury, its post town, and 6 from Gillingham railway station. The village derives its name from being situated in a combe or vale, and its adjunct from having formerly belonged to Shaftesbury Abbey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £267, in the patron. of Sir R. C. Glyn, Bart., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient Gothic structure. The register dates from 1650. There are parochial schools for boys and girls.

COMPTON ABBAS, or WEST COMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Cerne, in the co. of Dorset, 7 miles E. of Bridport, and 3 S. of Maiden Newton, its post town and railway station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £150, in the patron. of R. Williams, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small edifice. The manor formerly belonged to Milton Abbey.

COMPTON ABDALE, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, in the co. of Gloucester, 3½ miles W. of Northleach, its post town. It is situated on the river Colne. There was an extensive heath at Compton Scrubs, but the greater part is now enclosed. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £81, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient stone edifice. Here are week-day and Sunday schools.

COMPTON BASSETT, a par. in the hund. of Calne, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles E. of Calne, its post town. It anciently belonged to the Basset family, who forfeited it to the crown. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £497, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is partly in the perpendicular and partly in the Norman styles of architecture. The register commences in 1558. There are National schools for both sexes. G. H. Heneage Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Compton House, which has an extensive view of 30 miles, and contains many valuable portraits.

COMPTON BAY, a small bay in the Isle of Wight, about 1½ mile to the N.W. of Brixton, near Compton Chine.

COMPTON BEAUCHAMP, a par. in the hund. of Shrivenham, in the co. of Berks, 6 miles S.W. of Farringdon, its post town, and 1 mile from the Farringdon Road station of the Great Western railway. It is pleasantly situated on the Port Way near the Great Western line. It anciently belonged to the Beauchamps, who had 43 lordships in this county. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £333, in the patron. of Earl Craven. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is an ancient structure in the Norman style of architecture. There is a school supported by voluntary contributions.

In the neighbourhood are Uffington Castle, the White Horse, the Blowing Stone, and other antiquities. Earl Craven is lord of the manor.

COMPTON BISHOP, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles W. of Axbridge, its post town, and 11 from the Yatton railway station. It is pleasantly situated at the foot of the Mendip hills, and contains the tnshp. of Cross. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £185, in the patron. of the prebendary. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was restored in 1852. It is a small edifice in the early pointed style, with some traces of Norman architecture, and contains a stone pulpit and font. The register dates from 1641. The charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, as well as a Sunday school. A beautiful stalactite cave was discovered some years past, but has since been robbed of its gems. The lord of the manor is Sir Charles Mordaunt, Bart. This place took the suffix to its name from the Bishop of Bath and Wells, who possessed the manor about the time of the Norman Conquest.

COMPTON CHAMBERLAIN, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Damerham, in the co. of Wilts, 6 miles W. of Wilton, and 10 from Salisbury, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Avon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, and in the patron. of C. Penruddock, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice in the Gothic style. It contains a monument to the memory of Colonel John Penruddock, who was beheaded by order of Cromwell for attempting to restore Charles II. The register commences in 1538.

COMPTON DANDO, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, in the co. of Somerset, 7 miles from Bristol, its post town, 8 from Bath, and 3 from the Keynsham railway station. It is situated on the river Chew, and contains the tnshps. of Tucking-Mills and Woolard. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £180, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice in the Gothic style, with square tower. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a National school. The charities produce about £75 per annum, being the rent of the church lands. There are traces in the parish of the Wandsdyke.

COMPTON DUNDON, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles N.E. of Langport, and 5 miles S. of the Glastonbury railway station. It is situated near the river Carey, and contains the tnshps. of Compton Dundon, and Littleton. The manor anciently belonged to the Beauchamps. It received the suffix to its name from a lofty hill called Dundon Beacon. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £201, in the patron. of the Bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone edifice in the Gothic style of architecture. The register dates from 1682. The annual val. of the charities is about £5. Here is a Sunday school. Lord Ilchester is lord of the manor.

COMPTON DURVILL, a tythg. in the par. of South Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile from South Petherton.

COMPTON, EAST, a tythg. in the par. of Pilton, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile S.W. of Shepton Mallet.

COMPTON FENNY, a par. in the Burton Bassett div. of the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 6 miles to the S. of Southam, its post town. It is situated under Compton Hill, near the Oxford canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £417, in the gift of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce £10 per annum. Sir H. B. Dudley, Bart., was born in this village.

COMPTON GIFFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Charles-the-Martyr, in the hund. of Roborough, in the co. of Devon, 1½ mile from Plymouth. It formerly belonged to the Giffords, but now to the Earl of Morley. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Charles-the-Martyr, in the dioc. of Exeter, in the patron. of the executors of the late Sir C. Bishop, Bart.

COMPTON GREENFIELD, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Henbury, in the co. of Gloucester, 6 miles N. of Bristol. It is situated near the mouth of the river Severn. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £144, in the patron. of R. C. Lippincott, Esq. The church is a stone edifice in the early English style, and was, with the exception of the tower, rebuilt in 1852. The lord of the manor is R. C. Lippincott, Esq.

COMPTON LITTLE, or PARVA, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Deerhurst, in the co. of Warwick, 4½ miles N.W. of Chipping Norton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £66, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Dennis. The parochial charities, including the income of Jordan's school, produce about £50 per annum. The parish is situated near the Four-shire-stone, and until recently formed part of the county of Gloucester. Bishop Juxon, Charles I.'s chaplain, lived here.

COMPTON LONG, a hmlt. in the par. of Ronton, in the co. of Stafford, 5 miles W. of Stafford.

COMPTON LONG, a par. in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile from Little Compton, and 5 S.E. of Shipston-on-Stour. The village is considerable, and was once a market town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £191, in the patron. of Exeter College. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a sanctus-bell turret. The manor anciently belonged to the Sheldon family, who resided at Weston Hall. Near the village is a Druidical circle, called Rollwright.

COMPTON MARTIN, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles N. of Wells, 9 from the Yatton railway station, and 11 from Bristol, its post town. It is situated to the N. of the Mendip hills, and anciently belonged to Martin de Tours, from whom it received the suffix to its name. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £494, in the patron. of Mrs. Hardwicke. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a fine stone edifice, and has a chapel annexed belonging to Bickfield Farm. There is a parochial school for both sexes, and a Sunday school. The charities produce about £10 per annum. The lord of the manor is John Henniker, Esq. Bickfield Farm is a chapelry of this parish.

COMPTON MURDACH. See COMPTON VERNEY, Warwickshire.

COMPTON, NETHER, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset, 2 miles N.W. of Sherborne, its post town, and 4 from Yeovil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. with that of Over Compton, £300, in the patron. of J. Goodden, Esq., of Over Compton House. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There is a school with a small endowment, the other charities produce £6 per annum.

COMPTON, OVER, a par. in the co. of Dorset, adjoining Nether Compton, to which it is united for ecclesiastical purposes.

COMPTON PARVA. See COMPTON, Berks, and COMPTON LITTLE, Warwickshire.

COMPTON PAUNCEFOOT, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, in the co. of Somerset, 2½ miles E. of the Sparkford railway station, and 5 S. of Castle Cary, its post town. This parish took the suffix to its name from the Pauncefoot family, of Great Brickhill, who formerly held the manor. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £140, in the patron. of B. H. Hunt, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice in the perpendicular style, with tower and spire and stained-glass windows. The register commences in 1559. Here is a National school for boys and girls, as also a Sunday school. B. H. Hunt, Esq., of Compton Castle, is lord of the manor.

COMPTON PLACE, a seat of the Earl of Darlington, in the co. of Sussex, 5 miles S. of Hailsham. It is situated on the coast near Beachy Head.

COMPTON SCORPION, or SCORTEN, a hmlt. in he par. of Ilmington, hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles W. of Shipston-on-Stour. Sir Thomas Overbury was a native of this place. The manor anciently belonged to the Palmers.

COMPTON VALLENCE, or EAST COMPTON, a par. in the lib. of Frampton, Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 6 miles W. of Dorchester, and 3 S. of Maiden Newton, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the bank of a small stream. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £300, in the patron. of R. Williams, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is a handsome stone edifice in the later English style of architecture. It was (with the exception of the tower) rebuilt in 1840, and possesses a pulpit of Bath stone, with altar of Caen stone.

COMPTON VERNEY, or COMPTON MURDOCH, a ext. par. place in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile N.W. of Kington. It is situated on he ancient Fosse Way. This place formerly belonged o the Murdoch family, but now to the Verneys. Compton House, the seat of Lord Willoughby de Broke, is a ect for the Warwick hounds.

COMPTON, WEST, a tythg. in the par. of Pilton, und. of Whitstone, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile S.W. f Shepton Mallet.

COMPTON WYNIATES, or IN-THE-HOLE, a ar. in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, ½ miles E. of Shipston-on-Stour. Kineton is its post own. The Marquis of Northampton takes the title of arl from this place, where his ancestors resided preious to the Conquest. The living is a rect. annexed the vic.* of Tysoe, in the dioc. of Worcester, in the atron. of the Marquis of Northampton, who is lord of he manor. The church, a neat stone structure in the erpendicular style, was rebuilt on the site of one estroyed by the parliamentarians. Compton House, he seat of the Comptons, was constructed of the ruins f Fulbrooke Castle in the reign of Henry VIII.

COMRIE, a par. in the district of Middle Perth, in he co. of Perth, Scotland. The par. is about 13 miles length, and between 9 and 10 miles in breadth, comrehending Glenartney, Glenlednock, Glentarken, and ina-Glen at the head of Strathearn. On the sides of he Strath, looking towards the E. end of Loch Earn, nd oven along the loch itself, is a continued ridge of fty hills, which, from the uncertainty of the crops by tense frost and heavy rains, are mostly appropriated the pasturage of sheep. Few districts display more riety of wild Highland scenery than Comrie, with its vers, mountains, and lake, and Gallic-speaking popuion. The chief rivers are the Earn and Uchil, the rmer of which flows into Loch Earn, a beautiful panse of water, 8 miles in length, the banks of which e covered with natural wood of great value; and tensive plantations have also been made in different rts of the parish. The loftiest summits are Benchonzie d Benvoirlich, rising respectively to the heights of 900 and 3,300 feet above the level of the sea. The cks are mica slate, and other primitive rocks, interersed with limestone. Near the forest of Glenairtneg a good slate quarry, and at Dalclathie, near the . end of Loch Earn, is a quarry of excellent limeone. Iron ore abounds, and was formerly extensively melted. The principal landowners are Lord Willughby D'Eresby, Sir David Dundas, Bart., and four hers. The principal mansions are Dunira, Ardvoirch, Aberuchill, Comrie House, and Dalhouzie. The ir. is in the presb. of Auchterarder, and in the patron. the crown. The minister has a stipend of £310. here is also a Free church and an United Presbyrian church. The village of Comrie stands on the bank of the Earn, 6½ miles W. of Crieff. It has woollen manufactory, and a considerable trade in tton weaving. The parish church is a handsome ilding with a lofty spire. Lord Melville's monument, mile distant on the bank of the Lednock, is a granite elisk, 72 feet in height. Comrie is a burgh of barony der Sir David Dundas. The village and its neighurhood are more frequently visited by earthquakes than any other locality in the British Isles. A severe shock was felt on the evening of October 23rd, 1839. There are three Druidical circles, and the outline of a Roman camp, 16 acres in extent, supposed by some antiquaries to mark the locality of the battle between Agricola and Galgacus. Others identify it with the camp mentioned by Tacitus, where the 9th legion sustained a disastrous night attack from the Caledonians. Fairs are held in March, May, July, November, and December.

CONAN-BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Urquhart and Logie-Wester, in the co. of Ross, Scotland. It stands on the right bank of the river Conan, 2½ miles S.W. of Dingwall.

CONA WATER, a small river, in Argyleshire, Scotland. It runs 8 miles W. to Invercoe, and in its course passes through the wild pass of Glencoe and under Con Fion, or "Fingal's Seat," the traditional birthplace of Ossian.

CONCHAN, or KIRK-ONCHAN, a par. in the middle sheading of the Isle of Man, 4 miles N.E. of Douglas. It is situated on the coast near Banks How, and includes Kiondroughad and part of the flourishing town of Douglas, which is rapidly rising into importance as a watering-place and a place of trade. In the landward part the apparent decrease of population has been occasioned by the extension of the boundaries of the town of Douglas. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Oncha, has recently been rebuilt. There are schools, and the Union poorhouse stands in the village. Along the coast are found many rare marine plants, and on the hills are Celtic barrows. A cattle fair is held on the 20th May.

CONDERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Overbury, in the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles S. of Pershore, and 2½ E. of the Bredon railway station on the Birmingham and Bristol line.

CONDICOTE, a par., partly in the upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, and partly in the hund. of Slaughter, in the co. of Gloucester, 6 miles from the Addlestrop railway station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton line, and 3 N.W. of Stow-on-the-Wold, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £158, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Bishop and others. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice. There are both weekday and Sunday schools. Near the village are the remains of a British as well as of a Roman camp. In Edward III.'s time William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, possessed the manor of Condicote. The Misses Bishop hold the manorial rights.

CONDONS AND CLANGIBBON, a bar. in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by the co. of Limerick on the N., by Tipperary and Waterford on the E., by the bars. of Kinnataloon and Barrymore on the S., and by the bar. of Fermoy on the W. Its length is 15 miles, by a breadth of over 10 in some parts. It embraces an area of 78,481 acres, including the pars. of Brigown, Aghacross, Fermoy, Clondulane, Kilworth, Kilphelan, Marshalstown, Macroney, and Templemolaga, with parts of the pars. of Derryvillane, Castlelyons, Farahy, Dunmahon, Leitrim, Kilcrumper, Glanworth, Kilgullane, Kildorrery, Knockmourne, Mocollop with Lismore, and Litter. The northern, eastern, and southern borders are sheltered by the Galtee, Kilworth, and Nagles mountains. The Blackwater washes the southern frontier. The soil is good, on a limestone bottom. This barony was formerly a portion of the ancient Fermoy, or Feramuighfene. The Condons district passed into the possession of the English family of that name, otherwise called Cauntons. The Clangibbon portion, anciently called Ive-le-bane, belonged to the Fitzgibbons and to Fitzgerald, the White Knight.

CONDORAT, a vil. in the par. of Cumbernauld, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Cumbernauld.

CONDOVER, a hund. in the middle div. of the co. of Salop. It is divided into the Condover and Cound divs.; the former containing the pars. of Condover, Church Pulverbatch, Frodesley, Lechotwood, Longnor, Smethcott, Stapleton, Sutton, Woolstaston, and parts of St. Chad, St. Julian, and Meole-Brace; the latter div. containing the pars. of Acton-Burnell, Berrington, Cound, Harley, Kenley Pitchford, and Church-Preen. The two divs. comprise about 42,840 acres, part of which is hilly.

CONDOVER, a par. in the hund. of Condover, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town. It has a station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. It is situated on a branch of the Severn, and contains the tnshps. and hmlts. of Bayston, Boreton, Chatford, High and Low Condover, Dorrington, Lyth, Ryton, Westley, and Wheathall. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £258, in the patron. of E. W. Owen, Esq., who is also lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, chiefly in the Norman style. In addition to the parish church there is a district church at Dorrington, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £127, in the patron. of T. H. Edwards, Esq. There is an endowed school. The parochial charities produce £25 per annum, and the church lands, which are also applied to parochial purposes, £31. Condover Hall was built by Chief Justice Owen about 1590.

CONE ISLAND, a small island in Broad Haven harbour, in the co. of Mayo, Ireland.

CONEY, or CUNEY, a small island in the bar. of Carbury, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Sligo. It is about 3¾ miles in circuit, and forms a breakwater to the bay. There are five other small islands of this name in Ireland; one in Lough Neagh, co. of Armagh; another at the mouth of the river Fergus, co. of Clare; a third in Crookhaven, co. of Cork; a fourth in Lough Swilly, co. of Donegal; and a fifth in Upper Lough Erne, co. of Fermanagh.

CONEYBOROUGH, a vil. in the bar. of Coolestown, in the co. of Kildare, Ireland, 1 mile from Edenderry, and 37 from Dublin.

CONEYSTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Barton-le-Street, in the wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles W. of New Malton. Here is a chapel of ease, built at the expense of the Earl of Carlisle in 1835, and there is a school supported by the Countess of Carlisle.

CONEYTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Goldsborough, in the upper div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles N.E. of Goldsborough, and 3 E. of Knaresborough, its post town.

CONFEY, a par. in the bar. of North Salt, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Celbridge. Lucan is its post town. The road from Dublin to Maynooth and the Royal canal pass through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Leixlip, £527, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Dublin. There are remains of a castle, of which Camden makes mention.

CONG, a par. and post town, in the bars. of Ross and Kilmaine, in the cos. of Galway and Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The surface is rocky and wild in the extreme, abounding in hill, ravine, cave, and chasm; parts are boggy, and very excellent limestone is quarried. The western portion lies at the foot of the Joyce Country hills, near the Benlevy and Maamdarg mountains. It commands a fine view of loughs Mask and Corrib. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £365, in the patron. of the bishop. The church stands on a trifling elevation at a short distance from the village, and was rebuilt in 1855, at an expense of £1,000, by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. A tower and spire have since been added at the cost of £900. There is a Roman Catholic place of worship. Cong was formerly a town of much consequence, and the reputed capital of Connaught. It is now only a village, where petty sessions are held, and contains a police station. To the old abbey of Cong, it is said, Roderick O'Connor, the last native king of Ireland, retired from the cares of state, and died in the year 1198. His tomb is alleged to have existed in the abbey, founded here by St. Fechan in the 7th century, till a recent period. There is yet a gate and some remains of the abbey, which are in the Norman style. Cong is the central pass between the loughs Mask and Corrib into Joyce Country and Connemara. The waters of Lough Mask are 36 feet higher than those of Lough Corrib, and pass underground through the celebrated cave called "the Pigeon-hole," into the latter. There are seven Druidical circles in and adjoining the glebe land, besides two ancient crosses, one of which has been removed to the Dublin Irish Academy. The neighbouring seats are Ashford, Ballymagibbon, and Strandhill.

CONGERSTON, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 6 miles N. of the Atherstone railway station, and 3 N.W. of Market Bosworth. It is situated on the river Anker and the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £218, in the patron. of Earl Howe, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower. There are some small charities and several almshouses. The Baptists have a place of worship, and there are National and infant schools.

CONGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Lynn, in the co. of Norfolk, 6½ miles N.E. of Lynn. It is situated in the north-western portion of the county, not far from the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £453, in the patron. of John Roper, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an old flint and stone building, consisting of chancel, nave, and tower. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. There is a National and an evening school, supported by Miss Sarah Hamond, of Swaffham, who is lady of the manor. The famous antiquary, Sir Henry Spelman, was born here in the year 1564.

CONGLETON, a chplry., municipal borough, and market town, in the par. of Astbury, in the hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles from Astbury. It is situated on the North Staffordshire railway; there is also a short branch line to the lime-quarries. The town lies in a hollow on the river Dane, near the Macclesfield canal, and is a place of considerable commercial importance. It is mentioned in Domesday Book under the name of Cogletone, and received a charter of incorporation in 1625 from James I. It is at present governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, and contained, according to the census of 1861, 2,681 houses, inhabited by a population of 12,328, against 10,520 in 1851, showing an increase of 1,808 in the decennial period. The town, which is well built and lighted with gas, contains a guildhall, bank, assembly-rooms, three churches and several chapels, besides many factories for the manufacture of silk, cotton, and ribands. Many of the inhabitants are also employed in the making of gloves and leather laces, technically known as "Congleton Points." The livings of all three churches are perpet. curs. in the dioc. of Chester: that of the old church, val. £143, is in the patron of Thomas Rowley, Esq.; and those of St. James and St. Stephen, which are of recent erection, val. £150 each, in the alternate patron. of the crown and Bishop of Chester. There are grammar, National, and other schools. President Bradshaw, who sat on the trial of Charles I., was once mayor. The honour gives the title of baron to the Parnells. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, and a County Court and Registration districts. Saturday is the market day, and fairs are held on the Thursday before Shrovetide, the 12th May, 12th July, and 22nd November.

CONGRESBURY, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles E. of the Yatton station on the Bristol and Exeter line, and 12 S.W. of Bristol, its post town. It is situated on the river Yeo. A singular custom of distributing annually the common lands by lot in single acres, hence called Dolemoors, formerly prevailed in this manor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the cur. of Wick St. Lawrence annexed, £800, in the patron. of the rustees of Queen Elizabeth's Hospital, at Bristol. The icarage house has a very remarkable porch, the arch of hich is richly ornamented with an imitation of the ell-known tooth ornament of the 13th century, but ally built about 1470 by the executors of Bishop eckington, the arms over the doorway, cut in the riginal stone-work, being those of the see of Wells and f Beckington's executors, the same as in the Vicar's lose, at Wells, so that this house was built about the me time as that work. The church, dedicated to St. ndrew, is a stone edifice in the perpendicular style, ith two small chapels. It contains a font of the 12th ntury. The register commences in 1557. The charities roduce about £5 per annum. The Plymouth Brethren nd Primitive Methodists have places of worship, and here is a National school. In the village is a fine arket cross, which stands on five tiers of steps. This as once a market town, and St. Congar is said to have unded an oratory here in 711. A fair is held on the th September.

CONHOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Aymestry, in the . of Hereford, 6½ miles N.W. of Leominster.

CONINGSBY, a par. in Horncastle soke, parts of indsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles S. of Horncastle, d adjoining Tattershall. It is situated on the rivers in and Witham, and the Horncastle canal. The reat Northern railway passes within a few miles of e village. Boston is its post town. The par. com- ises the ext. par. places of Langrick Ferry and Haven nk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, l. £644, in the patron. of Lord Aveland. The church, dicated to St. Michael, is a commodious edifice. he Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists ve places of worship. There are National and Sun- y schools. The annual val. of the charities is about 2. Eusden, the poet laureate, held the living of this rish for some time, as also did Dyer, who wrote his Fleece" here. The lord of the manor is Sir Gilbert eathcote.

CONINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Papworth, in e co. of Cambridge, 3½ miles S. of St. Ives, and 9 N.W. Cambridge. The population is small and entirely gaged in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the oc. of Ely, val. £238, in the patron. of the bishop. he church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an old structure several styles. The charities amount to £19 a year, rent of the town lands. Here is a National school both sexes.

CONINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, the co. of Huntingdon, 9 miles S. of Peterborough, post town, and 3 S. of Stilton. It is situated near nington Fen and Ermine Street. It was possessed Turkill the Dane in the time of Canute, of whose tle there are yet traces, and afterwards came through Bruce, Wesenham, and other families, to the anti- ary Sir Robert Cotton, who formed that noble lection of MSS. and papers known as the Cottonian brary, now in the British Museum. The living is a t. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £508, in the patron. of J. eathcote, Esq. The church, dedicated to the Holy oss, and built in the reign of Henry VII., is a noble ucture in the later Gothic style of architecture, with wer. It is in good repair, and contains monuments the Cotton family, and a tablet to Prince David. ere is a girls' school with an endowment of £15 per num. Not far from the church stands Conington stle, the seat of J. Heathcote, Esq., who is lord of e manor. Here was discovered, about 6 feet below the face, the skeleton of a fish measuring 20 feet in length, d in several places in the fens are remains of a sub- rged forest.

CONISBROUGH, a par. in the southern div. of the p. of Strafforth, in the West Riding of the co. of rk, 5 miles S.W. of Doncaster, and 7 N. of Rother- m, its post town. It is situated on a hill by the river n, and contains the hmlt. of Clifton. This was the Conan of the Britons, and Cyningburgh or Conanburgh — i. e. "King's town"—of the Saxons. The living is a * in the dioc. of York, val. £206, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice principally in the Norman style of architecture. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have places of worship, and there is a National school for both sexes. The charities produce about £18 per annum. Here stand the remains of a Norman castle, built at the Conquest by William de Warren, on the site of a more ancient one; it is celebrated as the place where Richard de Conisborough, grandson of Edward III., was born, and is likewise a prominent feature in Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe." Here are various manufactories, amongst which is that of the repairing establishment of the South Yorkshire Railway Company. S. Lane Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor. Crook-hill Hall is a well-built edifice, and beautifully situated.

CONISCLIFFE, a par. in the south-eastern div. of Darlington ward, in the co. of Durham, 4½ miles W. of Darlington, its post town and railway station. The par. is situated on the northern bank of the Tees, and contains the tnshps. of High and Low Coniscliffe (the former is also called Church Coniscliffe), and the hmlt. of Carlbury. In the vicinity are several limestone quarries. The village appears to have been a Roman station on the road to Binchester, from the circumstance that an altar and many coins have been dug up. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £216, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Edwin, is a handsome stone edifice in the early English style, and is in good repair; it is situated on a hill commanding a fine prospect. The register commences in 1590. The charities produce £12 per annum. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes. P. H. Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CONISCLIFFE, HIGH and LOW, tnshps. in the par. of Coniscliffe, ward of Darlington, in the co. of Durham. [See above.]

CONISHOLME, a par. in the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Northfleet, and 8 N.E. of Louth, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £250, in the patron. of the Earl of Ripon. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice, repaired in 1853. It contains brasses bearing date 1550. The Wesleyan and Free Methodists have places of worship, and there is a parochial school. The lord of the manor is W. G. Allison, Esq.

CONISTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Swine, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles N.E. of Hull, its post town. Here is a meet for Sir C. Constable's hounds.

CONISTON CHURCH, a tnshp. and chplry in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles W. of Hawkshead, and 14 from Ulverstone. It is delightfully situated near the head of Coniston Lake, and is the terminus of the branch line which leaves the London and North-Western railway at Carnforth. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £133, in the patron. of the Rev. A. Peache. The church is a neat edifice, and was rebuilt in 1819. The Baptists have a place of worship. There are parochial and infant schools; also reading-room, and public library. The greater part of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive copper-mines and slate-quarries here. Near the lake of Coniston is a mountain known as Coniston Old Man, which is 2,600 feet above the level of the sea; from its summit the beautiful vales of Tilberthwaite and Yewdale are seen to perfection. On the borders of the lake stands Coniston Hall, an antique edifice, now used as a farmhouse. An annual cattle fair is held on the third Saturday in the month of September. The lord of the manor is Major-General E. Fleming.

CONISTON, COLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Gargrave, eastern div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles W. of Skipton, and near the Bellbusk station of the North-Western railway. It is situated on the river Aire. The living is a perpet.

cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £90, in the patron. of P. Garforth, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern stone edifice. There is a Church of England school, and Sunday schools for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £22 10s. per. annum. John W. Tottie, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CONISTON, MONK, a tnshp. with Skelwith, in the par. of Hawkshead, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles to the W. of Hawkshead. Windermere is its post town. It is situated in the Lake district, at the head of Coniston Water, abounding in trout, char, and other fish. The lake is about 6 miles long, by ¾ broad, and joins the sea by the river Crake. At Coniston Fells is some fine scenery, and copper and slate are worked.

CONISTON-WITH-KILNSAY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Burnsall, eastern div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles N. of Skipton. It is situated on the river Wharfe, and is connected by a bridge with Kilnsay. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Burnsall. The chapel of ease is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains a register, the earliest date of which is 1571. The annual val. of the charities is £5.

CONLEG, a vil. in the bar. of Ards, in the co. of Down, Ireland, 2 miles from Newtownards.

CONLY, an island in Lough Strangford, in the co. of Down, Ireland.

CONN, a lough in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, surrounded by the bars. of Carra, Gallen, and Tirawly. Its dimensions are 8 miles long by 4 in the widest part. At its lower end the lake narrows into a miniature strait, which is crossed by a bridge; numerous streams contribute their waters to this lough, and several residences beautify the spot. Here is a commodious hotel.

CONNA, a vil. in the par. of Knockmourne, bar. of Kinnataloon, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles E. of Rathcormack. It is situated on the river Bride, and has a police-station and dispensary within the Fermoy Poor-law Union. A well-built bridge spans the river. Here are the ruins of Desmond's Castle, consisting of a square tower on an eminence; it formerly belonged to Thomas Fitzgerald Roe, from whom, in 1603, it passed to Sir Richard Boyle. The castle was stormed by Cromwell, who took up his position on an adjacent vantage ground, known as the Gallows Hill. Salmon and trout fishing is carried on here. The Roman Catholic par. of Conna is in the dioc. of Cloyne and Ross.

CONNACHAN, the highest peak of St. Kilda, the farthest of the Western Islands. It is situated in N. lat. 57° 50′, and W. long. 7° 40′, on the Atlantic coast, rising 1,380 feet above the sea.

CONNACULLEW, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballinahinch, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Clifden.

CONNADOSSANN, a hmlt. as above, 9 miles E. of Clifden.

CONNAGE, a vil. in the par. of Ruthven, in the co. of Banff, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Cullen.

CONNAGE, or FISHERTON, a fishing vil. in the par. of Petty, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Inverness. It is situated on the Moray Frith.

CONNAUGHT, one of the four provs. of Ireland, comprising the most western and barren portion of the island—bounded E. and N.E. by Leinster and Ulster, S. by Munster, and N. and W. by the Atlantic Ocean. It is situated beyond the Shannon, including Connemara, Joyce's Country, Erris, Tyrawley, and other tracts, anciently forming the kingdom of the O'Conors. It was made shire-ground in the reign of Elizabeth, and divided into the five counties, Galway, Leitrim, Mayo, Roscommon, and Sligo. Its length from N. to S. is 112 miles, and its greatest breadth from the eastern boundary to Achill Head is 110 miles, though its average breadth does not exceed 86 miles. It contains 6,863 square miles, or one-fifth of Ireland. Its western coast is much broken up by numerous bays and inlets, and is thickly studded with islands. The general character of the country is rugged and mountainous, abounding in magnificent and picturesque scenery. The central parts are comparatively level, and of limestone formation; but the mountainous country west of Loughs Corrib and Conn is formed of schistose, sandstone, clay-slate, granite, and quartz. It is the least fertile of all the provinces, nearly half the surface being bog and waste. According to McCulloch, the land averages only 8s. 6d. per acre, and scarcely a seventh is in corn, beans, potatoes, or roots; the remainder is in hay, clover, and flax. The Irish language is still prevalent in this province, and so also are poverty and ignorance, though a great change for the better has recently commenced. The potatoe famine, and subsequent emigration, have materially influenced the population, and altered the proportion of Roman Catholic and Protestant inhabitants in favour of the latter. It was observed in the reports laid before parliament in 1863, that a real and progressive work of conversion was going on in some districts of this province to the Established Church. It constitutes a judge's circuit and a presbytery, and corresponds to the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Tuam.

CONNAUGHT OLD, the seat of Lord Plunket, in the co. of Dublin, Ireland.

CONNELL, a bar. in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, bounded by the bar. of Offaly on the W., and by the bars. of Clane and Naas on the E. It contains the pars. of Ladytown, Great Connell, Old Connell, Morristown Biller and Ratherman, and parts of Kildare, Feighcullen, and Kilmeage. Its length is 11 miles, and its greatest breadth nearly 5 miles. The Grand canal passes through the northern end.

CONNELL, GREAT, a par. in the bar. of Connell, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Kilcullen, and 27 from Dublin. It is situated on the river Liffey, and a branch of the Grand canal, and contains the market town of New Bridge. Here is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway of Ireland, and a handsome bridge of five arches across the Liffey. The soil is fertile but marshy. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Ladytown, £112, in the patron. of the bishop.

CONNELL, OLD, a par. in the bar. of Connell, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of New Bridge, its post town and railway station. The population is thinly scattered. The living is a rect. annexed to Morristown Biller. The principal seats are Old Connell House and Morristown Lattin.

CONNELLO, LOWER, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, bounded by the mouth of the Shannon on the N., by the bars. of Kenry and Coshma on the E., by the bar. of Upper Connello on the S., and by Shanid on the W. It contains the pars. of Cappagh, Askeaton, Clonshire, Clonagh, Dooradoyle, Croagh, Lismakeery, Kilscannell, Rathkeale, Monagh, and Tomdeely, with parts of Nantinan and Kilcornan. Its area is about 50,600 acres, much of which is bog. The limits of the barony underwent some alteration in 1835. It was formerly part of the ancient Hy-Connell.

CONNELLO, UPPER, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, bounded by the bar. of Lower Connello on the N., by the same bar. and Coshma on the E., by Cork on the S., and by Glenquin on the W. It contains the pars. of Cloncagh, Ballingarry, Colmanstown, Clenagrew, Kilfinny, Drumcollihier, Kennedy, and a part of Bruree, Adare, Croom, Carcommickle, Kilmallock, and Drehidtarsna. Its area is about 61,257 acres. Like Connello Lower, the limits of this bar. underwent some alteration in 1835. It was formerly part of the old Hy-Conall-gaura.

CONNEMARA, a district in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, almost identical with the bar. of Ballinahinch, though a slight difference exists as to the boundaries. Its form is that of a peninsula, stretching some 34 miles from between the Killeries and Galway Bay, near loughs Corrib and Mask, to the Atlantic. Its width is about 24 miles, and its area about 550,000 acres (Irish). It includes the bars. of Ross and Joyce Country. The road traces the coast-line, which is indented with umerous harbours and creeks, affording good anchorge, and well stocked with fish. The interior is an xpanse of wild, sterile, and bleak country, chiefly ountain and rock. Patches of highly cultivated round, like oases, occur amongst the bays and lakes. good description of marble is obtained, and limestone xists in abundance. Some rare plants are found here: mong others, growing under Urrisbeg, is the Erica Mediterranea and Menziesia polifolia of southern Europe; lso in the lakes, Eriocaulon septangulare. Connemara ignifies the "bays of the great sea." It belonged, to the xtent of 300 square miles, to Martin of Ballynahinch, y whom it was mortgaged to the Law Life Office.

CONNERIE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Brelade, Isle f Jersey, Channel Islands.

CONNONAGH, a vil. in the bar. of East Carbery, the co. of Cork, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Ross arbery.

CONNOR, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Lower ntrim, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. he surface is boggy, and at times partially inundated y the river Glenwherry. The parish is intersected by e roads from Ballymena to Antrim, Belfast, and Carrickrgus. It contains besides Connor, the vil. of Kells. he living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val., with illagan, Soler, and Killyglen, £206, in the patron. of e bishop. The church stands on an eminence, near e site of the ancient cathedral, just outside the village, id was built in 1818 at the expense of the late Board First Fruits. A glebe house adjoins the church, id on the glebe land are the remains of a circular rt famous in the 15th century. The Roman Catholic apel is united to those of Drumaul and Antrim. There e three Presbyterian meeting-houses, two of which long to the Covenanters. There are fifteen schools nder the National Board of Education, and one rochial. The Grange of Shilooden forms a part of is parish, but pays no rent-charge. Connor was rmerly the seat of a separate diocese, sometimes called alriada, in the province of Armagh, but it was united to own in 1442, and subsequently Dromore was added. s dimensions as a diocese are 57 miles long, by a idth of over 30, extending over parts of Antrim, ndonderry, and Down. The cathedral church is at isburn, and the diocesan school at Ballymena. It is leged to have been founded by St. Macnoise in the h century. The chapter consists of a dean, 9 rural ans, a deacon, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, and prebendaries. Fairs are held at the village of Conr on the 1st February, 2nd May, 2nd August, and h October.

CONOCK, a tythg. in the par. of Chirton, hund. of anborough, in the co. of Wilts, half a mile S.W. of urton, and 4 miles S.E. of Devizes. It is situated der the Ridge Way.

CONONLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kildwick, stern div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West ding of the co. of York, 2 miles S. of Skipton, its st town. It is a railway station on the Midland xtension line. The village is situated on the Leeds d Liverpool canal. It contains several worsted mills, d in the vicinity are lead-mines owned by the Duke Devonshire. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* Kildwick, in the dioc. of Ripon, in the patron. of ristchurch, Oxford. There is a National school, in ich divine service is performed on Sundays.

CONRAGH, or CONRY, a par. in the bar. of Rathrath, in the co. of West Meath, prov. of Leinster, land, 4 miles E. of Ballymore. The surface consists nerally of good land, with some bog and limestone. e village lies beneath that part of Usbuagh known St. Patrick's Bed. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of ath, val. with Churchtown, £346, in the patron. of the wn and bishop alternately. The Roman Catholic apel is united to that of Dysart. There is a hedgehool at Carne.

CONSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, western of Chester ward, in the co. of Durham, 16 miles W. of Newcastle, and 12 N.W. of Durham. Gateshead is its post town. It is situated on the river Derwent, and is united with Kintsley. The Lanchester branch of the North-Eastern railway has a station near the village. The Wesleyans have two places of worship, and there are schools supported by the owners of the Conside Ironworks. There are extensive collieries in this neighbourhood. The principal residence is Conside Park.

CONSOLS COPPER MINES, extensive mines in West Cornwall, near Gwennap. They employ between 1,000 and 2,000 miners, and penetrate the surface above 300 fathoms.

CONSTABLE SANDS, off the coast of Denbighshire, near Great Orme's Head.

CONSTANTINE, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, in the co. of Cornwall, 7 miles S.W. of Falmouth, its post town, and 6 E. of Helston. It is situated on the river Helford, from the banks of which there are fine views. Petty sessions are held, as also courts leet and baron annually for Lord Clinton, and a manor court for Sir R. Vivian, Bart., the lord of the manor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £486, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Constantine, is a handsome Gothic edifice, and contains tombs of the Gerveyses of Bonallack. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the village, and there are British and Sunday schools. In the vicinity is a large granite boulder, called the Tolmen, 33 feet in height, which is estimated to weigh 760 tons. This village is a meet for the Four Barrow hounds. A cattle fair is held on the Wednesday nearest Midsummer Day.

CONSTANTINE, an island in Constantine Bay, off the coast of Cornwall, near Trevovehead, about 4 miles W. of Padstow.

CONTIN, a par. in the district of Wester Ross, in the co. of Ross, Scotland. It is bounded on the N. by Lochbroom, on the E. by Urray and Fodderly, on the S. by Urray and Kilmorack, and on the W. by Gairloch and Lochcarron. It is about 30 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The surface is mountainous, with some well-cultivated valleys. It is drained by the Conan and its tributaries flowing eastward into the Cromarty Firth. There are many lakes, some of which, such as lochs Fannich, Chroish, and Luichart, are of considerable size. Loch Achilty discharges its surplus water by a subterranean canal, and has an artificial island, formerly used as a retreat from danger. Loch Kinnelan has also an artificial floating island, the base of which is timber, and on its banks is a good echo. Natural wood exists in considerable quantity. There is a Druidical circle on the E. side of Loch Achilty; and E. of Loch Kinellan is the battlefield on which the Mackenzies of Seaforth routed the Macdonnells of Glengarry. The principal mansion is that of Sir George Mackenzie, Bart., at Coul. This par. is in the presb. of Dingwall, and in the patron. of the crown. Stipend £265. There are two parliamentary churches in the parish, one at Ceanloch-Luichart, and the other in Strathconan, where also there is a Free Church preaching station. Fairs are held at Contin in January, May, and August.

CONVETH, the name of two ancient pars., the one united to Kiltarlity, in Inverness-shire, the other to Laurencekirk, Kincardineshire, Scotland.

CONVOY, a par. and post town in the bar. of Raphoe, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 21 miles N.E. of Donegal. The par. is bounded on the W. by Lough Deel. It nearly half consists of bog and mountain; the chief summit being Cork Mountain, which rises 1,198 feet above the level of the sea. The river Dale, upon which stands the village, and the road from Raphoe to Stranorlar pass through the parish. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £100, in the patron. of the Dean of Raphoe. The church was built by means of a gift and loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, four Sunday and several day schools scattered through the parish. The principal residence is Convoy House.

Fairs are held on the 1st February, 17th May, 21st June, 1st August, 26th October, 3rd November, and 2nd December.

CONWAL, or CONEVAL, a par. in the bars. of Kilmacrenan and Raphoe, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The surface is mountainous and boggy, with some waste land. The parish is intersected by the road from Strabane to Dunfanaghy, and has the head of Lough Swilly lying to the S.W. It contains the post town of Letterkenny. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £873, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The church was built about 1782, and there are meeting-houses for Covenanters and Methodists, two united Roman Catholic chapels, seven Sunday and twenty-two day schools, within the parish. An abbey is alleged to have been founded here in the 6th century. Ballymacool is the principal residence.

CONWAY, or CONWY, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Isaf, and co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 22 miles N.E. of Carnarvon, and 223 N.W. of London by road, or 233¼ miles by the North-Western and Chester and Holyhead railways. It is situated on the left bank near the mouth of the river Conway, hence called by the Welsh, Aber-Conway. The town is supposed by some antiquarians to occupy the site of the Roman station Conovium, and many antiquities have been found in the vicinity; but it is more probable that Caer-Rhun, a small village 5 miles higher up the river, was the ancient Conovium.—The present town has gradually grown up round the castle, which was built by Edward I. in 1284, to overawe the Welsh. It was besieged by the Welsh in 1290, under the command of Madoc, but was relieved by the arrival of the English fleet which Edward had sent round with provisions. It was occupied by Richard II. on his landing in Wales from Ireland to attack Bolingbroke, afterwards Henry IV. At the commencement of the civil war of the 17th century it was garrisoned by Williams, Archbishop of York, for the king, but was taken by Mytton in 1646. The parliament spared this noble pile when they dismantled most of the other castles in Wales, but the lead and timber were removed by Lord Conway, to whom it was granted on the Restoration, and the edifice fell into decay. The strength of its walls and towers was such, that time has not been able to efface the proportions of this once formidable fortress. It stands on the verge of a precipitous rock on the S.E. of the town, and forms part of the walls of the town, which still remain entire, strengthened at intervals by twenty-one towers, besides two towers at each of the three entrances. The Mayor of Conway is constable of the castle, which is in keeping with the general aspect of the town, picturesque in its antique beauty, but everywhere showing the ravages of time. The streets of the older portion of the town are narrow and irregular, and many of the more conspicuous buildings crumbling to decay. The building which attracts most attention from visitors is the Plâs Mawr, or Great Hall, belonging to the Mostyn family; it is supposed to have been built in 1576, and displays the capability of the Elizabethan style of architecture for profuse decoration. In the interior are some good specimens of carved oak, and the walls are ornamented with emblazoned armorial bearings of ancient families, nitched figures, and scrolls. Many new houses have recently been built both within and without the walls, for the accommodation of such as wish to enjoy the invigorating effect of the sea and mountain breezes, which are nowhere more delightfully combined than on this part of the coast.—The town was formerly governed by an alderman, two bailiffs, a water-bailiff, recorder, coroner, and two sergeants-at-arms. It is now governed by a mayor and corporation, and is contributory to Carnarvon in returning one member to parliament. The parliamentary borough contains 496 inhabited houses, with a population of 2,523, against 2,105 in 1851, showing an increase in the decennial period of 418. This increase of population is attributed in the census of 1861 to the sale of land for building purposes consequent on the parish being resorted to by visitors. The spring assizes were formerly held here, but were removed to Carnarvon. Petty sessions for this and the adjacent hundred are still held in the town.—The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £121, in the patron. of Sir D. Erskine. The church, which stands near the centre of the town, is a venerable Gothic pile, built at the beginning of the 14th century on the site of the ancient conventual church of the Cistercian abbey, founded by Llewellyn-ap-Jorweth, Prince of North Wales, in 1186. Portions of the building have subsequently been added in various styles, but a considerable part of the original structure remains. The church contains an oak screen, elaborately carved, and a curious font of the 15th century. The Independents and Wesleyan and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels, and there are spacious National schools, with a parochial lending library.—The trade of the town has recently considerably increased, owing to the erection of the suspension bridge in 1826, by Telford, at the cost of £40,000, which was defrayed by the Government, and to the influx of summer visitors. The principal business of the place consists in ship-building and the Irish traffic, which latter, however, has not answered the Government's expectation when the suspension bridge was originally designed. Timber, bark for tanning, and slate are exported, and coals, wine, and general merchandise imported. The harbour is commodious, and the tideway deep and rapid between the rocks on which the suspension bridge is fixed. The length of the bridge, measured between the centres of the supporting towers, is 327 feet, and its height above the stream at low tide 36 feet. In continuation of the bridge is an embankment, stretching across the sands, above 2,000 feet in length, and 30 feet in breadth at the top, while the base is 300 feet broad, faced with stone throughout. The Conway is also crossed by an immense wrought-iron tubular bridge, constructed at the cost of £110,000, by the great engineer, Robert Stephenson, for the Chester and Holyhead railway. The length of the tube is 400 feet, and its height above high-water mark 18 feet, resembling, in its chief characteristics, the similar structure over the Menai Straits, likewise belonging to the Chester and Holyhead railway. A great change has occurred in the river near the town since the construction of these bridges, by the contraction of the channel, from above 900 feet broad where the ferry-boat crossed, to 200 feet. The water is consequently much deeper, and small vessels, called flats, can ascend the river for ten miles to Trefriw, where a good quay is formed, and slates exported in large quantities.—Besides the picturesque ruins of the castle, with its outer and inner courts, great hall, 130 feet in length, hanging terrace, and oriel chamber, there are many antiquities in this vicinity. The castle of Diganwy, now quite ruined, stood opposite to the town; and the circular fortification on the Tremynydd is a singular curiosity.—The market day is Friday, and fairs are held on the 26th March, 30th April, 20th June, 10th August, 16th September, 20th October, and 15th November.

CONWIL CAYO, or CYNWYL GAIO, a par. in the hund. of Cayo, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 7 miles N.W. of Llandovery, its post town, and the same distance from Lampeter, both which have railway stations. The mines are believed to have been worked by the Romans. It contains the hmlts. of Cwmcothy, Lower Cwmtwrch, and Maestroyddin. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the vic. of Llansawel annexed, £224, in the patron. of the Prince of Wales. The church, an ancient and commodious structure, is dedicated to St. Cynwyl. The Calvinists have a chapel. There are some small charities. It was a Roman station, situated on the Sarn Helen, and the remains of a Roman aqueduct, antiquities, and coins have been found. There are sulphureous and chalybeate springs. Fairs are held on the 30th May, 21st August, and 6th October.

CONWIL-IN-ELFET, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Elvet, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5 miles N.W.

f Carmarthen, its post town and railway station. It s situated on the river Gwili. The living is a vic. anexed to that of Abernant, in the dioc. of St. David's, n the patron. of the Duke of Leeds. The church is edicated to St. Michael. There are some small charies, and an endowed school. The Calvinists have a hapel. There are remains of a large cromlech.

CONYNGHAM HOUSE, the seat of the Countess onyngham, in the West Riding of the co. of York, ear Knaresborough. It is situated on the river Nidd, nd was the ancient seat of the Coghills. In the vicinity re two Saxon or Danish camps, called Conyngarth and Tateshill.

COOKBURY, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles N.E. of Holsworthy, s post town. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to he rect.* of Milton Damerell, in the dioc. of Exeter, in he patron. of the Rev. W. D. Anderson. The church, edicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice the early English style. The charities produce about 10 per annum.

COOKHAM, a hund. in the eastern portion of the co. Berks, contains the pars. of Cookham, Sunninghill, nd Binfield, comprising 14,330 acres.

COOKHAM, a par. in the hund. of Cookham, in the . of Berks, 3½ miles from Maidenhead. It is a station the Wycombe branch of the Great Western line. he village is beautifully situated on the western side the river Thames, and was anciently a market town. he living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £480, the patron. of J. Rogers, Esq. The parish church, edicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient Gothic ructure, and was tastefully restored in 1860. It contins monuments to Sir Isaac Pocock, Knt., Sir George oung, Bart., and others. Besides the parish church ere is a district church at Cookham Dean, the living of hich is a perpet. cur., val. £90, in the patron. of the car. In that part of Maidenhead which lies in this arish there is a church, being a sinecure incumbency, l. £172, in the gift of E. F. Maitland, Esq. The Vesleyans have a chapel, and there are parochial hools for both sexes; also almshouses for eight persons. he inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacre of paper and boots and shoes.

COOKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the . of Suffolk, 3 miles W. of Halesworth station. The ing is a rect.* annexed to the rect.* of Huntingfield, the dioc. of Norwich, in the patron. of Lord Huntingld. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone ilding in the perpendicular style of architecture, sisting of chancel, nave, and tower. It contains a ss of 1587 to the Brown family. The charities ount to £18 per annum. Lord Huntingfield is lord the manor.

COOKLEY, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Wolrley, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles N. of Kidderinster. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of orcester, val. £60, in the patron. of W. Hancock, Esq.

COOKLEY GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Watgton, hund. of Pirton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles of Watlington, and 14 S.E. of Oxford. It is situated ar Icknield Street on the Chiltern hills.

COOKNOE. See COGENHOE, Northamptonshire.

COOKRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Addle, upper . of the hund. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the of York, 4 miles S.E. of Otley. Here silk spinning carried on.

COOKSTOWN, a par. and post town, in the bar. of Ratoath, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, miles to the E. of Dunshaughlin. The parish extends ng the Dublin border, and is traversed by the road m that city to Slane. The living is an impropriate t. in the dioc. of Meath, val., with Ratoath, £595, in patron. of the crown.

COOKSTOWN, a market and petty sessions town in bar. of Dungannon, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of ster, Ireland, 23 miles N.E. of Omagh, and 109 from blin. It is the terminus of the Cookstown branch of Belfast and Northern Counties railway. The town is modern, having been founded by the Cook family at the commencement of the 17th century. It contains two banks, a savings-bank, dispensary, and Union poorhouse. The parish church of Derryloran, which has been recently rebuilt and enlarged, stands in the town, and there are several chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics and to the Protestant Dissenters. There is a National school, and schools attached to most of the chapels. It is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 16 parishes, and a chief station of police. The principal residences are Killymoon and Lissan; the former is a noble mansion, built by Nash, in the Saxon style. In the vicinity are traces of ancient forts and earthworks. The market is held on Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs take place on the first Saturday of each month.

COOKSTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tireragh, in the co. of Sligo, prov of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Easky.

COOKSTOWN, UPPER and LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Bray, bar. of Rathdown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 15 miles S.W. of Dublin. They are situated in a beautiful spot on the coast of St. George's Channel, where the Cookstown rivulet joins the river Bray.

COOLACARRA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, in the co. of Tipperary, Ireland, 10 miles S. of Nenagh.

COOLACLONE, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 8 miles, S.W. of Macroom.

COOLAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Moy Cullen, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 5½ miles S.E. of Oughterard.

COOLAGHFLAGS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kells, in the co. of Kilkenny, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Kilmaganny.

COOLAGHMORE, a par. in the bar. of Kells, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Callan, its post town. The surface generally consists of good land, and contains Kyledohie-wood. The par. includes the hmlts. of Knockbatton, Coolaghflags and Serehan. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Callan, £1,845, in the patron. of the Marquis of Ormond. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Earlstown and Callan. Coolaghmore House is situated nearly in the centre of the parish.

COOLANEAGUE, a vil. in the bar. of Condons, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 2 miles from Kilworth.

COOLANEY, a postal vil. in the par. of Killoran, bar. of Laney, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles to the S.W. of Sligo. Here is a dispensary within the Sligo Poor-law Union.

COOLATTIN, a postal vil. in the par. of Carnew, bar. of Shillelagh, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N. of Carnew. Here is an inn and a school-house. Coolattin Park is the elegant demesne of Earl Fitzwilliam. Fairs are held on the 26th February, May, and November.

COOLAVIN, a bar. in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated near Lake Gara. Its ancient name was Gregragia. The bar. of Corran forms its northern boundary, the co. of Roscommon its southern and eastern, and the co. of Mayo its western. It contains the pars. of Killaraght, Kilfree, and part of Kilcolman. Its length is nearly 9 miles, its greatest breadth over 7, and it covers an area of 29,157 acres, about one-tenth of which is in Lough Gara, and a large proportion is bog. Offshoots of the Curlew chain of mountains cross the interior, and the river Boyle effects the drainage of the southern portion of the barony.

COOLAVOTA, a vil. in the bar. of Duhallow, in the co. of Cork, 3 miles N.W. of Kanturk.

COOLBANAGHER, or BALLYCOLLON, a par. in the bar. of Portnahinch, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Mountmellick. The surface consists of good land, with bog and limestone. The parish is traversed by the divergent roads from Dublin to Limerick and Cork, and the Grand canal, which branches off here to Mountmellick, and the Barrow. It contains Lough Emo, part of Maryborough Heath (on which is a racecourse), and the postal village of Emo. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. £454, in the patron. of the crown. The church dates from 1786. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a place of meeting for Wesleyans, and ten day-schools within the parish. Here are the ruins of Shane Castle, destroyed during the Civil War; also remains of the castles of Morrett and Coolbanagher. Emo Park is the residence of the Earl of Portarlington.

COOLBAY, or CASTLEBAY, a vil. in the par. of Carnew, bar. of Shillelagh, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Carnew. It stands on the little river Derry and the road between Aughrim and Carnew. Fairs are held on the 27th January, 10th March, 28th April, 16th June, 28th July, 22nd September, 27th October, and 15th December.

COOLCARRON, a vil. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 2 miles from Fermoy, and 20 N.E. of Cork. It is situated near the river Blackwater.

COOLCASHIN, a par. in the bar. of Galmoy, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Johnstown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Aghour, £704, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Lisdowney and Clontubrid. Freshford is its post town.

COOLCOR, an ancient par. united to the par. of Ballyburley, in King's County, Ireland.

COOLCORCORAN, a bog near the lake of Killarney, in the bar. of Magonihy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its depth is about 10 feet; and until recently it supplied turf for the town of Killarney.

COOLCRAHEEN, a par. in the bars. of Crannagh and Fassadinin, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Freshford, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Castle-Comer. The surface consists of good land with limestone. The river Nore passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Odagh, £337, in the patron. of the bishop. An evening school is held occasionally during the week. Here are ruins of Inchmore Castle and of the church.

COOLDERRAGA, a hmlt. in the bar of West Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Macroom.

COOLDERRY, two small places of this name, one in King's County, the other in Monaghan, Ireland.

COOLDOO, a hmlt. in the bar. of Mohill, in the co. of Leitrim, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Cloone, and 2½ S.E. of Mohill.

COOLE, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Fermoy. Cloyne is its post town. This parish lies at the foot of the Nagles mountains. The surface consists of good land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £112, in the patron. of the bishop. Divine service is performed at a private house, and the Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Castle-Lyons. Here are ruins of Desmond's Castle, and remains of an abbey founded by the Barry family in 1296, but subsequently transferred to the Knights Templars. On the site of the latter stands the modern residence named Coole Abbey.

COOLE, a bar. in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland; bounded by the bar. of Magherastephana on the N., by Monaghan on the E., by the co. of Cavan on the S., and by Upper Lough Erne on the W. It contains the pars. of Drummully, Currin, and Galloon. It is 11 miles in length, over 10 miles in the widest part, and extends over 21,017 acres, a large proportion of which is bog. The interior is bisected by the road from Cavan to Enniskillen, and the drainage of the southern district is effected by the river Finn.

COOLE, a vil. in the par. of Mayne, bar. of Fore, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Castle Pollard. Here is a police station. Much bog exists in the vicinity, and within a short distance is Turbotstown, a handsome modern mansion. Fairs are held on the 20th May and 20th November.

COOLEAGH, or COOLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster Ireland, 4 miles on the road from Killenaule to Fethard The soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. Cashel, val. with Killenaule, £817, in the patron. of the bishop. The population is small, and there is neither church nor chapel. Knocktopher is the post town.

COOLEMORE, or COOLMORE, a vil. in the bar. West Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 2 miles from Millstreet. There are also three seats of the name: one in Tipperary, near Fethard; another in Kilkenny, near Thomastown; and the third in the co. Cork, about 3 miles from Cove.

COOLESTOWN, or COLLASTOWN, a bar. in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, bounded by the bar. of Warrenstown on the N., by the co. of Kildare on the E., and by the bar. of Philipstown on the S. and W. It contains the pars. of Ballynakill, Clonsast, and Monasteroris, and part of Castlejordan. Its length is 9½ miles, its width at the widest points is near 7 miles, and its area 47,882 acres. The country is flat, with much bog and waste land. The river Boyne drains the drainage of the N. and the Feagile of the S. portion.

COOLEY-HEAD, a promontory in the bar. of Dundalk, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the N. of the opening to Dundalk Bay.

COOLFIN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, Ireland, 2 miles from Bannagher, and 83 from Dublin. There is also a hmlt. of the same name in the co. of Waterford, near Portlaw.

COOLGARROW, a vil. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Enniscorthy. There is also a hmlt. of this name in the co. of Kerry, near Killarney.

COOLGOWNY, a large bog in the bar. of Eglish, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Limestone and gravel are found beneath the surface.

COOLGRANY, a vil. in the par. of Inch, bar. of Gorey, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Gorey. Here are a police station and a dispensary, within the Gorey Poor-law Union. Coolgrany House is the principal residence.

COOLINEY, or COOLINE, a par. in the bars. of Orrery and Kilmore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.W. of Charleville, its post town. The soil is of very superior quality, and limestone is procurable in places. The living is a cure. rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, in the patron. of the bishop. Public worship is performed in a schoolroom at Shandrum. The chief residence is Coolinev House.

COOLING, or COWLING, a par. in the hund. of Shamwell, Aylesford lathe, in the co. of Kent, 5 miles from the Higham station of the North Kent and 6 N. of Rochester, its post town. It is situated near the Thames, and a large portion of the land is marsh. This parish was called by the Saxons Colincg, and belonged to Duke Eadulf; it afterwards came to the Cobham family, who erected a castle here in the reign of Richard II., and which was besieged in Mary's reign by Sir Thomas Wyatt. The towers and walls of the castle are still standing, although in a ruinous condition. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £600, in the patron. of J. Allnston, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small ancient structure, with tower, and contains a double piscina, and brasses from 1508.

COOLKENNA STREET, a postal vil. or hmlt. in the par. of Aghold, bar. of Shillelagh, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Tinahely. Fairs are held on the 1st February, May, August, and November.

COOLKERRY, a par. in the bars. of Clandonagh and Clarmallagh, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the E. of Rathdowney. The par. is divided by the intrusion of a part of Aghaboe. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Ossory. The nearest church is at Rathdowney, that of this parish being in ruins.

COOLMUNDRY, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, iles to the E. of Fethard. The living is an impro-riate rect. in the dioc. of Cashel. The nearest church at Fethard. The principal seat is Grove House.

COOLOCK, a bar. in the co. of Dublin, prov. of einster, Ireland. The Irish Sea forms its eastern oundary, the bar. of Nethercross its northern, Dublin ay its southern, and the bar. of Castleknock its western. t contains the pars. of Baldoyle, Artaine, Cloghran-words, Balgriffin, Clonturk, Clontarf, Howth, Coolock, illester, Kilbarrack, Malahide, Kinsaley, Raheny, ortmarnock, Santry, St. Margaret's, and parts of rangegorman, Glasnevin, Swords, and St. George's. s is 8 miles in length, by 7½ broad at the widest part, nd has an area of 27,907 acres of picturesque country.

COOLOCK, a par. and post town in the bar. of its ame, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, miles N.N.E. of Dublin. The surface consists of very ood soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, al. £232, in the patron. of the Marquis of Drogheda. he church stands in the village. It was built in the iddle of the 18th century, and underwent considerable nprovements in 1815. There are a Roman Catholic apel, united to those of Clonturk, Clontarf, and intry, and three schools. The village stands on the ad from Dublin to Malahide, and has a fine view of ublin Bay. The Domvilles are the chief proprietors the parish, who succeeded its ancient owners, the albots, of Malahide Castle. Here are two holy wells. oolock Lodge is the seat of Sir E. R. Bourough, Bart., nd numerous other seats adorn the neighbourhood.

COOL PILATE, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, hund. f Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 4½ miles S. of Nant-ich, its post town and railway station. It is intersected y the Birmingham and Liverpool canal.

COOLRAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Offerlane, bar. of pperwoods, in Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, miles to the S.W. of Mountrath. Here is a police tation, Coolrain House is the principal residence.

COOLSTUFF, a par. in the bar. of West Shelmaliere, the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile . of Taghmon, its post town. The surface consists enerally of good land. The parish is traversed by the ad from Wexford to Taghmon. Part of the Forth ountains lie within its limits. The living is a rect. in e dioc. of Ferns, val. £165, in the patron. of the bishop. here are three schools within the parish, but neither hurch nor chapel. There are ruins of Hearn's Castle.

COOLVALLY, a vil. in the bar. of Bantry, in the co. f Wexford, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Killann.

COOLYHUNE, a vil. in the bar. of Lower St. Mul-ns, in the co. of Carlow, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Borris.

COOM, a hmlt. in the bar. of Magunihy, in the co. Kerry, Ireland, 11 miles N.E. of Killarney. It is so the affix to the names of several small rivers and kes in the cos. of Cork, Kerry, and Waterford.

COOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Marlborough, in the . of Devon, 3 miles W. of Kingsbridge.

COOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of East Meon, in the . of Hants, 6 miles W. of Petersfield.

COOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Crewkerne, in the . of Somerset.

COOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Enford, in the co. f Wilts, 6 miles N. of Amesbury.

COOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Huish Episcopi, in he co. of Somerset, near Langport.

COOMBE ALMER, a tythg. in the par. of Sturmin-er Marshall, in the co. of Dorset, 4½ miles W. of Vimborne Minster.

COOMBE BISSETT, a par. in the hund. of Cawden, the co. of Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Salisbury. It is situated on the banks of the Avon. The living is a vic.* the dioc. of Salisbury, val. with the cur. of West Harnham annexed, £220, in the patron. of the Prebend Coombe and West Harnham. The church is dedicated St. Michael. There is a National school.

COOMBE CASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Heytes-ury, in the co. of Wilts, 16 miles N.W. of Salisbury, nd 91 from London. It is situated near Salisbury ain, on the river Wiley.

COOMBE EAST, a tythg. in the par. of Bishop's Lydeard, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Taunton.

COOMBE KEYNES, a par. in the hund. of Winfrith, in the South Blandford div. of the co. of Dorset, 5 miles W. of Wareham, its post town, and 1½ mile S. of Wool station on the South-Western line. It contains the vil. of Wool. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £95, in the patron. of J. Weld, Esq. There is a district church at Wool, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Rood, is an ancient edifice, with square tower. J. Weld, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Lulworth Castle.

COOMBE NETHER, a hmlt. in the par. of Litton Cheney, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles E. of Bridport.

COOMBLY, a hmlt. in the par. of Whippingham, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Hants, 3 miles N.E. of Newport.

COOMBS, a par. in the hund. of Steyning, rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles S. of the Bramber station of the Mid-Sussex line, and 2 S.E. of Steyning, its post town. It is situated on the river Adur. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £201, in the patron. of Lord Leconfield. The church is a small building in the early English style of architecture. Lord Leconfield is the owner of the soil.

COOMBS, a hmlt. within the borough of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 1 mile N.W. of Lewes.

COOMBS DITCH, a hund. in the North Blandford div. of the co. of Dorset; contains the pars. of Blox-worth, Blandford, Blandford Forum, Anderson, St. Mary, Winterborne Thompson, Winterborne Whit-church, and Winterborne Clenstone, comprising an area of 11,520 acres.

COOMBS EDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Chapel-en-le-Frith, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles S.W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith.

COONAGH, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, bounded on the W. by the bars. of Clanwilliam and Owneybeg; on all the remaining sides it is surrounded by the co. of Tipperary. It contains the pars. of Castletown, Ballynaclough, Tuogh-cluggin, Oola, and parts of Doon, Aglishcormick, Kil-teely, Grean, and Templebredon. It is 10 miles in length by 8 wide, and covers an extent of 36,324 acres. Continuations of the Keeper mountains lie in the northern part of the barony.

COONAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Pubblebrien, in the co. of Limerick, Ireland, 2 miles from Limerick.

COONARD, a vil. in the bar. of Kilmaine, in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Clare.

COONOGUE, a vil. in the bar. of East Idrone, in the co. of Carlow, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Borris, and 70 from Dublin, by the Great Southern and Western rail-way of Ireland, which has a station at Bagnalstown.

COOPER'S GREEN, the name of several small hmlts.: one in the co. of Herts, near Hatfield; another in Surrey, about 6 miles from Chertsey.

COOPER'S HILL; there are several seats and hmlts. of this name both in England and Ireland. The best known is the mansion of Lord Longford, situated on the Thames, near Staines, in the co. of Surrey; it forms the theme of Denham's poem. Another is near Reading, in the co. of Berks, and a third near Stroud in Gloucestershire. In Ireland there are seats of this name in Limerick, Meath, Queen's County, and Sligo.

COOPERSAIL. See THOYDON-GARNON, Essex.

COOPERSAL, a hmlt. in the par. of Epping, hund. of Waltham, in the co. of Essex, 1 mile S. of Epping, and 15 miles W. of Chelmsford. It is situated on the border of Epping Forest. Here is a fine old mansion, formerly the seat of the Archers, believed to have been built at the beginning of the 15th century.

COORACLARE, a vil. in the par. of Kilmacduane, bar. of Moyarta, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.E. of Kilrush.

COOTEHALL, a vil. and demesne in the bar. of Boyle, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated on the river Boyle, and about 6 miles on the road from Boyle to Battlebridge. An old bridge crosses the river here, and the village has a dispensary within the Boyle Poor-law Union. The mansion stands near Upper Lough, Oakport.

COOTEHILL, a post and market town in the par. of Drumgoon, bar. of Tullygarvey, in the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 12 miles to the E.N.E. of Cavan. It is situated on the river Coragh, on the road from Dublin to Clones. It contains a chief police-station, sessions-house, bridewell, banks, dispensary, and Union poorhouse. The parish church of Drumgoon stands in the town, as also chapels for Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Methodists, Moravians, and Quakers. Cootehill Poor-law Union consists of 12 electoral divisions, with 18 guardians, and is extended into Cavan and Monaghan. The linen trade of this town is very considerable. The surrounding district is one of extreme beauty, and there are numerous elegant residences. Bellamont Forest, the seat of R. Coote, Esq., to whom the town belongs, contains some excellent family portraits and other paintings. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the third Friday in each month.

COOTER, a lough in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Gort. It is 3 miles in length by 1½ mile broad, and drains its waters into Kinvarra Bay, by a subterranean passage. On its banks is situated Lough Cooter Castle, the seat of Viscount Gort.

COPDOCK, a par. in the hund. of Samford, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles S.W. of Ipswich, and 2½ N.E. of the Capel station on the Great Eastern railway. It is situated on a tributary of the river Orwell. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the vic. of Washbrook annexed, £483, in the patron. of Lord Walsingham. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a National school. Lord Walsingham is lord of the manor.

COPELAND BECK, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Michael's, Appleby, in the co. of Westmoreland, 1½ mile S.E. of Appleby, its post town and railway station. There is a small woollen factory.

COPELAND, or COUPLAND, CASTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Wooler. It is situated on the river Glen, and in the 14th century was the seat of John de Copeland, who took David II. of Scotland prisoner. It was rebuilt by the Wallaces at the commencement of the 17th century.

COPELAND FOREST, a rugged, mountainous district in the co. of Cumberland, situated between Ennerdale and Egremont. Some of the peaks rise to the height of from 2,000 to 3,000 feet.

COPELAND ISLANDS, a group lying to the S. of Belfast Lough, in the par. of Bangor, in the bar. of Ardes, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The principal among them are Big Island, Cross Island, Lighthouse Island, and Mew Island. Big Island is well cultivated, and the inhabitants rear large numbers of domestic fowl, which are of uncommon size. The seaweed, which is washed on shore by every tide, is used as manure. The light on Lighthouse Island can be seen from the Mull of Galloway, in Scotland; it was erected in 1796, and is 131 feet high. It was among these islands that the Enterprise went down in 1801, with specie on board, part of which was recovered about thirty years afterwards. These islands take their name from their ancient owners in the 12th century.

COPFORD, a par. in the Witham div. of the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles S.E. of the Marks Tey station of the Great Eastern line, and 4 miles S.W. of Colchester, its post town. It is situated on the river Roman, and at one time belonged to the see of London. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £680, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is a very ancient structure of Saxon architecture, and the walls are remarkably thick. The charities consist of three tenements and a garden known as Mountjoy's Almshouses. The manor of Copford Hall anciently belonged to the see of London, and is supposed to have been the residence of Bishop Bonner. The walk to the church still bears his name, and some of the trees are believed to have been planted by him.

COPGROVE, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N. of Knaresborough. Boroughbridge is its post town. It is situated on the river Nidd. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £200, in the patron. of T. Duncombe, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone edifice. The charities produce £ per annum. The principal residence is Copgrove Hall which contains a fine collection of portraits and busts.

COPINSHAY, or COPENSAY, an island in the district of Mainland, Orkney, one of the Orkney and Shetland group. This island is 1 mile long and half a mile broad, and forms part of the par. of Deerness. It is frequented during the summer by vast numbers of sea-fowl, which, with their eggs and feathers, form an article of traffic.

COPLE, a par. in the hund. of Wixamtree, in the co. of Bedford, 4 miles S.E. of Bedford, its post town and railway station. It is situated on a branch of the river Ouse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, £215, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, and contains brasses and monuments of 1380. Here is a free school, chiefly supported by the Duke of Bedford, who is lord of the manor, and has a large mansion here. It was here that Butler wrote part of his "Hudibras." Cope Hall was lately the residence of the Earl of Ludlow.

COPMANTHORPE, a chplry. in the par. of St. Mary, York Ainsty, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S.W. of York. It is a station of the Great Northern and North-Eastern railways. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. with the perpet. cur. of Upper Poppleton annexed, £96, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Mary.

COPNOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Portsea, in the co. of Hants, near Portsmouth.

COPP, a vil. in the par. of St. Michael-on-Wyre, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles S. of Garstang. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £190, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Michael.

COPPENHALL, a par. in the hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 1 mile from Crewe, its post town, and 2 miles from the Crewe station on the North-Western line. It comprises the tnshps. of Church Coppenhall and Monks Coppenhall. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £216, in the patron. of the Bishop. There is a district church at Crewe, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £300, in the patron of trustees. The parish church, dedicated to St. John, is a brick structure with tower, rebuilt in 1851, and possesses an ancient chest preserved from the old building. The Wesleyans and Methodists have each a chapel. There are parochial and Sunday schools. The charities amount to £35 per annum. Near Crewe stands the Hall-i'-th'-Street, an ancient seat formerly occupied by the Shaw and Delahurst families.

COPPENHALL, a chplry. in the par. of Penkridge, eastern div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles N.W. of Penkridge, and 2 S. of Stafford. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £85, in the patron. of Lord Hatherton. The chapel, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a small ancient structure. Lord Stafford is lord of the manor.

COPPENHALL, CHURCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Coppenhall, hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles from the Crewe railway station, 4 from Nantwich, and 5 from Sandbach.

COPPINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 6 miles S. of Stilton, and 8 N.W. of Huntingdon. It is situated on the river Alconbury. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of Upton, in the dioc. of Ely, in the patron of Lord Montagu. The church is in ruins. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor. The principal residence is Coppingford Hall.

COPPING SYKE, an ext. par. place, partly in the

vap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, and partly in Hornastle soke, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 iles from Swineshead.

COPPLESTONE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of rediton, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles N.W. of Exeter.

COPPULL, a chplry. in the par. of Standish, hund. f Leyland, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of horley, and 5 from Wigan. It is a station on the Manhester and Preston section of the London and North-Western railway. Near the village are extensive colieries and bleach-fields. The living is a perpet. cur. the dioc. of Manchester, val. £120, in the patron. of ie Rector of Standish. The church is a plain structure. The charities amount to £34 per annum. Here e a Wesleyan Methodist chapel, a National school for oth sexes, and a Sunday school. The Right Hon. E. ardwell is lord of the manor.

COPSON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolvey, in the co. Warwick, 6 miles S.E. of Nuneaton.

COPSTON MAGNA, a hmlt. in the par. of Monks irby, hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 7 iles E. of Nuneaton. The living is a cur. in the dioc. Worcester, annexed to the vic.* of Monks Kirby, in e patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The chapel, dicated to St. John the Baptist, is in the Norman yle, and was erected by subscription. Here is a ational school. The Earl of Denbigh is lord of the anor. The principal residence is Copston Lodge.

COPT GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Epping, in the . of Essex, 2 miles W. of Epping. It is situated on e borders of Epping Forest, and contains Copt Hall, fine old Elizabethan mansion, anciently the seat of ie Heneages. In the vicinity is a British camp called mbersbury.

COPTHALL, the name of several seats: one in the ar. of Hendon, in the co. of Middlesex, 7 miles N.W. London; another in Bedfordshire, near Luton; and third in Hertfordshire, near Hemel Hempstead.

COPT HEWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripon, in e West Riding of the co. of York. It is situated near ewick Bridge.

COPTHORNE, a hund. in the middle portion of . of Surrey, contains the pars. of Epsom, Chessing-n, Ashtead, Cuddington, Newdegate, Leatherhead, ustead, Walton, Fetcham, Mickleham, Headley, and rt of Ewell, comprising 34,730 acres.

COPTIVINNEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, the co. of Salop, 1 mile N. of Ellesmere.

COPT OAKS, a vil. in the ext. par. district of arley, hund. of West Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, niles S.W. of Loughborough. It is situated on the olds, near Charnwood Forest.

COQUET, a river of Northumberland, rising in the eviot hills, and after a course of 40 miles through quetdale, falls into the German Ocean below Alnouth Bay, near Warkworth. Its banks are well-oded, and it is a favourite resort of anglers, abound-g in salmon and trout. Among the pebbles washed up its stream are found cornelians, agates, and moun-in crystals.

COQUETDALE, a ward in the middle portion of e co. of Northumberland, divided into 4 divs.: the rth contains the pars. of Ingram, Alnham, Eglingm, Edlingham, Ilderton, and Whittingham; the uth the pars. of Elsdon and Ramshope; the East the rs. of Long Framlingham, Shilbottle, Alnwick, and rts of Felton, Warkworth, and Brinkburn; the West pars. of Holystone, Rothbury, and Allenton; comsing together about 269,590 acres.

COQUET ISLE, a small island off the coast of Northumberland, at the mouth of the river Coquet. It is out 1 mile in circumference, and is principally pasture. ere are two lighthouses; the one on the S.W. side of island is 80 feet high, with a fixed light visible for miles. The inner channel, between the island and quet Head, is scarcely a quarter of a mile across, and bstructed by reefs.

CORAAN-ACHILL, a nearly insulated tract of untain land, in the bar. of Burrishoole, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The coast-line is bold and grand. From an eminence on the narrow isthmus which connects it with the mainland, a most imposing view of Clew Bay may be obtained.

CORBALLIS, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Duleek, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Drogheda. There are also two small places of this name in the co. of Dublin.

CORBALLY, a par. in the bar. of East Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Cork. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Carrigrohane, £697, in the patron. of the bishop. Ballincollig is its post town.

CORBALLY, a par. partly in the bars. of Ballybritt and Clonlisk, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, and partly in the bar. of Ikerrin, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles S.E. of Birr. The surface in parts is mountainous and boggy, but with a fair proportion of good arable land. The parish is trisected by intervening portions of Roscrea. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe. There are Roman Catholic chapels, and three day schools. There is no church, but public worship is performed at a private house. There are remains of a Culdee abbey, in the Norman style of the 7th century. The property formerly belonged to the Dillons.

CORBALLY, a par. in the bar. of Gualtiere, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the W. of Dunmore. Roscrea is its post town. It lies along the eastern side of Tramore Bay, near Aland's Bay, and consists of varied soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. with Killure, £99, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Tramore, and a National school.

CORBALLY, a vil. in the par. of Castleconnor, bar. of Tireragh, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Ballina. Besides the above there are numerous seats and small hamlets of this name in almost every part of Ireland.

CORBET-HILL, a demesne in the bar. of Bantry, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of New Ross. The insurgents encamped here the night before they attacked New Ross in 1798.

CORBETSTYE, a hmlt. in the par. of Upminster, in the co. of Essex. 4½ miles S.E. of Romford.

CORBIE-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Balmerino, in the co. of Fife, Scotland.

CORBIE LOCH, a small lake in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Aberdeen.

CORBOY, UPPER, a hmlt. in the bar. and co. of Longford, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Longford.

CORBRIDGE, a par. in the eastern div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles E. of Hexham, and 16 W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The Newcastle and Carlisle section of the North-Eastern railway passes through the par., and has a station near the village. The par., which derives its name from the small river Cor., which here falls into the Tyne, contains 10 tnshps. and hmlts. It is situated on the N. side of the river Tyne, across which is a stone bridge of seven arches, erected in 1674. It is a place of great antiquity, and was once a borough returning members to parliament. In 771 it possessed a monastery, and in 1138 was occupied by David I., and destroyed by fire in 1296, and again in 1311 by the Scots. It came through the Clavering family to the Percys. It possesses a market-cross, which was erected by the Duke of Northumberland in 1814; but the market has been discontinued. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. with the cur. of Halton annexed, £482, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a handsome ancient edifice, in good repair, and possesses a register commencing in 1657. The charities amount to £67. The Wesleyans have places of worship here; and there is a National school, library, and reading-room. The soil is very rich, and the chief employment of the inhabitants consists in agriculture. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor, and holds a court-leet and court-baron here. Halt a mile from this place, on Watling Street, was the ancient Roman town of Corstopitum, till lately showing above ground, and from which place the stone used in erecting the above-mentioned church was procured. A great cattle fair is held on Whitsun Eve, and another on the 4th of July, at Stagshawe Bank near here, also a tryst fair on 24th November.

CORBRIDGE, a vil. in the pars. of Burslem and Stoke-upon-Trent, in the co. of Stafford, near Burslem.

CORBY, a hund. in the northern portion of the co. of Northampton, contains the pars. of Blatherwycke, Great and Little Newton, Weston, Weekley, Wilbarston, Cottingham, East Carlton, Dingley, Fineshades, Stoke-Albany, Wakerley, Gretton, Corby, Sutton-Basset, Oakley, Brigstock, Ashley, Deene, Geddington, Great Weldon, Brampton, Balwick, Harringworth, Laxton, Rockingham, Stanion, comprising 59,400 acres.

CORBY, a par. in the hund. of Corby, in the co. of Northampton, 8 miles N.E. of Kettering. Thrapstone is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, and in the patron. of the Earl of Cardigan, who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel, and there are British and free schools for boys and girls. The charities produce £11 per annum.

CORBY, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Bourn, and 10 S. of Grantham. It is a station on the Great Northern line. The par. is situated on the banks of the river Glen, near the Roman way to Ancaster. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, annexed to the rect.* of Irnham, in the patron. of the trustees of W. H. Woodhouse, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a large stone edifice in the decorated style of architecture. It was partly restored and redecorated in 1861, and in the following year a handsome memorial E. window was inserted by the present vicar. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have places of worship, and there is a grammar school for boys of the parish, with an income of £48 per annum. The annual value of the charities is about £11. The trustees of the late W. H. Woodhouse, Esq., are lords of the manor. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before Easter, 26th August, and Monday before the 10th October.

CORBY, GREAT, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Wetheral, Eskdale ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles from Brampton, and the same distance from Carlisle, its post town. The Newcastle and Carlisle section of the North-Eastern railway has a station at Wetheral for Corby. In this township is Corby Castle, a seat of the Howards. It is situated on a lofty cliff above the river Eden, which, with its wooded and rocky banks, forms a picturesque feature in the landscape. The castle is irregularly built; and, although several centuries old, has been so much altered at various times, that it now seems a comparatively modern erection. The grounds were beautifully laid out a century ago under the direction of Thomas Howard, an ancestor of the present owner of the manor, and a descendant of the famous "Belted Will" of border history, the dread of the moss-troopers, and the civiliser of the Scottish borders. In these grounds there are temples and grottos, the latter excavated beneath the surface, with steps cut in the solid rock leading to them. One of these caves is said to have been hewn out by a Scottish prince named Constantine as a hermitage, in which he lived for some years, and it still goes by the name of St. Constantine's Cell.

CORBY, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Warwick, Eskdale ward, in the co. of Cumberland, adjoining Great Corby. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Eden and Irthing.

CORCHESTER, a hmlt. in the par. of Corbridge, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 1 mile W. of the vil. of Corbridge. It is supposed to have been the site of the Roman station Corstopitum, from the circumstance of numerous antiquities and ruins of temples having been dug up, some with Greek inscriptions.

CORCOMOHIDE, a par. partly in the bar. of Orrery in the co. of Cork, and partly in the bar. of Upper Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Charleville. The surface is of good quality, with some bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Castletown, Kilmeedy, and Drumcolloher, £248, in the patron. of the Vicars Choral of Limerick Cathedral. Newcastle is the post town. The church is old and out of repair. There are Roman Catholic chapels at Kilmeedy, Castletown, and Drumcolloher, the latter being annexed to that of Killaliathan. There are several schools within the parish.

CORCOMROE, a bar. in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, bounded by Burren on the N., by Inchiquin and Ibrichane on the E. and S., and by the Atlantic Ocean and South Sound on the W. It contains the pars. of Kiltenora, Cloony, Killinaboy, Killaspuglonane, Kilmacreehy, Kilshanny, Kilmanaheen, and Killaraght. Its length is near 11 miles by a breadth of 10, and its area about 61,385 acres of hilly land, with Lough Licken lying in the midst.

CORCREEGHAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ardee in the co. of Louth, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Louth.

CORCULLEN, a hmlt. in the bar. and co. of Galway, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Galway.

CORDANGAN, or CARDANGAN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Headford. Orla is its post town. It is situated on the road from Tipperary to the valley of the Aherlow, and stretches into the Golden Vale. The soil is amongst the richest in Ireland. The surface is mountainous, rising 1,000 feet in the highlands of the W. part. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Emly. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is united to Latin. The principal seats are Brookville and Ballyglass.

CORDOON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilmainebeg, in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Kilmaine, and 5 from Ballinrobe.

CORDUFF, the name of several seats in Ireland, in the cos. of Dublin, Kildare, and Monaghan.

COREEN HILLS, a chain of limestone hills in the southern part of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, rising to the height of 1,200 feet, and separating the valleys of the Don and Bogie.

CORELY, a par. in the Cleobury div. of the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles W. of Cleobury Mortimer, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Tenbury, its railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £280, in the patron. of A. F. Hurcourton, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient brick structure, with tower and spire. There are free schools for boys and girls. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor.

CORFAD, a lough in the co. of Cavan, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Stradone.

CORFE, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles from Taunton, its post town. The village is situated under Blackdown Hill. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £66, in the patron. of Lady Cooper, of Barton House. The church is a stone edifice in the Anglo-Norman style. It received in 1843, and again in 1868, various additions and repairs. Here is a National school for both sexes. The lord of the manor is Robert Mattock, Esq.

CORFE CASTLE, a par. and corporate town, in the hund. of the same name, in the Wareham div. of the co. of Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Wareham railway-station on the Dorchester line, and 23 from Dorchester. The parish forms part of the Island of Purbeck, and includes the chplry. of Kingston and 5 tythgs. besides the town of Corfe Castle, which was formerly a market town and representative borough, returning two members to parliament till disfranchised by the Reform Act. It is now included in the parliamentary borough of Wareham. This place, which is called in the Saxon Chronicle Gors Corves-geate, appears to have derived its importance om a strong fortress built by King Edgar in the 10th ntury, at the gate of which Edward the Martyr was eacherously stabbed in the back by direction of his ep-mother Elfrida, whilst drinking to the health of his lf-brother Ethelred and herself; this, says the Saxon hronicle, was the foulest deed committed since the ngles came into England. The castle appears, from e existing remains, to have been rebuilt by William e Conqueror, and in the reign of Stephen it was taken y Baldwin de Rivers, Earl of Devonshire, who held it gainst the king. Its walls subsequently witnessed many agic scenes. Here the twenty-two Poictou noblemen ere starved to death by order of King John, who lected it as the securest place for his regalia. Edward was removed here from Kenilworth, on his way to erkeley Castle, where he shortly after met his terrible ath by order of the Queen and Mortimer; Richard II., ter he was deposed, was a prisoner here for a short me previous to his murder at Pontefract. Henry VII. paired the castle, as also did Sir Christopher Hatton, whom the manor and castle were granted with the st of the Isle of Purbeck by Queen Elizabeth. Sir illiam Hatton, his descendant, gave them to his lady, lizabeth, daughter of Thomas Earl of Exeter, who terwards married Lord Chief Justice Coke; by whom ey were sold in 1635 to Sir John Bankes, attorney-neral to Charles I. and afterwards Chief Justice of the ing's Bench, in whose family they have since re-ained. In the Civil War, Sir John Bankes being absent ith Charles I. at York, the castle was besieged by Sir alter Erle, who expected to have surprised it; but it as so heroically defended by Lady Bankes and her ughters, assisted only by their domestics and tenants, at it held out till relieved by Captain Lawrence, who as despatched by the king from Blandford, where the yal army had meanwhile arrived. It was again be-eged by the parliamentary forces, but Lady Bankes and aptain Lawrence, with about eighty soldiers, defended for six weeks, with the loss of only two men. A third me the parliamentary forces laid siege to it in 1645, der Sir Thomas Fairfax, and gained possession of it rough the treachery of Lieut.-Colonel Pitman, an ficer of the garrison. It was then dismantled by order the parliament; and large masses of the walls and wers lie scattered in the vale beneath. The remains this stupendous edifice are extensive and grand, cupying the summit of a lofty and steep eminence to e north of the town, with which they are connected a bridge of four narrow circular arches called St. dward's Bridge, crossing a deep ravine.—The town, hich stands on rising ground, at the bottom of a range hills near the centre of the Isle of Purbeck, consists incipally of two streets diverging from the market ace, where formerly stood the market-cross. The uses are built and roofed with stone from the neigh-uring quarries, which are no longer worked, and are proached by a flight of steps. In former times the autiful grey marble called Purbeck-stone was largely ported, but the chief trade now consists in the digging potter's clay, upwards of 60,000 tons of which article e annually shipped for Staffordshire, Worcestershire, d other pottery districts. At the entrance from the ondon road is an ancient stone bridge over the small ver Corfe, by which the town is bounded on the east.—hough a borough by prescription, the town was not corporated till the 18th of Queen Elizabeth, who in-sted it with the same privileges as were enjoyed by e Cinque Ports. Under the existing charter of Charles . the corporation consists of a mayor, who is elected the court-leet of the lord of the manor, held at ichaelmas, and eight barons, who have previously rved the office of mayor. The mayor and ex-mayor e, by virtue of their offices, justices of peace, and minister the affairs of the town under the lord of the nor, who was anciently an important officer of state, ing hereditary lord-lieutenant and admiral of the e of Purbeck, with power of appointing all officers d determining all actions or suits in his own courts. He also exercised the authority of Lord High Admiral, and had power to array the militia; but these privileges lapsed in 1757, upon the passing of the Militia Act, Mr. Bankes, then lord of the manor, having omitted to enforce his claim.—The living of Corfe Castle is a rect., val. £685, in the dioc. of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. Edward the Martyr, has recently been entirely restored with great taste, and most part of it rebuilt, except the tower, which is a massive embattled structure. The chapel-of-ease at Kingston is a beautiful little structure, rebuilt and decorated by the late Lord Eldon. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Bushey. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels, and there are National and British schools. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, part of which is the endowment of an almshouse for six aged persons.—In the vicinity are Rempstone Hall, the residence of John Hales Calcraft, Esq., and Encombe House, the seat of the late Lord Chancellor Eldon, who erected an obelisk on the summit of a neighbouring hill, in memory of his brother, the late Lord Stowell. At Nine Barrow Down, about 2 miles E. of the town, are sixteen barrows, nine in a straight line; they are situated near the summit of the hill, which rises 642 feet above the sea, commanding a beautiful view of Swanage, the British Channel, and the Isle of Wight. Fairs are held on the 12th of May and 29th October.

CORFE GATE, or CORYATTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Portisham, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Dorchester.

CORFE MULLEN, a par. in the hund. of Cogdean, East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 2 miles S.W. of Wimborne-Minster, its post town and railway station on the South-Western line, and 6 N.W. of Poole. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £412, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, and has recently been repaired. The Methodists have a chapel. The two endowed schools have been united, and the building recently enlarged. The charities produce £80, of which one-third is paid to the curate; the remainder is applied to provide bread and cheese every Sunday for ten poor children, beef at Christmas, and apprentice fees when required. St. John Coventry and Willett Adye, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

CORFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Diddlebury, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles N. of Ludlow.

CORGARF, a mountainous district around the sources of the Don, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is 8 or 9 miles long, and forms part of the par. of Strathdon, Here is a missionary minister on the royal bounty, and also a Roman Catholic chapel. Corgarf Castle is a military station on the road from Fort George, 21 miles from Castleton of Braemar. The earls of Marr had anciently a hunting seat here, which was burnt by the Gordons in 1571.

CORHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Meon Stoke (lower half), in the co. of Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Bishop's Waltham, and 7 N.E. of the Botley railway station on the Southampton and Gosport line. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £39, in the patron. of J. H. Wyndham, Esq. The church is an ancient stone edifice in the Norman style, with monuments. The annual value of the charities is about £34. Corhampton Down is a meet for the Hambledon hounds. The lord of the manor is J. H. Wyndham, Esq. The principal residence is Corhampton House, the seat of Lady Dillon.

CORK, a maritime co. in the prov. of Munster, in the S.W. of Ireland, bounded on the E. by the cos. of Tipperary and Waterford, on the N. by Limerick, on the W. by Kerry, and on the S. by the Atlantic Ocean. It is the largest county in Ireland, both in extent of surface and of arable land, extending from 9° 45′ to 10° 3′ W. long., and from 51° 12′ to 52° 13′ N. lat. Its length from Dursey Island, its most westerly point, to Youghal, E.N.E., is about 110 miles, and its greatest breadth from N. to S. is 70 miles, with an average breadth of 34 miles, comprising an area of 2,885 square miles, or 1,846,333 acres, of which 1,308,882 are arable, 465,889 uncultivated, 52,180 in plantations, 6,515 in towns, and 12,867 under water. The population in 1851 amounted to 649,308, but in 1861 had decreased to 544,818, showing a diminution of 104,490 persons.—The history of the county dates back to a remote period. It was originally peopled, according to Ptolemy, by the Uterni, or Uerini, or as called by others, the Iberni. They occupied the district afterwards held by the Desmond family, in the southern part, and from the name are supposed to have been of Spanish or Iberian origin. Contemporary with this tribe were the Vodii, who inhabited the eastern portion of the district, whilst the Coriondi held possession of the northern and middle districts. The ancient divisions cannot be accurately given, but prior to the English settlements the whole formed the kingdom of Desmond, together with a portion of Waterford and the county of Kerry. In the year 1177 Henry II. of England granted the territory to Milo de Cogan and Robert FitzStephen, except the city of Cork and some of the surrounding country. In 1210 it was shire ground. The next important change took place in 1583, when Sir Walter Raleigh, the Boyles, and others obtained the forfeited estates of the Desmonds. Subsequent changes took place in 1642 and 1691, during the troubles which occurred at each of those periods respectively. Kinsale Head is famous as being the spot where the Spaniards obtained a temporary footing; and Bantry Bay as being the rendezvous of the French fleets in 1689 and 1796.—By the statute of the 4th George IV. cap. 93, this large county was divided, for the purpose of more frequent holding of general sessions of the peace, into two districts, called the East and West Ridings; these have been again subdivided for quarter sessions purposes, the former into three, the latter into two districts. The East Riding contains the bars. of Barretts, Barrymore, Condons and Clangibbon, Cork, Duhallow, Fermoy, Imokilly, Kerrycurrihy, Kinalea, Kinnatalloon, part of East Muskerry, Orrery and Kilmore, Kinsale, and Youghal libs. The West Riding contains the bars. of Bantry, Bear, East and West Carbery, Ibane and Barryroe, Kinalmeaky, West Muskerry, part of East Muskerry, and Courceys.—The county returns eight members to parliament, which are divided as under:—two for the county, two for Cork city, and one for each of the boroughs of Youghal, Bandon, Kinsale, and Mallow. Before the Union the county sent twenty-four members to the Irish parliament, of which two were for the county, two for the county of the city of Cork, and two for each borough. The constituency for the county in 1859 numbered 15,716, and the county members are elected at the court-house in the city of Cork, though each riding constitutes a separate jurisdiction for the purposes of registration. The county is included in the Munster circuit; the assizes are held in Cork city, and by an Act 4 George IV., it is enacted that five general sessions of the peace shall be held in alternate months in each of the two ridings, so that in the county at large a session is held every month, except the two months in which the general sessions are held for the entire county. The sessions for each division are directed to be held for the East Riding alternately in the city of Cork and at Middleton, Fermoy, Mallow, and Kanturk; and for the West Riding alternately at Bandon, Macroom, Bantry, Skibbereen, and Clonakilty. These 23 baronies comprise 251 separate parishes, constituting the whole of the dioceses of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, and a small part of Ardfert. On the death of Dr. Brinkley, Bishop of Cloyne, in 1835, that see was added to Cork and Ross by the Church Temporalities Act of the 3rd William IV. The united diocese is one of the eleven which constitute the ecclesiastical province of Cashel; it is entirely within the county of Cork, extending about 74 miles in length and 16 m breadth, and contains an estimated superficies of 356,300 acres. The majority of the population, however, are Roman Catholics; there being, according to the census of 1861, only 26,736 members of the Church of England in the diocese of Cork, 11,746 in the diocese of Cloyne, 4,746 in that of Ross, and 6,421 in t part of Ardfert comprised within the county of Cork. The local government is vested in a lord-lieutenant, deputy-lieutenants, and 282 magistrates, besides wh there are the usual county officers, including 4 corone and a constabulary force partly paid by governm and partly by the grand jury presentments. Cork the headquarters of the military district of that nam comprising 17 barrack stations, situated respectively Charles Fort, Camden Fort, Fermoy, Kinsale, Ballincollig, Carlisle Fort, Spike Island, Youghal, Rocky Islan Hawlbowline, Mitchelstown, Buttevant, Mallow, Ba don, Dunmanway, Millstreet, and Clonakilty. A dep for convicts has been established at Spike Island, whe persons sentenced to transportation are retained, inste of being sent as formerly to Western Australia and V Dieman's Land. The county gaol and house of co rection are situated in the city of Cork, besides wh there are seventeen bridewells in different parts of t county. The net annual value of property in the count under the Tenement Valuation Act is £1,023,587, di tributed between town and country. Besides the ci of Cork, which, with an extensive surrounding distri forms a county of itself, Cork contains the borough market, and seaport towns of Youghal and Kinsale, t boroughs and market towns of Bandon and Mallow, t seaports and market towns of Cove or Queenstown, a Bantry; the market and post towns of Fermoy, Skibbereen, Macroom, and Dunmanway; the ancient di franchised boroughs of Baltimore, Castlemartyr, Charleville, Clonakilty, Doneraile, Midleton, and Rathcormac, and the small towns or villages of Ballincollig, Buttevant, Castle-Lyons, Castletown-Bearhaven, Castletown-Roche, Cloyne, Crookhaven, Innishannon, Kanturk, Kildorrery, Kilworth, Liscarrol, West Millstreet, Mitchelstown, Passage, Rosscarbery, and Timoleague, all of which are post towns.—In a county of so large extent a great variety of soil and scenery is to be met with, but the general aspect of the country is pleasing and well cultivated, notwithstanding the deficiency of timber and of hedgerows and plantations. The western part is bold, rocky, and mountainous, while the northern and eastern portions are distinguished for their richness and fertility; it is, however, in the southern and south-western portions of the county that the grandest scenery occurs, where the stupendous masses of schistose rock are raised like adamantine barriers against the fury of the Atlantic waves, which for the greater part of the year are driven with fury against them by the force of the prevailing winds. The climate is remarkable for its mildness of temperature, never reaching any great extreme of heat or cold, compared with other places situated in about the same degree of latitude. Its proximity to the ocean renders it moist, like most of the western counties of Ireland, but drainage has effected a great improvement in this respect, as well as in the productiveness of the land. The soils may be classed under four heads:—1. The calcareous, found in the limestone tracts, which are very fertile and produce good wheat crops. 2. The loamy, not calcareous, generally resting on clay-slate, these lands are next in fertility to the calcareous, and comprise the less elevated tracts in the S. 3. The light and shallow soils, resting upon gravel or rubble, which in wet seasons produce good corn crops, but are better fitted for pasture, the herbage being short and sweet, and in dry seasons subject to drought. 4. The moorland or peat, the usual substratum of which is a hard rock or coarse retentive clay, rendering tillage difficult; these lands when susceptible of cultivation are planted in oats, potatoes, or grass. Salmon occur on the coast and in the large bays.—The principal minerals are iron, which was largely smelted whilst wood was obtainable for fuel; copper, worked principally at the Allahies mines, where 1,500 to 2,000 hands are employed; coal (anthracite), found near Dromagh and Lisnacon; quartz, on the hills round Cork, Ross, Queenstown, and Youghal; veined marble, occasionally in the limestone near Bantry; limestone, fuller's-earth, and brick-clay.—The principal river is t Blackwater, rising in the mountains bordering on ry in the W.; it runs S. to near Millstreet, where suddenly turning E. it runs for many miles, past Mall and Fermoy, into Waterford county, returning in to Cork county, and eventually falls into the sea Youghal Harbour. The Lee also rises in the W., ving from Lake Gougane-Barra, eastward 30 miles, Cork, where it divides into two channels, and then ens into an extensive estuary. The other rivers are Bandon, Ilen, Funcheon, North Bride, and Awbeg.

e coast is deeply indented by numerous bays and inlets, ning safe and commodious harbours, of which the st noted are those of Bantry, Dunmanus, Clonakilty, sale, Cork Harbour, and Youghal. Off the southtern coast are several small rocky islands, of which principal are Cape Clear, with a population of 52, and Innisherkin, near the harbour of Baltimore;
r and Whiddy, in Bantry Bay; and Dursey, off the montory of Bearhaven, forming the most western remity of the county. In the mountainous districts re are several lakes, the most interesting being ugane-Barra, with the hermitage of St. Finbar, and ua, situated in a very lonely part of the country; the lakes of Cahir, near Glengariffe, the Seme, at ee Castle Head, and Lough Loughbofinny, near
ry. The chief ranges of mountains are the Nagle, rah, and Muskerry, running between the rivers Lee Blackwater; the highest points being Hungry Hill
49 feet, Cahirbarna 2,234 feet, and Knockinsea 1,386
. Another range runs towards Mizen Head, S. of river Lee, including the Clargh hills, of which hy, 1,796 feet, is the highest point.—The principal ways are the Great Southern and Western, connect-Cork city with Dublin, and the Eastern Coast, with nches to Fermoy and Killarney, which leave the in line at Mallow; the Cork and Bandon railway, ich is to be extended to Dunmanway and Skibbereen;
Cork and Limerick direct line; the Cork, Youghal, d Queenstown direct line; and the Cork, Blackrock, d Passage railway, connecting Cork city with Cork rbour, from whence steamers leave for America, Eng-d, Scotland, and various ports of Ireland. The chief es are the British and North American Royal Mail amships, from Queenstown to Boston, calling at lifax; the Liverpool, New York, and Philadelphia amship Company's vessels, from Queenstown to New rk. The steamers for England and Scotland sail to several ports of Bristol, Cardiff, Glasgow, Liverpool, ford, Newport, and London (calling at Plymouth);
re are also steamers from Cork to Waterford, and from k to Queenstown, calling at Glenbrook and Monks-n, and another line to Aghada; these two last lines are Citizen's River Steamers. The roads intersecting the unty of Cork are numerous, connecting all the chief ns in the vicinity; they may, however, be grouped o eight systems, viz., from Cork by Glanmire to ughal, by Passage and Queenstown to Cloyne, by linhassig to Kinsale and Bandon, by Bandon to okhaven and Bantry, by Ballincollig to Ballylickey Bantry Bay, by Kilcrea to Macroom and Killarney, Mallow to Tralee and Limerick, by Watergrass Hill
Kilworth to Clonmel, or by Mitchelstown to Tiprary.—The county abounds in ancient ruins, stone les, cromlechs, raths, caves, and religious houses.
ar Clonakilty is a stone circle, an ancient pillar one single stone, and an artificial cave. Ross sesses similar antiquities, and near Glanworth and tlemary are monuments of curious form. Rosscary is famous for its caves, so also the Great Island, Cork Harbour, and The Ovens, near Cork. There round towers at Cloyne and Kineth of considerable and in good preservation. Ancient weapons, urns, other antiquities are found in the bogs. Ancient les are numerous, a few of great magnificence, but greater number consist only of square towers or s; Kanturk Castle is the largest, but the most esting is probably Blarney, the ancient seat of McCarthyes, famous for the celebrated "Blarney ne."

CORK, a bar. in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, situated in the S.E. part of the co., and till lately forming, with the city of Cork, a county of itself. It contains the pars. of Curraghippane, Kilcully, Rathcooney, and parts of Carrigaline, Carrigrohane, Dunbulloge, Iniskenny, Killanully, Kilnaglory, St. Anne Shandon, St. Mary Shandon, St. Catherine, St. Finbarr, St. Michael, St. Nicholas, and Whitechurch, comprising above 45,300 acres.

CORK, a seaport, city, municipal and parliamentary borough, forming a co. of itself, but locally situated in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, of which prov. it is the capital, and ranks third among the cities of Ireland for population, wealth, and commerce. It is situated in N. lat. 51° 53′ 39″, and in W. long. 8° 20′, being distant from Dublin 158 miles by the old road, but 165 by the Great Southern and Western railway, which connects the two cities, and runs to Penrose Marsh through a tunnel of half a mile. The Cork, Blackrock, and Passage railway runs only 8 miles, and follows the course of the river from the road near the Monerea Marsh. The Cork and Bandon railway runs 20 miles, passing near the park on the S. side, and terminates at Albert Quay. The Cork, Queenstown, and Youghal direct line runs a distance of 27 miles. There are two other short lines, one to Kinsale and the other to Skibbereen, which last is in course of completion.—The city, situated on the river Lee, which here diverges into several branches, and forms an island, is 11 miles inland from the entrance of the river into Cork Harbour. It is, nevertheless, a large bonding port, with coastguard stations and spacious quays. The assizes for the county and city are held here. It is also the headquarters of the S. military district, and the seat of a bishop. Its name is supposed to be derived from the Gaelic word Corcach, signifying "a marshy place," the original city having been built on a limestone rock, on the margin of the S. branch of the river, which at that period inundated the surrounding country. The history of the city dates back to about the year 600, when an abbey was founded by St. Barr, or Finbarr, to whom such numbers of disciples resorted that Cork soon rose to be a city of some importance. But what is now known as the city was subsequently built on the island by the Danes, who are said to have burnt and plundered the old city and its religious establishments. The Danes eventually settled here about the year 1020, and alternately lost and won possession of it; but it is known to have been in their possession when Dermot McCarthy, the then Prince of Desmond, did fealty to Henry II. of England, and gave up the city in the year 1172. The English king immediately appointed an English governor, with a garrison, and made it a mint town. He likewise granted to the citizens a charter, the original of which is now lost, but a copy was a few years ago discovered by Richard Saint-hill, Esq., amongst the Harleian MSS. in the British Museum. The Desmonds afterwards took possession of the city, and war was waged between the English and Irish for some years. In 1177 Henry granted the surrounding territory to Milo de Cogan and Robert Fitz-Stephen, with the exception of the city and adjacent cantreds, occupied by the Ostmen, which he kept in his own possession. In 1185 the city was again besieged by Dermot McCarthy, but the Irish forces were routed, and in the following year Dermot was slain by a party of English, under Theobald Fitz-Walter, the founder of the noble house of Ormond. Shortly after, the success which crowned the military efforts of the Irish obliged the English garrison to capitulate to the Prince of Desmond, but in a few years they recovered possession of the city, and strengthened it by the erection of Shandon Castle, which kept the men of Desmond in subjection. The English at length prevailed, and in the year 1199 it is recorded that one John Despenser, civic magistrate, was made Provost of Cork. Nothing of importance occurs again until the time of Perkin Warbeck, who landed here from Lisbon in 1492, and was well received by many Irish, from dislike of the Lancastrian king; but on this occasion the Lord-Deputy Kildare was more circumspect than in the affair of Simnel, and the impostor, failing to rouse the people, retired to the court of Charles VIII. On the 23rd of November, 1699, John O'Water, or Walters, the mayor of Cork, was condemned, and suffered at Tyburn, together with Warbeck, for his participation in this conspiracy. During the Desmond insurrection, in Elizabeth's reign it was the headquarters of the English forces, and adhered faithfully to the queen, who presented Maurice Roche, the then mayor, with a silver collar of the Order of St. Simplicius, for his able services against the insurgents. This trophy is still preserved by his descendants, the Kearneys, of Garrettstown. In 1601 the English army assembled here which drove the Spaniards out of the country. On the accession of James I. the city refused to acknowledge him, but was soon reduced to obedience. In 1636 the Algerine pirates, who had before visited the coast, reappeared, and caused some alarm. In 1649 the city was taken by Cromwell, and in 1690 Marlborough besieged and took possession of it for William and Mary. Nothing of any historical moment occurred subsequently.—At this period the city consisted of only two principal streets, now called North and South Main-streets, and it appears from the records of the city to have undergone but little extension or improvement till after the death of Mary, when the corporation began to form new streets, and erect public buildings. Even at the commencement of the 18th century, it had only two entrances: the N. leading from Dublin, and the S. from Kinsale; and two bridges, the North and the South, built of wood, and which, by an Act of Parliament (1 George I. caps. 19, 20), the corporation was empowered to rebuild of stone. Half a century later, the French war brought into notice the great capabilities of its almost matchless haven, completely land-locked, and capable of sheltering the whole British navy. A brisk trade in provisions and stores consequently sprang up to supply the wants of the navy, and the surrounding country, which had previously been one extensive grazing-ground, was converted into arable land. The city shared in the general improvement, and soon became the emporium of commerce for this part of the country. The smaller channels of the river, which flowed through the middle of the streets, presenting at low water a mass of mud, were arched over at the expense of the corporation, and some of the most spacious and elegant streets have since been built above them.—Cork is a borough by prescription, and has returned two members to parliament since 1374; the number of electors in 1862 was 3,173. It comprises within its ancient chartered boundaries an area of 48,006 acres, and within its modern municipal boundaries 2,683 acres, which include the seven city parishes as below. The population of the city according to the census of 1851 was 85,745, which in 1861 had declined to 78,892, inhabiting 9,758 houses. The population in 1861 was thus distributed: 9,574 Established Church, 67,092 Roman Catholics, 825 Presbyterians, 886 Methodists, 107 Independents, 66 Baptists, 236 Society of Friends, and 106 of other persuasions. It is governed by a corporation, consisting of a mayor, recorder, sheriff, 16 aldermen, and 48 councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Cork." The revenue of the borough in 1851 was £7,504 1*s.* 5*d.* The trade is extensive, chiefly in grain, provisions, butter, hams, bacon, hides, leather, and cattle, for the sale of which there are twelve distinct markets in different districts of the city. The principal occupations are tanning, distilling, browing, iron founding, besides the manufacture of linen, frizzes, ginghams, cutlery, and the sewing of gloves for exportation, known as Limerick gloves. Besides these branches of industry, there is a considerable commission and carrying trade, in connection with the foreign and colonial shipping.—The general appearance of the city is picturesque and cheerful; the principal streets are spacious, well paved, and lighted with gas. The houses are built of brick, or of the beautiful gray limestone of the neighbourhood, and are roofed with slate. In the older part of the town, the streets are less spacious, and many of the old houses are constructed of clay-slate, fronted with roofing slate, which gives them a sombre appearance; while in the suburbs some few are thatched. The public buildings are numerous and handsome. Besides the cathedral and parish churches, the city contains the county and city courthouse, erected in 1835 at the cost of £20,000; it is a spacious edifice in the Grecian style of architecture, with a boldly projecting portico of eight columns, supporting an entablature and cornice surmounted by a pediment, on the apex of which is a group of figures, representing Justice between Law and Mercy; the interior contains two semicircular courts, in which the assizes for the county at large and those for the county of the city are held, besides offices for the judges and barristers. The mansion-house, now converted into the Mercy Hospital, was built in 1767, by the famous Ducart, at the cost of £3,793. It is a large and handsome edifice, situated on the bank of the river, near the entrance to the Mardyke Walk. Previous to the passing of the Corporation Reform Act, the mayors resided here, but since that event, which reduced their salary from £1,200 to £300, they have resided at their own houses. The ancient "nail," or "nail head," which was formerly in the entrance hall of the mansion-house, has been removed to the Corn Exchange, and the standard brass yard, with the stone bearing the city arms, to the new police office, where it is inserted in the wall. This latter building was erected a few years ago, chiefly through the exertions of the late John Besnard, jun., Esq., J.P. Queen's College is a new building, founded in 1845 by Act of Parliament, and opened in 1849; it occupies a site of ten acres at Gill Abbey, enclosing a quadrangle of 175 feet in circuit, with cloisters 362 feet round, and an examination-hall 90 feet by 36. The eastern gable is surmounted by a statue of Queen Victoria, erected by Sir Thomas Dean, the architect, in commemoration of her Majesty's visit to Ireland in 1849. The college is governed by a president, vice-president, and staff of professors in almost every branch of learning, including Celtic literature and language. The Protestant Hall is a handsome and commodious building for public lectures, concerts, &c., built by the exertion of Capt. R. Beale Tooker, J.P. The military barracks occupy a commanding eminence to the N.E. of the city; they were originally built in 1806 by the architect Hargrave, and have been subsequently enlarged for the accommodation of 156 officers and 1,994 privates, with stabling for 232 horses; the grounds for parade and exercise are spacious, and there is an hospital capable of receiving 120 patients; the headquarters and staff of the Cork or southern military district of Ireland are stationed here. The commercial buildings, including a chamber of commerce, in place of the old exchange which was pulled down in 1813, are a noble range of buildings, fronted with cement, and ornamented with Ionic columns between the windows. The new corn market was built in 1833 by trustees under an Act of Parliament (3 George IV. cap. 79); it is a quadrangular enclosure, 460 feet in length and 330 in breadth, situated beyond the S. branch of the river, near Anglesea bridge, and divided into numerous covered walks, with a covered space for weighing; the expense of its erection, with that of the bridge leading to it, amounted to £17,460. In the lobby of the Royal Cork Institution stands the statue of William III., which was removed from the mansion house. The city gaol is a castellated building, situated in an eminence near Sunday Well, with separate places of worship for Protestants and Roman Catholics, attached to this is the city bridewell, for the temporary confinement of prisoners under examination, and for detention of disorderly persons until brought before the magistrates. The county gaol and house of correction is a building of considerable pretensions, situated on the new West-road, at a short distance from the town, it is approached by a bridge of one arch, over the S. channel of the Lee, communicating with a causeway raised about 6 feet above the adjacent meadows, and terminating in an esplanade 40 feet broad, in the centre of which, and cing the bridge, is a handsome Doric portico of four lumns, surmounted by a pediment, the design having en borrowed from the Temple of Bacchus, at Athens. he lunatic asylum for the county and city of Cork has en removed from the Black Rock-road to the Lee-road. he new building is a hideous structure, like an over-own cruet-stand. The other public buildings deserving tice are the custom-house, post-office, Union poor-use, savings-bank, branches of the Bank of Ireland d Provincial Bank, National Joint-stock Bank, Butter xchange, and several clubhouses, of which the County ub, built in 1826 by Messrs. Pain, at the expense of out £4,000, is probably the handsomest building of its e; the front, which faces the South Mall, consists of a stic basement, from which rise three columns of the mposite order, supporting an entablature and cornice. he episcopal palace of the bishop of the united dioceses Cork, Cloyne, and Ross was built by Bishop Mann tween the years 1772 and 1789; it is situated on the bank of the river, surrounded by fine grounds and rdens. The deanery, situated on the S. side of the thedral, is a good modern house, known as Dean's urt. The Cork Institution, founded in 1807, where e Cuvierian and Literary Societies hold their meet-gs; the new school of design, Cork library, museum, -union theatre, diocesan library, situated near the thedral, agricultural association, temperance institu-n, North and South infirmaries, with school of ysic, one fever and two lying-in hospitals, Rotunda, henæum, to which the statue of Pitt, from the nsion-house, has been removed, deaf and dumb ylum, and a general dispensary.—Cork is the head a diocese, in the province of Dublin, to which Ross s annexed in 1583, and Cloyne in 1836. It embraces arly the whole of the county of Cork, comprising 8 ral deaneries and 196 parishes, or more correctly benefices, as more than half the parishes are ions. The bishop's income is £2,498. The chapter nsists of a dean, archdeacon, precentor, chancellor, easurer, and at present 12 prebendaries. The city divided into seven parishes, including the cathedral, ich also serves, by permission of the chapter, as the rish church of St. Finbarr. The old fabric contained shrine of St. Finbarr, to whom the church is dedi-ed, and, before the siege in 1690, had near it a round wer. The church itself was rebuilt between 1725 and 35, the expense being defrayed by a duty of 1*s.* per on all coal and culm imported into Cork for five years. e present structure is of the Doric order, except the wer, which was rebuilt about the beginning of the h century, at the cost of £500, defrayed by the pter. It is surmounted by a lofty octagonal spire hewn stone, under which is the principal entrance. the choir is a plain Venetian window, and on the S. e is the chapter-hall, where the consistorial court is ld. In the interior is the bishop's throne, of black sh oak; the prebendal stalls, which are elegantly ished; and a beautiful white marble monument to ief Baron Tracton. It is now determined to rebuild cathedral on the site of the present building, from a gnificent design by Mr. Burgess, estimated to cost 0,000. The living of St. Finbarr is a rect., appro-ate to the dean and chapter and vicars-choral. The ss value of the deanery is £630 12*s.* 11*d.* The funds the dissolved preceptory of St. John of Jerusalem re granted by Charles II. to support choral service in cathedral, which is shamefully neglected. These ds amount to something over £300 per annum; re are besides four vicars-choral, the net annual ue of each is £305 6*s.* 9*d.* On the demise of the sent vicars-choral (of whom two are deceased), the ds lapse into the hands of the Ecclesiastical Com-ssioners, who pay four stipendaries. The chapter ds amount in addition to £400 per annum. The ng of Christ Church is a vic. and rect., the former the patron. of the bishop; the latter constitutes corps of the prebend (now honorary) of the same e in the cathedral church, and is in the gift of the wn. The church, which was rebuilt in 1720, and again in 1829, is 97 feet by 57, with a richly panelled ceiling resting on ranges of Ionic pillars of scagliola. The living of St. Peter is a vic., held by the archdeacon, in conjunction with four rects., together constituting the union and corps of the archdeaconry, gros value £957 8*s.* 5*d.*, after deduction for curates, &c., £680, in the patron. of the bishop. The old church of St. Peter, the tower of which formed one of the defences of the city wall, was taken down in 1770, and the present structure has lately shown symptoms of decay, so that its demolition must speedily take place, which is the more to be regretted as Dr. Kyle, the present archdeacon, only a few years since built a handsome tower and spire, and otherwise beautified the structure. The livings of St. Anne and St. Mary, Shandon, are both rects., val. respectively £790 17*s.* 1*d.* and £385 1*s.* 2*d.*, in the alternate patron. of the Duke of Leinster and Mountiford Longfield, Esq., of Castlemary. The church of St. Anne has a tower 190 feet high, conspicuous from most parts of the city. A chapel-of-ease to this parish was erected in 1836, near the Brickfields; it is in the later English style of architecture, with a tower surmounted by a light and elegant spire at the W. end, and two lofty pinnacles at the E. The parish of St. Paul was formed in 1726 out of the districts of East Marsh, in the parish of St. Mary, Shandon, and Dunscombe Marsh, in that of Christ Church; the living is a rect., val. £251 7*s.* 2*d.*, in the patron. of the Duke of Leinster and Mountiford Longfield, Esq. The church is a small Grecian edifice, erected by subscription on land presented by the corporation. The living of St. Nicholas is a rect., with six others constituting the corps of the chancellorship, and in the patron. of the bishop. The total income in 1862 was £485 3*s.*, total expenditure £233 18*s.* 7*d.*, leaving net val. £251 4*s.* 5*d.* The old church, formerly a chapel-of-ease to St. Finbarr's, was some years back taken down, and the finest parish church in the city erected in its stead; it is built of cut limestone, with N. and S. transepts, and a chancel fitted up with choir benches and stalls, covered with crimson cloth, where choral service is performed every Sunday throughout the year by an amateur choir, and on Wednesday evenings between September and May. The service is said to be the best conducted in the South of Ireland, and is attended by the largest regular congregation, numbering upwards of 1,000 persons. There are besides a free church, near the South Infirmary, and a chapel-of-ease to St. Finbarr, at Black-rock. The old church of St. Brandon, which was situated on the N. side of the old road to Youghal, has been entirely removed, and the cemetery is now occupied by a beautiful house and grounds, the contents of the graveyard having previously been removed to another place. The Roman Catholic ecclesiastical divisions nearly correspond with the above, only the Roman Catholic see contains 33 parishes, of which three are included in the city. The first of these three parishes, comprising the greater part of the Protestant parishes of St. Mary and St. Anne, constitutes one cure, under the immediate charge of the Roman Catholic Bishop of Cork, who performs the duties of parish priest, assisted by six curates and two chaplains. The cathedral, which also serves as the parochial chapel, is a plain structure externally, but the interior is richly decorated in the later English style, and contains an altarpiece similar to that of St. Alban's Abbey in England. Besides the cathedral, there are two parochial chapels, for the Roman Catholic parishes of SS. Peter and Paul and St. Finbarr, and two chapels-of-ease at Clogheen and Brickfields. The chapel of SS. Peter and Paul has just been rebuilt on a magnificent scale, in the Gothic style of architecture, under the direction of Pugin the architect, and will be, when completed, one of the finest of modern Irish ecclesiastical structures. The chapel at Brickfields is one of the prettiest structures in the Grecian style to be found in Ireland. The main entrance is by a lofty and elegant portico, of eight columns of gray marble, standing on a raised pediment, and approached by a flight of steps, extending along the entire front; from the centre of the roof rises a cupola, supported by eight Corinthian columns, surmounted by figures of the Apostles. There are two other chapels, both Gothic, one dedicated to St. Vincent, the other to the Holy Trinity; the latter is situated on Charlotte Quay, and is still unfinished. There are four monasteries and two convents for nuns, with a chapel attached to each. The presb. of Cork includes Bandon, Clonmel, Cork, Queenstown, Lismore, Mallow, Milltown, and Tralee. Within the city there are two Presbyterian places of worship, one in connection with the synod of Munster, and the other in connection with that of Ulster. Besides which there is a Scotch Presbyterian meeting-house, recently erected on the Glenmire-road, with schools now erecting, the gift of Mr. Carmichael. There are also four places of worship for Methodists, and one each for Baptists, Independents, and Quakers. The educational establishments, besides Queen's College above described, are numerous, includnig endowed, National, parochial, and denominational schools. The principal endowed schools are the blue-coat school, or hospital for 40 boys, founded by Dean Worth on the site of an ancient hospital for lepers, and the green-coat school, founded by Archdeacon Pomeroy, also for 40 boys. There are various almshouses and charities, the principal being the Corporation, Lapp's, Skiddy's, and Bertridge's charities, besides two houses of female refuge, Protestant Orphan Society, Masonic Female and St. Patrick's Orphan asylums, with various parochial almshouses and asylums for aged people.—Near the city is a cemetery, after the plan of Père La Chaise, in Paris, on the site of the old botanical gardens. The graves are distributed over the greater part, amid the shrubs, plants, and flowers, brought hither at a very great expense by the original proprietors. The ground is intersected by broad gravel walks, and there are several handsome monuments. It was purchased in 1826 for this purpose by Father Matthews, who established his first total abstinence society in Cork, on the 10th April, 1838. Another favourite promenade is the Mardyke, a fine raised walk a mile long, on the W. of the city, sheltered by a noble avenue of elms. A park has also been lately enclosed, containing about 240 acres, extending from the Victoria-road along the S. bank of the river to Blackrock.—There are nine bridges over the river Lee and its branches, several of which are modern and elegant structures. St. Patrick's bridge, the last over the northern branch, and to which vessels sail up, was rebuilt in 1861, the former structure having been swept away by the great flood in 1853. It is now one of the finest bridges in Ireland, and connects the noble range of quays which line both sides of the river. North bridge, over the same branch of the river, was taken down in 1863, and is to be replaced by an iron bridge on stone piers. Wellington bridge, at the western extremity of the city, is a noble structure of hewn stone, erected from designs by Richard Griffiths; it consists of a centre arch of 50 feet span, and two side arches of 45 feet, with solid parapets. Anglesea bridge, erected in 1830, is a handsome structure of hewn limestone, consisting of two elliptical arches 44 feet span, with parapets of cast-iron, and two parallel drawbridges, which are raised to admit vessels above it; the expense was defrayed by the commissioners of the new corn market, who voted £9,000 for this purpose. The other bridges are small structures, several being only of one arch.—Several newspapers are published in Cork, the principal being the Cork Constitution, Cork Examiner, Cork Herald, and Cork Southern Reporter.—The men of eminence born here are numerous; amongst the painters the names of Barry, Butts, and Maclise stand pre-eminent; the sculptor Hogan, the virtuoso Anthony Wood, the county historian Townsend, the travellers Hastie and Murphy, General O'Leary, and many others, including Miss Thomson, who married the Emperor Muly Mahomet. Amongst living worthies, those who have written on the antiquities of Cork are, John Lindsay, Esq., and Richard Sainthill, Esq., who have successfully laboured in the numismatic department, and Richard Caulfield, F.S.A., and John Windell, Esq., who have devoted much time to the historical antiquities of the county; the last gentleman is also an eminent Celtic scholar. A fine collection of Irish antiquities is now forming by Robert Day, jun., Esq. Markets are held daily for provisions, but Monday and Thursday are market days for cattle. Two fairs take place annually on Trinity Monday and on the 1st October.

CORK HARBOUR, pre-eminent for its capacity and safety, is situate 11 miles below the city. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad; and from its convenient situation, the perfect security with which numerous fleets may winter in its land-locked basin, and its excellent anchorage at all times, fully justifies the motto of the city, "Statbene fida carinis." Its entrance is by a channel 1½ mile long, by 1 broad, defended by batteries on each side, and having on Roche Point a lighthouse, in N. lat. 51° 48′, and W. long. 8° 15′. There is also a floating light on Spit Sand. Within the harbour are Great Island, on which is situated Queenstown, or Cove, as it is frequently called; Little Island, and Foaty Island. Opposite Queenstown are Spike Island, on which is a bomb-proof artillery barrack, and where a convict depôt has been recently formed for the reception of convicts sentenced to transportation; Haulbowline Island, with its ordnance depôt, and Rocky Island, on which are two powder magazines excavated in the solid rock. The anchorage is in 7 to 12 fathoms with the Stag Rocks outside, high water at full and change 7½ hours, rising from 7 to 14 feet, according to the time of the year and changes of the tide, which flows up 1½ mile above the city. The upper harbour near the city has been much improved, and the channel deepened by steam dredging, so as to enable ships of 600 tons to unload at the magnificent quays which have recently been constructed. The river Lee runs down from Cork to the great harbour between hilly banks, on which many villas and storehouses are situated. The port is under a board of 30 commissioners, with a strong body of pilots attached; steamers and sailing ships sailing to all parts, but the steamers principally to England and Scotland. It is a great port for emigrants. There are several sub-ports attached, viz., Clonakilty, Kinsale, West Passage, Queenstown, and Youghal. The trade of the port is as follows:—Customs duties received in 1857, £270,873; in 1858, £275,724; in 1859, £295,327; in 1860, £283,357; in 1861, £296,256. Exports to foreign parts, direct trade, valued in 1857, £170,5[illegible], in 1858, £180,268; in 1859, £163,791; in 1860, £156,[illegible], in 1861, £131,810. There is also a very large trade carried on between Cork and the various ports of the United Kingdom. In 1861 the trade coastwise was as follows:—Entered with cargoes only, 1,846 sailing vessels, with a tonnage of 171,691 tons; 465 steam vessels, tons 198,196. Cleared with cargoes, 1,175 sailing vessels, 89,740 tons; 457 steam vessels, 196,503 tons. The foreign trade is not so large. In 1861 the number and tonnage of British and foreign vessels entered and cleared with cargoes, and in ballast was—Entered, British, 203 vessels, 56,713 tons; foreign, 289 vessels, 82,179 tons; showing a total of 492 vessels and 138,892 tons, of which only four vessels, 1,[illegible] tons, were in ballast. Cleared—British, 144 vessels, 31,135 tons; foreign, 68 vessels, 20,541 tons; total, 212 vessels, 51,676 tons; but of these the greater proportion were in ballast: viz. 148 vessels, 45,936 tons. The stocks of goods in the "bonded warehouse" are not very large. At the end of 1861 there were 40,425 lbs. of coffee, 192 cwt. of raisins, 15,214 cwt. of sugar, 288,806 lbs. of tea, 398,352 lbs. of tobacco, and 53,329 gallons of wine in bond. The income of the port is about £10,000, arising chiefly from import and export, harbour and tonnage dues, and is applied to the repair and improvement of the harbour and quays.

CORKAGUINY, a bar. in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The Atlantic and Tralee Bay form the northern boundary, the bar. of Trughanacmy the eastern, with Dingle Bay on the S., and the ocean on the W. It is 24 miles in length, and its greatest breadth is over 9 miles. It contains the pars. of Ballinvoher, Ballinacourty, Ballydaff, Cloghane, Dunquin, Dingle, Dunurlin, Garfinny, Kilgobban, Kildrum, Killiney, ilquane, Kilmalkedar, Kinard, Minard, Marhin, radbally, and Ventry, and part of Annagh; also the wns and vils. of Dingle, Annascallo, Castlegregory, radbally, Ballyduff, Ballinclare, Milltown, Cappa- ough, Cloghane, and Killiney. The surface of the bar. mountainous, and stretches as a narrow neck into the a, comprising an area of about 139,000 acres.

CORKAREE, a bar. in the co. of Westmeath, ov. of Leinster, Ireland. Fore forms its northern undary, Moyashel and Magheradernan its eastern d southern, and Moygoish its western. It is 8 miles ng by about 7 wide, and has an area of 26,960 acres. contains the pars. of Leny, Lackan, Multyfarn- m, Portnashangan, Portloman, Stonehall, Tyfarnham, ghmon, and the vils. of Ballinalack, Multyfarnham, d Bunbrusa. The surface is diversified with upland d water, being broken by the Loughs Dereveragh, n, and Owhel, and the river Inny.

CORKBEG, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, in the co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The par. lies along e right shore of Cork Harbour; the soil is good, with very excellent description of limestone beneath it. e living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £317, the patron. of the crown. Whitegate and Midleton the post towns. There is no church, but public rship is held in a private building. At the mouth of harbour is Carlisle Fort, and at Roche Point is the che tower light, which throws a red light about 4 les to sea. There is also an old fort in ruins, built the time of Elizabeth. Corkbeg House and Trabolgan the principal residences.

CORLEA, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, in the co. Clare, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Broadford.

CORLEA, a hmlt. in the par. of Rathcline, in the co. Longford, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Ballymahon, and from Dublin.

CORLEY, a par. in the Atherstone div. of the hund. Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 4½ miles N.W. Coventry. It is called Cornelie in Domesday Book, was possessed in Henry III's reign by Henry de stings, Lord of Fillongley. From its commanding ition, it was selected as one of the principal stations the grand Trigonometrical Survey. The living is a . in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £400, in the patron. A. F. Gregory, Esq. There are National schools for h sexes. From a hill in this parish 35 churches are ible.

CORLISKEA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in co. of Galway, Ireland.

CORLTON ISLEBECK, a chplry. in the par. of sk, in the wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding ne co. of York.

CORLUDDY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Iverk, in the co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Mullinavat.

CORMEEN, the name of two small places in Ireland, in the co. of Cavan, the other in Monaghan.

CORMORANTS, several small islands in Lough , in the bar. of Lower Tulla, in the co. of Clare, and.

CORN and CORNA, the affix to many names of farms small places in Ireland.

CORNAGILLAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Raphoe, he co. of Donegal, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Raphoe.

CORNALECT, a hmlt. in the bar. of Leyny, in the f Sligo, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Coolaney.

CORNAMUCKLAGH, a vil. in the par. of Kilcroan, of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Con- ght, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Glennamaddy. It is ated on the river Suck.

CORNARD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, he co. of Suffolk, 1 mile S.E of Sudbury. It is ated on the river Stour, in Sudbury Union. The g is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £155, in the n. of Miss Mallows. The church is dedicated to Andrew. The charities produce about £3 per annum.

CORNARD, LITTLE, a par. in the co. of Suffolk, ning the above. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. ly, val. £509, in the patron. of the Bishop of wich and G. M. Hawkins, Esq. alternately. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The charities produce £4 per annum.

CORNASCREEB, a hmlt. in the bar. of O'Neilland, in the co. of Armagh, Ireland.

CORNBROOK, a rich coal-field in the Clee hills, in the co. of Salop. The Manchester, Warrington, and Garston branch of the North-Western railway has a station here.

CORNBROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Sheriff Hutton, wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles W. of New Malton, and 1 mile N.W. of Sheriff Hutton. This was anciently a Roman settlement.

CORNBURY, or WYCHWOOD PARK, an ext. par. place in the hund of Banbury, in the co. of Oxford. It is situated near Banbury, and is the seat of Lord F. Churchill.

CORNCAIRN, a vil. in the par. of Ordiquhill, in the co. of Banff, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Aberchider. It ranks as a burgh of barony.

CORNDEAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Winchcomb, in the co. of Gloucester, 1 mile S. of Winchcomb.

CORNELLY, a par. in the western div. of the hund. of Powder, in the co. of Cornwall, 6 miles E. of Truro, and 1 mile from Tregony. Its ancient name was Grogoth. The soil is poor, on a substratum of slate. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £47, in the patron. of the Vicar of Probus. The church, dedicated to St. Cornelius, is a small edifice.

CORNEY, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 4½ miles S. of Ravenglass, and 2 from the Bootle and Eskmeals stations of the Whitehaven and Furness junction railway. It is situated to the W. of a lofty ridge of hills extending to the mountain of Blackcombe. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £140, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient stone edifice in various styles of architecture. The register commences in 1667. There is a post-office at Waberthwaite, and a school, attended by the children of this parish. Lord Muncaster and Thomas Harrison, Esq., are lords of the manor. Several of the inhabitants of this parish have attained the remarkable age of 100 and upwards.

CORNFORTH, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Bishop's Middleham, N.E. div. of Stockton ward, in the co. of Durham, 6 miles to the S.E. of Durham, its post town.

CORNHILL, a chplry. in the par. of Norham, hund. of Norhamshire, in the co. of Northumberland (formerly in Durham), 12 miles from Berwick-on-Tweed, and 2 from Coldstream, its post town. It is a station on the North-Eastern line, and is situated about 1 mile from the river Tweed, over which is a stone bridge constructed in 1762. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £240, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a stone edifice in the early English style, and possesses some beautiful stained-glass windows, and a font bearing date 1699. It is in good condition, having undergone repairs in 1840. There are National schools for both sexes. Cornhill Hall, the residence of Mrs. Frances C. Collingwood, is an ancient building in the Elizabethan style. Not far from the church is a mineral spring known as St. Helen's Well, and near the bridge are the remains of a castle taken by the Scots in 1549. A lamb and wool fair is held the first week of July, and a cattle fair on the 6th December.

CORNILO, a hund. in the lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, contains the pars. of Great and Little Mongeham, Oxney, Sutton, Walmer, East Langdon, Shoulden, Ripple, Ringswould, and Northbourne, comprising 13,140 acres.

CORNISH END, a chplry. in the par. of Finching-field, hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 6 miles N.E. of Thaxted, and 8 N.W. of Braintree.

CORNORION, a tnshp. in the par. of Pennant, in the co. of Montgomery, 10 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

CORNOYRON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5 miles N.W. of Llandilo-Fawr.

CORNSAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, in the co. of Durham, 6¼ miles from Wolsingham, and 8½ W. of Durham. There is an endowed school, and 12 almshouses erected and endowed in 1811 by W. Russell, Esq.

CORNWALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfairtalhaiarn, in the co. of Denbigh, 4 miles S. of Abergele.

CORNWALL, a maritime co., lying at the S.W. extremity of England, between 49° 56′ and 50° 56′ N. lat., and 4° 7′ and 5° 42′ W. long. It is bounded on the E. by Devonshire, and on its other sides by the sea. Its greatest length is about 80 miles, and its greatest breadth 46 miles. In circuit it is 265 miles, 200 of which are coast, and its area is 1,365 square miles, or 873,600 statute acres, including within its limits 76,495 houses, 72,954 of which are inhabited, and 3,451 uninhabited. In 1851 the number of houses was 72,531, 67,987 of which were inhabited, and 4,544 uninhabited. The population of Cornwall in 1851 was 369,390, which, compared with 1851, when it was 355,558, shows an increase of 13,832, or only at the rate of 4 per cent. This slow rate of increase is mainly attributable to the extensive emigration which has taken place from Cornwall during the last few years.—The name Cassiterides, "tin islands," which was anciently applied to Cornwall and the Scilly Islands, was probably given to them by the Phœnicians, who, many centuries before the Christian era, frequented this portion of England, being attracted by its rich tin and copper mines. Before, and at the time of the Roman invasion, Cornwall was inhabited by the Dumnonii and Cornabii, and from the latter received the name which it had in the middle ages, of Cornubia. The name Cornwall is derived from the British word kernow, "a horn," referring to the shape of the county, and the Saxon weallas, "foreign." At what period Cornwall fell under the dominion of the Romans is not certainly known; no mention of its conquest being made by any of the Roman historians who have recorded the affairs of Britain; but, on the other hand, numerous Roman coins and other remains have been found, which leads to the inference that this county shared the fate of the other southern counties of England, and was included in the division Britannia Prima. On the departure of the Romans, Cornwall regained its independence; and, during several centuries, successfully maintained it against the Saxons. In the year 813 it was overrun by Egbert; and again in 823, when a great battle was fought at Camelford. In 835, the Britons of Cornwall, in conjunction with the Danes, sustained a severe defeat at Hengsdown Hill. It was not, however, till the reign of Athelstan that Cornwall was finally reduced and incorporated with the remainder of the kingdom of England. With the exception of the ravages of the Danes, and some intestine disturbances, nothing of interest occurs for several centuries after this period in the history of Cornwall. In the reign of Edward III. Cornwall was created a dukedom; the title of Duke of Cornwall being conferred on Edward the Black Prince. In the wars of the Roses, the Cornishmen generally took the side of the Lancastrians; and one of the battles of this war was fought within their county, at St. Michael's Mount. On Henry VII. attempting in 1495 to levy a tax for defraying the expense of a war with Scotland, the men of Cornwall rose in arms and marched to Blackheath, where they were defeated, and their leaders taken and executed. Another insurrection occurred in 1497, in support of Perkin Warbeck, which was soon rendered futile by the flight of that pretender. During the civil war between Charles I. and the parliament, the Cornish men generally espoused the cause of the king. In 1644, the parliamentarians, under the Earl of Essex, entered Cornwall; but being closely pursued by the royalists under the king in person, were forced to retreat. Almost the entire county was held by the royalists until the year 1646, when it was reduced by Fairfax. Pendennis Castle, one of the last places in England which held out for the king, did not surrender till August, 1646.—The surface of Cornwall is very uneven. A range of hills runs through its centre, from which the land on either side slopes to the sea. The loftiest hill in Cornwall is Brown Willy, which attains an altitude of 1,368 feet; this is in the N.W. Rough Tor, 1,296 feet, Shar[p] Point Tor, 1,200 feet, Tober Tor, 1,127 feet, Menwe[ad] Down, 1,124 feet, and several others of nearly equ[al] height, belong to the same range. Carnbean Hill, 1,2[00] feet, Kit Hill, 1,067 feet, Hensbarrow Down, 1,034 fe[et] and Cadon Barrow, 1,011 feet, are the other principal elevations. The chief rivers of Cornwall are the Tam[ar], Fowey, Alan or Camel, Fal, Looe, Seaton, and Hel. The Tamar rises in the hills at the northern extremity and flows in a southerly direction into Plymouth Sou[nd], forming during almost its entire course the boundary between Cornwall and Devonshire. Its principal tributaries are, on the left, the Deer, the Claw, the Lyd, and the Tavy; and on the right the Wolf, the Ottery, the Inny, and the Lyther. The length of its course is 59 miles, 19 of which are tidal. The Fowey rises in Brown Willy, and flows for some distance in a south-westerly direction: it then turns to the W., but [soon] again to a southerly direction, receiving the St. Neot and the Warleggan, and finally falls into the sea at the borough of Fowey. The length of its course is about 30 miles. The Alan rises a short distance [from] Camelford, flows south-westward till it joins the [Camel] Lank, then turns to the N.W., and enters the Bristol Channel a little below Padstow. Its length is [about] 29 miles. The Fal rises in the centre of Cornwall, flows south-westward past Grampound and Tregony, and forms at its mouth a wide estuary called Falmouth Harbour. The Looe and Seaton are inconsiderable rivers rising near Liskeard, and flow southward to the sea. The Hel is remarkable for the wide estuary it forms at its mouth. The rivers of Cornwall are not well suited for purposes of navigation, being generally short and rapid. The canals are three—the Par[k] of Launceston, the Bude and Holsworthy communicating with the Tamar, and the Liskeard and Looe. The [chief] bays, or harbours, are Mount's Bay, Falmouth Harbour, Polkerris Bay, and Plymouth Sound on the S. coast, and St. Ives Bay on the N. coast. The chief headlands are Trevose Head, Land's End, Lizard Point, Dodman Point, and Pentee Point.—The climate of Cornwall, from its situation between two seas, is subject to frequent changes. From this cause the harvest is late. The summers are colder, and the winters warmer, than in most other counties of England. The soil of the mountainous part is extremely unproductive; but in some of the valleys, especially those watered by the Alan and Fowey, in the peninsula which terminates at the Lizard, and at the northern extremity of the county, the land is rich, being especially favourable to the growth of potatoes, two good crops of which are generally produced in a year. The land in the mining districts was formerly very barren. Small plots having, however, of late years been let at a low rent to the miners, on condition of their building themselves dwellings thereon, the country begins to wear a more verdant appearance. Cornwall is not well wooded, but in this respect is improving. The chief source of industry is its copper and tin mines. Of the former it produces one-half, and of the latter nine-tenths, of the entire supply of Europe. Lead and silver are also found in small quantities. The mining trade of Cornwall is under the jurisdiction of the Stannary Courts, which are presided over by the lord warden and vice-warden. These courts are held at the end of every three weeks at Lydford, Moore, Blackmore, Tywardreth, Penwith, and Kerrier. By the Act 1 and 2 Victoria, cap. 120, the coinage duties on tin, which were considerable, are abolished, and in lieu of them was imposed a customs-duty of 1s. per cwt. on tin, and £10 on every £100 worth of tin ore. Cornwall is under the jurisdiction of the Duke of Cornwall, who appoints his chancellor, attorney-general, solicitor-general, and sheriffs; he has also his own court of exchequer.—Previous to the Reform Act, Cornwall as more largely represented in parliament than any ther county, returning up to 1821, 44 members. By ie Reform Act it was formed into two divisions, each of hich returns two members. Many of the boroughs were isfranchised, and the number of members returned by thers reduced, so that it now returns altogether only 4. Cornwall is divided into 9 hunds.:—East, Kerrier, snewth, Penwith, Powder, Pyder, Stratton, Trigg, nd West. The number of pars. is 206; the num- er of unions 12, viz., St. Austell, Camelford, St. olumb Major, Falmouth, St. German's, Helston, Laun- eston, Liskeard, Penzance, Redruth, Stratton, and ruro. The number of market towns is 36. Cornwall in the western circuit. The assizes and quarter ssions are held at Bodmin.—Cornwall is very rich in ntiquities. Circles of stones of Celtic origin, tumuli which were deposited sepulchral urns, remains of mps and amphitheatres, are very numerous, particu- rly in the western part of the county. Of the natural riosities of Cornwall, the Logan Stones and the heesewring are the most important. The former are ones which are poised on a fulcrum, and which rock being moved by an adequate force. The most re- arkable of these is one near the Land's End, on a ninsula of granite which juts out 200 yards into the a. They were formerly believed to be Druidical altars, t are now supposed to have been lodged in their esent sites by icebergs. The Cheesewring, the forma- on of which is due solely to natural causes, consists parently of five blocks of stone placed one upon the her, to the height of about 20 feet.—Cornwall was rmerly a separate dioc., and had its see at St. German's, here it remained until the reign of Cnut, when it was ited with that of Crediton, and Cornwall and Devon- ire placed under the jurisdiction of one bishop, who id his see at Exeter. It still forms an archdeac. in e dioc. of Exeter; including within its limits the Scilly lands; which, by an order in council dated 30th July, 38, were declared to be within the dioc. of Exeter, and chdeac. of Cornwall.

CORNWELL, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, in e co. of Oxford, 2½ miles W. of Chipping Norton, its st town. The par. is of small extent, and contains ly a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in dioc. of Oxford, val. £140, in the patron. of the lord ancellor. The church is an ancient building, with a wer. Miss Penyston is lady of the manor. The prin- pal residence is Cornwell Hall, until recently the seat the Penyston family.

CORNWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Ermington, in e co. of Devon, 8 miles E. of Plymouth, and 4 N.W. Ivybridge, its post town and railway station on the uth Devon line. It is situated on the borders of artmoor, and is divided from Harford by the river rme. The country is hilly and intersected by moun- in streams. The river Yealm flows through the par., hich includes part of the vil. of Ivybridge, and the shps. of Dunaton, Torr, Lutton, Waterleet, and oundle. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, l. £405, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice in e early English style of architecture, with three stone lls, sedilia, piscina, and remains of a carved screen. here is also a district church at Ivybridge, the living which is a perpet. cur., in the patron. of Lady Rogers d W. Cotton, Esq., alternately. Here is an endowed hool. W. Praed, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides Delamore. Fairs for cattle are held on the first Mon- y in May and the fourth Monday in September.

CORNWORTHY, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, the co. of Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Totnes, and 6 N.W. Dartmouth. Ivybridge is its post town and railway tion. It lies between the rivers Harborne and Dart, rming a kind of peninsula, and contains the hmlts. Allaleigh, East Cornworthy, and Tuckenham. In cient records it is mentioned as a borough, and was site of an Austin abbey, founded by the lords of tnes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, l. £210, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Rev. W. Sweetland. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a low plain edifice. In the churchyard is a monument to the late vicar, the Rev. C. Barter. There are several large orchards.

CORPACH, a vil. in the par. of Kilmalie, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 2½ miles N. of Fort William. It is situated at the southern end of the Caledonian canal.

CORPUS CHRISTI COLLEGE, an ext. par. place belonging to the University and in the co. of Cambridge.

CORPUSTY, a par. in the hund. of South Erping ham, in the co. of Norfolk, 5½ miles N.W. of Aylsham, and 14 from Norwich. It is situated in the northern portion of the co., on the river Bure. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £62, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small structure, and consists of porch, chancel, and square tower. Here the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have chapels. W. E. Bulwer, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CORRA. See CALVERHALL, Salop.

CORRA, a rivulet in the co. of Clare, Ireland, falling into Graney Lough.

CORRAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Dufferin, in the co. of Down, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Killeleagh. There is also a small place of the same name in the co of Meath.

CORRA-LINN, a cataract near the town of Lanark, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, where the river Clyde rushes over a fall of 80 feet in three bounds. Here are the ruins of Corra Castle, and Corra House, the seat of Lord Corehouse.

CORRALONGFORD, a lough in the co. of Fermanagh, Ireland, about 1½ mile long by ¾ mile wide.

CORRAN, a bar. in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The bars. of Leyny and Tirehrill bound it on the N., E., and W., and the co. of Roscommon and the bar. of Coolavin on the S. It is near 12 miles in length and over 9 in breadth, having an area of 45,628 acres. It contains the pars. of Cloonoghill, Drumrat, Emlaghfad, Kilmorgan, Kilshalvy or Killowchalway, Toomour, part of Kilturra, and the vil. of Ballymote. Part of the Curlew mountains rise in the S. The eastern border is hemmed in by a chain of mountains, beneath which are several curious caves. The surface has some bog, but the soil is excellent. The river Arrow washes the eastern frontier, and the Owenmore flows from the interior to the W.

CORRAN, a mountain in the co. of Cork, Ireland, rising to the height of 1,345 feet. There are two other places of this name—one in Cork and the other in Kerry.

CORRANDOO, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tiaquin, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Athenry.

CORRANEARY, a small lough in the bar. of Clonkee, in the co. of Cavan, Ireland. Near its bank is Corrancary Lodge.

CORRAUN, or CORRAUN ACHILL, a rocky peninsula in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, stretching into the sea for 6 miles to the N. of Clew Bay. Some of the mountains rise to the height of 1,700 or 1,800 feet above the sea.

CORRIB LOUGH, one of the principal lakes in Ireland. It lies between the cos. of Mayo and Galway, in Connaught, and ranks next in size to Lough Neagh, having an area of 43,484 acres. In point of beauty and variety of scenery it is pronounced by some artists to rank second to no other lake in the United Kingdom. The beauties of the lake are seen to advantage on its northern and western shores. Loughs Mask and Carra contribute their waters to this lake through a subterranean channel; other tributaries are the rivers Fuogh, Clare, and Bealnabrack, and from it the rivers Galway and Corrib flow into the sea. Numerous islets, with ruins of a church and castle, beautify the surface of this magnificent sheet of water. A proposition has been entertained, and partially carried out, of opening a communication between this lough and that of Mask, and so continuing the navigation by canal to the Shannon.

CORRICK BRIDGE, a vil. in the bar. of Erris, in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, 16 miles E. of Belmullet. It is situated on the river Corrig, in a wild and half civilised tract.

CORRIDGE, or CURRAGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, W. div. of the ward of Morpeth, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles W. of Morpeth, and 3½ S.W. of Hartburn.

CORRIE, a vil. in the Isle of Arran, in the co. of Bute, Scotland. It is on the E. coast of the island, 5 miles N. of Brodick, and has a small harbour, accessible only at high water. Limestone and sandstone are quarried in the neighbourhood, and the latter is exported in large quantities.

CORRIE, an ancient par. in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland. It is now united to Hutton. The small stream Corrie Water runs through the district, and falls into the river Milk at Balstack.

CORRIEVREKIN, a strait, containing a whirlpool dangerous to small vessels, between the island of Scalra and the N. end of Jura, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. Here the tides run sometimes 13 miles an hour.

CORRINGHAM, a wap. in the parts of Lindsey, in the N.W. portion of the co. of Lincoln, contains the pars. of Corringham, Heapham, Scotton, Scotter, Lea, Kirton-in-Lindsey, Southope, Pilham, Gainsborough, Blyton, Grayingham, Laughton, Northope, Springthorpe, and parts of Manton and Willoughton, comprising 46,250 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of Stow.

CORRINGHAM, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 2 from the Blyton railway station. It contains the tnshps. and hmlts. of Little Corringham, Somerby, Aisby, Dunstall, and Yawthorpe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient building, with Saxon tower. It is supposed to have been built on the site of a more ancient one, in Edward the Confessor's time, and contains monuments to the Beckett family, and a brass to the Cliffords. The charities amount to £15 per annum. The earliest date in the register is 1643. There are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist places of worship, and schools for both sexes. Somerby Hall, an ancient mansion, most delightfully situated, is the residence of Sir Thomas Beckett, Bart., who is lord of the manor. Corringham races are held on the Feast of St. Lawrence.

CORRINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, in the co. of Essex, 8 miles S.E. of Grays, and 1½ mile from the Stanford-le-Hope station of the Southend railway. Romford is its post town. The manor was anciently held by the Bands from the see of London, by payment of a buck and doe yearly. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £866, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Stephenson. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure, with Norman tower. It was restored in 1844, and is situated on the green, commanding a view of the Thames. The charities amount to £6 per annum.

CORRINGHAM PARVA, a hmlt. in the par. and wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln.

CORRIS, a tnshp. in the par. of Tallyllyn, in the co. of Merioneth, 5 miles S. of Dolgelly.

CORRISKEN (Loch), a deep, dark, and romantic sheet of water on the W. coast of the Island of Skye, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland.

CORRITON. See Cowyton, Devon.

CORROFIN, or CUROFIN, a market and post town in the par. of Kilnaboy, or Killinaboy, bar. of Inchiquin, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10½ miles E. of Ennistymon, and 14 from Gort, on the road from thence to Milltown Malbay. Its situation is on a small channel which connects the lakes of Inchiquin and Tedano. The town is small, containing only 140 houses, but has a market-house, dispensary, and chief police station. It is a petty sessions town, and contains the parish church of Kilnaboy and a Roman Catholic chapel. Adjacent to Lake Inchiquin, are the remains of a castle formerly of the O'Brians, from whom descends the Marquis of Thomond. The market is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on the Eve of Ascension Day and the 22nd November.

CORROGE, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated near Tipperary, and includes a small portion of that town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Emly, united with Lattin.

CORRONTUBBER, a vil. in the par. of Achonry, bar. of Leney, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland.

CORRY, a vil. in the par. of Morvern, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, 15 miles N. of Oban; in the vicinity is Corry Loch. There is also a seat called Corry, in the co. of Inverness.

CORRY, a lough, 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, in the bar. of Boyle, in the co. of Roscommon, Ireland. It extends to the border of Leitrim, and empties its waters into the Shannon. In the vicinity is Corry Lodge.

CORRYARRICK, a wild and lofty mountain ridge between Loch Ness and Strathspey, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, about 7 miles to the S.E. of Fort William. The military road to Badenoch was cut through these mountains by General Wade in 1745.

CORSCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sampford Courtney, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Okehampton.

CORSCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster-Forum, in the Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Beaminster, and 7½ S.W. of Yeovil. It includes the hmlts. of Benville and Penny Toller. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £514, in the patron. of the Rev. T. B. Ferris. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built in the reign of Henry VII. It is partly in the Tudor and partly in the Gothic styles of architecture. There is an endowed school for boys. Arthur Troyte, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Huntsham Court. Fairs are held on the 18th May and 7th September.

CORSE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Westminster, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles E. of Newent, and 6 N.W. of the Gloucester railway station. The par. contains Corse Lawn, which was until 1790 a large common of nearly 1,400 acres, when it was enclosed by act of parliament, and now produces plentiful crops of grain, &c. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £443, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is partly in the Gothic style, and contains monuments. The charities amount to £25 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes. George Dowdeswell, Esq., is lord of the manor. To the E. of the village is Corse Hill, where a beautiful view may be obtained of the surrounding country. Corse Court is a fine old mansion, once the seat of Speaker Dowdeswell.

CORSE CASTLE, a fine ruin in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, near Leochel. It is believed to have been built in the latter part of the 16th century, by Lord William Forbes, brother of the famous Bishop Forbes, but was never finished, as the devil, according to tradition, carried off part of the wall whenever it approached completion, to spite the bishop. Among the ruins is pointed out Malcolm's cairn, where Macbeth was killed.

CORSE LAWN. See Corse, Gloucestershire.

CORSEMILL, or CROSSMILL, a vil. in the par. of Abbey Paisley, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland.

CORSENSIDE, a par. in the N.E. div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Bellingham, its post town. It is situated on the river Reed, near the ancient Watling Street. It contains the hmlts. of Linhead, East Woodburn, and West Woodburn. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the iron, stone, and lime works. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £218, in the patron. of Messrs. Tweddell. The church, the dedication of which is unknown, is an ancient stone building, supposed to have belonged to Halystane Priory. There is a good ool. In the vicinity are Lynn Head Waterfalls, and e remains of a Roman camp. The Duke of Northumrland is the lord of the manor.

CORSEWELL POINT, a promontory in the N.W. rt of Wigtonshire, Scotland; it has a revolving light, 2 feet above the sea, visible for 16 miles.

CORSHAM, or CORSHAM REGIS, a par. and mart town in the hund. of Chippenham, in the co. of Wilts, miles S.W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 4 N.W. Melksham. It is a station on the Great Western line. e par. comprises the town of Corsham, and the tnshps. Pickwick and Easton. It is mentioned in the Saxon ronicle as the residence of King Ethelred, and in mesday Book is called Cosseham, the property of Earl sti of Northumberland, by whom it was forfeited to the wn. It was afterwards held by Richard Earl of Cornll, who procured for it many privileges, and granted royalties of the manor to the tenants, as farmers in , for an annual rent of 110 marks. The town, which nds in a flat, dry, and healthy situation, principally sists of one long street containing many neat houses, st of them built of freestone. The woollen manuures, for which it was formerly noted, have entirely ppeared, and the inhabitants are now engaged in iculture, or are employed in the numerous stoneries in the neighbourhood.—The living is a vic.* in dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £300, in the ron. of Lord Methuen. The church, dedicated to Bartholomew, is an ancient edifice partly in the glish and partly in the Norman style. It has a tower the centre, but the spire which surmounted it was en down in 1812. According to Tanner, it was given William I. to the abbey of St. Stephen, at Caen, in rmandy, but was afterwards transferred to King's lege, Cambridge, by Henry VI. There are two dependent and two Baptist chapels. Lady Hungerd's school has an income from endowment of £50, the mastership was once held by Edward Hasted, .S., the county historian of Kent, who died here in 2; there are also British schools for boys, and a free ool for girls. An almshouse was endowed by Lady ngerford and the late Mrs. Alexander. Kirby's rity consists of £45 annually distributed to eight ons of worthy character. There are besides lands of ch the feoffees are the trustees, producing annually ut £150, applied to the support of the poor of the ish, repairing the church and the parish bridges. Methuen is lord of the royal manor, and the sheriff coroner are lords of the rectory manor. A court- is held here annually.—Corsham Court, the resice of Lord Methuen, is a noble pile in the Elizabethan e of architecture. The greater part of it is modern, gh occupying the site of the original mansion, built 582 by William Halliday, the wealthy Lord Mayor London who drained Moorfields. After it was purd by Paul Methuen, Esq., at the commencement of last century, it underwent an entire renovation by ancelot Browne and Nash, and has been subsequently d to under the direction of Charles Bellamy, the itect, who has made the N. front one of the most gnificent in Great Britain. In the breakfast-room is ry singular cornice, consisting of 160 heads in basso vo, all different. The principal attraction of the sion, however, is the gallery, containing a fine collion of paintings of the Flemish and other schools, efly made by Sir Paul Methuen while ambassador m Queen Anne and George I. to the courts of nna, Morocco, Lisbon, Madrid, and Sardinia. The ection includes Tintoretto's "Last Supper," Titian's rtez," Claude's "Morning and Evening," Rembdt's "Study of a Turk," Poussin's "Eudamidas;" des several paintings and portraits by Rubens, Vandk, Elzheimer, and other masters. The other residences Hartham Park, Jaggards House, Monks Park, and ton Park. Sir Richard Blackmore, an eminent sician and poet of the 17th century, best known by poem called "The Creation," was a native of this e. The market is on Wednesday. Cattle fairs are here on the 7th March and 4th September.

CORSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Warminster, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles W. of Warminster, its post town, and the same distance E. of Frome. It is situated on the borders of Somersetshire, and contains the tnshps. of Great and Little Corsley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £215, in the patron. of the Marquis of Bath. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is in the early English style, and has been lately rebuilt, chiefly at the expense of the late Marquis of Bath. The charities produce £9 per annum. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel, and there is a National school.

CORSOCK, a vil. in the par. of Parton, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 8 miles S.E. of New Galloway. It is situated on the river Ure, near Corsock Loch, on the banks of which is Corsock House.

CORSTON, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, in the co. of Somerset, 3½ miles W. of Bath, and 2 S.E. of the Salford station. It is situated near the river Avon. In the village is a malthouse and several stone-quarries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an old stone building in the early English style of architecture, consisting of chancel, nave, and tower. The charities amount to £15. There are chapels for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and in 1844 a National school was built.

CORSTON, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of St. Paul, Malmesbury, hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Malmesbury. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to Malmesbury, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a modern edifice, with a tower. Here is a free school.

CORSTORPHINE, a par. in the district and co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and also the vils. of Gogar, Stanhope-Mills, and Four-mile Hill. It is bounded by Cramond, Kirkliston, Ratho, Currie, Colinton, and St. Cuthbert's. It is 4 miles long from E. to W. by 2½ broad. Its surface is for the most part level, rising gradually to the N. into the elevation of Corstorphine Hill, 475 feet above the sea. Freestone, whinstone, and trap are largely quarried. The parish is watered by the Gogar and the Water of Leith. A century ago the village of Corstorphine was a fashionable watering-place, in consequence of a sulphureous spring, which was much resorted to. Much of the ground near the village supplies fruit and vegetables for the Edinburgh market. The parish is well-wooded, and contains many fine residences. There are stations for Corstorphine and Gogar on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, which, together with the middle road between these cities, traverses the parish. The village of Corstorphine is situated 3½ miles W. of Edinburgh. It has recently recovered somewhat of its old favour as a summer retreat for the inhabitants of Edinburgh. This par. is in the presb. of Edinburgh, and in the patron. of Sir W. H. D. Cunyngham, Bart. The stipend of the minister is £230. The church is an ancient building in the form of a Jerusalem cross, built by Sir John Forester, of Corstorphine, Lord High Chamberlain of Scotland in 1429. It was dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and was a collegiate church, to which the churches of Corstorphine, Dalmahoy, Hatton, Cramond, &c., belonged. The arms of the Forester family are dispersed over the building, inside which there are life-sized effigies in stone of several members of the same family. There is an ancient chapel at Gogar, the burial-ground around which is still in use. There is also a Free church in the vil. of Corstorphine.

CORSYGEDOL, a seat of the Mostyns, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 5 miles N. of Barmouth. It was erected in the 17th century, and has a fine gateway, built by Inigo Jones.

CORTACHY AND CLOVA, an united par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland. It stretches some 13 miles from N.W. to S.E. along the course of the South Esk. The soil, excepting some patches on the banks of the Esk, is poor, on a cold and wet bottom. The greater part of the surface, being mountainous, is best adapted for pasture. The scenery is in many places beautifully romantic and picturesque. The Earl of Airlie is the only landowner, and has his seat at Cortachy Castle. A good road leads through the parish into Strathmore. This par. is in the presb. of Forfar, and in the patron. of the Earl of Airlie. The stipend of the minister is £173. The church of Cortachy, built in 1829, is an elegant structure, seated for 650 persons. The church of Clova is served by a minister on the royal bounty at a stipend of £81.

CORTLINGSTOCK, or COSTOCK, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles N.E. of Loughborough. It is situated on a branch of the river Soar, between two hills. Part of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, the rest in stocking weaving and lime-burning. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £395, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Millard. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, has been graphically described as having a "steeple like a barn, and a roof like a dovecote." There are some small charities.

CORTON, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles N. of Lowestoft, and 6 S. of Yarmouth. The village commands a fine view of the sea, and is a coastguard station. The sea is gradually encroaching upon the cliffs, and has swept away an entire parish, called Newton. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £119, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, was once a spacious structure, but only the chancel and tower are now remaining, besides a part of the nave restored by the present vicar. The charities amount to £18 per annum. Bones of the mammoth, and other geological specimens, have been found here. Sir Francis Crossley, Bart., is lord of the manor.

CORTON, or CORTINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Boyton, hund. of Heytesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile S. of Heytesbury, and 1 N.W. of Boyton. It belongs to the Lambert family.

CORTON, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Hillmarton, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles N.E. of Calne. The church is in ruins.

CORTON DENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles S.E. of Sparkford station, and 4 from Sherborne, its post town. A considerable part of the par. is comprised in Corton Ridge, which forms a valuable sheep-walk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £320, in the patron. of Lord Portman. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an old Norman structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, porch, and tower, and contains an ancient font. The charities amount to £3 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school for both sexes. Roman remains and coins have been found here. Lord Portman is lord of the manor.

CORTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Ewenny, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 3 miles S.E. of Bridgend.

CORTWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Bramptom-Bierlow, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N. of Rotherham.

CORUISK, a loch in the Isle of Skye, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland.

CORWEN, a par. and market town partly in the hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, and partly in the hund. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 10 miles N.E. of Bala, and the same distance from Llangollen. It is situated under Berwyn Mountain, on the river Dee, and includes the seaport of Barmouth, and the ext. par. lib. of Gwern-Llowell, besides 12 tnshps. The town of Corwen, which is said to signify "white choir," is a pretty little place, containing less than 1,000 inhabitants, situated on an eminence on the S. bank of the river Dee. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and of County Court and registration districts. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £373, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Julian, is an ancient cruciform structure, partly in the Norman style of architecture. It contains a curious monument to Jorwerth Sulien, one of the vicars, and an ancient ornamented stone pillar in the churchyard, known as Owain Glyndwr's sword. The charities amount to £164, and there is an almshouse for poor widows of clergymen of the Church of England. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel, and there is a partly endowed school. Here is the Union poorhouse, and also a bridewell. This spot is remarkable as being the place to which the celebrated Owain Glyndwr retired on the approach of Henry IV. The English king, as the chroniclers relate, infuriated at not meeting his enemy, scoured all Wales, yet never could find Glyndwr; he consequently concluded, agreeably to the common opinion, that the Welsh prince was a necromancer; and, completely foiled, he quitted Wales, to the great triumph of the Welsh, who acknowledged Owain to be the true descendant of Llewellyn. Owain is believed to have wisely encouraged this belief, to secure the enthusiasm of the people; and very probably, while endeavouring to persuade others, he worked himself into a belief of the reality. This hero and patriot died in freedom, as supposed, after the battle of Agincourt; but the facts of his death and sepulture are uncertain. It is, therefore, not unlikely that the rude cross in Corwen churchyard may mark his real sepulchre. A high point called Sychnant, about 3 miles from Corwen, shaded by trees and commanding a view of nearly 40 square miles, is pointed out as the site of Glyndwr's famous seat. Colonel Vaughan, of Rhug, possesses Glyndwr's dagger, &c.; and that gentleman's harriers meet here. Market days are Tuesday and Friday, and there are fairs on the 12th March, 24th May, 14th July, 17th October, and 20th December.

CORYATTS. See COMBE GATE, Dorset.

CORYTON, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles N. of Tavistock, and 9 from Launceston. Lew Trenchard is its post town. It is situated on the river Lyd. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £208, in the patron. of Sir L. Newman, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small stone edifice. There are National schools. The charities amount to £20. Coryton House, formerly the seat of the Kelly family, who held the manor, is now a farmhouse.

COSBY, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles N. of the Broughton Astley station on the Midland Counties line, and 7 N. of Lutterworth. It contains a portion of the tnshp. of Littlethorpe, and is watered by a branch of the river Soar. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and in stocking weaving. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £138, in the patron. of Thomas Pares, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure in the Gothic style of architecture. It contains some stained glass windows. The charities amount to £6 per annum.

COSCOMB, a hmlt. in the par. of Didbrook, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Winchcomb.

COSCRADIA, a district in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It was an ancient principality, and lies on the sea-coast, with the bays of Dungarvan and Youghal on either side.

COSELEY, a vil. in the par. of Sedgley, in the co. of Stafford, 1 mile S. of Bilston. It gives name, with Deepfield, to a station on the Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley railway. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £138, in the patron. of Lord Ward. The inhabitants are engaged in the iron and coal trade.

COSFORD, a hund. in the southern div. of the co. of Suffolk, contains the pars. of Charlesworth, Aldham, Hadleigh, Elmsett, Bildeston, Brettenham, Hitcham, Lindsey, Kettlebaston, Kersey, Layham, Nedging, Naughton, Morieux Thorpe, Semer, Whattfield, Wattisham, and part of Boxford, comprising 30,640 acres. It gives name to a Poor-law Union and superintendent registration district.

COSFORD, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Shifnal, in the co. of Salop, 19 miles S.E. of Shrewsbury.

COSFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Newbold-upon-

Avon, Rugby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles N. of Rugby. It is situated near the river Avon, and the Midland Counties railway.

COSGROVE, a par. in the hund. of Cleley, in the co. of Northampton, 12 miles S.W. of Northampton, and 1¼ mile N. of Stoney Stratford, its post town. It is situated near the river Ouse, and the London and North-Western railway. The Grand Junction canal (Buckingham branch) passes near the village. It contains part of the hmlt. of Old Stratford, through which Watling Street passes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £363, in the patron. of Mrs. H. Mansel. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient stone edifice in various styles of architecture. Here are National schools for both sexes. In the neighbourhood is a chalybeate spring, now known as Fincheswell, which is a corruption of its former name, St. Vincent's Well. The principal residences are Cosgrove Hall and Cosgrove Priory.

COSHAM, a vil. in the pars. of Wymering and Widley, in the co. of Hants, 3 miles N.E. of Portsmouth. It is a station on the South Coast and South-Western railways, near their junction. The village is pleasantly situated under Portsdown Hill, in the immediate vicinity of the barracks.

COSHESTON, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, in the co. of Pembroke, 2½ miles N.E. of Pembroke, and 1 mile from Milford Haven. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £160, in the patron. of George Bowling, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. David. The charities amount to £30 per annum.

COSHLEA, or COSTLEA, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The bars. of Coshma and Small County bound it on the N. and W., the co. of Tipperary on the E., and that of Cork on the S. Its length is 16 miles, and its greatest breadth is over 9 miles, and it has an area of 95,232 acres. It contains the pars. of Ardpatrick, Ballingaddy, Ballylanders, Ballingarry, Ballyscaddan, Darragh, Emly-Grennan, Knocklong, Particles, Galbally, Kilfinnane, Kilbeheny, Kilflyn, parts of Athneasy, Effin Kilbreedy-major, Kilquane, and the vils. of Kilfinnane, Ballylanders, and Ballyorgan. The surface is very mountainous, having the Slievereagh mountains in the interior, and part of the Galtees in the S.E. Near the former rise the rivers Maigue, Funcheon, and Aharlow, which fall severally into the Shannon, the Blackwater, and the Suir.

COSHMA, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, bounded by Pubblebrien on the N., by Small County and Coshlea on the E., by the co. of Cork on the S., and by Connello and Kenry on the W. It is 14 miles in length, its greatest breadth is 7 miles, and it has an area of 49,053 acres. It contains the pars. of Athlacca, Anhid, Bruff, Dysert, Dromin, Kilbreedy-minor, Tankardstown, parts of Adare, Bruree, Croom, Drehidtarsna, Effin, Hackmys, Killonaghan, Killeenoghty, Monasteranenagh, Tullabracky, Uregare, and the towns and vils. of Adare, Bruff, and Croom. The limits of this bar. were considerably extended by Act 6 and 7 of William IV.

COSHMORE and COSHBRIDE, a bar. in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Coshbride is separated from Coshmore by the river Bride, which forms its N. boundary. Its length is 6 miles, and its breadth over 4. It is bounded by the co. of Cork on the S. and W., and by the Blackwater on the E. Coshmore is 6 miles long by 3 wide, and is bounded by the Blackwater on the N. and E., by the Bride on the S., and the co. of Cork on the W. The bar. contains the pars. of Kilwatermoy, Kilcockan, Templemichael, Tallow, parts of Leitrim, Lismore, and Mocollop, and the towns of Lismore, Tallow, and Cappoquin. Part of the surface is bold upland, the Knockmeledown mountains rising from the Tipperary frontier. The soil is very rich, and the bar. comprises about 89,403 acres.

COSMASTON, a vil. in the par. of Lavernock, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 5 miles S. of Cardiff.

COSSALL a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 6 miles W. of Nottingham, and 1 mile from the Ilkeston railway station. It is situated on the river Erewash, near the borders of Derbyshire, and contains the hmlt. of Cossall Marsh, which is about 1 mile N. There are collieries, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in stocking weaving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, annexed to the rect.* of Wollaton, in the patron. of Lord Middleton. The church is a small structure, with a tower. There is a hospital for four men and an equal number of women.

COSSALL MARSH, a hmlt. in the par. of Cossall, southern div. of the hund. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 1 mile N. of the above. There are collieries.

COSSEY, or COSTESSY, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 4½ miles from Norwich. It is situated near the river Wensum, and the Great Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, and in the patron. of the mayor and corporation of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is a large edifice with square tower and wooden spire. The charities amount to £4 per annum. The Baptists and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship here. In the vicinity is a fine old mansion, partly in the Elizabethan style, called The Hall, the seat of Lord Stafford, who is lord of the manor. Adjoining the old hall is a handsome red brick building in the Tudor style, containing some fine paintings by the old masters. The chapel annexed to the Hall contains some beautiful specimens of stained glass.

COSSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles S.E. of Mount Sorrel, and 1 mile S. of the Sileby railway station. Loughborough is its post town. It is situated near the rivers Wreak and Soar, and Segshill camp on the Fosse Way. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in stocking weaving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £448, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Mayor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure in the early English style of architecture, with a square tower. The charities amount to £97 per annum. Here are infant and Sunday schools. Near here is a Roman Catholic school founded in 1843. The manorial rights are vested in the hands of the trustees of the late Thomas Babington, Esq.

COSSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles N.E. of Bridgwater. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £254, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Broderip. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an old stone building in the perpendicular style, with a clock-tower containing five bells, nave, and chancel. It contains an old brass to the memory of the Brent family. The charities amount to £18 per annum. Here is a National school recently built. In the vicinity is a chalybeate spring. E. G. Broderip, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COSSON TOR, the highest peak in Dartmoor Forest, in the co. of Devon, rising 2,090 feet above the level of the sea.

COSTELLO, a bar. in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, bounded by the co. of Sligo on the N., by Sligo and Roscommon on the E., and by Clanmorris and Gallen on the S. and W. Its length is 19 miles, its breadth at the widest points 14 miles, and its area about 144,462 acres. It contains the pars. of Aghamore, Annagh, Bekan, Kilbeagh, Kilmovee, parts of Kilturragh, Kilcolman, Castlemore, and Knock. The surface has much bog, and is somewhat hilly. It is drained by the rivers Owen-Garrow, Guishden, and Clare. Lough Gara-Garrow lies to the E.

COSTELLO, a bay and a river, in the bar. of Moycullen, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The rivulet is celebrated as being the finest for angling in Ireland.

COSTESSY. See COSSEY, Norfolk.

COSTOCK, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, in the co. of Nottingham. See CORTLINGSTOCK.

COSTON, a par. in the hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 6½ miles E. of Melton Mowbray, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Wreak. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £334, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a neat structure, and has lately been enlarged and restored. The lord of the manor is the Earl of Dysart.

COSTON, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Hingham, and 4 N.W. of Wymondham. It is situated on the river Blackwater, near the Great Eastern railway, which has a station at Hardingham, 1 mile from the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the vic. of Runhall annexed, £103, in the patron. of the Bishop of Norwich and Lord Wodehouse alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a neat structure. Here is a school supported partly by contributions, and partly by small weekly payments of the children.

COSTON, or CORTON HACKETT, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles N.E. of Bromsgrove, and 11½ W. of Kidderminster. Redditch is its post town. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Northfield, in the dioc. of Worcester, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Fenwick. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient Gothic structure. The Birmingham and Bristol line runs through this parish. Grovely Hall and Coston Hall are the principal seats.

COTCLIFF, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Allertonshire, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N. of Thirsk.

COTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles W. of Bampton. It is united to Aston.

COTE, a tythg. in the par. of Olveston, lower div. of the hund. of Langley, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles W. of Thornbury. It is situated near the river Severn.

COTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Halifax, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles S.E. of Halifax.

COTELE, a seat of Earl Mount-Edgcumbe, in the co. of Cornwall, 3 miles S.E. of Callington. It is an ancient quadrangular pile on the bank of the river Tamar. It contains some richly carved furniture, suits of armour, and a great variety of antiquities illustrative of mediæval art.

COTES, or COTES HEATH, a chplry. in the par. of Eccleshall, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Eccleshall, its post town. It includes the tnshps. and hmlts. of Cotes, Chatcull, Aspley, Slindon, Cold Meece, and Mill Meece. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Eccleshall.

COTES, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestwold, hund. of East Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 1 mile N.E. of Loughborough. It is situated near the Midland Counties railway, on the river Soar.

COTES-DE-VAL, a hmlt. in the par. of Kimcote, hund of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 3 miles N. of Lutterworth.

COTGRAVE, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 4 miles S.W. of Bingham, and 7 S.E. of Nottingham. It is situated near the Fosse Way and the Grantham canal, and contains the hmlt. of Stragglethorpe. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and in stocking weaving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £628, in the patron. of Earl Manvers, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a spire. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a free school. Cotgravé Place, a handsome structure, is the seat of Lieut.-Colonel Hill.

COTHALL, a vil. in the par. of Forres, in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 11 miles W. of Elgin. It is situated on the river Findhorn, about 3 miles from the sea at Moray Frith. In the vicinity is Hardmoor, or the "Blasted Heath," where Macbeth met the weird sisters.

COTHAM, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Newark, in the co. of Nottingham, 3½ miles S. of Newark, its post town. It is situated on the river Devon. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £35, in the patron. of the Duke of Portland, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, possesses monuments and memorial stained-glass windows. Cotham Lodge is the principal residence.

COTHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Keelby, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles W. of Grimsby. It was anciently the site of a small Cistercian nunnery, founded by Alan Muncaux in the reign of Stephen.

COTHELSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles N.W. of Taunton, and 2 from Bishop Lydeard station. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £58, in the patron. of Viscount Kingston. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas of Canterbury, is a plain, small building, consisting of chancel, south aisle, and tower with six bells, and contains some beautiful monuments to the Stawells. Here is a hill 1,250 feet above the level of the sea, from the summit of which a view of eleven counties may be obtained. E. J. Esdaile, Esq. is lord of the manor, and resides at Cothelstone Park.

COTHERCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Church Pulverbatch, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Church Stretton.

COTHERIDGE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, in the co. of Worcester, 4 miles W. of Worcester. It is situated on the river Teme, and contains the hmlts. of Hewson and Otherton. The vil. is small, but the land well cultivated, part being in hops. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, and in the patron. of the Rev. R. Berkeley. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a plain structure, partly in the pointed, and partly in the Norman style of architecture. The charities amount to £8 per annum. Cotheridge Court, a commodious residence, is delightfully situated.

COTHERSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Romaldkirk, wap. of West Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle. It is situated on the river Tees. It contains the hmlts. of Corn Park, Naby, Loup House, Towler Hill, and Briscoe. The charities amount to £2 per annum. Here are the ruins of Fitzhugh's Castle.

COTHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Marcham, in the co. of Berks, 2 miles N. of Abingdon.

COTHY RIVER rises 5 miles N.E. of Llan-y-Crwys on the borders of Cardigan and Carmarthen; and, after running 25 miles S.W., discharges itself into the river Towy. It has good trout fishing.

COTISCUE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Coverham, in the co. of York, 2 miles S.W. of Middleham.

COTLANDSTOWN. See COGHLANSTOWN, co. of Dublin.

COTLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Colyton, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles E. of Honiton, its post town and railway station on the South-Western line. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £229, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Mitchell. The church, dedication unknown, is an ancient stone edifice in the Norman style of architecture. The charities amount to £15, arising from land. Lord Ashburton is lord of the manor.

COTMANHAY, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Ilkeston, in the co. of Derby, 8 miles N.E. of Derby. It is situated on the Erewash canal. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

COTMERE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Horsley, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles W. of Eccleshall.

COTNESS, a tnshp. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles S.E. of Howden. It is situated on the river Humber.

COTON, a par. in the hund. of Wetherley, in the co. of Cambridge, 2 miles W. of Cambridge, and 3¼ from the Cambridge station on the Great Eastern railway. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £213, in the patron. of Catherine Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, stands in the centre of the village. It is in the early English style of architecture, the chancel being Norman. The church consists of nave, aisles, tower with spire, and two porches. It contains the tomb of Downes, who translated the Apocrypha. The charities amount to £37 per annum. Here has recently been built a National school for boys and girls. The Provost and Fellows of King's College are lords of a manor in this parish, but the Master and Fellows of St. Catherine's College are lords paramount.

COTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hanbury, northern div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 1 mile N. of Hanbury. It is situated near the river Dove. Coton Hall, the seat of J. Burtt, Esq., is a pleasantly situated mansion. Near here is the viaduct of the North Staffordshire line, which is 693 feet long, and 114 feet high.

COTON, a tnshp. in the pars. of St. Mary and St. Chad, hund of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Stafford.

COTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Copredy, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles N.E. of Banbury.

COTON, a hmlt. in the co. of Salop, 6 miles S. of Bridgnorth. W. Wollaston, author of the "Religion of Nature," was born here.

COTON, or COTON CLANFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Gnosall, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles W. of Stafford.

COTON, or COTON-UNDER-GUILSBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Ravensthorpe, hund. of Guilsborough, in the co. of Northampton, 7 miles N.E. of Daventry.

COTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Milwich, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles E. of Stone.

COTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wiggington, co. of Stafford, 1 mile N.W. of Tamworth.

COTON FAR AND NEAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Market Bosworth, in the co. of Leicester, 1 mile S.W. of Market Bosworth. It is a meet for the Atherstone hounds.

COTON-IN-THE-ELMS, a tnshp. in the par. of Lullington, hund. of Repton, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles S. of Burton-on-Trent, its post town, and 2 N.W. of the Oakley railway station. The chapel-of-ease is built in the Gothic style with square tower. There is a free school for girls, supported by Lady Horton, who is lady of the manor. In the vicinity is Coton Park.

COTS, a loch in the co. of Elgin, Scotland. It is situated near St. Andrew's, between Loch Spynie and the sea, which, in the 12th century, covered the greater part of this district.

COTSWOLD HILLS, a range of hills and pleasant upland extending across England, through Gloucestershire and Warwickshire, for about 54 miles, and having an average altitude of 600 feet above the sea, though at certain points, as at Cleeve Hill and Broadway Hill, they rise to the height of 1,100 feet. There is little woodland, and the greater part of the surface is divided by stone fences, though some of the downs are still open. The estates along this plateau are large, with many handsome seats, and comfortable farmhouses; the land generally being let on long lease in farms from 300 to 1,000 acres. The Thames and Severn canal, and the Swindon Junction railway, cross this district near Stroud.

COTTACH, a vil. in the par. of Dunscore, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 8 miles N.W. of Dumfries. It is situated on the river Cairn.

COTTAM, a chplry. in the par. of South Leverton, North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 7 miles E. of Retford. It is situated near the river Trent. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of South Leverton, in the dioc. of Lincoln, in the patron. of the bishop. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small structure. G. Foljambe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COTTAM, a chplry. in the par. of Langtoft, wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N. of Great Driffield, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Langtoft. The land is barren, and much of it unenclosed. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, annexed to the vic.* of Langtoft, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is a small ancient structure, and contains an old font.

COTTAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Preston, hund. of Amounderness, in the co. of Lancaster, 2½ miles N.W. of Preston. It is united to the tnshp. of Lea. The Roman Catholics have a chapel and school. W. A. Cross, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COTTENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Chesterton, in the co. of Cambridge, 3 miles N. of Hilston station, and 6 N. of Cambridge. There are now six manors in Cottenham,—viz. Rectory, Crowlands, Lisles, Sames, Pelhams, and Harlstones. Peter of Blois relates that "Geoffrey, Abbot of Croyland, sent over to his manor of Cottenham, nigh the Cam, Gislebert, his fellow-monk, and professor of divinity, with three other monks; who, following him to England, being thoroughly furnished with philosophical theorems, and other primitive sciences, repaired daily to Cambridge; and, having hired a certain public barn, made open profession of their sciences, and in a short space of time drew together a great company of scholars," thus laying the foundation of the after university. In 1265 John de Walerand, the parson of Cottenham, obtained a royal charter for a weekly market on Monday, and a fair for three days at the Feast of SS. Peter and Paul. Large quantities of cheese were formerly made; but the common is now enclosed, and under cultivation, so that the quantity is much reduced. In 1850 the village was greatly damaged by fire, when property amounting to £25,000 was destroyed. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £770, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ely. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an edifice composed of stone and rubble, in the perpendicular style, and has a nave, aisles, chancel, and lofty tower with four pinnacles, richly ornamented. The charities are extensive, and chiefly for apprenticing boys, gifts to poor at certain seasons, and other purposes, as appointed by will. Dr. Fitzwilliam's charity, besides other provisions, gives bibles and prayer-books to those who most regularly attend church. The Baptists have two chapels, and the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists one each. Here are Moreton's almshouses for the aged poor. The parish of Cottenham gives the title of earl to the Pepys family. Roman remains, chiefly of pottery, are frequently found. Archbishop Tenison was born in the rectory-house. The old Cardike runs through the parish for some distance, and then joins the Old Ouse. A short portion of the old road made by William the Conqueror, for the subjugation of the Isle of Ely, runs through the parish at the extreme N.W. corner.

COTTERDALE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of High Abbotside, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 1½ mile from Hawes.

COTTERED, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, in the co. of Herts, 7½ miles from the Royston station on the Great Northern line, and 2 miles W. of Buntingford, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. with the rect. of Broadfield annexed, £450, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Manley. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Here is an Independent chapel and National schools for both sexes.

COTTER HILLS, a range of hills in the North Riding of Yorkshire, rising to the height of 2,350 feet at Shunner Fell, where the rivers Eden, Swale, and Ure have their source.

COTTERSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Willybrook, in the co. of Northampton, 2 miles N.E. of Oundle. It is situated on the river Nen, near the Peterborough and Blisworth branch of the North-Western railway, which has a station at Oundle. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. with the vic. of Glapthorne annexed, £105, in the patron. of Viscount Melville. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure. It was made collegiate in 1339; and has stalls, a canopied brass of a priest, and several monuments. The charities amount to £5 per annum. At Cotterstock Hall the poet Dryden wrote his fables, and spent his last days. Roman pavements have been found, and the foundations of a villa, very perfect.

COTTESBATCH, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 6 miles from Rugby, and 2 miles S. of Lutterworth, its post town. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £282, in the patron. of the Rev. R. Marriott, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower.

COTTESBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Guilsborough, in the co. of Northampton, 7 miles S.E. of Welford, and 9 N. of Northampton. It was formerly a cell to Sulby Abbey, founded in the 12th century by William de Wdvile for monks of the Premonstratensian order. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £400, in the patron. of Sir J. Langham, who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to All Saints. Here is a hospital for two widowers and six widows, which was founded and endowed with 53 acres of land in 1651. There is a parochial school.

COTTESFORD, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles N. of Bicester, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Brackley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £344, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient building with a tower. There is a free school.

COTTESLOE, a hund. in the co. of Bucks, contains the pars. of Cheddington, Cublington, Drayton Beauchamp, Drayton Parslow, Creslow, Dunton, Great and Little Harwood, Wingrave, Linchlade, Hoggeston, Eddlesborough, Slapton, Grove, Hardwicke, Mursley, Soulbury, Whaddon, Tattenhoe, Wing, Marsworth, Pitstone, Mentmore, Stewkley, Whitchurch, Aston Abbotts, Hawridge, Winslow, Ivinghoe, Swanbourne, Choulesbury, and part of Shenley, comprising 70,000 acres, part of which is hilly.

COTTESLOE, NORTH and SOUTH, two hmlts. in the hund. of Cottesloe, in the co. of Bucks, 4 miles S.W. of Leighton-Buzzard.

COTTESMORE, a par. in the hund. of Alstoe, in the co. of Rutland, 4½ miles N.E. of Oakham, and 2 E. of the Ashwell station on the Syston and Peterborough branch of the Midland railway. It is situated on the turnpike road between Oakham and Greetham. It formerly belonged to the Beauchamp, Durant, and Harrington families, and afterwards to the Noëls. It is well wooded, and has a limestone subsoil. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £893, in the patron. of the Earl of Gainsborough. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a fine structure in the Gothic style of architecture, and is in good repair. There are several charities, producing about £51 per annum; also National and infant schools.

COTTFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Alves, in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Elgin.

COTTINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Corby, in the co. of Northampton, 2 miles S. of Rockingham, and 8 N. of Kettering. It is situated near the river Welland, and contains the tnshp. of Middleton. This was the Saxon Cottingham, and had in the reign of Henry III. a house for lepers. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £426, in the patron. of Brasenose College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The charities amount to £36 per annum. Here the Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have each a chapel. The manorial rights are vested in the hands of the copyholders.

COTTINGHAM, a par. in the Hunsley Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N.W. of Hull. It is a station on the Scarborough and Hull section of the North-Eastern railway. It was anciently a market town and place of considerable importance, having an Austin canonry, founded in 1325, and a strong moated castle, called Stuteville's, or Baynard Castle, once the seat of the lords Wake. The oft-told story of the burning of this castle in 1541 appears to be a pure fiction, for when Leland visited Cottingham, in 1538, he found it a complete ruin at that time. It contains the tnshps. of Dunswell and Newland, which now forms the consolidated chplry. of Newland, and the district of Haltem Price, the site of the ancient priory. Near the village of Cottingham are several handsome residences of the Hull merchants. There are large market gardens for the supply of the Hull market. The Bishop of Chester is both the rector and patron of Cottingham, and the owner of the great tithes, though the par. is in the dioc. of York. The val. of the vicarage is about £260, having been twice improved while the late Dr. Sumner was Bishop of Chester. There is also a district church at Newland, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure of the 13th century, and has a fine tower. It contains tombs of the Burton family, and a very perfect brass effigy of Nicholas de Luda, for twenty years Rector of Cottingham. He was presented to the living by the Black Prince, and died on 6th June, 1382. In the vicinity is an intermitting spring, which flows once only every two or three years. An annual fair is held on the 11th November.

COTTINGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bingley, upper div. of the wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 31 miles S.W. of York, and 2 from Bingley, its post town and railway station. It is situated near the river Aire and the Midland railway. The inhabitants are employed in the worsted manufacture.

COTTINGWITH, EAST, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Aughton, wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles S.E. of York. It is situated on the river Derwent, and near the Pocklington canal. The living is a cur., val. £90, annexed to the vic. of Aughton. The charities produce about £30. There is a parochial school with a small endowment.

COTTINGWITH, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Thorganby, wap. of Ouse and Derwent, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile S.W. of East Cottingwith, and 8 miles S.E. of York.

COTTLES, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Bradford, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles N.E. of Bradford. Melksham is its post town. Cottles House is the seat of C. Conolly, Esq.

COTTON, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, in the co. of Suffolk, 4½ miles N.E. of Stowmarket, its post town, and 2½ N.W. of Mendlesham. The Great Eastern railway passes within a few miles. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £355, in the patron. of M. Turner, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a richly ornamented porch. The charities amount to £12 per annum. Here are two Wesleyan chapels. C. Tyrell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wem, hund. of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Wem. The land chiefly belongs to Viscount Hill and G. Bowen, Esq.

COTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sandbach, hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 3 miles E. of Middlewich, its post town. It is situated on the river Dane. The Hall, an ancient structure, once the seat of the Cotton family, is now a farmhouse. Lawrence Armitstead, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COTTON, a chplry. in the par. of Alton, in the S. div. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Cheadle, its post town, and 3 N. of the Alton station of the North Staffordshire line. It includes the tnshps. of Upper and Lower Cotton. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture and in the lime-quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Alton, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £44, in the patron. of the Earl of Shrewsbury. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was erected in 1795 by Thomas Gilbert, Esq. The Roman Catholics have a chapel, dedicated to St. Wilfred.

COTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruyton-of-the-Eleven Towns, in the co. of Salop, 8 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

COTTON ABBOTTS, a tnshp. in the par. of Christleton, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 4½ miles E. of Chester, its post town. The Crewe branch of the North-Western railway passes within a few miles.

COTTON EDMUND'S, a tnshp. in the par. of Christleton, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 4 miles E. of Chester, its post town. It derives its name from Edmund de Cotton, whose ancestors possessed the manor in the reign of Henry III., and in whose family it remained until the reign of Henry VII. Thomas Brock, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COTTON END, or FAR COTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hardingstone, in the co. of Northampton, 2 miles S. of Northampton. It was the site of a hospital for lepers, founded by William the Conqueror. The principal residence is Cotton House.

COTTON END, a hmlt. in the par. of Cardington, hund. of Wixamtree, in the co. of Bedford, 3 miles S.E. of Bedford.

COTTON OF LOWNIE, a vil. in the par. of Dunnichen, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Forfar.

COTWAL END, a hmlt. in the par. of Sedgeley, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Dudley.

COTWALL, a tnshp. with Moortown, in the par. of Ercall Magna, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Wellington.

COUCHIERE, a rock near the S.E. corner of the Isle of Jersey, Channel Islands.

COUGHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Backford, in the co. of Chester, 3 miles N. of Chester.

COUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Walford, in the co. of Hereford, 2 miles S. of Ross. It is situated near the river Wye. The church is in ruins.

COUGHTON, a par. in the Alcester div. of the hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles N. of Alcester, and 18 from Birmingham. It is situated on the river Arrow, and contains the hmlt. of Sambourne. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £161, in the patron. of Sir R. G. Throckmorton, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is in the early English style of architecture, and contains monuments to the Throckmortons. The charities amount to £34 per annum. There are some almshouses, founded by the Throckmortons. The Roman Catholics have a chapel. Coughton Court, the seat of Sir R. G. Throckmorton, Bart., was built in the reign of Henry VIII.

COULAGH, a vil. in the par. of Kilcatherine, bar. of Bear, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Bearhaven. It gives name to a bay between Kilcatherine Point and Cod's Head.

COULDSMOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles W. of Wooler, and 3 W. of the parish church.

COULL, a par. in the district of Kincardine O'Neil, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is bounded on the N. by Tarland, on the W. by Logie Coldstone, on the S. by Aboyne, and on the E. by Lumphanan. It is situated at the head of Strathcromar, formerly a morass, but now drained and converted into meadow and arable land. The landowners are the Earl of Aberdeen, the Marquis of Huntley, Forbes of Corse, and Farquharson of Finzean. This par. is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Neil, and in the patron. of Forbes of Corse. The stipend of the minister is £161.

COULSDON, or CULLESDEN, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Wallington, in the co. of Surrey, 2¼ miles S. of the Caterham Junction station on the London and Brighton line, and 5 S. of Croydon, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £636, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a plain structure. The register commences in 1813. There are National schools for both sexes. Byron's charity produces about £5 per annum.

COULSLAND, a vil. in the par. of Cranston, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Dalkeith, and 8 from Edinburgh. It was the site of a chapel, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, which belonged to Kelso Abbey. The castle, the seat of Earl Stair, was burnt by the Duke of Somerset in the reign of Queen Mary.

COULSTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Whorwelsdown, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles N.E. of Westbury. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £168, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. Mrs. Delany, the friend of Swift, was born in the village.

COULSTON, WEST, a tythg. in the par. of Edington, in the hund. of Whorwelsdown, in the co. of Wilts, adjoining East Coulston.

COULTER, a loch in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, about 3 miles S.W. of Bannockburn. It is about a mile in length, and is famed for its perch and peel. During the great earthquake of 1755 the waters of the lake fell nearly 12 feet.

COULTON. See COLTON, Lancashire and Yorkshire.

COULTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Nettlecombe, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles S. of Watchet.

COUMDECHY, a vil. in the par. of Ballyheigue, bar. of Clanmaurice, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Ardfert. It is a police and coastguard station.

COUMEENOULE, a hmlt. in the co. of Kerry, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Dingle. It is situated on the coast between Slea Head and Garraun Point, and gives name to the bay.

COUMSHENANE, a lake in the bar. of Upperthird, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated on the southern boundary of the barony. The waters of the lake are uncommonly deep, being partly hemmed in by precipitous rocks, sometimes quite perpendicular. The view from the surrounding heights is very fine. The spot has been neglected by tourists until very recently.

COUND, a par. in the Cound div. of the hund. of Condover, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Much Wenlock, and 6 S.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town. It is situated near the river Severn, and contains the tnshp. of Cressage. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. with the cur. of Cressage annexed, £906, in the patron. of the Rev. H. T. Pelham. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient building, with tower, containing a good peal of bells. It contains several monuments, and a richly carved pulpit. The charities amount to £12 per annum.

COUNDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Holy Trinity, Kirby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile from Coventry. It was granted by Leofric, Duke of Mercia, to the monks of Coventry on the foundation of a monastery there. The manor is in the hands of the trustees of Sir Thomas White's charity lands.

COUNDON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, ward of Darlington, in the co. of Durham, 1 mile E. of Bishop Auckland, its post town and railway station. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. James. There are National schools.

COUNDON GRANGE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, ward of Darlington, in the co. of Durham, 2 miles S.E. of Bishop Auckland, its post town.

COUNTERSIDE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bainbridge, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles S.W. of Askrigg.

COUNTESSTHORPE, a chplry. in the par. of Blaby, hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles S. of Leicester, and 9 N.E. of Lutterworth. It is a station on the Midland Counties railway, and is situated on a branch of the river Soar. The inhabitants are engaged in stocking weaving. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Blaby, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. together, £350, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was rebuilt in 1842, with the exception of the tower. The Baptists, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes.

COUNTESSWEIR, a chplry. in the par. of Topsham, in the co. of Devon. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £100, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Topsham.

COUNTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Creeton, wap. of Beltisloe, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles W. of Bourn. It is situated on the river Glen, and until recently formed part of the parish of Castle Bytham, but was transferred to Creeton by an Order in Council.

COUNTISBURY, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, in the co. of Devon, 16 miles N.E. of Barnstaple, and 2 E. of Lynton, its post town. It is situated on the river Lyn, near the Foreland. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the perpet. cur.* of Lynton, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. together, £120, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Barnstaple. The church, dedicated to St John the Baptist, has recently been restored. Glenthorne, a handsome edifice, is the residence of the Rev. W. S. Halliday, who is lord of the manor. On Countisbury Hill, which is 1,200 feet high, is a Danish camp, said to be the most perfect in the kingdom.

COUPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, in the co. of Lancaster, 6 miles N. of Bury.

COURAGE, a tythg. in the par. of Chieveley, in the co. of Berks, 3 miles N. of Newbury. There is a large tract of common.

COURAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Imokilly, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 2 miles from Dungourney.

COURCEYS, a bar. in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is 6 miles in length, the same in breadth, and has an area of 8,951 acres. It contains parts of the pars. of Ringrone, Kilroan, and Templetrine. Part of the barony stretches into the sea, forming a peninsula, at the point of which is Old Kinsale Head.

COURT, a vil. in the bar. of Leney, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Achonry. Here are fine ruins of a Franciscan friary built by O'Hara, and granted to Richard Kyndelinshe after the suppression of monasteries.

COURT, a vil. in the par. of Llanwenog, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 6 miles S.W. of Lampeter.

COURT, a tythg. in the par. of Portbury, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Bristol.

COURT-AT-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Lympne, hund. of Street, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 5 miles from Hythe. It takes its name from the Via Strata, which ran from Canterbury and Studfall Castle. It was here that the impostor, Elizabeth Barton, alias the "Holy Maid of Kent," among other extraordinary things, pretended to swallow pins. The ruins of a chapel, known as the Chapel of Our Lady at Court-at-Street, are still visible. This chapel is said to have been visited by the Canterbury pilgrims in the time of Thomas-à-Becket.

COURTEENHALL, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, in the co. of Northampton, 5 miles S. of Northampton, and 2 from the Roade railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £275, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure in various styles of architecture, and contains several monuments. There is a free grammar school, which was erected and endowed by Samuel Jones, Esq., in 1680. Courteenhall House, delightfully situated, is the seat of Sir Charles Wake, who is lord of the manor.

COURTHOUSES, a hmlt. in the par. of Scotter, in the co. of Lincoln, 9 miles N. of Gainsborough.

COURTHOYLE, a vil. in the bar. of Bantry, in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 6 miles E. of New Ross.

COURTMACSHERRY, a vil. in the par. of Lislee, bars. of Ibane and Barryroe, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is a coastguard station, and is resorted to in the summer months as a watering place. The inhabitants carry on a pretty extensive fishery. There is a good pier erected by government, but the harbour only admits small vessels. Courtmacsherry House belongs to the Earl of Shannon. In the vicinity are the ruins of Abbey Mahon. The bay lies between the bars. of Barryroe and Courceys, and penetrates inland over 3 miles. The opposite coasts narrow in at one point so much, as to form an inner and outer harbour, separated by a bar. The outer one affords but a poor refuge for craft, and is bounded on the one side by Old Kinsale Head, and on the other by Seven Heads. The inner is the embouchure of the river Arigadeen. Here is abundance of fish.

COURTMATRIX, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Cornello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles from Rathkeale. In the reign of Charles I. a body of German Protestants from the Palatinate settled here.

COURTSTOWN, a castle in the par. of Tullaroan, bar. of Granagh, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is supposed to date back to the early part of the 13th century, and underwent some alterations in Henry VIII.'s reign. The structure is said to have been one of much beauty. It was encompassed by a wall with a tower at each of the four corners. On the S. side was the gate, with two towers and portcullis. This castle was occupied by the Grace family until the end of the 17th century, when it was forfeited and allowed to fall into decay. Bow Butts lie to the S. They are mere hillocks, supposed to be the remains of an archery-butt.

COURTOWN, a small seaport in the bar. of Gorey, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of the town of Gorey. It is situated at the upper part of Kilbride Bay, near the vil. of River-chapel. A convenient harbour and pier have been formed. In the neighbourhood is the seat of the Earl of Courtown, who is proprietor of the estate. In 1798 this mansion was attacked and sustained considerable damage from a company of the rebels.

COURTWAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Spaxton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Bridgwater.

COVE, a tythg. in the par. of Yateley, in the co. of Hants, 5 miles N. of Farnham. It is situated near the Farnborough station on the South-Western line. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop.

COVE, a vil. in the par. of Ringcurran, bar. of Kinsale, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1½ mile E. of Kinsale. It is situated on the harbour, and is a favourite bathing place. The inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries.

COVE, a vil. in the par. of Nigg, in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland, 2½ miles S. of Aberdeen. It is situated on a peninsula formed by the river Dee and Nigg Bay, near Girdleness.

COVE, or CHAPEL COVE, a chplry. in the par. and hund of Tiverton, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles from Tiverton. It is situated near the Bristol and Exeter branch railway.

COVE. See QUEENSTOWN, co. Cork.

COVE BAY, a coastguard station in the par. of Cockburnspath, in the co. of Berwick, Scotland. It forms a small harbour.

COVE, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles to the E. of Beccles, its post town. It is situated on the river Waveney. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, with Willingham annexed, val. £353, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The principal residence is Cove House.

COVE, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the N. of Southwold, its post town. It is situated near the sea, and but thinly inhabited. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £274, in the patron. of Sir T. Gooch, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The parochial charities produce £14 per annum.

COVE, WEST, a hmlt. in the bar. of Dunkerrin, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 15 miles S.W. of Kenmare. It is situated on the N. bank of Kenmare river. There is a dispensary within the Kenmare Poor-law Union.

COVEHITHE, or NORTH HALES, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Southwold, and 5 E. of Wangford, its post town. The land is marshy, and the village much decayed. In former times the inhabitants were engaged in the fisheries, and cloth was manufactured. The living is a discharged vic. annexed to the rect. of Benacre, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £28, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Sir Edward S. Gooch, Bart., who are lords of the manor, the present baronet being a minor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a handsome tower. The charities amount to £25 per annum. Here is a parochial school for both sexes. Bishop Bale, the antiquary, was born here in 1495.

COVEN, a lib. in the par. of Brewood, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles S.E. of Brewood.

COVENEY, a par. in the hund. of South Witchford, in the co. of Cambridge, 3½ miles N.W. of Ely, and 3 N.E. of Sutton. It contains the chplry. of Manea, and the hmlt. of Wardy Hill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. with the cur. of Manea annexed, £809, in the patron. of Lord Rokeby. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small structure. Conyers Middleton was once rector of this parish. The charities amount to £45 per annum. The Baptists have a chapel at Haynead, and the Wesleyans a place of worship at Wardy Hill. There is a National school with a small endowment.

COVENHAM ST. BARTHOLOMEW, a par. in the wap. of Ludborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3½ miles from the Ludborough station of the East Lincolnshire line, and 6 N. of Louth. The Louth navigation passes through the parish. A small priory was founded at Covenham Grange by Bishop Carileph in the 11th century. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £287, in the patron. of the Rev. C. D. Holland, and heirs of S. Harrold, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure. It was formerly a large cruciform edifice, but has been partially taken down. It contains a fine sculptured font, and monuments of early date. The rent of 26 acres of land is set apart for the repair of the church. The Wesleyans, Free, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. The children of this parish are entitled to attend the school of Covenham St. Mary. Thomas Young, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COVENHAM ST. MARY, a par. in the wap. of Ludborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles from the Ludborough station. It is situated on the Louth navigation. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £197, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat structure. Seventeen acres of land are allotted for the repair of the church. Here are National Diocesan schools for both sexes, to which four neighbouring parishes have a claim. J. Kime, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COVENTRY, a manufacturing town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, situated in 52° 24′ N. lat. and 1° 30′ W. long. It formed until recently a city and county of itself, but the see is now incorporated in the diocese of Worcester, of which it forms an archdeaconry; and the county of the city is incorporated in the county of Warwickshire, to which previously it only nominally belonged, having exercised a separate jurisdiction from 1451 till 1842, when an Act of Parliament was passed for that purpose, and in the following year an Order in Council was issued dividing Warwickshire into the two divisions of Warwick and Coventry.—The town of Coventry is built on rising ground, on the right bank of the river Sherbourne, which here unites with the Radfordbrook. The London and North-Western railway, and the Holyhead road, both pass through the town; the distance from the metropolis being by the former 94 miles, by the latter 91. Two branch lines leave the main line at this point: one to join the Trent Valley line at Nuneaton, the other the Great Western at Leamington. There is also a canal, constructed in 1790, passing through Marston Bridge, Nuneaton, Atherstone, and Tamworth, joining the Grand Junction canal at Fradley Heath. Its length is 32¼ miles, and it has 14 locks, rising 96 feet. The city takes its name, which was anciently Conventre, from the fact of its having been built around a convent, of which St. Osburg was abbess, and which was destroyed in 1016 by the Danes. On its site Leofric, Earl of Mercia, and his celebrated wife Godiva, built a Benedictine abbey to the Virgin, St. Peter, and St. Osburg, endowing it with half the town and twenty-four manors. Both he and his lady were buried there. Her name will always be associated with Coventry, by reason of the story of her narrated by Matthew of Westminster. After the Conquest Coventry became part of the possessions of the earls of Chester. In 1102 Robert de Limesey, Bishop of Lichfield, removed his see here from Chester, and the city was the seat of the bishoprics of Coventry and Lichfield till the former was attached to Worcester. Henry V., when Prince of Wales, was taken up in this city for riotous conduct. Two parliaments have been held here: one by Henry IV. in 1404, and another by Henry VI. in 1458, known as "Parliamentum Diabolicum," when Richard Duke of York, and the earls of Warwick, March, and Salisbury were attainted. The meeting between Henry IV., then Duke of Hereford, and the Duke of Norfolk, to decide their quarrel by wager of battle, took place here. Mary Queen of Scots was confined here for a time, in 1566. In the parliamentary wars Coventry took up arms against the king, and was garrisoned by his opponents in 1642, for which offence Charles II. destroyed the walls, which had stood since the reign of Edward II. The pageants and mysteries periodically exhibited from a very early period have always been famous, and many of our sovereigns have been among the spectators. A procession, representing Godiva, was instituted in 1677, and continues to be exhibited on Trinity Friday. Descriptions of this and of the many curious mysteries performed here will be found in Thomas Sharpe's "Dissertation on the Pageants at Coventry, 1825," and W. Reader's "Pageant of the Company of Sheremen and Tailors in Coventry."—The local government is vested in a corporation, consisting of a mayor, 9 aldermen, and 30 councillors, with the style of the "mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of the city of Coventry." The assizes are held here, and it is the head of a County Court district, and of a Poor-law Union. It is a polling-place for North Warwickshire, and has returned two members to parliament from the time of Henry VI., and occasionally from the reign of Edward I. to that monarch. Under the Reform Act the parliamentary limits are more extensive than the municipal, the former, according to the census of 1861, comprised 9,154 houses, inhabited by a population of 41,647; while the municipal borough contained 8,991 houses, with 40,936 persons. The borough obtained three Acts of Parliament, in 1790, 1842, and 1844, to regulate the paving, lighting, cleansing, and water supply, and for the construction of a cemetery, and other improvements. In the older districts the streets are irregular and narrow, the houses having gable roofs and projecting upper stories, but the modern streets are well built, paved, and lighted with gas.—There are several fine specimens of ancient architecture in addition to the churches. St. Mary's, or the Guild, hall, is a Gothic building of the 15th century, with a fine timbered roof, and curious carved furniture. In the hall is a piece of tapestry of the year 1450, containing portraits of Henry VI., his queen, and others. The county-hall is a handsome stone building, erected in 1785, where the assizes are held. The Drapers' hall, used for public meetings and balls, was built in the present century. Before the Reformation there was a cathedral at Coventry, where the bishops of Coventry and Lichfield formerly held their seat. After the dissolution of the priory of Coventry, the Act of Parliament (33 Henry VIII.) made the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield the sole chapter for the bishop, and by an Order in Council, dated 22nd December, 1836, the archdeaconry of Coventry was transferred from the diocese of Lichfield to that of Worcester.—The town of Coventry is divided into two parishes. The living of St. Michael's is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown. St. John's is a rect.,* val. £180, in the patron. of the mayor and corporation, and is held by the master of the grammar school. There are likewise the following district churches: Christ Church, a cur., val. £175, in the patron. of the vicar; St. Thomas, a perpet. cur., val. £160, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately; Holy Trinity, a vic.,* val. £650, in the patron. of the lord chancellor; St. Peter's, a perpet. cur.,* val. £170, in the patron. of the Vicar of Holy Trinity; and Keresley and Coundon, a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. Some of these churches are remarkable for their beauty. St. Michael's, the largest, has a spire of 303 feet in height, of very just proportions. The length of the church is 300 feet, the breadth 104 feet. The ornamentation of the pillars and arches, and the carving of the old oak roof are justly admired. A church was built here in 1133, and given to the Benedictines by the Earl of Chester, but the present structure was begun in 1372, and completed in about twenty years from that date. Trinity is neither so lofty nor so elegant; the spire measures only 237 feet. A handsome coloured window was presented to this church by the Earl of Shrewsbury in 1834. Christ Church was added, by Rickman, to the tower and spire of the ancient Grey Friars' church, in the year 1832. St. John's was founded by the Merchant's Guild, temp. Edward III. There are several other churches, but of less note, besides places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Baptists, Quakers, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics. The chapel of the last named is a very handsome modern Gothic building. The charitable institutions are very numerous; among them may be mentioned Sir Thomas White's charity, the Bablake hospitals for men and boys, Ford's hospital, and others. The chief schools are the free school, founded by John Hales in the reign of Henry VIII., which has fellowships at St. John's College, Oxford, and Catherine Hall, Cambridge; the Bablake school for 50 boys under eleven; the Baiker, Billing, and Crow's school, for 50 boys; the blue-coat girls' school, where 40 are received; Bailey's, for 40 boys; Southern and Craner's, for 30 or 40 children; and Fairfax for 40 boys. There are also British and National schools, Sunday-schools connected with the various places of worship, a school of design, and a mechanics' institute. The Grey Friars' Hospital contains some very ancient carved oak. —The chief manufactures are ribbon weaving and clock and watch making; the former was introduced about 1730, and gave employment to a large number of hands until the alteration of the duties on foreign silks in 1861, in accordance with the French treaty, when many were thrown out of employment. Prior to this, cloth, cloth caps, and blue thread were the staple articles. There are also one or two iron foundries, and manufactories for trimmings, carriages, stockings, and lace. Nearly 1,300 acres of land around the city are common land. The greater quantity, about 1,000 acres, is called Lammas and Michaelmas lands, and freemen have the exclusive right of pasturing their cattle thereon—from Lammas Day to Candlemas over the Lammas land, and from Michaelmas to Candlemas over the Michaelmas land. No building is as yet permitted on these lands, but it is expected that they will before long be covered with houses, as the population is increasing and the town has no room to expand its area. A company was formed in 1863 by the mayor and other influential persons for the improvement of these and other waste lands, under the title of the "Coventry Experimental Sewage Association," by which it is proposed, in imitation of Edinburgh, Watford, and other places, where the experiment has been successfully tried, to apply the sewage of the town, in the form of liquid manure, by means of pipes, steam-engines, and other appliances.—Besides the ancient buildings already mentioned, there is not much to interest the antiquary. The ancient market-cross, which was 57 feet high, has been taken down. A small portion of the Charterhouse, founded by Lord Zouch, 1381, and the cellar of the convent founded by Leofric, are still to be seen. Two newspapers are published here, the Coventry Herald and the Coventry Standard. The Coventrys, of Croome Court, derive their title of earl from this city. The market is held on Friday, and fairs from the 21st to the 23rd April, 10th to 18th August, 21st to 23rd October, and on Corpus Christi Day. Annual races take place in March.

COVER BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of East Witton, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles S.E. of Middleham. It is situated on the river Cover, a branch of the Ure.

COVERHAM, a par. in the wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles S.W. of Middleham, and 4½ from Leyburn. It is situated on the river Cover, and contains the tnshps. of Carlton, Carlton Highdale, Coverham-cum-Agglethorpe, East and West Scrafton, Caldbergh, and Melmerby. The parish is very extensive, comprising above 22,000 acres, part of which is moorland. Coal, limestone, and slate are worked. At the commencement of the 13th century an abbey for White Friars was founded by Ralph Fitz-Robert, ruins of which still remain. At the Dissolution its lands were valued at £208. The living is a perpet. cur.* with the perpet. cur. of Horsehouse annexed, in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £180, in the patron. of the Tomlinson family. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone structure, with tower and handsome stained-glass windows. It has been recently restored. The charities amount to £45 per annum, exclusive of Constantine's endowment for a free school. Coverham Abbey, the seat of Thomas Lister, Esq., is formed from the outhouses of the ancient building.

COVERHAM-CUM-AGGLETHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Coverham, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Coverham.

COVERHEAD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Carlton Highdale, par. of Coverham, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles from Middleham. It is situated in the moors, near the source of the river Cover.

COVERSEA, a beacon in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Lossiemouth. It is situated 160 feet above the sea, and the revolving light can be seen for 20 miles.

COVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, in the co. of Hunts, 3 miles N.W. of Kimbolton, and 8 from Thrapston, the former being its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £180, in the patron. of the Hon. G. W. Fitzwilliam. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The lords of the manor are the Duke of Manchester and Earl Fitzwilliam.

COVINGTON, a par. in Upper ward, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. This par. contains the vils. of Covington and Thankerton, and is bounded by Pettynain, Liberton, and Carmichael on the N., the Clyde on the E., and Symington and Wiston on the S. It extends northward 4 miles, with a breadth of 3 miles. The land near the Clyde is well cultivated, and that to the S. is devoted to sheep pasture, being principally heath. The only mansion is St. John's Kirk. There are four circular camps, and a ruined castle, built in 1442 by Lindsey of Covington. Donald Cargill, the Covenanter, was taken prisoner at Covington Mill. There is a station of the Caledonian railway at Thankerton. The village of Covington is 5 miles N.W. of Biggar. This par. is in the presb. of Biggar, and in the patron. of Sir N. M. Lockhart and Sir W. C. Anstruther. The stipend of the minister is £209. The parishes of Covington and Thankerton were united in the first quarter of last century, since which the church of Covington has alone been used.

COW, a small island, or group of rocks, in Lough Dergh, between Portumna and Killaloe, in the co. of Clare, Ireland. A temporary landing-stage was erected here some years ago, and a project formed for constructing a harbour.

COW AND CALF, a rock in Dundrum Bay, off the coast of Down, Ireland. It is noted for the wreck of the Great Britain steamer in 1846.

COWAGE. See BREMILHAM, Wilts.

COWAL, a district in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It forms a peninsula between the Frith of Clyde on the E., and Loch Fyne on the W., and includes the pars. of Dunoon, Inverchaolain, Kilfinan, Kilmodan, Kilmorich, Lochgoilhead, Strachur, and Strathlachlan. The surface slopes from the N.E., where it is most mountainous, to the S.W., where it is comparatively low. The coast-line is indented by Loch Eck, Loch Streven, and Loch Ridden, and many small harbours. Sheep and black cattle are pastured on the hills. The principal heritors are Campbell of Strachur, Campbell of South-hall, and Lamont of Lamont.

COWARCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanymowddwy, in the co. of Merioneth, 2 miles N. of Dinas-Mowddwy.

COWARNE, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Bromyard. The village is small, and part of the land is planted in hops. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Ullingswick.

COWARNE, MUCH, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 3 miles S.E. of Little Cowarne. Part of the land is in hops and orchard. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, and in the patron. of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, which is ancient, is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Cowarne Court is the principal residence.

COWAY STAKES, a point on the river Thames between Walton-on-Thames on the Surrey side, and Shepperton in Middlesex, at which Cæsar is believed to have crossed the ford in pursuit of Cassivelaunus, the British chieftain, who, to retard his passage, drove sharp stakes into the bank, vestiges of which are still visible.

COWBIT, a par. in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles S. of Spalding, its post town. It is situated on the river Welland, and contains the hmlt. of Peak Hill. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £460, in the patron. of certain feoffees. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in 1486. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are free schools for both sexes. The parochial charities produce £35 per annum, in addition to £55, the endowment of Andrew's free school. John Rich and Maurice Johnson, Esqs., are lords of the manor. The Wash, about 1 mile broad from E. to W., and 10 miles long, lies to the W. of the village.

COWBIT WASH, a salt-marsh in the par. of Pinchbeck, wap. of Elloe, in the co. of Lincoln. See COWBIT.

COWBRIDGE, a hund. in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, contains the pars. of Cowbridge, Llanblethian, Eglwys-Brewis, Flemingston, Gileston, Major Lantwit, Llan-dough, Llan-haran, Llan-hary, Llan-ilid, Llan-maes, Llan-mitrangle, Llan-sannor, Llysworney, Nash, Pen-doglon, St. Athan, St. Donat's Welsh, St. Hilary, St. Mary-church, Stembridge, and Ystrad-Owen.

COWBRIDGE, a par., sessions and market town in the hund. of Cowbridge, in the co. of Glamorgan, 12½ miles W. of Cardiff. It is situated near the South Wales railway, from which a junction line is now in course of formation. The river Ddaw passes at a short distance, falling into the sea at Aberthaw. It is a contributory borough to Cardiff, and is governed under a charter of Charles II. by a mayor, who holds the office as constable of St. Quintin's Castle, 2 bailiffs, 12 aldermen, and 12 burgesses. The town is neatly built, with broad paved streets, and possesses a townhall, bank, and a stone bridge. The figures of a cow and a bridge are the town arms. In the year 1091, the town was encompassed with a stone wall by Robert St. Quintin, who afterwards erected the castle of Llanblethian. One of the gates remaining, in good condition, is a Gothic structure. Near the church is a large tumulus, and the remains of a druidical temple. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and gives name to a deanery. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanblethian, in the dioc. of Llandaff, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church is an ancient structure, and contains several handsome monuments. The charities amount to £60 per annum, exclusive of pensioners in the grammar school, which would make them £50 more. The Baptists, and Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists have each a chapel. There is a grammar school for mathematics and classics, which was founded and endowed by Sir Leoline Jenkins in 1685. It has a revenue from endowment of £20, with two fellowships, two scholarships, and one exhibition at Jesus College, Oxford. The Llanharran hounds and Cowbridge harriers hunt here. Tuesday and Saturday are market days, and fairs are held the first Tuesday in February, the Tuesday before the 25th March, 4th May, 24th June, and 29th September.

COWBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Patterdale, par. of Hurtsop Barton, in the co. of Westmoreland, 5 miles N.E. of Ambleside. It is situated in a fine spot at the head of Ulleswater, under Helvellyn.

COWBROW, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lupton, par. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, in the co. of Westmoreland, 4 miles N.W. of Kirkby-Lonsdale. It is situated at Lupton Fell, near the river Lune.

COWBUSH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Sawley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles S.W. of Ripon.

COWCADDENS, a vil. in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It forms a suburb of Glasgow.

COWCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Brinscombe, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Minchinhampton. It is situated on the Cheltenham line.

COWDEN, a par. in the hund. of Somerden, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 8 miles W. of Tunbridge Wells, 5 from East Grinstead, and 4 from Edenbridge, its post town. It is situated on the confines of Sussex and Surrey, from which it is separated by a stream of the river Medway, here an insignificant brook, which takes its rise some few miles off in Surrey. The village is pleasantly placed with a southern slope, and the houses bear a remarkably neat appearance. The iron works were carried on at "The Furnace" till the beginning of the last century, and part of the iron rails round St. Paul's, London, were cast at this furnace. The whole of the Weald, in which district this parish is included, is extremely agreeable in summer, and finely wooded, but in winter its tenacious clay renders it a less enviable residence. Part of the land is in hops, and ironstone is found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £347, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Harvey. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a small ancient structure, with a shingled spire 130 feet in height, and a handsome stained-glass window. Besides the parish church, there is a district church near the further boundary of the parish, adjoining Hever. It was built about ten years since by the Hon. J. C. Talbot, and has a school and parsonage attached. There are several records, and a register which commences in 1566. Here are five almshouses, also National and free schools. Traces of Roman camps are visible in the neighbourhood, especially one to the W. on the confines of Surrey, which includes an area of 25 acres, and the triple vallum of which in some parts is nearly perfect. From this point, on a fine day, a view of surpassing beauty is obtained down the valley of Kent to Ashford, and up the valley of Surrey to Leith Hill, whilst to the S. lies the richly wooded county of Sussex. There are several gentlemen's seats in this parish, and about 3 miles from the village is Hever Castle, and in another direction about 4 miles, Penshurst. A pleasure fair is held on the 22nd August.

COWDENBEATH, a vil. in the par. of Beath, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Dunfermline, and 18 from Edinburgh by the North British railway, which has a station here, where the Kinross-shire junction branches off.

COWDEN, GREAT, a hmlt. in the par. of Mappleton, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles S. of Hornsea. In ancient times it formed a separate parish, but the land has been gradually encroached upon by the sea. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The Holderness hounds meet here.

COWDEN, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ald-borough, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York. It adjoins Great Cowden.

COWDENHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Bathgate, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Whitburn, and 20 from Edinburgh.

COWDENKNOWES, a moor in the cos. of Berwick and Roxburgh, Scotland. It is situated to the N.E. of Melrose, and is celebrated for its banks of broom.

COWES, EAST, a district in the par. of Whippingham, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Hants, 5 miles N. of Newport. It is situated at the mouth of the river Medina, opposite the town of West Cowes. Since Osborne has become the property of her Majesty, and been made her marine residence, the village has greatly increased in size, and at the last census contained 2,000 inhabitants. The Trinity Board have a station here, which serves for a landing-place for the Queen when bad weather hinders her Majesty from landing under Osborne. There was formerly a custom-house establishment here, but having been removed to West Cowes, the building has been converted into a coastguard station. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Whippingham. The church, which was erected at the cost of £3,000, is dedicated to St. James. It is a plain Norman structure, with square tower, designed by Nash. The first stone was laid by her present Majesty, then Princess Victoria, in 1831, and the church was finished in 1833. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have chapels, and there are spacious National schools for boys and girls. The neighbourhood contains some handsome residences, and the mild climate and picturesque scenery make it a most desirable place of abode. The following places are most conspicuous in the vicinity—Osborne House, the marine residence of her Majesty; and adjoining it, on the brow of a hill overlooking the village, is East Cowes Castle, a Gothic mansion, built by Nash, the architect of Buckingham Palace; its picturesque turret, rising boldly over the wooded screen which embosoms it, forms a pleasing addition to the scenery of the coast; Spring Hill, the house of George Shedden, Esq., stands on the brow of a hill, and commands an extensive and magnificent view. To the E. is Portsmouth, with its shipping, and the wooded shores of the Isle of Wight; to the W. is Chalcot Castle and the New Forest, with the Southampton river and the Solent Sea in the distance, flanked by the towers and spires of the busy town of Southampton. Near this lovely spot is Norris Castle, with its clustering towers, once the residence of her Majesty, when Princess Victoria, and of the late Duchess of Kent.

COWES, WEST, a seaport and market town, in the par. of Northwood, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Hants, 4¾ miles N. of Newport, 12 W.S.W. of Portsmouth, and 78 S.W. of London. It is situated on elevated ground, near the mouth of the river Medina. The streets, which were narrow and inconvenient, have been greatly improved of late years; and many of the houses are handsome structures, especially in the upper part of the town, which is the most recently built. It contains, besides numerous hotels and lodging-houses, a townhall, market-house, and banks. The castle, built by Henry VIII., with its crescent-shaped battery, stands on the parade near the mouth of the harbour, and is the Royal Yacht Squadron Club-house; and near it is the beautiful terrace, recently completed, the property of Sir Charles Fellows. Many of these houses are regular marine palaces, elegantly furnished; and, although unoccupied during the winter, are well tenanted in the summer months by the wealthy visitors, who resort here for the use of the baths, and enjoyment of the mild yet invigorating climate of this most lovely of all watering-places. There are two sets of baths, one near the castle, the other in High-street. This town being the chief port of the island, and the point of communication with the mainland by way of Southampton, necessarily enjoys a brisk trade, and has belonging to it about 180 vessels, a third of which are above 50 tons burthen. Steamboats run to Lymington, Portsmouth, Ryde, Yarmouth, and Southampton. Ship-building has long been carried on, and Messrs. Ratsey and Hansen have turned out some of the prettiest quick-sailing craft yet constructed. Of this the yachts made for the Royal Yacht Squadron are examples. This club annually meets in the month of August at the anchorage in Cowes Roads, in 10 fathoms water, to hold their regatta. Vessels of large burthen are also built at Messrs. White's building yards, which consist of two docks of the respective lengths of 330 and 140 feet, with five slipways, capable of hauling up ships of 1,000 tons burthen. One of the vessels built here was the fast and powerful steamer Vectis, of 1,000 tons, for the Peninsula and Oriental Company, and the royal mail steamer Medina, of 1,400 tons. There are besides two brass and iron foundries, an extensive ropery, and two sail-making establishments. To Mr. Ratsey is due the credit of having introduced the manufacture of wire-rope. The harbour affords ample quay accommodation for discharging and loading ships of almost any burthen in perfect security. The steamboat pier was built by G. H. Ward, Esq., late resident at Northwood Park. The Medina commercial wharf, situated in the Medina Road, has ample storehouses and bonding warehouses along its banks for general merchandise. The town of West Cowes, being not incorporated, is under the district magistrates, but its sanitary and local concerns are regulated by a board of health, constituted under the Health of Towns Act. Gas was introduced in 1845, and a good supply of water is furnished to the houses by a company formed in 1847. There are two churches in the town. The living of West Cowes is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £156, in the patron. of the Vicar of Carisbrooke. The living of Holy Trinity is also a perpet. cur., val. £85, in the patron. of Mrs. Goodwin, who erected the handsome new church in 1832, at her sole expense. The Roman Catholic chapel is a large brick building, erected in 1796. The Independents, Bible Christians, Primitive, Wesleyan, and Reformed Methodists, have each a place of worship. There is a British school for boys on Shooter's Hill, and a National school for boys and girls in York-street. In the vicinity is West Cowes House, West Hill, Northwood House, Dedburn Lodge, and Egypt House. Saturday is market day. A fair for pedlery and toys is held in Whitsun week.

COWFOLD, a par. in the hund. of Windham, rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, 6 miles S.W. of Cuckfield, and 2 E. of the West Grinstead railway station on the South Coast railway. It is a polling-place for the borough of New Shoreham. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £452, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is in the perpendicular style. It contains a fine canopied brass to Prior Nelond, of Lewes. The register commences in 1558. There are National schools for boys, and some small charities.

COWGILL, a vil. in the par. of Sedbergh, hund. of West Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 64 miles W. of York. It is situated in a quiet valley near the river Rowther, sheltered by mountains. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries and neighbouring cotton-mills.

COWGROVE, or KINSON, a hmlt. in the manor of Kingston Lacy, in the co. of Dorset, 2 miles N.W. of Wimborne Minster.

COWHILL, a vil. in the par. of Hollywood, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Dumfries.

COW HONEYBOURNE, a par. and tnshp. in the upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles E. of Evesham, and 4 from Campden. It is a station on the Oxford and Wolverhampton line. Weston Subedge is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. not in charge, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, and in the patron. of the Rev. R. Poole. The church has fallen into decay. Portions of it are used as dwellings; consequently, the inhabitants of the parish attend the church at Church Honeybourne. There are some small charities.

COWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Thomas the Apostle, in the co. of Devon, within the limits of the city of Exeter. It was the site of a Benedictine cell to Bec Abbey, founded by William Fitz-Baldwin in the 12th century.

COWICK, a district par. in the par. of Snaith, lower div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from Snaith. It is situated on the river Don, and contains the hmlts. of Newbridge and Greenland, with the tnshps. of East and West Cowick. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £160, in the patron. of Viscount Downe, who built the church, and who resides at Cowick Hall, which is a handsome and commodious mansion. The charities amount to £21 per annum.

COWIE, a vil. in the par. of Dunotter, in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Stonehaven. It takes its name from the Cowie rivulet, which, rising near Glenbervie, passes by Cowie Moss and Cowie Common, and falls into the North Sea near Downey Point. The inhabitants are engaged in the herring fisheries.

COWLAM, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles N.W. of Great Driffield, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Bowes, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built on the site of the old one in 1852. It possesses several stained-glass windows, and an old font.

COWLEY, a par. in the hund. of Elthorne, in the co. of Middlesex, 1 mile S. of Uxbridge, its post town and railway station, and 15 from London by the Great Western line. It is situated near the river Colne, on the Grand Junction canal. It is supposed to be the Covelie of Domesday, and was held by the Pecches. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £230, in the patron. of W. Hilliard, Esq., the lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure. It has a tomb to Booth, the tragedian, and the grave of Dr. Dodd, executed in 1777 for forgery; he was the author of "Prison Thoughts" and "Lectures on Death." Here is a National school and some almshouses. Cowley Street is part of the old Roman road from St. Alban's to Staines.

COWLEY, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles S. of Cheltenham, its post town, and 10 E. of Gloucester. The village is small, but the land is fertile and well cultivated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £322, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure, with monuments. The charities amount to £3 per annum. James Hutchinson, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

COWLEY, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, in the co. of Oxford, 2¼ miles S.E. of Oxford. It was the site of a hospital, founded by Henry I., and subsequently given to Oriel College, Oxford. The village is of considerable extent, and contains the diocesan school. The land is marshy but fertile. In the vicinity is Cowley Temple, the site of a preceptory of the Knights Templars. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £64, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. James. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes.

COWLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Preston Bisset, in the co. of Bucks, 4 miles S. of Buckingham.

COWLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Gnosall, in the co. of Stafford, 6 miles S.W. of Stafford.

COWLEY, a vil. in the par. of Fordoun, in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland, 10 miles S.W. of Stonehaven. It is situated under the Grampians.

COWLEY, a hmlt. within the city of Exeter, in the co. of Devon. It is situated on the river Ex.

COWLING, or COOLINGE, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, in the co. of Suffolk, 7 miles N.W. of Clare, its post town, and about the same distance from Newmarket. The manor was given by Henry II. to his natural son, by Fair Rosamond, known in history as Long Espée, or Longsword. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100, in patron. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, aisle, and handsome red brick tower. The interior contains some ancient brasses. The charities amount to £30. There is an Independent chapel. James Simpson, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held twice a year, on the 31st July and 17th October, for sheep and cattle.

COWLING, a tnshp. in the par. of Kildwick, E. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles S.W. of Skipton, and 3 S.W. of Kildwick. It contains the hmlts. of Cowling Hill and Ickornshaw. There are several cotton and worsted mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, built in 1844, is a handsome structure. The charities amount to £17 per annum. R. Wainman, Esq., is lord of the manor.

COWLISHALL, a vil. in the par. of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles N. of Oldham. It is within the limits of the borough of Oldham. The inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and cotton-mills.

COWMS, a vil. in the par. of Kirk-Heaton, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from Huddersfield. The inhabitants are engaged in the cloth trade.

COWNY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangadfan, in the co. of Montgomery, 6 miles N. of Llanfair.

COWPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, in the higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster.

COWPEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Horton, in the E. div. of Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 1 mile W. of Blyth, and 3 miles N.E. of Morpeth, its post and market town. It is situated at the mouth of the river Blyth. There are schools for both sexes in connection with the parish church. The Roman Catholics have a chapel dedicated to St. Cuthbert, attached to which is a school. There are several collieries.

COWPEN BEWLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Billingham, ward of Stockton, in the co. of Durham, 2½ miles S.E. of Billingham station, and 4 N.E. of Stockton, its post town. There is a Church of England school. The land is marshy, and principally belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Durham.

COWPITS, a vil. in the par. of Inveresk, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile from Musselburgh, and 7 miles from Edinburgh.

COWSBY, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles from Northallerton, its post town, and 8 N.E. of the Thirsk station of the North-Eastern line. There are only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £146, in the patron. of Mrs. E. Lloyd. The church, dedicated to St. Michael and All Angels, is a stone structure. Here are four almshouses for poor tenants of the place.

COWSDON, a vil. in the par. of Upton-Snodsbury, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles N. of Pershore.

COWSFIELD-LOVERS and COWSFIELD ESTUARY, tythgs. in the par. of Whiteparish, in the co. of Wilts, 8 miles E. of Salisbury.

COWSLAND, a vil. in the par. of Cranston, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Dalkeith, and 9 from Edinburgh.

COWTHORN. See CAWTHORN, Yorkshire.

COWTHORP, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N.E. of Wetherby, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Nidd. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £130, in the patron. of A. Montague, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone structure in the perpendicular style of architecture. It was built in 1455, and contains monuments and a brass to Judge Roucliffe and his wife (1494). The register commences in 1568. The charities amount to £100 per annum. Here is an oak, measuring 60 feet at the girth, whose branches at one period shaded half an acre of land. In 1749 the head of a stag was here discovered, the spread of the horns measuring 6 feet. Andrew Montague, Esq., is lord of the manor. Agriculture forms the chief employment of the inhabitants.

COWTON, EAST, a par. in the wap. of East Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles N.E. of Northallerton. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £202, in the patron. of Kirby Ravensworth Hospital. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities produce £30, the endowment of Dakyn's free school.

COWTON, NORTH, a tnshp. in the above par.

COWTON, SOUTH, a chplry. in the above par. Adjoining this chapelry is Standard Hill, where the battle of the Standard was fought in 1138. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £53, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities produce about £7 per annum.

COXALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Bucknell, hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 7 miles N.E. of Presteign. It is situated on the river Teme. It was here that Caractacus made his last stand against the Roman general Ostorius, who occupied Brandon, or Brandon.

COXFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of East Rudham, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles S.W. of Fakenham. There are ruins of a priory founded by William Chene.

COXHEAD FORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Clee St. Margaret, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles N. of Ludlow.

COXHOE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kelloe, ward of Easington, in the co. of Durham, 5¼ miles S.E. of Durham. It is the terminus of the West Hartlepool Harbour and Railway line; Coxhoe Bridge is also a station on the Hartlepool and Ferryhill branch of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated between Sedgefield and Durham, and includes the hmlt. of East Hetton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the extensive collieries and limestone quarries, and in the manufacture of pottery. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels, to which are attached week-day and Sunday schools.

COXLEY, a tythg. and chplry. in the city of Wells, in the co. of Somerset. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Wells.

COXLODGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Gosforth, in the W. div. of Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 2½ miles N. of Newcastle-on-Tyne. It is situated near the Newcastle race-course. It includes the hmlts. of Causeway End and Bulman's Village. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Coxlodge colliery is owned by Matthew Bell, Esq., who is the chief landed proprietor.

COXWELL, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Faringdon, in the co. of Berks, 2 miles from Faringdon, its post town, and 5 from the Faringdon Road station of the Great Western railway. The manor was granted by King John, in 1204, to the abbots of Beaulieu, and a portion still remaining of the conventual buildings have been converted into a farmhouse. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £211, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a school with a small endowment. This parish, conjointly with Coleshill, has a rentcharge of £73 6s., bequeathed by the Earl of Radnor and the Rev. John Pinsant, for apprenticing children of the two parishes. On Badbury Hill is a Danish circular encampment.

COXWELL, LITTLE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Great Faringdon, and hund. of Faringdon, in the co. of Berks, adjoining Great Coxwell. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Great Faringdon. The tithes were commuted in 1801. In the vicinity are the remains of an ancient camp, surrounded by a double ditch, and numerous pits excavated in the sand, supposed to be the hiding-places of the Ancient Britons.

COXWOLD, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N. of Easingwold, its post town. It is a railway station on the Thirsk and Malton branch of the North-Eastern line. It contains the chplry. of Birdforth, and seven tnshps., including the tnshp. of Coxwold. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. with the cur. of Yearsley annexed, £351, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There is also a district church at Birdforth, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £94, in the patron. of the Archbishop of York. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is in the perpendicular style of architecture. It contains monuments to the Bellasyse and other families. Here is a free grammar school, founded by Sir John Hart in 1603, who was born at Kilburn, near this village, and afterwards became Lord Mayor of London. There is also an hospital, founded by Thomas E. Fauconberg in 1696. The charities amount to £50 per annum. The living of this parish was for some time held by Laurence Sterne, who wrote his "Tristram Shandy" here. Coal and iron are found; the working of the former, however, has been discontinued for nearly half a century. Sir George Wombwell is lord of the manor.

COYCHURCH, COED-DHU-CHURCH, or LLANGRALLO, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 2¼ miles E. of Bridgend, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Ogmore, and contains the hmlts. of Higher and Lower Coychurch and Pencoed, also the chplry. of Peterston-on-the-Hill. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the cur. of Peterston-Super-Montem annexed, £446, in the patron. of the Earl of Dunraven. The church is dedicated to St. Grallo, and possesses an ancient cross. There are National and endowed schools. The other charities consist of the interest of £1,000 in the Funds, which is equally divided amongst the poor of the three hamlets. There are coal and lime works in the neighbourhood.

COYCHURCH, HIGHER and LOWER, two hmlts. in the par. of Coychurch, in the hund. of Newcastle, and co. of Glamorgan, as above.

COYDIOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwyfan, in the co. of Denbigh, 4 miles E. of Denbigh.

COYGACH, anciently a par. in the co. of Ross, Scotland, but now annexed to Lochbroom.

COYLTON, a par. in the district of Kyle, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own. name, and also the vils. of Craighall, Gadgirthholm, Bankier, Joppa, and Knockshoggleholm. It extends 12 miles in a north-westerly direction, with a breadth of about 2 miles. The northern districts are flat or undulating: the middle rise into elevations called the Craigs of Coyl, with an elevation of 750 feet above the sea; and the upper or southern district is pastoral, and has an extreme elevation of 1,100 feet. Seven-tenths of the surface is under tillage, two-tenths are in pasture, and the remainder in wood. Coal is largely mined, and limestone, sandstone, and whinstone are extensively quarried. Sundrum, Gadgirth, and Rankinston are the principal seats. This parish, and the river Coyle which flows through its interior, are supposed to take their name from an ancient king called Coilus, who is said to have been slain at Coylesfield, 5 miles S. of Coylton. The village of Coylton is an insignificant place, 6 miles E. of the town of Ayr. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £254.

COYTY, or COIT, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, in the co. of Glamorgan, 1½ mile N.E. of Bridgend, its post town. It is situated on the river Ogmore, and contains the hmlts. of Higher and Lower Coyty, the market town of Bridgend, and the vils. of Hendre, Nolton, and Oldcastle. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the mines and quarries. Coychurch is about a mile from the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the cur. of Nolton annexed, £416, in the patron. of the Earl of Dunraven. The church has lately been restored. The castle of Sir P. Tuberville, which now belongs to the Wyndhams, is a noble ruin. The manor or lordship belongs to the Earl of Dunraven.

COYTY, HIGHER and LOWER, hmlts. in the above par.

CRABTREE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Brightside-Bierlow, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles

N.E. of Sheffield. There are two other small places of this name: one in the co. of Devon, near Plymouth, and the other in Middlesex, near Hammersmith.

CRABWALL, a hmlt. in the pars. of Trinity and St. Oswald, hund. of Wirrall, in the co. of Chester, 1½ mile N. of Chester. Lord Crewe is lord of the manor. It is situated near the Ellesmere canal, and together with Blacon forms a township.

CRACHYTY, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, hund. of Cathing, in the co. of Carmarthen, 4½ miles N.W. of Llandeilo-fawr.

CRACKENTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleby St. Michael, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2 miles N.W. of Appleby, its post town and railway station. It is situated near the river Eden, and the Roman road called Maiden Way. Its name signifies "crow town," which epithet it received in the Saxon times, when it formed part of the possessions of the Machels. Crackenthorpe Hall is an ancient seat of the Machels, belonging to the Earl of Lonsdale, but now a farmhouse. In the vicinity is a Roman camp, nearly 1,000 feet long by 500 broad, where urns and other antiquities have been found.

CRACKPOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Grinton, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2½ miles N.E. of Muker.

CRACOE, a tnshp. in the par. of Burnsall, E. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N. of Skipton.

CRADLE MOUNTAINS, a range of hills in the eastern part of the co. of Brecon, the highest point being Pen Cader Fawr, 2,545 feet above sea-level.

CRADLEY, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, in the co. of Hereford, 6½ miles S.E. of Bromyard, and 7 N.E. of Ledbury. It contains the tythgs. of East and West Cradley. Part of the land is in hops. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £957, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. James, is partly in the Norman and partly in the early English styles. There is also a district church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of the Rector of Cradley. The charities amount to £76 per annum, £20 of which goes to Turner's school. There are an endowed free school, a Sunday school, and a girls' school. G. E. Wall, Esq., and the Rev. W. H. Wall, M.A., are lords of the manor.

CRADLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Halesowen, in the lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 2½ miles S. of Dudley, and 2 N.E. of Stourbridge. It is pleasantly situated on the river Stour, near the Dudley canal. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and in the extensive iron-works in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £116, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halesowen. The Unitarians, Wesleyans, Baptists, and New Connexion Methodists, have each a chapel. There is a National school for both sexes. Lord Lyttelton is lord of the manor.

CRADOC'S CHURCH, a hermitage under the hills near Ystrad-gynlais, in the co. of Brecon.

CRAFTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wing, hund. of Cottesloe, in the co. of Bucks, 3½ miles N.W. of Ivinghoe.

CRAGG, the name of several small hmlts. and seats in various parts of Ireland; also the name of a place in Westmoreland, 3 miles W. of Kendal.

CRAGGAN, a vil. in the par. of Arroquhar, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Luss.

CRAGGANESTER and CRAGGANTOUL, hmlts. in the par. of Weem, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 2 miles from Aberfeldy.

CRAGGIE, LOCH, a small lake in the northern part of the co. of Sutherland, Scotland, 2 miles from Tongue. It abounds in trout, pike, and char. There is also a mountain of the same name near Kildonan.

CRAGH, a small island in Lough Conn, in the bar. of Tirawley, co. of Mayo, Ireland.

CRAGHY, a lough about 2 miles long, in the co. of Donegal, Ireland.

CRAICHIE, a vil. in the par. of Dunnichen, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Forfar.

CRAIG, a par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland. It includes the vils. of Ferryden and Usan, and is bounded on the N. by the Montrose basin, on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the pars. of Lunan and Kinnel, and on the W. by the par. of Farnell. Its extreme length from N.E. to S.W. is about 6 miles, with a breadth of 3 miles. The surface of the parish is undulating, and the scenery beautiful. About three-fourths is in cultivation, the remainder being pasture and wood. The fisheries, both of salmon and other fish, are extensive. The principal seats are Rossie House, Dunninald House, Usan House, and Inchbrayock Villa. The ruins of Craig Castle, often mentioned in Scottish history, and the site of a fort said to have been used by Oliver Cromwell, are the principal antiquities. This par. is in the presb. of Brechin, and in the patron. of St. Mary's College, St. Andrew's. The stipend of the minister is £257. There is also a Free church. This par. comprises the two ancient pars. of Craig, or Inchbrayock, and Dunninald, or St. Skeoch, which were united in 1618. From the parish church there is a beautiful view northward, over and beyond the town of Montrose.—The syllable craig signifying "a rock," is affixed to the names of many mountains and craggy places, both in Scotland and Wales, too numerous to mention.

CRAIGDALLIE, a vil. in the par. of Kinnaird, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Perth.

CRAIGDEN, a vil. in the par. of Llantrisaint, in the co. of Glamorgan, 2 miles from Llantrisaint.

CRAIGEND, three vils. of this name, severally in the cos. of Lanark, Perth, and Stirling, Scotland.

CRAIGENPUTTOCK, a vil. in the par. of Dunscore, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Minihive.

CRAIGFORTH, a vil. in the par. and co. of Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles from Stirling. The principal residence is Craigforth House.

CRAIGGELLIE, a vil. in the par. of Lonmay, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Frazerburgh.

CRAIGHALL, and CRAIGHALL, NEW, vils. in the par. of Inveresk, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Dalkeith, and 8 from Edinburgh. Sir J. Hope, Bart., M.P., is chief heritor. There are also vils. of the same name in the cos. of Ayr, Fife, and Perth.

CRAIGIE, a par. in the district of Kyle, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It is bounded by Galston on the N., and by Riccarton, Dundonald, Symington, and Mauchline on the W. and S. The surface is in general level, fertile, and well enclosed. From an eminence 500 feet high, there is an extensive view, including Ben Lomond and the Grampians on the N., the Jura on the W., and the Irish hills on the S. Cairnhill, Barnwell, and Underwood are the chief mansions. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and in the patron. of Campbell of Craigie. The stipend of the minister is £247. This par. includes part of the suppressed par. of Barnwell.

CRAIGIE, a vil. in the par. of East Church, Perth, Scotland. It stands half a mile S. of the city of Perth.

CRAIGIE, a vil. in the par. of Caputh, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 2 miles from Dunkeld.

CRAIGIE, a vil. in the par. of Dalmeny, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Kirkliston, and 10 from Edinburgh. It is situated on Almond Water, under Craigie Hill, from whence there is an extensive view.

CRAIGIE, a vil. in the par. of Dundee, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Dundee.

CRAIGIE, a vil. in the par. and co. of Ayr, Scotland, adjoining the town of Ayr.

CRAIGIEHALL, a vil. in the par. of Dalmeny, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Kirkliston, and 10 from Edinburgh. It is situated under Craigie Hill.

CRAIGIELANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkpatrick Juxta, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Moffat.

CRAIGIEVAR CASTLE, a seven-storied tower in the par. of Leochel, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Tarland. It was begun by Roger Mortimer, and completed by Bishop Forbes, of Corse, at the commencement of the 17th century, with the motto, "Do not waken sleepin dougs." It is surrounded by Macbeth's cairn, and other tumuli, and is the property of Sir W. Forbes, of Fintray.

CRAIG INN, a vil. in the par. of Lochalsh, in the co. of Ross.

CRAIGINOCK, a bog on the boundary of the bars. of Ibricken and Moyarta, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, about 1 mile E. of the upper part of Dunbeg Bay. It extends over 1,093 acres. The river Newer carries off its superfluous waters.

CRAIGMILL, a vil. in the par. of Logie, in the co. of Clackmannan, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Clackmannan.

CRAIGMILLAR CASTLE, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Edinburgh. It was built shortly after the Norman conquest, and was burnt by the English under the Earl of Hertford, in 1544. It was subsequently restored by Mary Queen of Scots, who named it Petite France, and converted it into a royal palace. The pile, which is now an ivy-mantled ruin, includes the keep, dining-hall, queen's chamber, 5 feet by 7, and part of the outer walls.

CRAIGNETHAN CASTLE, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Lanark. It is situated on a rock overhanging the river Nethan, and was given by James V. to Sir James Hamilton. It subsequently passed to the Douglases. The room called the "queen's chamber" was the apartment where Mary Queen of Scots slept on her escape from Lochleven. This castle is sometimes called Draphane, and is said to be the original of Sir Walter Scott's "Tillietudlem."

CRAIGNISH, a par. in the district and co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is bounded by Loch Craignish and the Atlantic on the W., and by the pars. of Kilmelford, Dalavich, and Kilmartin on the N., E., and S. It extends 11 miles in a north-easterly direction, with a breadth of about 2 miles. The coast-line, which is 16 miles in extent, is romantic from its numerous islands and cliffs, against which the tide, flowing from the Sound of Jura, dashes itself with great violence. The soil is, for the most part, unproductive. The landowners are Campbell of Barbreck, residing in Barbreck House; McDougall, of Lunga, occupying Dail House; and C. Gascoigne, Esq., residing at Craignish Castle. There are many fortified eminences supposed to be of Danish origin, together with numerous cairns and tumuli, one of which is said to be raised over Olaus, a prince of Denmark, who is reported to have been slain in a battle which was fought in the neighbourhood. There is constant communication with the Clyde, by means of the Glasgow and Inverness steamers. This par. is in the presb. of Inverary, and in the patron. of the Duke of Argyle. The stipend of the minister is £170.

CRAIGO, a vil. in the par. of Logie Pert, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Montrose. It is situated on the river North Esk.

CRAIG-OF-MADERTY, a demesne in the district and co. of Perth, Scotland. It contains the vil. of St. David's, and was erected into a burgh of barony in 1626. It formerly contained a village called Craig.

CRAIGROTHIE, a vil in the par. of Ceres, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Cupar, and 13 from Edinburgh.

CRAIGTON, a vil. in the par. of Monikie, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Dundee. There is also another place of this name in the co. of Linlithgow.

CRAIGTON FIELD, a vil. in the par. of New Kilpatrick, in the co. of Dumbarton, 5 miles N. of Renfrew.

CRAIGTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Minnigaff, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 2 miles from Newton Stewart.

CRAIKE, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2¼ miles N.E. of Easingwold, its post town, and 5½ from the Alne station. The village is situated on a hill, on the summit of which stand the remains of a Norman castle, commanding some beautiful views. This castle is supposed by some antiquaries to have belonged to the Northumbrian kings. The parish is large, and was, until recently, included in the co. of Durham. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a stone edifice, partly in the Gothic style, and contains a font, and some fine specimens of stained-glass. The charities amount to £32 per annum. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have each a chapel. There are schools for both sexes. There are several chalybeate springs at the base of the hill. W. Waite, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CRAIL, a par. in the district of St. Andrew's, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It is situated in the most eastern part of the county of Fife, commonly called "the East Neuk of Fife." It extends 6½ miles W. of Fifeness, and is bounded on the N. by Durino and Kingsbarns, on the E. by the sea, on the S. by the sea and Kilrenny, and on the W. by Kilrenny and Carnbee. The surface is flat and uninteresting. Sandstone and ironstone are worked, the latter for exportation, as the coal which formerly was worked is exhausted. The chief seats are Airdrie, Wormistone, Kirkmay House, Kingsmuir House, and Balcomie Castle, which last is now reduced from its former large extent to one wing, which serves as a landmark to mariners. The estate of Balcomie belongs to Sir Thomas Erskine, great grandson of the late Earl of Kellie, to whom it formerly belonged. Constantine, one of the early Scottish kings, is said to have been beheaded by the Danes in 874, in a cave near Balcomie. The same people are also said to have built a low ridge of rough stones, half a mile in length, and enclosing a space of ground near the Ness. This par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's, and in the patron. of the Earl of Glasgow. The stipend of the minister is £280. The parish church is believed to be as old as the time of David I. Here is also a Free church, and an United Presbyterian church. The town of Crail is situated 2 miles W.S.W. of Fifeness. Its ancient name was Caryle, or Carraile, and it was a place of importance as early as the middle of the 9th century. In the fine old church (which is still entire, and of which James Sharp, Archbishop of St. Andrew's, was once minister), John Knox preached on the 19th of May, 1559, and the next day led a mob to demolish the monuments at St. Andrew's. On the cliff at the E. of the harbour are the remains of a castle which was occupied as a residence by David I. The two parallel streets of which the town consists were anciently closed by gates. The modern harbour of Crail is small and insecure; but it is said, that at a moderate expense, the ancient harbour, situated to the E. of the present one, might be converted into a harbour of refuge. Crail was, more than a century ago, much resorted to by those engaged in the herring fishery, and large quantities of that fish were cured here. Crail is a royal burgh, having received its first charter from Robert Bruce in 1306. It is now governed by a provost, 2 bailies, 17 councillors, and a treasurer. It joins with Cupar-Fife, St. Andrew's, Kilrenny, East and West Anstruther, and Pittenweem, in sending a member to parliament. The population of the burgh in 1851 was 1,247; in 1861 it was 1,211. Houses in 1851, 260; in 1861, 271. Children at school in 1861, 216.

CRAILING, a par. in the district of Jedburgh, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Crailing, and East and West Nisbet, and is bounded on the N. by the par. of Roxburgh, on the E. by Eckford, on the S. by Jedburgh, and on the W. by Ancrum. Its length from N. to S., and its breadth from E. to W., are about 4 miles each way. The Teviot, flowing E. and W., divides the parish equally, and by its windings and those of its tributaries, through a rich, well cultivated, and wooded country, adds greatly to the beauty of the prospect. A lovely view, far and near to the German Ocean, is obtained from the top of a column on Peniel-heugh, a hill some 500 feet in height. The said column was erected in memory of the battle of Waterloo. The northern half of the parish is the property of the Marquis of Lothian, whose mansion of Mount Teviot is situated at the base of Piniel-heugh. The southern section of the parish belongs chiefly to Paton of Crailing, whose seat overlooks the river Oxnam. The village of Crailing is situated on the Oxnam, where it is crossed by the Berwick and Carlisle road. This par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh, and in the patron. of the crown and the Marquis of Lothian. The stipend of the minister is £251. There is also a Free church. Samuel Rutherford was born at Crailing, where also Calderwood, the church historian, was minister.

CRAKE, a small river in the N. of Lancashire, flowing from Coniston Water to the river Leven.

CRAKEHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Bedale, wap. of East Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2½ miles N.W. of Bedale, and 9 from Richmond. It has a station on the Northallerton and Leyburn branch of the North-Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the Rector of Bedale. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, is a stone structure in the Gothic style. The charities amount to £2 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is an endowed National school.

CRAKEHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Topcliffe, wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5½ miles S. of Thirsk. and 7 N.E. of Ripon. In conjunction with Elmire it forms a township.

CRAKEMARSH, a constablewick in the par. of Uttoxeter, in the co. of Stafford, 2½ miles N. of Uttoxeter. It is situated on the river Dove, and belonged to Earl Algar before the Norman conquest.

CRAMBE, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles S.W. of Malton, and 11 N.E. of York. It is situated on the river Derwent, near the Scarborough railway, and contains Barton-le-Willows, Whitwell-on-the-Hill, and the tnshp. of Crambe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £180, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone structure in the early English style of architecture. The charities amount to £1 per annum. There is a parochial school. G. Cholmeley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CRAMLINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of St. Andrew, eastern div. of Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 4½ miles S.W. of Blyth, and 9 N.E. of Newcastle. It is situated near the coast, and has a station on the North-Eastern railway. The village is large, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and mines, which constitute nearly four-fifths of the real property of the parish. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £100, in the patron. of Sir M. W. Ridley, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a neat stone structure, and contains tombs of the Lawson family.

CRAMOND, a par. in the district of West Edinburgh, in the cos. of Edinburgh and Linlithgow, Scotland. It is bounded by the Frith of Forth on the N., by Dalmeny and Kirkliston on the W., by Corstorphine on the S., and St. Cuthbert on the E. Its length from E. to W. is 6 miles, with a breadth of 2 miles. The county is celebrated for the beauty of its scenery and the fertility of its soil. Almond Water divides the portion which is in the county of Linlithgow from the larger portion in the county of Edinburgh. The surface slopes upward and southward from the shores of the Frith, where it is flat, to Corstorphine Hill, which is partly in this parish. The principal manufacture is that of iron, by the Cramond Iron Company, and there is a large paper-mill called Peggy's mill. There is a purgative magnesian spring on the lands of Marchfield. In May, 1543, the English, under the Earl of Hertford, landed in this parish, near the spot now occupied by Granton Pier, the construction of which cost the Duke of Buccleuch above half a million. The village of Cramond is situated 5½ miles W. of Edinburgh, on the E. bank of the Almond, near its mouth. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring iron-works. The iron is almost entirely made from scrap, and bears a high character. Here the Romans had a station, and Constantine IV. is said to have been slain in battle by Kenneth, son of Malcolm I. This par. is in the presb. of Edinburgh, and in the gift of Ramsay of Barnton. The stipend of the minister is £295. There is also a Free church at Davidson's Mains. The principal landowners are the Duke of Buccleuch, C. H. C. Inglis of Cramond, and Ramsay of Barnton. The chief mansions are Cramond House, where H.R.H. the Duchess of Kent resided during her last stay in Scotland, Barnton House, Muir House, Caroline Park, Braehead, Lauriston Castle, and Craigcrook, the residence of the late Lord Jeffrey. Among the eminent men born in this parish may be mentioned John, second Lord Balmerino, the friend of the Covenanters; Sir Thomas Hope, of Granton, the Scottish lawyer; Sir George Mackenzie, first Earl of Cromarty; and above all, the celebrated John Law, of Lauriston, who was born at Lauriston in 1671, and was raised in 1720 to be Comptroller-General of the finances of France. He benefited that country by founding a national bank, but the Mississippi scheme, projected by him, proved as disastrous to France as the South Sea Company's scheme did to England. This extraordinary man died in poverty in Italy in 1729, after having astonished the world by his abilities, his projects, his success, and his ruin.

CRANAGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Sandbach, hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 5½ miles N. of Sandbach, and 3½ N.E. of Middlewich. It is situated on the river Dane, near the Crewe railway. L. Armitstead, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Cranage Hall.

CRANBORNE, a hund. in the East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, contains the pars. of West Parley, Pentridge, Edmondsham, Rushton-Tarrant, Ashmore, Witchampton, Bellchalwell, Shillingstone, Little Farnham, Tarrant-Gunville, Turnwood, and parts of Hampreston, Cranborne, and Tollard Royal, comprising 41,000 acres.

CRANBORNE, a par., partly in the hund. of Cranborne, and partly in the hund. of Monckton-up-Wimborne, both in the East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 37 miles N.E. of Dorchester, and 9 N.E. of the Ringwood railway station. This place derived its name from the Saxon gren, a crane, and burn, a river. A Benedictine monastery was founded here in 980, by Aylward de Meau, who then possessed the manor. In 1102 the abbot and his brethren retired to Tewkesbury, where a magnificent abbey had been founded by Robert FitzHamon, when this became a cell. The par. contains the tythgs. of Blagdon, Monckton-up-Wimborne, Boveridge, Alderholt, Holwell, and Verwood. This is the largest parish in Dorsetshire, being 30 miles in circuit, including part of Cranborne Chase. Before this chase was disafforested it extended to Salisbury, and King John had his hunting-seat at Tollard Royal. It is now chiefly the property of Lord Rivers of Rushmore, who holds a court-leet at the manor-house. The village, formerly a market town, is pleasantly situated in the midst of a fine champaign country. Most of the houses are well built, and have a plentiful supply of water. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. with the curs. of Boveridge and Verwood annexed, £151, in the patron. of the Marquis of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, formerly belonged to the priory. It is a large and very ancient structure, partly in the Norman style of architecture. It contains a carved pulpit and several monuments. The charities amount to £92 per annum. There are two Wesleyan chapels, several almshouses, and a lunatic asylum. Here is also a National school for both sexes. The Marquis of Salisbury is lord of the manor, and takes from this place the title of viscount. Bishop Stillingfleet was born here in 1635, and at the Revolution was raised to the see of Worcester. His principal works are "Origines Sacra," an account of natural and revealed religion, and "Origines Britannica," by which he is now best known. Fairs are held on the 24th August and 6th December, chiefly for cheese and sheep.

CRANBROOK, a hund. in the lathe of Scray, in the S. div. of the co. of Kent, contains the pars. of Frittendon, Cranbrook, and parts of Staplehurst and Goudhurst, comprising about 14,100 acres.

CRANBROOK, a par. and market town in the hund. of Cranbrook, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 25 miles S.W. of Canterbury, and 5½ S. of the Staplehurst station. It is situated on the river Crane, near the South-Eastern railway. It was here that the Flemings who took refuge in England in the reign of Edward III., first established the manufacture of broad-cloth. This trade has now entirely disappeared, but the Greycoats, and other ancient families settled in the Weald, owe their fortunes to it. The town of Cranbrook is a petty sessions town, and a polling-place for the W. parliamentary division of the county of Kent. It consists of one long street, containing the market-house, bank, Lynch's free grammar school, and the Union poorhouse. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, and of a superintendent registry, but is comprised within the Tenterden new County Court district. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £163, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Dunstan, is a handsome old structure, in the later English style. It contains tombs of the Roberts and Baker families, also an old brass, and a baptistry for immersion. The charitable endowments amount to £226 per annum. There are five chapels for Dissenters; also a grammar school, with an income from endowment of £150, a free school, called Deuce's Writing School, and National schools for both sexes. Sir R. Baker, who wrote the "English Chronicle," and Huntingdon, "S.S.," or "Sinner Saved," were born here. G. Hardy, Esq., is lord of the manor. A market is held once a fortnight on Wednesday, and fairs for horses and cattle on the 30th May and 29th September.

CRANBROOK; there are several small places of this name: one in Essex, near Romford; another in Devon, near Moreton-Hampstead; and a third in the co. of Fermanagh, Ireland.

CRANBURY PARK, the seat of Lady Holland, in the co. of Hants, 3½ miles S.W. of Winchester. Here is a meet for the Hursley hounds.

CRANE, a tnshp. in the par. of Garthbeibio, in the co. of Montgomery, 7 miles N.W. of Llanfair.

CRANE END, a hmlt. in the par. of Frieston, wap. of Skirbeck, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 2¼ miles E. of Boston.

CRANE MOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Thurgoland, par. of Silkstone, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles S.E. of Peniston. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries.

CRANE RIVER; there are two streams of this name: one in South Kent, which joins the Beult near Hedcorn; the other in West Middlesex, falling into the Thames at Isleworth.

CRANFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Redbornestoke, in the co. of Bedford, 5½ miles N.W. of Ampthill, and 8 S.W. of Bedford. Near the village, which is large, is a mineral spring. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £376, in the patron. of James C. Harter, Esq. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a large and beautiful building in the Gothic style of architecture, with a tower containing six bells. The charities amount to £106 per annum, of which £60 is the endowment of Girton's school. Here is a National school, and almshouses for three poor widows. The Oakley hounds meet here. J. A. Partridge, Esq., is lord of the manor. The dukes of Dorset took from this place the title of baron.

CRANFIELD, a par. in the bar. of Upper Toome, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated near Lough Neagh and Bandalstown. The surface consists generally of good soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Duneane, £225, in the patron. of the Marquis of Donegal. Toome Bridge is the post town. Near the holy well of St. Olcan stands the church, a fine ruin. The supposed healing qualities of the waters of this spring draw many poor people to the spot at certain periods. St Olcan is alleged to have been buried here. Near the village a very scarce crystal is found; and about a mile distant is a handsomely carved wooden cross.

CRANFIELD, a promontory in the bar. of Mourne, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Greencastle. It forms the N. wall to the mouth of Carlingford Bay.

CRANFORD, a par. in the hund. of Elthorne, in the co. of Middlesex, 6½ miles N.E. of Staines, and 2½ S.W. of Southall station on the Great Western railway. It is situated at the bridge over the river Crane, and near the Grand Junction canal. At the time of Domesday Survey it belonged to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and is described as Cranbroke. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £250, in the patron. of Earl Fitzhardinge. The church, dedicated to St. Dunstan, is an ancient structure in the Norman style of architecture. It contains some beautiful monuments, and the tomb of Fuller, who was rector of this parish. The charities amount to £8 per annum. The mote-house was pulled down in 1780. Cranford House contains many valuable portraits, amongst others, those of Swift, Harvey, Fuller, and Temple. Earl Fitzhardinge is lord of the manor, and resides at Cranford House.

CRANFORD, ST. ANDREW and ST. JOHN, pars. in the hund. of Huxloe, in the co. of Northampton. 3½ miles S.E. of Kettering station on the Midland railway, and 70 from London. The village is small, and entirely agricultural. The two parishes are united for ecclesiastical purposes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £150, held together with the rect.* of St. John, val. £198, in the patron. of Sir G. Robinson, Bart. The churches are small, and one of them contains a fine stained-glass window. The tithes of St. Andrew were commuted in 1775, and of St. John in 1805. The charities amount to £6 per annum. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor. Cranford Hall, the seat of the Robinsons, is a modern mansion, surrounded by a spacious lawn and pleasure-grounds. The founder of this family, Alderman Sir John Robinson, was Lord Mayor of London in 1660, and was created a baronet by Charles II. for his efforts in promoting the Restoration.

CRANHAM, a par. in the hund. of Chafford, in the co. of Essex, 1½ mile from Hornchurch, and 3½ miles from Romford, where there is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The village is small, and the occupation of the inhabitants solely agricultural. This place was formerly known as Bishop's Ockendon, otherwise Wokendon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £560, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small old building. S. Gurney, Esq., is lord of the manor. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

CRANHAM, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 6 miles N.E. of Stroud, and 7 S. of Gloucester. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the large earthenware manufactory, known as the Potteries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. with the rect.* of Brimpsfield, £410, in the patron. of W. Goodrich, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is a small chapel for Baptists, and a National school. J. W. Lyon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CRANLEY, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Blackheath, in the co. of Surrey, 7 miles S.E. of Godalming, and the same distance from Guildford, its post town. It is situated near the Arun and Wey canal, and chiefly belongs to Earl Onslow, who takes from it the title of viscount. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £1,195, in the patron. of the Rev. J. H. Sapte. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an old structure in the Gothic style, with a richly ornamented chapel. It contains a fine stained-glass window, handsome carved screens, and an old brass. There is a National school. At Vacherie is a moat surrounding the foundations of the ancient baronial seat of the earls of Surrey. A fair is held on Whitsun-Tuesday.

CRANMERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

CRANMORE, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Frome, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles E. of Shepton Mallet. It is situated under the Mendip hills, and contains several ancient quarries of oolitic stone, from which Wells Cathedral and Glastonbury Abbey were built. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, annexed to West Cranmore.

CRANMORE, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Wells-Forum, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile S.W. of East Cranmore, and 3½ miles from Shepton Mallet. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the vic.* of Doulting and the cur. of East Cranmore, £640, in the patron. of Colonel Horner. The church, an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, contains tombs of the Chethams, of Southill House, who have long held the manor.

CRANNA, a vil. in the bar. of Clanmorris, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Hollymount.

CRANNAGH, a bar. in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by Galway on the N., by Fassadinin and the libs. of Kilkenny on the E., by Shillelogher on the S., and the co. of Tipperary on the W. It is 11 miles long by 10 broad, and its area is 58,076 acres. It contains the pars. of Ballycallan, Ballinamara, Ballylarkin, Clashacrow, Garranamanagh, Clomantagh, Freshford, Killahy, Kilmanagh, Tullaroan Tubbridbritain, parts of St. Canice (transferred from the co. of the city of Kilkenny, by 3 and 4 Victoria, cap. 108 and 109), Coolcraheen, Fertagh, Killaloe, Kilcooly, Odagh, Sheffin, Tullaghanbrogue, the vil. of Kilmanagh, and the town of Freshford. The Freshford rivulet and the Nore run by the eastern boundary, and the King's river flows through the interior.

CRANNAGH; there are two hmlts. of this name: one in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, near Ballina; the other in the co. of Roscommon, near Athlone.

CRANNFORD, a vil. in the bar. of Gorey, in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Gorey.

CRANOE, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 5½ miles N.E. of Market Harborough, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the N. side of the vale of the Walland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £250, in the patron. of the Earl of Cardigan. The tithes were commuted in 1805. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a handsome edifice in the perpendicular style, consisting of nave, chancel, porch, and vestry, with a square embattled tower, containing two bells. The charities are small. There is a school for the children of Cranoe, Staunton, Slowston, Glooston, and Welham, supported by the Earl of Cardigan.

CRANROE, a vil. in the bar. of Gouran, in the co. of Kilkenny, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Gouran.

CRANSFORD, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, in the co. of Suffolk, 1½ mile E. of Framlingham station on the East Suffolk branch of the Great Eastern railway, and 6 miles from Saxmundham. It is situated on the river Alde. The village is small, and the population wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £430, in the patron. of G. W. Pooley, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charities amount to £2 per annum. The Baptists have a chapel. Thomas Borrett, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Cransford Hall.

CRANSHAWS, a par. in the co. of Berwick, Scotland. It is situated towards the northern boundary of the county, and consists of two portions, the larger lying 1½ mile S. of the smaller. The northern part is bounded on the N. and W. by East Lothian, and on the E. and S. by the par. of Longformacus. The southern part is bounded on the N. and E. by Longformacus, on the W. by Lauder and Longformacus, and on the S. by Westruther. The whole surface is hilly, wild, and pastoral, forming part of the Lammermuir range, the highest point of which in this parish is Manslaughter-Law. The castle of Cranshaws stands in the centre of the northern part, and is 40 feet by 25, and 45 feet high; it is supposed, with Fast, to be the original of Ravenswood in the "Bride of Lammermuir." This par. is in the presb. of Dunse, and in the patron. of the Hon. S. G. Douglas. The stipend of the minister is £158. At Twinlaw in this parish are two large cairns.

CRANSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, in the co. of Northampton, 3½ miles S.W. of Kettering, its post town, which has a station on the Midland railway. It contains the hmlt. of Little Cransley. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £71, in the patron. of W. Rose, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a handsome stone clock tower, with spire and six bells. The charities amount to £26 per annum. There is an endowed free school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school, supported by the vicar. W. Rose, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Cransley House.

CRANSTON, a par. in the district and co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. This par. contains the vils. of Cowsland, Preston, Chester Hill, Sauchenside, and part of the vil. of Ford. It is bounded by the co. of Haddington on the E., and by the pars. of Crichton, Borthwick, Dalkeith, Newbattle, and Inveresk. Its length northward is 5 miles, with a breadth of 3 miles. The surface is undulating, picturesque, and well cultivated. The Earl of Stair, whose mansion is Oxenford Castle, is the principal landowner. Coal, limestone, and sandstone are abundant. Cakemuir Tower, in the middle of the parish of Crichton, is in an isolated portion of this parish. It is square, four stories high, and is said to have been occupied by Queen Mary on her escape from Borthwick Castle. The road from Edinburgh to Lauder passes through the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and in the patron. of the Earl of Stair. The stipend of the minister is £260. The church has been rebuilt in the pointed style. There is also an United Presbyterian church at Ford. Cranston gives title of baron to the noble family descended from Sir W. Cranston, who was raised to the peerage in 1609. Turnips, cabbages, and other vegetables are said to have been first introduced into this part of Scotland by Sir J. Dalrymple; and coal-tar was first made there by Earl Dundonald.

CRANTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, in the co. of Cornwall, 7 miles W. of St. Columb Major, and the same distance from St. Michael. It is situated at the mouth of the river Gannel, which falls into Crantock Bay, forming a small harbour in the Bristol Channel. In the reign of Edward the Confessor, the Bishop of Bodmin made the church collegiate for secular canons, and at the Dissolution it had a revenue of £89 15*s.* 8*d.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £78, in the patron. of Lord Churston. The charities consist of part of those of St. Columb. In the vicinity is St. Ambrose's Well, and the old seats of the Mynorse and Tregonell families.

CRANWELL, a par. in the wap. of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 3½ miles N.W. of Sleaford. It contains Baynard's Leap, and the old Roman road Ermine Street passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £320, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small old building. The charities produce £9 per annum. Here is a meet for the Belvoir hounds. Near the village is a beautiful spring, and 1 mile to the E. is Cranwell Lodge.

CRANWICH, or CRANWICK, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 8 miles N.W. of Thetford, and 5½ N. of the Brandon railway station. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Wissey. Before the Conquest the manor was held by one of the retainers of King Harold. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norfolk, val. £450, in the patron. of H. S. Partridge, Esq. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice, with a round tower, of flint, supposed to have been erected by King Harold. It is a fine specimen of ancient architecture. The charities amount to £2 per annum. Cranwich gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Norfolk and dioc. of Norwich.

CRANWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, in the co. of Norfolk, 3¼ miles W. of Hardingham railway station, and 3½ N.W. of Hingham. It is situated on the river Blackwater. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with Letton, £307, in the patron. of B. Gurdon, Esq. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is a structure with square tower and spire, containing monuments to the Gurdon family. The charities amount to £9 per annum, besides four chaldrons of coals and a joint interest in £14 per annum to the poor of the hundred.

CRASSWELL, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Clodock, hund. of Ewyas Lacy, in the co. of Hereford, 5½ miles S.E. of Hay, and 7½ N.W. of Pontrilas station. It is situated on the river Munnow, near its source at the foot of the Black mountains. In the 12th century an alien priory was founded here, subordinate to Grandmont. It is separated into two divisions, called Upper and Lower Crasswell. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £47, in the patron. of the Vicar of Clodock. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a plain old structure. The charities amount to £1 per annum.

CRASTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Embleton, Bambrough ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 5½ miles N.E. of Alnwick, its post town. The village, situated near the coast of the North Sea, is called Craster Sea Houses. Craster Tower, the seat of Thomas Wood Craster, Esq., is a fine structure of basalt, and commands a view of the German Ocean through the chasms of a bold chain of rocks running between it and the sea.

CRASTOCK, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Woking, in the co. of Surrey, 3½ miles N.W. of Guildford, near the South-Western railway.

CRATFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles S.W. of Halesworth station on the Great Eastern line, and 9 from Framlingham. It is situated on the river Blyth, and contains a considerable portion of common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £116, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Holland. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure in the perpendicular style of architecture, with square tower. It contains an organ and a carved font. The charities amount to £180 per annum, the produce of the town lands. The Independents have a chapel and a Sunday-school. There is a free school for both sexes. Lord Huntingfield is lord of the manor.

CRATHIE. See BRAEMAR, Aberdeenshire.

CRATHIE POINT, a promontory in Moray Frith, in the co. of Banff, Scotland, 2 miles E. of Cullen.

CRATHORNE, a par. in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5½ miles W. of Stokesley, and 2 from Picton railway station. It is situated on the river Leaven, a branch of the river Tees. Linen is manufactured here. Near the village, which consists of a small cluster of houses, is a mineral spring. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £205, in the patron. of H. Dugdale, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small stone structure in the Gothic style, and contains an effigy of a crusader, supposed to be Sir William Crathorne, Knt., who fell at Neville's Cross in 1347. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also a day and Sunday school.

CRATLOE, or CRATLOE-CROSS, a vil. in the bar. of Bunratty, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Newmarket-on-Fergus, on the road to Limerick, its post town. Here is a dispensary within the Limerick Poor-law Union. Cratloe is a Roman Catholic par. in the dioc. of Limerick. Cratloe House is the chief residence. In the vicinity are two ancient towers of the O'Briens, called Cratloe Keel Castle and Cratloe Beg.

CRAUD, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Slane, in the co. of Meath, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Slane.

CRAUGHWELL, a postal vil. in the par. of Killora, bar. of Dunkellin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Loughrea, on the road from Dublin to Galway. The Roman Catholic par. of Craughwell is in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh and Kilfenora. Bodymore is the neighbouring seat.

CRAVEN, a hilly district in the West Riding of the co. of York. It is situated at the head of the rivers Wharfe and Aire, and gives the title of earl to the Cravens. It is the seat of an archdeac. and deanery in the dioc. of Ripon.

CRAVEN HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Paddington, in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles from St. Paul's. It is situated between Westbourne and Bayswater, and is the property of the Earl of Craven.

CRAWCROOK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ryton, W div. of the ward of Chester, in the co. of Durham, 6½ miles W. of Gateshead. It is situated between the rivers Tyne and Derwent, near the Carlisle railway. Coal and limestone are quarried. There is a school endowed with £25 per annum.

CRAWFORD, a par. in the district of Lanark, Upper ward, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It contains the vil. of Crawford, and the post town of Leadhills, and forms the south-eastern portion of the co., being bounded on the S. by Dumfriesshire, on the E. by the co. of Peebles, on the N. by the pars. of Lamington and Culter, and on the W. by the par. of Crawfordjohn. Its length from N. to S. is 18 miles, with a breadth of 14 miles. It comprises the principal portion of the Lowther hills, some of which attain the height of 2,450 feet. The river Clyde takes its rise in Clydeslaw, on the border of the co. of Peebles, from whence flow also the Tweed and Annan. The hill pastures, chiefly occupied by sheep, are more than 70,000 acres in extent, while not more than 1,200 acres are arable. Lead-mines of great value are worked, and gold and silver are found in small quantities. The Earl of Hopetoun, and Sir T. Edward Colebrooke, Bart., are the principal landowners. The remains of two Roman roads and of three camps are reported by Robert Heron to have existed in 1792. The ruins of Crawford Castle stand on the opposite side of the river from Crawford. The same site was occupied in the days of Wallace by Lindsay Tower, the English garrison of which, on one occasion, he put to the sword. The farmhouses on Crawford Moor were anciently built in the form of stone vaults for greater security against the Douglases, from Clydesdale, and the Jardines and Johnstones, from Annandale. The north-western portion of the ancient parish was called Crawfordjohn, from having been held during the reign of Malcolm IV. by John, the stepson of Baldwin de Biggar, and now forms a distinct parish. The larger portion of the ancient parish, forming the modern parish, was formerly called Crawford Lindsay, from having been held by William de Lindsay and his successors for several centuries. That family was ennobled in 1398, and took the title of earls of Crawford. After 1488, this property was granted to Archibald, Earl of Angus, from whom it was called Crawford Douglas. The road from Glasgow to Carlisle, and the Caledonian railway, traverse the parish by the valleys of the Evan and the Clyde, the railway having stations at Abington and Elvanfoot. The village of Crawford stands on the left bank of the Clyde, 3 miles S.E. of Abington. The houses are at some distance from each other, being built on separate fens of 6 acres each, granted by the neighbouring proprietors. There is a suspension bridge of 75 feet span over the Clyde. This par. is in the presb. of Lanark, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £250. There is a chapel-of-ease at Leadhills.

CRAWFORDJOHN, a par. in the district of Lanark, Upper ward, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Crawfordjohn and Abington, and is bounded on the S.W. by the cos. of Dumfries and Ayr, and on the other sides by the pars. of Crawford, Lamington, Wiston, and Douglas. It is 12 miles long by 11 broad. The surface is hilly and pastoral, except on the borders of the streams. Cairntable, on the boundary between Douglas and Ayrshire, is the highest ground, having an elevation of 1,650 feet above the sea. About 3,200 acres are arable, and not more than 50 are wooded. There is only one mansion, that of Sir T. E. Colebrooke, Bart. Limestone and freestone are found, and a lead-mine is worked at Snar. The Glasgow and Carlisle [illegible] the Caledonian railway afford easy communication. The village of Crawfordjohn stands on Duneaton Water, 4 miles above its junction with the Clyde. This par. is in the presb. of Lanark, and in the patron. of Sir T. E. Colebrooke, Bart. The stipend of the minister is £234. There is a Free Church preaching station.

CRAWFORD'S BURN, a vil. in the par. of Bangor, bar. of Lower Castlereagh, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Bangor. It stands near Belfast Lough, on whose shores is Crawford's Burn, the seat of the Crawfords, and Ballyleigh, the seat of Lord Dufferin.

CRAWFORD, TARRANT. See TARRANT CRAWFORD, Dorsetshire.

CRAWFURDSDYKE. See CARTSDYKE, Renfrewshire.

CRAWICK BRIDGE and CRAWICK MILL, two hmlts. in the par. of Sanquhar, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland. They are pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Crawick, which, rising under Glenwharry Hill, joins the Nith at Sanquhar, after forming a beautiful cascade.

CRAWLEY, a par. in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 6½ miles W. of East Grinstead, and 9 N. of Cuckfield. It is situated near the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway, 1 mile from the Three Bridges station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £116, in the patron. of the heirs of Mrs. Clitherow. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure with an oak roof, and on the tie-beam is an old rhyme. The Roman Catholics, Independents, and Baptists have each a place of worship. There is a National and a British school. A corn market is held at the "White Hart" every Wednesday, and fairs on the 8th May and 29th September.

CRAWLEY, a par. in the hund. of Upper Buddlesgate, in the co. of Southampton, 5 miles N.W. of Winchester, and 3½ from Stockbridge. It contains the chplry. of Hunton, a peculiar in the archdeac. and dioc. of Winchester. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the cur. of Hunton, £690, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure in the early English style. The charities amount to £1 per annum. There is a school.

CRAWLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Edlingham, northern div. of the ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 7½ miles N.W. of Alnwick, its post town. There are remains of a tower and strong entrenchment supposed to be Roman, from which a fine view is commanded over the Vale of Whittingham, with the river Breamish, from its source to Alnwick Castle. Some antiquaries suppose this to be the Alauna Amnis of Richard of Cirencester, and its ancient name, Caer-law, or Crawlawe, signifying the "fortified hill," alluding to the numerous Roman, British, and Saxon fortifications in the vicinity.

CRAWLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Witney, hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles N. of Witney, and 5 from Bampton. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Windrush.

CRAWLEY DOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Worth, hund. of Buttinghill, in the co. of Sussex, 5½ miles from Crawley. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Worth.

CRAWLEY HUSBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, in the co. of Bedford, 2½ miles N. of Woburn, its post town, where there is a station on the North-Western line, and 5 from Ampthill. It is situated near Crawley Brook, which runs into the river Ouzel. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £46, in the patron. of the Duke of Bedford. The tithes were commuted in 1795. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The charities amount to £112 per annum. Crawley Nether and Crawley Green are places here.

CRAWLEY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Bucks, 3 miles E. of Newport Pagnell. A monastery was founded here in the Saxon times, and is mentioned in Domesday Survey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, in the patron. of Miss Duncombe. The church is dedicated to St. Firmin. The charities produce £10 per annum.

CRAWTON, a vil. in the par. of Dunnotar, in the co. of Kincardine, 3 miles S. of Stonehaven.

CRAY, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Devynnock, in the co. of Brecon, 7 miles W. of Brecknock. It is situated on the river Cray, which is a tributary of the river Usk, and contains the vil. of Llanulid.

CRAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Arncliffe, eastern div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles S.E. of Hawes.

CRAY, FOOT'S, a par. in the hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 4½ miles N.E. of Bromley, and 5 from the Dartford station on the Gravesend section of the North Kent line. It is situated on the river Cray, a branch of the Darent, and belonged to a thane named Fot, or Vot, in the reign of Edward the Confessor. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £251, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a Norman font, and an effigy of a Vaughan. The charities amount to £10 per annum. Foot's Cray Place, the seat of Lord Bexley, was built in 1750, after the design of Palladio's Villa.

CRAYFORD, a par. in the hund. of Lessness, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 2¼ miles N.W. of Dartford, and 2 S. of Erith station. It is situated on the river Cray, and contains the hmlts. of Northend and Slade Green. It is called in the Saxon Chronicle Creccanford, and Cregganford, and is related to have been the scene of the battle in which the British prince, Vortigern, was defeated by Hengist the Saxon, in 457. It was at a later period called Eard, and is mentioned in the Domesday Survey as belonging to the see of Canterbury. The village is large, and was severely visited by the cholera in 1849. The inhabitants are engaged in calico and silk printing, and in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £869, in the patron. of F. Austen, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Paulinus, has been beautifully restored. It contains the tomb of Lady Shovell, wife of the admiral, and a very handsome E. window by Ward and Hughes. The charities amount to £39 per annum. The Baptists and Roman Catholics have each a chapel. There are National and infant schools. F. Barne, Esq., is lord of the manor. May Place, the ancient residence of the lords of the manor, is a fine old mansion; it is interesting as having been built in the time of Elizabeth. A fair is held on the 24th of August.

CRAY, NORTH, a par in the hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles from Bromley, and 3 from the Dartford station of the North Kent branch of the South-Eastern railway. This parish, which adjoins Foot's Cray, is beautifully diversified with villas and cultivated demesnes, and in the grounds of Vale Mascall is a picturesque cascade. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £396, in the patron. of Lord Bexley. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is a school endowed with about £21 per annum, and an almshouse. The other charities produce about £12 per annum, of which £10 10*s.* is a donation from the Goldsmith's Company in London. In 1723 a subterraneous fire broke out, which was not extinguished for several days. The chief residences are North Cray Place, the ancient seat of the Hetherington family, and Mount Mascall.

CRAY, ST. MARY'S, a par. in the hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles S. of Foot's Cray, and 8 from Woolwich. It is situated on the river Cray, and contains part of the hmlt. of Crockenhill. The village, which was once a market town, is now a small place, surrounded by beautiful birch woods. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, annexed to the vic. of Orpington. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, containing tombs of the Averys, Mannings, and others, and five brasses, the earliest of which bears date 1518. The parochial charities produce £82 per annum, of which £70 is the endowment of Withen's school, for this and the adjoining parish of Orpington. There are three almshouses. Fairs are held on the 2nd February and 10th September.

CRAY, ST. PAUL'S, a par. as above, adjoining St. Mary's Cray. The parish is small, but contains some pleasant villa residences. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £483, in the patron. of Viscount Sidney, of Penshurst. The church is dedicated to St. Paulinus. There is a bequest of £4 per annum for education.

CRAZY CORNER, a vil. in the par. of Fakbill, in the co. of Westmeath, Ireland, 7 miles E. of Mullingar.

CREACOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, in the co. of Devon, 6¼ miles S.E. of South Molton, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Tiverton. It is situated on the river Sturcombe, and contains only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £153, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Karslake, the rector. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small structure.

CREADON BAY and CREADON HEAD, situated in Waterford Harbour, in the co. of Waterford, Ireland, 1 mile N.E. of Dunmore.

CREAGH, a par. in the bar. of Moycarn, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The parish extends along both banks of the river Suck, near Creagh bog. It is somewhat hilly and boggy, with an abundance of limestone, and is traversed by the road from Athlone to Galway. The railway from Dublin to Galway passes through the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Kilclooney and Taghmaconnel, £216, in the patron. of the bishop. Ballinasloe, in the par. of Kilcloony, is the post town, and contains a court house and agricultural hall. Here stands the church, a neat, cruciform building. It was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are five schools, a college, four free Scripture schools, and three National schools. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Kilclooney, two Methodist meeting-houses, and a Scotch church. The old church of Creagh is in ruins, and adjoining it is the burial-ground. Fortwilliam is the residence of William Lankester, Esq., in whose grounds is a medicinal spring. Other seats are Garbally, the residence of the Earl of Clancarty, whose beautiful park is thrown open to the public on every day except Sunday; Mackney, Mount Catherine, Woodmount, Lancaster Park, Castle Park, and Ardcarn.

CREAGH, a par. in the bar. of West Carbery, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The parish extends along the right shore of the mouth of the Ilen, and includes part of Skibbereen, and some minor islands. It is mountainous, with bog and slate. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £450, in the patron of the bishop. The church adjoins the ruins of the former one. It is neatly built, and has a square ornamental tower. The expense of its erection was met by means of loan and gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are private and parochial schools. Lough Hyne runs up into the interior for a considerable distance; in it are beds of very fine oysters. On an islet within this gulf stand the ruins of Cloghan Castle, the ancient seat of the O'Driscolls.

CREAGH, a bog in the bar. of Moycarn, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, near Ballinrobe. It extends over 1,758 acres, and is drained by the Suck and the Creagh millstream. There are also several seats of this name: one in the co. of Mayo, near Ballinrobe; and another in the co. of Cork, near Dunmanie.

CREAGHDOOES, a vil. in the bar. of Raphoe, in the co. of Donegal, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Raphoe.

CREAGHREVAGHANORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Carrigallen, in the co. of Leitrim, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Ballinamore.

CREAKE, or CREYK, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Brothercross, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles S. of Burnham-Westgate, and 6 from Wells. At the commencement of the 13th century, a monastery was founded here by Sir Robert de Hereford, which was afterwards converted into the Austin abbey of St. Mary de Pratis. In the reign of Henry VII. it was given by the Countess of Richmond to Christ's College, Cambridge, to which its site still belongs. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £1,077, in the patron. of E. Spenser, Esq., and the bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains an ancient brass of a man holding a church. There is a school endowed by the late Mr. Herod with £10 per annum, and Mansaur's almshouses, also endowed.

CREAKE, or CREYK, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Brothercross, in the co. of Norfolk, 1 mile S. of North Creake. The village is considerable. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £440, in the patron. of the Marquis Townshend. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. In the vicinity is a Saxon camp, and several tumuli, where a battle was fought between the Saxons and Danes. The Independents have a place of worship. The charities produce about £100 a year, chiefly divided among the poor in coals, bread, and money.

CREAMORE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Wem, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile N. of Wem. It is situated near the river Roden.

CREANMULL, a small cluster of islands among the Western Islands, Scotland, near Barra.

CREATON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Guilsborough, in the co. of Northampton, 8 miles N.W. of Northampton, its post town and railway station. Here are the remains of Holmby House, in which Charles I. was confined. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £270, in the patron. of the Rev. H. T. Beynon. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The charities produce £60 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1782. The Independents have a place of worship.

CREATON, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Spratton, in the co. of Northampton, adjoining Great Creaton. It contains about twenty houses. The tithes were commuted in 1782.

CREBILLY, a demesne in the bar. of Lower Toome, in the co. of Antrim, Ireland, 2 miles from Ballymena and 12 N.W. of Antrim. It anciently belonged to the O'Haras, but is now the property of a branch of the Hamilton family, who have rebuilt the house. Adjoining are the ruins of the old castle.

CRECORA, a par. in the bar. of Pubblebrien, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of St. Patrick's Well, and 5 S.W. of Limerick, its post town. The road from St. Patrick's Well to Bruff passes through the interior, which consists of moderately good soil, with a proportion of limestone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £72, in the patron. of the Vicars-Choral of Limerick. There is no church to this parish. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Mungret, which, together with Knockraul, and a portion of Kilpeacon, form the Roman Catholic union of Crecora. There are several private schools. The old church was destroyed during the disturbances of 1641, and has remained a ruin since. In the burial-ground are family vaults of the surrounding gentry. The seats of the neighbourhood are Greenmount, Ballymurphy, Deneen, and Ashfort.

CRECRIN, or CRYCRIN, a par. in the bars. of Rathvilly and Shillelagh, in the cos. of Carlow and Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Hacketstown. The surface consists partly of moorland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Aghold, £152, in the patron. of the bishop. Tullow is its post town. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and a National school.

CREDAN, a bay and headland in the bar. of Gualtiere, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated to the W. of Waterford Harbour. The bay is on the S. side of the headland, and has an average depth of 25 feet.

CREDENHILL, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, in the co. of Hereford, 4½ miles N.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 12 W. of Leominster. It is situated 1 mile from the river Wye. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £297, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Eckley, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient Gothic structure. It contains a font, and some handsome marble monuments to the Eckleys. There is a school for both sexes. In the vicinity are remains of the Roman camp called Magna Castra, or Kenchester of Antoninus, near which coins, urns, and other antiquities have been found. It is situated on the summit of a lofty hill, enclosing an area of nearly 40 acres. The principal residence is Credenhill, the seat of the Eckley family.

CREDITON, a hund. in the middle div. of the co. of Devon, contains the pars. of Crediton, Kennerleigh, Bishop's Morchard, Colebrook, Sandford, and Newton St. Cyres, comprising 34,160 acres.

CREDITON, sometimes called KIRTON, a par., market town, and extinct borough, in the hund. and union of the same name, in the co. of Devon, 8 miles N.W. of Exeter, and 180 from London by road, or 201 by the London and South-Western railway. It is a station on the North Devon line, and is situated in the northern division of the county, on the W. branch of the river Creedy, and upon the road from Exeter to Barnstaple and South Molton. The par. is divided into 8 tythgs. — Posbury, Cannon-Fee, Rudge, Knowle, Borough-Town, Uford-Town, Woodland, and Uton, besides the market town of Crediton, which was a place of importance in the Saxon times, and was designated Crediantun, or the town on the river Creedy. Upon the division of the diocese of Sherborne it became the seat of a diocese, of which a collegiate church founded here in 905 was the cathedral. In the reign of Canute the see of St. German's was annexed to that of Crediton, and the prelates assumed the title of bishops of Devonshire. In 1050 the united see was removed to Exeter by Edward the Confessor, but the old collegiate church continued to be a chapter, the revenue of which, at the Reformation, was £332 17*s.* 5*d.* In the reign of Edward I. it returned two members to a parliament held at Carlisle, and in the 16th century it opposed the Reformation, but the forces assembled here were dispersed by Sir Peter Carew. Crediton was occupied by Prince Maurice for Charles I., and taken by Fairfax in 1645. In the year 1743 a large part of the West Town, comprising 450 houses, was consumed by fire; and half a century later another conflagration took place which destroyed many of the houses which had been rebuilt.—The present town consists principally of one main street, nearly a mile in length, but partially paved, with low cottages at each extremity, and some good houses near the centre. It is divided into two parts, called the East and West Towns, and stands in a hollow between two hills; that on the S. overlooking the town. The East Town contains the church and railway station, but the public-rooms and principal shops are in the West Town.—There is no municipal corporation, the town being under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, but the local affairs are managed by a portreeve, bailiff, and constables, annually chosen at the two courts-leet (one for the West Town and the other for the East), which are held by James Wentworth Buller, Esq., lord of the manor. A County Court is held monthly at the public-rooms, and petty sessions at the new police station, which is a handsome building. Crediton is also the head of a Poor-law Union, and of a superintendent registry, and a polling-place for the N. parliamentary division of Devonshire.—In the High-street is situated the public-rooms, a large and handsome building, erected in 1852 by a public company; it contains a set of rooms for public meetings, balls, and concerts, for the latter of which it is considered particularly well adapted. There is a literary society, numbering about 160 members, the library of which is kept at these rooms, and has of late been greatly increased. The market-house, erected in 1836, is a spacious and well-constructed edifice. In the town are flour-mills, woollen and coarse linen manufactories, and a tannery. Much cider is made here for the London market, and shoe-making employs many hundreds of the inhabitants. The manufacture of serges, for which this town was for many centuries celebrated, is entirely discontinued. Being the centre of a very rich agricultural district, a monthly cattle market has been lately established, which is largely supplied with oxen and sheep; and on the Saturday preceding the last Wednesday in April is held the largest fair for cattle in the West of England. The locality of Crediton is proved by returns made to the registrar-general to be one of the most healthy places in the kingdom, and many of its inhabitants have attained the age of 100 years.—The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £500, with residence and an acre of glebe, in the patron. of the twelve governors of the church of Crediton, who hold the tithes of the large parish of Crediton, as also those of Sandford and Exminster, which together produce about £4,000 per annum. There is also an assistant minister or chaplain, who has an income of £200, in the same patron. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, was rebuilt in the reigns of Henry VII. and VIII., and was partially restored in 1856. It is a fine cruciform building in the perpendicular and decorated English styles of architecture, consisting of a nave, aisles, chancel, chancel aisles, and transepts; in the centre is a massive square tower, containing a peal of eight bells. It contains a fine old organ, and an ancient font, but the unsightly high pews sadly disfigure the interior of this noble building. There is a chapel-of-ease at Posbury, which is dedicated to St. Luke; and there are remains of a very ancient chapel, which was dedicated to St. Lawrence. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, Unitarians, and Plymouth Brethren have chapels.—The charities of Crediton are very numerous, amounting to above £3,760. The largest charity is known by the name of Hayward's Charity, the funds of which for several centuries have been in the Court of Chancery; at length the approval of the Court has been obtained by Mr. Ward for a method of applying the accumulated fund, amounting to above £20,000, which method provides principally for the clothing and educating of poor children, and the apprenticing of the most worthy scholars to useful trades. Amongst the remaining charities much money is given away at Christmas, including several hundred pounds arising from the borough lands and the interest of various sums of money left by benevolent persons and invested in the Funds. The governors of the church also grant £13 a year each to eight poor men. There is a large free school, supported out of the fund in the hands of the twelve governors of the church of Crediton, the masters of which are elected by the governors. The grammar school, founded and endowed by Edward VI., and further endowed by Queen Elizabeth, has three exhibitions at either University, tenable for five years. There are besides Hayward's blue-coat school, and Dunn's mathematical school.—The principal residences are Creedy Park, the residence of Sir H. R. F. Davie, Bart., M.P.; Downes, that of J. Wentworth Buller, Esq., M.P., the lord of the manor; Shobrooke Park, Newcombes, and Okefield.—Saturday is market day, and fairs are held on the 11th May, the 21st to 23rd August, and the 21st September.

CREEBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Minnigaff, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 7 miles N. of Newton Stewart. It is situated near the river Cree.

CREECH, a tythg. in the par. of Church Knowle, hund. of Hasilor, in the co. of Dorset, 1½ mile N.W. of Church Knowle, and 2 miles S. of Wareham. Here are extensive quarries.

CREECH PLACE, an ext. par. place, in the hmlt. of Denmead, Droxford div. of the hund. of Hambledon, in the co. of Hants, 3½ miles N.E. of Fareham.

CREECH ST. MICHAEL, a par. in the hund. of Andersfield, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles S. of Bridgwater, and 2½ miles E. of Taunton, its post town. It is situated on the river Tone, at the Bridge. The Great Western railway passes through the parish, and has a station at Taunton. The village is large. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £463, in the patron. of C. Cresswell, Esq., and Mrs. Cresswell. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure of stone, consisting of nave, chancel, N. aisle, porch, and square tower. It contains an old tomb of Robert Cuff, of this parish. The Baptists have a chapel. There is a free school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school. The charities produce about £3 per annum. William Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CREECH, WEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Steeple, hund. of Hasilor, in the co. of Dorset, 2 miles W. of Wareham. It was once a market town and belonged to Bindon Abbey.

CREED, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, in the co. of Cornwall, 5½ miles S.W. of St. Austell, its post town, and 7 W. of Truro. It is situated on the river Fal, and contains the old borough of Grampound. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £351, in the patron. of C. H. T. Hawkins, Esq. In the vicinity are two ancient camps or entrenchments.

CREED, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Bosham, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 4½ miles S.W. of Chichester.

CREEGBYTHER, a tnshp. in the par. of Beguildy, in the co. of Radnor, 8 miles N.W. of Knighton.

CREEKSEA, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, in the co. of Essex, 2½ miles W. of Burnham, and 7½ S.E. of Maldon. It is situated on the river Crouch, across which is a ferry to the island of Wallasey, where embankments 9 feet high protect the marshes from inundation. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. with the vic.* of Althorne annexed, £400, in the patron. of J. H. Candy, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small structure. The charities amount to £2 per annum. There is a day school.

CREESLOUGH, a vil. in the par. of Clondahorkey, bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 14 miles on the road from Letterkenny to Dunfanaghy, near Sheephaven Head.

CREETING, ALL SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles S.E. of Stowmarket, and 1½ mile N.E. of Needham Market. The Great Eastern railway passes near the village, and has a station at Stowmarket. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the livings of St. Mary and St. Olave annexed, £663, in the patron. of Eton College. The church of All Saints is an ancient structure. The charities of this and the adjoining parishes of St. Mary and St. Olave amount to £59 per annum.

CREETING, ST. MARY, a par. as above. The living is a discharged rect. annexed to the above. It was valued in the King's Books at £7 14*s.* 2*d.* The charities amount to £1 10*s.*, besides an interest in those of the above parish. There was anciently a cell here to the abbey of Bernay, in Normandy.

CREETING, ST. OLAVE, a par. as above. It contains only six houses. The living is a discharged rect. united as above. It was valued in the King's Books at £1 17*s.* 8½*d.* The church is much dilapidated.

CREETING, ST. PETER, or WEST CREETING, a par. in the hund. of Stow, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles E. of Stowmarket, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £401, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Pask. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

CREETON, with COUNTHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 4½ miles W. of Bourn, and 2 from Little Blytham station. It is situated on the river Glen and the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £161, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat edifice in the early English style. Part of a Norman cross stands in the churchyard. R. Hornsby, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CREETOWN, a burgh of barony in the district and co. of West Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It stands at the mouth of the Cree, at its junction with Wigton Bay, in the par. of Kirkmabreck. The present town was founded in 1785, but includes some old houses belonging to the more ancient town of Creth, which at that date was almost extinct. It is beautifully situated between two small streams, much of the ground being occupied by gardens. It contains a townhall, and was made a burgh of barony in 1792; it is governed by a bailie and 4 councillors, who are elected every three years. The parish church is in the neighbourhood, and in the town is an United Presbyterian church.

CREEVE, a par. in the bars. of Frenchpark and Roscommon, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The interior is boggy, with limestone subsoil. The parish is traversed by the road from Boyle to Strokestown, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Ardckare, £162, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a chapel-of-ease, and there are six Roman Catholic chapels within the union, and four day schools. There are also several small places of this name: one in the co. of Monaghan, near Bally-bay; another in Westmeath, near Moate; and a third in the co. of Down, near Newry.

CREEVELEA, a townland in the bar. of Dromahaire, in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The river Bonet passes in the vicinity, on whose banks a friary was built by Margaret, daughter of Lord O'Brien, in 1508. Here are some interesting carvings and tombs; among others is that of O'Rorke.

CREEVEROE, UPPER and LOWER, two hmlts. in the bar. of Rillian, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Newtown-Bella.

CREEVY, a small lough in the bar. of Upper Castlereagh, in the co. of Down, Ireland.

CREGDOTIA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ross, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Lough Mask.

CREGG, a demesne in the par. of Litter, bar. of Condons, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is the seat of the Stewarts, and is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Blackwater. Here is an old castle, formerly occupied by the Roche family. There are several other small places of this name, in the cos. of Clare, Galway, Meath, Tipperary, and Sligo.

CREGGACAREEN, a hmlt. in the island of Aran, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Gorumna Island.

CREGGAH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Garrycastle, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Fairs are held on the 1st April and 12th December.

CREGGAN, a par. and small vil. in the bars. of Upper Fews and Upper Dundalk, in the cos. of Armagh and Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Crossmaglen is its post town. The parish is bisected by the Creggan rivulet, and the road from Dundalk to Newtown-Hamilton. It is mountainous, boggy, and wild, but has a soil of general good quality. There are slate and granite quarries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £1,087. The church, which was built in 1758, is situated in the middle of the parish. It is a handsome structure, surmounted by a square tower. Creggan forms the head of the Roman Catholic union of Upper and Lower Creggan, and has chapels at Glasslammond, Crossmaglen, Mowhane, and Shela. The latter district is united to the parish of Newtown-Hamilton, and has two chapels in that parish. Here are places of worship for Wesleyan Methodists and Presbyterians. There are several day schools, two of which are used as chapels-of-ease.

CREGGAN AND WILLBROOK, a bog in the bars. of Brawney and Clonlonan, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Athlone. There are also a lough and castle of this name in the bar. of Kilkenny, in the co. of Westmeath.

CREGGANA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Pubblebrien, in the co. of Limerick, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Limerick.

CREGGANALARA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Feranagh, in the co. of Sligo, Ireland, 2 miles from Ballina.

CREGGAUNBEG, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 3 miles from Glenamaddy.

CREGGS, a vil. in the par. of Killegnet, bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Ballinamore. It is situated on the river Suck. Fairs are held on the 12th May, June, and August, and 19th December.

CREGIE, a quarter in the par. of Nevern, in the co. of Pembroke, 2 miles N.E. of Newport.

CREGRINA, or CAREGRINA, a par. in the hund. of Colwyn, in the co. of Radnor, 4½ miles E. of Builth. It is situated on the river Eddw. There are only a few scattered farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the perpet. cur. of Llanbadarn-y-garreg, £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The charities consist of a share in Powell's endowment at Brecon.

CREHELP, or CRYHELP, a par. in the bar. of Lower Talbotstown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The parish extends along the boundary between Wicklow and Dublin. It is somewhat hilly, but consists of good land, and is traversed by the road from Blessington to Baltinglass, the post town. Slate is quarried. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Donard, £150, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Dublin. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is included in the Donard union. There are two day schools.

CREICH, or CRIECH, a par. in the district of Cupar, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Luthrie and Brunton, and its surface consists of a number of hills of moderate elevation in the N. of the co. of Fife, and extending within a mile of the Frith of Tay. It is bounded by the pars. of Abdie, Dunbog, Monimail, Moonzie, Flisk, Balmerino, and Kilmany. Its length northward is 3 miles, with a breadth of 2 miles. The parish is drained by tributaries of the Eden. Whinstone and sandstone are quarried. The estate and castle of Creich, in the N. of the parish, formerly belonged to the Bethunes. The remains of two Roman camps exist near the church, about a mile S. of the Tay.

CREICH, a lough in the Isle of Skye, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland.

CREIGHTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of South Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Uttoxeter.

CREIOGIOG-IS-GLAN and CREIOGIOG-UWCH-GLAN, tnshps. in the par. of Llanarmon, in the co. of Denbigh, 4½ miles S.E. of Ruthin. They are situated on the river Alyn, under the Flint hills.

CREMORNE, a bar. in the co. of Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Dartree and Monaghan on the N.W., by the co. of Armagh on the N.E., by the bar. of Donaghmore on the S.W., and by the co. of Cavan on the S.E. It is 17 miles in length and 8 in breadth, its area being 85,430 acres. It contains the pars. of Aghnamullin, Mucknoe, Clontibret, part of Ballybay, Tehallan, Tullycorbet, and the towns and vils. of Castleblaney, Ballytrain, and Ballybay. The surface is hilly, the highest ground being on the Crieve Hill. It contains several lakes, the river Fane, and the rivulets Annalee and Cootehill. The inhabitants are chiefly weavers.

CREMORNE HOUSE, in the par. of Chelsea, hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 2 miles S.W. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated on the river Thames, and is now a place of amusement, but once the seat of Viscount Cremorne.

CRENDON, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, in the co. of Bucks, 2 miles N. of Thame, and 45 from London. A battle was fought here in 1644, in which the royalists under Colonel Blagge were defeated by the parliamentarians. The village is large, and some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of needles. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £134, in the patron. of Lord Churchill. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is in the early English style of architecture. The charities produce £50 per annum, of which Sir J. Dormer's is half. In the vicinity are the ruins of Nuttley Abbey. Urns and other Roman antiquities were discovered here in 1850.

CRERAN, a loch in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, 6 miles to the N. of Loch Ective.

CRESLOW, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, in the co. of Bucks, 6 miles N. of Aylesbury, its post town. It is a meet for the Whaddon Chase hounds. There are only three houses and no church. The inhabitants attend divine service at Whitchurch.

CRESSAGE, a chplry. in the par. of Cound, hund. of Condover, in the co. of Salop, 2½ miles N.W. of Much Wenlock, and 8 S.E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on the river Severn, near the bridge. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, annexed to the rect. of Cound. The church, dedicated to Christ, is a modern stone structure. The charities amount to £1 10*s.* per annum. There is a Wesleyan chapel, and an endowed school. The principal residences are Cressage Park and Belleurdine Hall, the seat of Sir G. Harnage, Bart. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor.

CRESSING, a par. in the hund. of Witham, in the co. of Essex, 4½ miles N. of Witham, and 3½ S.E. of Braintree. Here was formerly a preceptory of the Knights Templars, founded by King Stephen. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £220, in the patron. of the Vicar of Witham. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a monument to the Neville family, also a brass. There is a chapel for Independents, with a school. Captain Stuart is lord of the manor.

CRESSINGHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles S. of Swaffham. It is situated on the river Wissey, and at the Domesday Survey was a possession of the bishops of Thetford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the rect. of Bodney, £607, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, contains several ancient brasses and monuments. A fair is held on the first Wednesday in August.

CRESSINGHAM, LITTLE, a par. in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles S.E. of the above. The parish is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £284, in the patron. of Mrs. Ann Baker. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure. The charities produce about £19 per annum, of which £10 is the endowment of Farrer's free school.

CRESWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodhorn, E. div. of Morpeth ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 4½ miles N.E. of Longhirst railway station, and 8 from Morpeth, its post town. It is situated on the coast. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £100, in the patron. of A. J. C. Baker, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a beautiful stone building in the early English style. There is a girls' school. A. J. B. Cresswell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CRESWELL, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Stafford. It is situated on the Grand Junction railway. There is no church, and only half-a-dozen houses. The living is a sinecure rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £20, in the patron. of Captain Whitby.

CRESWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Elmton, in the hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles N.E. of Elmton, and 9 N.E. of Chesterfield. It is situated near Creswell Crags, and its romantic and rock scenery is much admired.

CRESWELL, a vil. in the par. of Draycott-in-the-Moors, in the co. of Stafford, 2½ miles S.W. of Cheadle. It is situated on the North Stafford railway.

CRESWELL QUAY, a vil. in the co. of Pembroke, 4 miles N.E. of Pembroke. It is situated on Milford Haven.

CRETINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Loes, in the co. of Suffolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Debenham, and 9 N.W. of Woodbridge. It is situated on the river Deben. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £173, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a Gothic edifice, consisting of S. porch, chancel, nave, and tower. The charities, comprising the town lands, amount to £51 per annum. Cretingham Rookery, the seat of N. Barthropp, Esq., is a fine mansion.

CREUDDYN, a hund. in the co. of Carnarvon, contains the pars. of Llan-dudno, Eglwys-Rhôs, Llangwstennin, Llys-faen, and part of Llandrillo-yn-Rhôs.

CREVENISH, an island in Clew Bay, in the bar.

of Burrishoole, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is the property of the Marquis of Sligo.

CREWE, a tnshp. in the par. of Barthomley, hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 5½ miles N.E. of Nantwich, and 10½ S.W. of Congleton. It is a central station on the London and North-Western railway, being the point where the Manchester and Chester lines unite, and, on this account, has recently become a place of importance. Here are the extensive locomotive and coach building works of the North-Western Company, which keep above 2,000 men regularly employed. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of Lord Crewe. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a beautiful structure in the Gothic style, composed of brick and stone. There is a free school. Crewe Hall, the seat of Lord Crewe, is a beautiful specimen of the Grecian style of architecture.

CREWE, a tnshp. in the par. of Farndon, higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 8½ miles S.E. of Chester, and 4½ N.W. of Malpas. It is situated near the river Dee.

CREWKERNE, a hund. in the S. part of the co. of Somerset, contains the pars. of St. George Hinton, Crewkerne, Misterton, Merriott, Wayford, and Seaborough, comprising 13,260 acres. Crewkerne gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Taunton, and dioc. of Bath and Wells.

CREWKERNE, a par. and market town in the hund. of Crewkerne, in the co. of Somerset, 18 miles S.E. of Bridgwater, and 8½ S.W. of Yeovil. It is a station on the Yeovil and Exeter branch of the London and South-Western railway. It is mentioned in the Saxon will of King Alfred, under the name of Crocern, or Cruaern, and at the time of the Domesday Survey was a royal manor. The town is pleasantly situated in a well wooded valley, near the river Parret. It consists of about 750 houses, with market-house, two banks, and several factories for the weaving of sail-cloth, in which about 500 looms are employed. A stuff called dowlas and hosiery are also manufactured to a small extent. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the cur. of Christ Church, £158, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a handsome cruciform structure of stone, in the decorated English style, consisting of nave, transepts, chancel, and aisles, with lofty embattled tower, and angular turrets. The charities amount to £524 per annum, including the endowment of two almshouses. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Unitarians, and Plymouth Brethren have each a chapel. There is an endowed grammar school with an annual income of £460, formed by John de Coombe in 1449; also National and infant schools. Earl Poulett is lord of the manor. A market is held weekly on Saturday, and a fair annually on the 4th of September.

CRIBARTH, a parcel in the par. of Ystradgynlais, in the co. of Brecon, 7 miles N. of Neath. It is situated on the river Tawe.

CRICCIETH, CRICKEITH, or CRICAETH, a par. and municipal borough in the hund. of Evionydd, in the co. of Carnarvon, 2 miles W. of Tref-llys. It is situated to the N. of Cardigan Bay, but has no harbour. It is a contributory borough to Carnarvon, in returning one member to parliament, and is governed by a mayor and two bailiffs. It was formerly a market town, but is now much decayed, containing only 180 houses, chiefly inhabited by fishermen. The imports are chiefly for domestic use. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Tref-llys and Ynyscynhaiarn, £324, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in the later English style. The charities amount to £8 per annum. There are four chapels for Dissenters. On the isthmus are remains of a castle built in the reign of Edward I., which commands a fine view across the sands. Fairs are held on the 23rd May, 29th June, and 22nd October.

CRICCIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, 2 miles N.W. of St. Asaph.

CRICH, a par. in the hunds. of Morleston, Scarsdale, and Wirksworth, in the co. of Derby 4 miles N. of Belper, and 2 N.W. of Ambergate station. It contains the tnshp. of Wessington, and the chplry. of Tansley. The village, which was once a market town, is pleasantly situated on rising ground, commanding extensive and varied prospects. It first rose into importance in 1793, when a cotton manufactory was established at Fritchley; this has subsequently been converted into a bobbin-mill. The silk and cotton manufactures, which were formerly carried on to a considerable extent, have been superseded by stocking weaving. The adjacent quarries produce a superior kind of limestone, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in working the lead-mines at Crich Cliff and Wakebridge, which were formerly very productive, but are now worked at a loss. In one of the mines coins of Hadrian and Diocletian have been found. The mines are mentioned in the Domesday Survey as belonging to Leofric, or Lewric; and that at Wakebridge is still exempt from the king's duty on lead ore. The Cromford canal passes through a tunnel at the north-western and southern extremities of the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £170, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Michael the Archangel, is a handsome structure, and contains monuments to the Dixies of Bosworth. There are also the perpet. curs. of Tansley, val. £160, and Wessington, val. £100, both in the patron. of the vicar. The Baptists, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, have places of worship.

CRICHTON, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Crichton and Pathhead, together with part of the vils. of Fala, Dam, and Ford. Its length northward is 5½ miles, with a breadth of 4½. It is bounded by the co. of Haddington, and by the pars. of Borthwick, Cranston, Heriot, and Fala. The ground is undulating, and fresh undulations are said to occur by the sinking of portions of the surface. The soil is rich and deep, and well adapted for tillage. Limestone is extensively worked. J. A. B. Callander, Esq., is the chief landowner. A well-defined British camp exists at Longfaugh, on an eminence; but the magnificent ruin of Crichton Castle, situated above a glen through which the Tyne winds, is the chief antiquity. It was successively the property of William III., Lord Crichton, Sir John Ramsay of Balmain, Patrick Hepburn, the third Lord Hales, the Earl of Bothwell, on whose forfeiture it became the property of the crown in 1567, and subsequently of Francis Stewart, Earl of Bothwell. The road from Edinburgh to Lauder traverses the E. of the parish. The village of Crichton is situated on the road from Ford to the vale of the Gala, near Crichton Castle, and 6 miles S. of Dalkeith. The North British railway passes through the S. part of the parish, and has a station at Tynehead. This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and in the patron. of J. A. Burn Callander, Esq. The stipend of the minister is £291. The church, a venerable cruciform structure, is incomplete as regards the W. end. There is also a Free church at Pathhead.

CRICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Caerwent, hund. of Caldicott, in the co. of Monmouth, 3½ miles S.W. of Chepstow, its post town. It is situated on the Roman way to Caerwent.

CRICK, a par. in the hund. of Guilsborough, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles S.E. of Rugby, and 6½ N.E. of Daventry. It has a station on the London and North-Western railway, which is 2 miles from the village. It is situated on the Union canal, near the ancient Watling Street. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £890, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The charities amount to £70. There is a National Society's school, also girls' and infants' schools. The Independents have a chapel. Archbishop Laud was rector of this parish about seven years. It is a meet for the Pytchley hounds.

CRICKADARN, or CERRIGCADARN, a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, in the co. of Brecon, 5½ miles S. of Builth. It is situated at the junction of the rivers Clettwr and Wye, and contains the hmlts. of North and South Crickadarn, and Erwrd. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the vic. of Llande-valley, £686, in the patron. of Colonel L. V. Watkins. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to £9 per annum.

CRICKEITH. See Criccieth, Carnarvonshire.

CRICKET MALHERBIE, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles S. of Ilminster, its post town, and 2¼ N.E. of Chard. The parish, which extends along the bank of the canal, is of small extent, and contains only six houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £80, in the patron. of Mrs. Elizabeth Pitt, who is lady of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a stone structure, in the pointed style, consisting of nave, chancel, aisles, S. porch, and tower with spire. It contains a brass to the Pitt family, and some fine specimens of stained glass.

CRICKET ST. THOMAS, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles E. of Chard, its post town, and 5 W. of Crewkerne. The parish is of small extent, and contains only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £106, in the patron. of Lord Bridport. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is built of stone, consisting of nave, chancel, centre aisle, and tower. Lord Bridport is lord of the manor, and resides at Cricket Lodge.

CRICKETT, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles W. of Ellesmere.

CRICKHEATH, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, in the co. of Salop, 3½ miles S. of Oswestry.

CRICKHENLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Soothill, par. of Dewsbury, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles N.W. of Huddersfield.

CRICKHOWELL, a hund. in the co. of Brecon, contains the pars. of Crickhowell, Llan-bedr, Llan-fihangel-Cwmdû, Llanelly, Llangattock, Llangunider, Llangenny, and Partrishow.

CRICKHOWELL, a par. and market town in the hund. of Crickhowell, in the co. of Brecon, 13½ miles S.E. of Brecknock, and 6 from Abergavenny. It is situated on the river Usk, near the Newport canal, and is said to have taken its name from the ancient British camp called Crug Hywell, situated on Bruanog Hill, near the Roman way Via Julia Montana. It was here that Sir Richard Evans halted with 3,000 men-at-arms on his way to Bosworth Field, waiting to be joined by the men of Brecknock. His standard with the word Richmond on it was here hoisted, and the street leading to this place is still called Standard-street. The town is well built, and is a borough by prescription, containing nearly 300 houses, with bank, Union poorhouse, and a fine old bridge of 14 arches. The ancient townhall is now a farmhouse barn, but has still its original Gothic roof with oak ribs and arches. The shoe and paper manufactures are carried on to a small extent. Crickhowell is the head of a Poor-law Union, superintendent registry, and new County Court district. The bailiff is nominated by the Duke of Beaufort, who is lord of the manor. Petty sessions for the hundred are held in the town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £650, in the patron. of the Duke of Beaufort. It was until recently a sinecure rectory held by the late Lord William Somerset, the spiritual cure being administered by a vicar. On the application of the Rev. J. Evans, B.D., the rectory was added to the vicarage, and also more than half the rectorial tithes of Cwmdû, and thus the clause of the Act enabling a private patron to take from a larger living and add it to a smaller benefice, was for the first time brought into operation. The church is dedicated to St. Edmund, and contains a handsome marble monument to the Herbert family; also an effigy of a knight in chain mail, with sword, belt, and shield, with the arms of the Herberts. This was till recently the only church with a spire in the county. The Calvinists, and English and Welsh Methodists have each a chapel. There are two day and two Sunday schools. This place is celebrated as a fishing station for salmon and trout. There are remains of an old castle overgrown with ivy. The surrounding scenery is very beautiful and picturesque, and the neighbourhood is much frequented by invalids, for the benefit of the bracing air and excellent milk from the goats. At Llangattock Park a cairn was recently opened containing Roman coins of Constantine, and human bones; the coins were presented by Emily Duchess of Beaufort, to the British Museum. A market is held on Thursday, and fairs on the 12th May and the 22nd September.

CRICKLADE HUNDRED. See Highworth, Wilts.

CRICKLADE, a market town and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Highworth, Cricklade, and Staple, in the co. of Wilts, 40 miles N. of Salisbury, 25 from Devizes, and 3½ from the Purton station of the Great Western railway. It is a very ancient place, supposed to be the Cerigwlâd of the Britons, though others derive its name from two Saxon words, Crecca, "a brook," and lædian, "to empty," as the small rivers Churn and Key here join the Thames, which takes its rise on the Gloucestershire border. Being situated on the Roman road from Corinium or Cirencester to Spinæ, it was a place of considerable importance in the Saxon times, before it was plundered by Prince Ethelwald in 905, when he marched to oppose the election of Edward the Elder to the throne. In 1016 it was again plundered by Canute the Dane. From the reign of Edward I. it occasionally returned members to parliament until 1782, when in consequence of notorious bribery the elective franchise was extended to the adjoining hunds. of Highworth, Staple, Kingsbridge, and Malmesbury, except that part of the latter now included in the borough of Malmesbury. At the passing of the Reform Act its limits remained unaltered, Cricklade, Brinckworth, and Swindon being appointed the polling-places. The town, which is pleasantly situated in a champaign country on the S. bank of the river Isis or Thames, consists principally of one long street, paved and lighted with gas. It is a borough by prescription, and is nominally governed by a bailiff and town council, appointed by a jury at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. It is the head of a deanery, of a Poor-law Union comprising 14 parishes, and of a superintendent registry, but is included within the Swindon new County Court district. The town of Cricklade is divided into two parishes, that of St. Mary and that of St. Sampson. The former is a rect. val. £83, in the gift of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. The church of St. Mary is an ancient Norman structure, with a handsome stone cross of one shaft on a flight of steps in the churchyard. The latter is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £365, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. Sampson, is partly in the Norman style of architecture. It is a large cruciform edifice with a handsome square tower, crowned with a pierced parapet and pinnacles, and containing a very old clock. To the S. is a chapel, built by the Hungerford family, and now used as a vestry. There are also chapels belonging to the Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. The charities amount to £289 per annum. Here was a school founded by Robert Jenner, goldsmith, of London, in the year 1652. There are some remains of a priory founded in the reign of Henry III. Saturday is market day. A cattle and cheese market is held on the third Tuesday in each month, and a fair on the 21st September.

CRICKLAND, a hmlt. in the co. of Lancaster, 3½ miles S. of Burton-in-Kendal. It is situated near the Lancaster canal and railway.

CRICKLAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Abergwilly, in the co. of Carmarthen, 1½ mile W. of Carmarthen.

CRICKSTOWN, or CREEKSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ratoath, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Dunshauglin. Ratoath is its post town. The parish is traversed by the road from Dublin to Slane. The surface consists of tolerably good soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ratoath, £595, in the patron. of the crown and T. L. Norman, Esq. Greekstown, in the Roman Catholic arrangement, gives name to the union, including the pars. of Kilmoon, Donaghmore, Kilbrew, and Grenogue, and has a chapel and school here, besides two other chapels within the union. There are some vestiges of the church and of the family mansion of the Barnewalls, the former proprietors of the parish.

CRIDLING STUBBS, a tnshp. partly in the par. of Womersley, and partly in that of Darrington, lower div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles E. of Pontefract, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Womersley.

CRIECH, a par. in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland. It contains the vil. of Bonar Bridge, and extends about 30 miles in a south-easterly direction, from Benmore-Assynt, to within 3 miles of Dornoch. Its breadth is from 2 to 10 miles, and it is bounded by Larg on the N., Assynt on the W., the river Oikell and the Darnoch Firth on the S., and the par. of Dornoch on the E. The surface is chiefly mountain and moorland, and pastures great numbers of black cattle and sheep. There are several lakes and much natural wood, chiefly oak and birch. Whinstone is quarried, and the salmon fisheries of the Shin, one of the tributaries of the Oikell, are very valuable. Near the church is an obelisk 8 feet long and 4 feet broad, said to mark the grave of a Danish chief. A fortification on the Dun of Criech is said to have been erected in the 12th century by an ancestor of the Earl of Ross. The parish, which is traversed by four excellent roads, is in the presb. of Dornoch, and in the patron. of the crown and the Duke of Sutherland. The stipend of the minister is £209. The parish church stands 3 miles S.E. of Bonar Bridge, and there is a royal bounty mission at Rosehall. There are also two free churches, one at Criech and the other at Rosehall.

CRIEFF, a par. and market town in the district and co. of Perth, Scotland. It is for the most part situated in Strathearn, and is bounded by the pars. of Muthill, Madderty, Monivaird, Monzie, and Foulis-Wester. It lies between the Turrit on the W., the Shaggy on the N.W., the Pow on the E., and the Earn on the S. Besides the above, which is the quoad sacra parish, the following lands belong, quoad civilia, to this par. namely, Glenalmond, Corriemuckloch, Callander, and Achalhanzie. The parish, quoad sacra, is about 4 miles square. The surface is highland in character, and beautifully wild and romantic. Some 600 acres are wooded, and sandstone is quarried. The chief landowners are Lady Willoughby D'Eresby, Lord Abercrombie, Sir P. K. Murray, Moray of Abercairney, Murray of Dollerie, and Græme of Inchbrakie. The town of Crieff is connected by rail with the Scottish Central railway. This par. is in the presb. of Auchterarder, synod of Perth and Stirling, and in the patron. of Lady Willoughby D'Eresby. The stipend of the minister is about £240. The West church, built in 1837 as a chapel-of-ease, is seated for 1,000 persons. There are also a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, an Episcopalian chapel, Baptist chapel, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The town of Crieff stands near the river Earn, on the road from Perth to Stirling, and is 17 miles W. of Perth, and 21 N. of Stirling. Montrose frequently made it his headquarters during the civil wars of the 17th century, and it was burnt during the rebellion of 1715. It is at present about to be erected into a burgh under the new Police Act. It is situated on the western base of a hill, which commands a good view of part of the beautiful valley of the Earn. Many mansions adorn the landscape in the vicinity, among which are Ferntower House, Drummond Castle, and Ochertyre. On Tomnacheastle is an obelisk to the memory of Sir David Baird, the conqueror of Tippoo Saib at Seringapatam. The town consists of three principal streets, meeting in a central square, and the chief buildings are Morrison's Academy, Taylor's Institution, the Townhouse, the Masons' Hall, and St. Margaret's College, lately an Episcopalian establishment for the education of young ladies, but now in the possession of R. C. Bishop of Edinburgh. On the Gallow Hill, to the W. of the town, the seneschals of the royal estate of Strathearn used to execute their sentences on malefactors. These judges were of the house of Drummond, and existed from the 14th century until their abolition in 1748. This town has long been celebrated for its salubrity, good water, and sheltered position, which have rendered it a favourite resort for invalids. The chief manufactures are the tanning of leather, the making of coarse linens and worsteds, and of cotton goods for the Glasgow manufacturers. Before the establishment of the Falkirk trysts in 1770, this town was the great market for the sale of black cattle, and it is still much resorted to by Highland drovers. There is a weekly market every Thursday, and fairs are held in January, February, March, April, June, July, August, and October.

CRIEVE, a hill in the co. of Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, about 3 miles S.E. of Ballybay, and a similar distance S.W. of Castleblaney. Its height is inconsiderable, but its isolated position renders it a commanding vantage ground. From its sides slate of good quality is quarried, and on its top is Lough English. From the facility of obtaining water power, numerous bleach-mills have been established around the hill. The Crieve loughs and several handsome residences lie at its foot.

CRIFFEL, or CROWFELL, a mountain in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, near Southerness. It is above 1,800 feet high, and commands a view of the Solway.

CRIFTINS, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, in the co. of Salop.

CRIGGIE, two vils. of this name, one in the par. of Dunnotar, the other in that of St. Cyrn's, both in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland.

CRIGGION, or CRUGGION, a tnshp. in the par. of Alberbury, hund. of Cawrse, in the co. of Montgomery, 9 miles N.E. of Welshpool. It is situated on the river Severn, and is supposed by some antiquaries to be the spot where Caractacus was finally vanquished by Ostorius Scapula. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £108, in the patron. of V. Vickers, Esq. On Breiddon Hill, under which this village stands, is the Rodney pillar.

CRIGGLESTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Sandall Magna, lower div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles S.W. of Wakefield, its post town, and 4 from Barnsley. It is situated on the southern bank of the river Aire, and contains the hmlts. of Chapelthorpe, Crigglestone, Dirtcar, Hall Green, and part of New-Miller-Dam. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries.

CRIMCHARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Chard, hund. of Kingsbury, in the co. of Somerset. See CHARD.

CRIMOND, a par. in the district of Buchan, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is situated on the coast, halfway between Peterhead and Fraserburgh. It is 5½ miles in length, and 3 wide at the southern end, from which the breadth diminishes northward. An ancient sea cliff, 200 feet in height, stretches along the shore a quarter of a mile inland from the sea. The lake of Strathbeg, 500 acres in extent, occupies part of the low ground between the forementioned cliff and the sea. The burgh of Rattray formerly stood a quarter of a mile S. of the lake. Fairs are held in February, August, and October. This par. is in the presb. of Deer and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the Earl of Fife. The stipend of the minister is £204.

CRIMPLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, in the co. of Norfolk, 2½ miles E. of Downham Market station, on the Ely Junction branch of the Great Eastern railway, and 10 from Swaffham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £69, in the patron of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is a neat structure, with nave and tower. The charities amount to £23 per annum, including the fuel allotment. There are a Sunday-school and a small free school. William Bagge, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CRIMSCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Whitchurch, hund of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles S.E. of Stratford-on-Avon.

CRINAN CANAL, communicating between Loch Fine and the Sound of Jura, at the head of the peninsula of Cantire, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It was begun in 1793, and opened in 1801. Some £200,000 have been expended on it, and it is now under the management of the Commissioners for the Caledonian canal. It is 9 miles long, and affords a communication for vessels of 200 tons with the Western Ocean, without the necessity of their passing round the Mull of Cantire. It was originally established as a commercial speculation, but it has never paid any dividend or interest, either to the government or to the original proprietors, as the receipts have generally been balanced by the expenditure. A village of the same name has sprung up at the head of Loch Gilp, near the banks of the canal.

CRINDLE, a vil. in the bar. of Keenaght, in the co. of Londonderry, Ireland, 3 miles from Newtown-Limavady.

CRINGLEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, in the co. of Norfolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Norwich. It is situated on the river Yare, near the bridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100, in the patron. of the mayor and corporation of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Albert, is a flint structure, with square tower, nave, chancel, and N. porch. It contains a handsome font, beautifully carved. There is a school for both sexes, and a large corn-mill.

CRINGLES, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Silsden, par. of Kildwick, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles S.W. of Skipton.

CRINKILL, a vil. in the bar. of Ballybritt, in King's County, Ireland, 3 miles from Birr.

CRINNIS, EAST, a tin-mine in the par. of St. Austell, in the co. of Cornwall, one of the richest in England, having yielded about £80,000 worth of ore in one year; silver and antimony are also found.

CRINOW, or CROYNWYDD, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, in the co. of Pembroke, 1½ mile E. of Narberth, and 10 miles from Tenby. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The whole parish belongs to the Eatons of Parc Glâs. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £86, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. David.

CRIPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Winterbourne-Came, in the hund. of Culliford Tree, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles S. of Dorchester, its post town. There are only four houses.

CRISHOGE, a vil. in the bar. of Scarwalsh, in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Ferns.

CRIT, a bog lying between the bars. of Clonmacnoon, and Kinconnel, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Ballinasloe. Its area is 2,705 acres, and it is drained by the streams Killure and Ahascragh.

CRITCHELL, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Knowlton, in the East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 6 miles W. of Cranborne, and 5 N.W. of Wimborne station on the London and South-Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated near Achling Ditch, which formed part of the Roman way Icknield Street, leading from Old Sarum to Sturminster. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, annexed to the rect. of Critchell Moore in 1774. The church was dedicated to St. Mary.

CRITCHELL MOORE, a par. in the hund. of Badbury, in the East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 2½ miles S. of Long Critchell, and 7 N.W. of Wimborne. It contains the hmlt. of Wandswood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. with the rect. of Long Critchell, £371, in the patron. of H. C. Sturt, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains tombs of the Uredale and Sturt families. Critchell House, a fine old mansion, is the seat of the Sturts.

CRIXETH. See CREEKSEA, Essex.

CROAGH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Rathkeale, its post town. The parish is bisected by the intrusion of a part of Adare. The road from Limerick to Rathkeale traverses the interior. The surface is flat, consisting of good soil, on a limestone bottom. Lead-ore is found in small quantities. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £431, in the patron. of Sir W. Barrington, Bart. The church, once collegiate, stands in the village. It was formerly a handsome cruciform edifice, but is now fast falling into decay. This parish gives name to a Roman Catholic district, including Kilfinney, and has a chapel. There are three day schools and a National school. In the village are six almshouses, endowed and built for as many widows by John Walcott, Esq., allotting to each a piece of land and a small weekly allowance. The village was formerly a corporate town, and there yet remain ruins of a fine abbey and two castles. James II. is said to have halted at Amigan Castle after the battle of the Boyne. Fairs are held on the 1st March, 1st May, 2nd August, and 1st November.

CROAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Burren: there is also a hmlt. of the same name in the bar. of Omagh, in the co. of Tyrone.

CROAGHAN. See CROGHAN, Roscommon.

CROAGHILL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Dunmore.

CROAGHPATRICK, a mountain in the bar. of Morisk, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It rises on the S. shore of Clew Bay, 2,530 feet above the level of the sea, and is remarkable for the grandeur of its appearance, and for the extent and beauty of the ever-varying views obtained from its heights. It formed part of the old territory of Partrigia de Monte, which stretched to Lake Corrib, and is celebrated as the spot where St. Patrick began his mission. At certain seasons of the year thousands of the peasantry wend their way up the mountain sides to pay homage at the numerous shrines and relics that occur on the summit. Here is also a small lake in which are preserved two sacred trout.

CROCHETSTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Tireragh, in the co. of Sligo, Ireland, 3 miles from Ballina.

CROCKAGAY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Mohill, in the co. of Leitrim, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Cloone.

CROCKALISSA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Mohill, in the co. of Leitrim, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Durmod.

CROCKENHILL, a hmlt. partly in the par. of St. Mary Cray, and partly in the par. of Eynesford, hund. of Ruxley, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Eynesford, and 2 from the Farningham railway station. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £100, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Souls, is in the early English style of architecture, and contains some beautiful stained-glass windows. There are six almshouses and a village school.

CROCKER-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Boxgrove, hund. of Box, in the co. of Sussex, 2½ miles N.E. of Chichester. There is also a place of this name in the co. of Southampton, 2 miles N. of Fareham.

CROCKERN-PILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Easton-in-Gordano, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Bristol. It is situated on the southern bank of the Avon, near its confluence with the Severn, and is the Bristol pilot station.

CROCKERN TOR, a wild moor in the forest of Dartmoor, in the S. div. of the co. of Devon, where the ceremony of opening the stannary courts takes place, after which they are adjourned to a town.

CROCKERNWELL, a hmlt. in the co. of Devon, 10 miles W. of Exeter. It is situated near the river Teign, in the midst of fine rocky scenery.

CROCKERTON, a chplry. in the par. of Longbridge-Deverill, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles S. of Warminster.

CROCKETFORD, a vil. in the pars. of Kirkpatrick-Durham and Urr, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Castle-Douglas. It is situated on the river Urr, surrounded by heath and moor.

CROCKFORD BRIDGE, over the Bourn brook, in the co. of Surrey, 2 miles S. of Chertsey.

CROCKHAM HILL, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Westerham, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 2½ miles from Westerham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, and in the patron. of C. Warde, Esq. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. There is a National school for both sexes.

CROCKNABOYOGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Rosclogher, in the co. of Leitrim, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Kinlough.

CROCKRAUN, a vil. in the bar. of Slievemargy, in Queen's County, Ireland, 2 miles from Carlow.

CROCK STREET, a hmlt. in the pars. of Ilminster and Donyatt, in the co. of Somerset, 1¼ mile S.W. of Ilminster. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring potteries.

CROES AND BERWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, hund. of Penarth, in the co. of Cardigan, 2½ miles S.E. of Tregaron. It is situated on the river Croes, which joins the Teivi.

CROESLLECHAN, a cromlech in the co. of Brecon, near Talgarth; its top stone has been lifted several inches by a hawthorn growing under it.

CROESLLWYBIR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, 1 mile from Llanidloes.

CROE-WATER, a stream in the par. of Kintail, in the co. of Ross, Scotland, falling into Loch Duich. It gives name to a district.

CROFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Wiveliscombe, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles E. of the vil. of Wiveliscombe, and 15 S.W. of Bridgwater. It is united with Nunnington.

CROFT, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, in the co. of Hereford, 4½ miles N.W. of Leominster station, and 18 from Hereford. It is situated on the river Lugg, and contains the tnshp. of Newton. There are only a few scattered houses. The manor belonged to the Crofts from before the Conquest. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. with the vic. of Yarpole, £283, in the patron. of E. H. K. Davies, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small structure, containing monuments to the Crofts and several brasses. There is a National school (partly endowed) in connection with Yarpole. Croft Castle, the seat of E. K. Davies, Esq., is a fine old building, formerly the residence of the Croft family; in the park belonging to which is Croft Ambury, supposed to have been a camp of the British king Ambrosius, of elliptical form, with double ditch and ramparts. E. K. Davies, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CROFT, a par. in the hund. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4¾ miles E. of Firsby railway station, and 4 from Burgh. It is situated on the river Steeping, along the raised road called Croft Bank. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £480, in the patron. of Lord Monson. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a handsome stone structure in the early English style, and contains a fine screen. The charities amount to £3 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, besides several cottages used as almshouses, and there is a free school. Lord Monson is lord of the manor.

CROFT, a par. in the wap. of East Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S. of Darlington, and 15 from Leeds. It is situated on the river Tees, and has a railway station on the Great Northern line, with which the town is connected by a short branch line. The par. contains Halnaby, Dalton, Great Smeaton, and Stapleton. The village or town of Croft has a good sulphur spa, and is visited in summer as a watering-place. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £825, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an old stone edifice, and contains tombs of the Clervaux family. The charities amount to £10 per annum. Sir W. Chaytor, Bart., of Croft Hall, is lord of the manor.

CROFT, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles E. of Hinkley, its post town, and 3 N.W. of the Broughton Astley station, on the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the river Soar. The inhabitants are employed in stocking weaving and agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £582, in the patron. of the Rev. R. T. Adnutt. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a narrow Gothic building, with a square tower. It contains a brass of a knight in mail, of the year 1310. There is a National school, also a day and Sunday school. Croft Hall, the seat of William Brookes, Esq., is a fine mansion.

CROFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Newton, and 4 N. of Warrington. Joined with Southworth, it forms a tnshp. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chester, in the patron. of the rector. The church, dedicated to Christ, is a new structure built in 1853, in the Gothic style. The Independents, Methodists, and Roman Catholics have each a chapel. There is an endowed school, also a Sunday-school.

CROFT, a hmlt. in the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles W. of Bridgnorth. It is pleasantly situated near the banks of the Severn.

CROFTDYKE, a vil. in the par. of Ceres, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Largo.

CROFTHANDY, a hmlt. in the par. of Redruth, hund. of Penwith, in the co. of Cornwall, 8 miles W. of Truro.

CROFTHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Neilston, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Paisley. It is situated on the banks of Severn Water, among the Lochliboside hills. There is also a vil. of this name in the par. of Whitburn, in the co. of Linlithgow.

CROFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Thursby, Cumberland ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 3½ miles N.E. of Wigton, and near Carlhwaite railway station. Crofton Hall, the seat of Sir Wastell Briscoe, Bart., is delightfully situated in an extensive park, well stocked with deer, and which contains a fishpond of nearly 12 acres. Sir W. Briscoe is lord of the manor, and has recently reclaimed much land from the heath. Many ancient coins have been found; and at a short distance is a conical artificial mound, now planted with trees, supposed to be a tumulus of some British chieftain.

CROFTON, a chplry. in the par. of Titchfield, in the co. of Hants, 2½ miles S.W. of Fareham. It is situated near the South-Western railway, and contains Stubbington. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Titchfield. The church is dedicated to the Holy Rood.

CROFTON, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2½ miles S.W. of Wakefield, its post town, and 1½ mile from Oakenshaw railway station. It contains the hmlt. of Barkwood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £334, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone edifice in the later English style of architecture, and contains several monuments. The charities amount to £19 per annum. There is a Sunday and two day schools. Mrs. H. Wilson is lady of the manor.

CROFTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Swarby, wap. of Aswardhurn, in the co. of Lincoln, half a mile S.E. of Swarby, and 3¼ miles S. of Sleaford.

CROFTON-WITH-WOLFHALL, a tythg. in the par. of Great Bedwin, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles S.W. of Hungerford. It is situated on the Kennet and Avon canal.

CROGDEAN, or CROOKDEAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkwhelpington, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8½ miles E. of Bellingham, and 15 from Morpeth, its post town. It contains only two houses.

CROGEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanddeiniol, in the co. of Merioneth, 4 miles E. of Bala. It is situated on the river Dee. Here is a meet for the harriers of Captain Hopwood.

CROGEN-IDDON and CROGEN-Y-LADIES, tnshps. in the par. of Llangollen, in the co. of Denbigh, near Chirth Castle and the village of Llangollen.

CROGENNANT-WITH-MORFA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangelynin, in the co. of Merioneth, 3½ miles N. of Towyn.

CROGHAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Philipstown, in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles on the road from Philipstown to Edenderry, its post town, and thence to Tyrrel's Pass. The surface is flat and boggy. The Grand canal passes near the southern boundary. Croghan Hill, immortalised by Spenser in the "Faerie Queen," being the only rising ground in the locality, forms a striking feature; it is entirely cultivated, and from its summit an extensive view may be obtained of the surrounding country. At the foot of the hill stand the ruins of a church and the cottage of Earl Charleville, the owner of the estate; and near its summit are some monumental remains of interest. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, in the patron. of the bishop. This parish has no church, but here is a Roman Catholic chapel, and a day school supported by local contributions.

CROGHAN, or CROAGHAN, a vil. in the bar. of Tullyhunco, in the co. of Cavan, Ireland, 3 miles from Killeshandra.

CROGHAN, a vil. in the pars. of Killaken and Killumod, bar. of Boyle, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated on the road from Boyle to Strokestown. There is a dispensary within the Boyle Poor-law Union, and petty sessions are held in the village. Fairs are held on Wednesday after Trinity Sunday, and on the 28th October.

CROGHAN, or SLIEVE-CROGHAN, a mountain on the Island of Achill, in the bar. of Burrishoole, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Its height is 2,300 feet above the sea-level, and on its sides are many rare plants. It stands on the western side of the island, presenting to the sea a nearly perpendicular face, bearing all the appearance of having been sliced down from top to bottom. It is admitted to be the most terrible precipice in Ireland, and from its eagle-haunted summit is a magnificent view of the Atlantic Ocean.

CROGHAN-KINSHELA, a mountain in the par. and bar. of Arklow, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Arklow. It rises 2,064 feet above sea-level, and the road from Arklow to Ferns lies at its base. Eleven different metals are found in this mountain, and in its environs in 1775 gold was discovered. The fact was kept secret until 1796, when thousands hurried to the spot, and realised a sum of £10,000. Government then took possession of the mine, but the amount realised did not cover the expenses of mining, and the scheme was finally abandoned. "The Wicklow Gold Mines" have ever since afforded a theme for burlesque and jest.

CROGHAN-MOIRA is a hill near the above, said to contain veins of gold.

CROGHTON. See CROUGHTON, co. Chester.

CROGLIN, a par. in Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 12 miles N.E. of Penrith, its post town, and 4½ from Kirkoswald. It is situated on Croglin Water, a tributary of the river Eden. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £300, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Bowman. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small plain stone structure. The tithes were commuted in 1808. Hunter's free school, where Dr. Locke, who founded the lying-in hospital at Westminster, was educated, has an income from endowment of £16 10*s*. There is a day school for both sexes: also a Sunday-school. In this parish stands the lofty mountain called "Croglin Fell." At Newbiggen, near here, is a Wesleyan meeting-room. Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor of Croglin, and the Earl of Carlisle of Newbiggen. A cattle and sheep fair is held on the 18th August.

CROGO, a vil. in the bar. of Balmaclellan, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 9 miles W. of New Galloway.

CROGRONE, a quondam par. in the bar. of East Carbery, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, now united to Kilbritain.

CROGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. of Chester, 4½ miles N. of Chester. It is situated on the Mersey canal.

CROHANE, a par. in the bar. of Slieveardagh, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Killenaule, its post town. It is situated on the borders of the co. of Limerick. The surface consists of a medium soil, with coal in some parts. A tributary to the river Lingay passes through the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, united to Lismullin, joint val. £785, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are Roman Catholic and parish schools.

CROICH, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Kincardine, in the cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 3 miles from Bonar.

CROLIN, or CROULIN, a group of small islands in the district of Wester Ross, in the cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. These islands are situated off the entrance of Loch Carron. Croulinmore, the largest of them, is a mile long.

CROMAR, a div. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, comprising the pars. of Tarland, Migvie, Logie-Coldstone, Coul, and part of Tulloch.

CROMARTY, a par. in the district of Easter Ross, in the cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It is bounded by the Cromarty Firth on the N., the Moray Firth on the E., and the pars. of Rosemarkie and Resolis on the S. and W. It is 7 miles long from E. to W., with a breadth varying from 1 to 4 miles. The cliffs at the E. of the par., overlooking the junction of the Cromarty and Moray Firths, are very lofty, attaining a height of nearly 500 feet. The coast line skirting the S. of the Cromarty Firth presents the appearance so frequently met with in other parts of Scotland, of an inland cliff parallel to the sea, and which seems at a recent geological period to have been washed by the tide. The sole proprietors of the parish are Ross of Cromarty, and Munro of Udale. This par. is in the presb. of Chanonry, and synod of Ross, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £252. There is a Gaelic chapel, the minister of which has £150 from all sources, including the allowance of £50 from government. There is also a Free church. The town of Cromarty is situated on the E. end of the level terrace which separates the inland cliff, mentioned above, from the sea. In 1861 it contained 327 houses, inhabited by a population of 1,491, against 1,988 in 1851, showing a decrease of 497 in the decennial period. The sea bounds it on two sides, and the scenery on all sides is beautiful in the extreme. The harbour affords shelter to vessels of 400 tons, and is much resorted to as a harbour of refuge from storms. A fixed red light is displayed, visible at a distance of 9 miles. A considerable trade is carried on in the herring fishery. This town unites with Wick, Dingwall, Dornoch, Kirkwall, and Tain, in returning a member to parliament. Its government consists of a provost, 2 bailies, and 7 councillors. It has been rendered famous by the writings of Hugh Miller, who, from the humble occupation of a stonemason, raised himself to a prominent position among the geologists and writers of our day.

CROMARTY FIRTH. This magnificent natural harbour or estuary receives the waters of the Conan at Dingwall, and stretches thence 20 miles in a north-easterly direction, until it joins the Moray Firth. Its breadth varies from 1½ mile to 5 miles, and it contracts at its junction with the Moray Firth into a narrow passage between two lofty wooded bluffs called the Sutors of Cromarty, which, viewed from the E., present the appearance of a gateway. The western reaches, although shallow, are yet navigable at high water by vessels of considerable size, while the more eastern parts have a depth of 15 to 20 fathoms, on a good anchorage.

CROMARTYSHIRE. See ROSS AND CROMARTY.

CROMBIE POINT, a vil. in the par. of Torryburn, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Dunfermline, and 18 from Edinburgh.

CROMBY, a vil. in the par. of Panbride, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 2 miles from Monikie.

CROMDALE, a par. in the district of East Inverness, in the cos. of Elgin and Inverness, Scotland. It is bounded by Knockando on the N., by Inveraven and Kirkmichael on the E., by Abernethy on the S., and by Duthil on the W. It is intersected throughout its whole length by the Spey, and is 17 miles long by 10 broad in some places. The northern part is hilly, and covered with forest, while a large part of the southern portion, called Cromdale Hill, is barren and covered with heath. The low lands bordering on the Spey are fertile. The Earl of Seafield is the sole proprietor, and his seat, called Castle Grant, is a magnificent old building, situated in a forest 2 miles N. of the Spey. The principal ruins are those of Muckerach Castle, formerly belonging to the Grants of Rothiemurchus, and the extensive remains of a stronghold at the lake of Lochindorb. This par. is in the presb. of Abernethy, and synod of Moray, and in the patron. of the Earl of Seafield. The stipend of the minister is £249. The parish church is situated to the S. of the Spey, but there is a Mission church, and a Baptist chapel at Grantown, on the N. of the river. There is also a Free church in the parish.

CROMER, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 20 miles N. of Norwich, and 9 N.W. of Walsham. It is one of the most fashionable watering places on the eastern coast, and is a coastguard station, but as yet there is neither railway nor gas. The village is admirably situated on the cliffs of the North Sea, commanding a wide prospect over the sea, in which the sun is seen to rise and set during the summer months. It contains a handsome terrace, and many villas for the accommodation of visitors. The old part of the town is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. In ancient times it had a considerable foreign trade, and was a market town before the harbour of Shipden was washed away by the sea in the reign of Henry IV., from which time the land has been gradually decreasing from the encroachments of the sea. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £154, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a beautiful edifice, in the early English style of architecture, built of flint, with a tower 156 feet high. The charities amount to £28, besides £75 from the Goldsmiths' Company. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is an endowed school, founded in 1502 by Sir B. Reed, then Lord Mayor of London. Cromer Hall is a beautiful Gothic mansion. An extensive trade is carried on in coals, and lobsters of excellent quality are caught on the coast. B. B. Cabbell, Esq., is lord of the manor. At Foulness is a lighthouse 274 feet above the sea-level, with a revolving light, which can be seen for above 20 miles.

CROMER and CROMER HIDE, two places in the co. of Herts. one near Stevenage, the other near Hatfield.

CROMFORD, a chplry. and market town in the par. of Wirksworth, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles N. of Wirksworth. It is situated on the canal and the river Derwent, and is a station on the Buxton branch of the Midland railway. It was a crown manor at the time of the Conquest, and is called Cranford in Domesday Survey. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cotton-mills, which are worked by a sough nearly 2 miles long, and in the lead-mines and colour works. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £180, in the patron. of P. Arkwright, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small neat structure, erected and endowed by the late Sir Richard Arkwright. The schools, erected for the instruction of the children employed in the cotton factories, are mainly supported by Peter Arkwright, Esq. In 1654 Mrs. Mary Talbot founded almshouses for six poor widows. In the vicinity is Rock House, the seat of the Arkwrights, containing a portrait of Sir Richard Arkwright, who erected the first cotton-mill here in 1775. Roman coins of the Lower Empire have been found at Scarthinnick, and a valuable muriate of lead is deposited in the sough or adit leading from the zinc and lead mines. The Cromford canal crosses the rivers Derwent and Amber by two aqueducts each 200 yards long, and passes under the High Peak railway, at Butterley, by a tunnel of 2,100 yards. The High Peak railway, with stationary engines for the conveyance of minerals, was constructed in 1830 at the cost of £200,000. The market is held on Saturday.

CROMHALL ABBOTS, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, union of Thornbury in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles E. of Thornbury, and 2 from the Wickwar station of the Gloucester and Bristol section of the Great Western railway. It anciently formed part of the possessions of St. Augustine's Abbey at Bristol. Coal and limestone are worked, and there is a large tract of heath. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £468, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce £5 per annum. The principal residence is Cromhall Park.

CROMHALL LYGON, a tythg. in the par. of Cromhall Abbots, as above.

CROMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestwich, hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster, 3½ miles N. of Oldham. It contains the vils. of Cowlishall, High Crompton, and Shaw. Part of the land is moorland, but the township is densely populated. The inhabitants are employed in the collieries and cotton-mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern building. Crompton Hall is in ruins. Lord Lyttelton has a seat here.

CROMWELL, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles N. of Newark, its post town, and 6½ N.E. of Southwell. It is situated on the river Trent, near the London and North-Western railway, which has a station at Newark. The village is small, and entirely agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £420, in the patron. of the Duke of Newcastle, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an old structure. There is a parochial school. The tithes were commuted in 1773.

CROMWELL PARK, a vil. in the par. of Redgorton, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 2 miles from Perth. The inhabitants are employed in the cotton-mills.

CRONBANE, a mountain in the bar. of Arklow, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the left bank of the river Ovoca, on the western frontier of the barony. Extensive copper-mines are worked here.

CRONDALL, a hund. in the Odiham div. of the co. of Hants, contains the pars. of Aldershott, Crondall, Farnborough, Long Sutton, and Yateley, comprising 28,220 acres.

CRONDALL, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Crondall, in the co. of Hants, 3½ miles S.E. of Odiham. It is situated on the Basingstoke canal, and the Roman way to Silchester. It contains the tythgs. of Ewshott, Crondall, Crookham, Swanthorpe, and Dippenhall. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £441, in the patron. of the Hospital of St. Cross, Winchester. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an early English structure, and contains an ancient brass of 1370. There is a district church at Crookham, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of the vicar. There are several charities, also an endowed and several other schools. At Ewshott Heath is Cæsar's Camp, with a double ditch. Some old French gold coins have been discovered in a field adjoining.

CRONGORT, a vil. in the bar. of Corcomroe, in the co. of Clare, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Ennistymon.

CRONK-E-VODDEE, a district chplry. in the par. of Kirk-German, Isle of Man, near the vil. of Peel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £65.

CRONKILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Atcham, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Shrewsbury.

CRONROE, a vil. in the par. of Rathnew, bar. of Newcastle, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the coast, near the Great Cronroe Rock, from the summit of which an imposing view may be obtained. Fairs are held on the 12th May and 2nd October.

CRONTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Prescot, hund. of West Derby, in the co. of Lancaster, 2½ miles S.E. of Prescot, near the Runcorn station of the Manchester and Birkenhead line. It contains the vils. of Cronton-Townend and Cronton-Smithies.

CROOK, a chplry. in the par. and ward of Kendal, in the co. of Westmoreland, 4½ miles N.W. of Kendal, its post town, and 1¾ mile W. of the Staveley railway station. The village is small. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £77, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kendal. The church is a fine old stone building.

CROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Alves, in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Elgin.

CROOK AND BILLY-ROW, a tnshp. and district par. in the par. of Brancepeth, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, in the co. of Durham, 4½ miles N.W. of Bishop Auckland, and 9 S.W. of Durham. It has a station on the Stockton, Darlington, and Lancashire Union railway. The inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Brancepeth. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is a Gothic building, and contains a handsome font. There is a Roman Catholic church, attached to which is a school. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. There is a National school for boys; also a mechanics' institute. R. Baker, the historian of St. John's College, Cambridge, was born here.

CROOK-BURN, one of the sources of the river Clyde, rising in the S.W. part of the co. of Lanark, Scotland.

CROOKDALE, a vil. in the par. of Bromfield, in the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles S.W. of Wigton. It is situated near the coast of the Solway Firth.

CROOKDEAN. See CROGDEAN, Northumberland.

CROOKE, a par. in the bar. of Gualtiere, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Waterford. Dunmore is its post town. It is situated on the inner shores of Waterford Harbour, and on the road from East Passage to Waterford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Waterford, and in the patron. of the crown. This parish has neither church, chapel, nor school, and in the Roman Catholic arrangement is included in the union of Passage. A project (afterwards abandoned) was entertained for forming a settlement of Genevese refugees here; the village destined for their reception has been since called New Geneva. Here are the ruins of a castle, built by Le Poer, Baron of Curraghmore, in the 13th century, which became a preceptory for Knights Templars. Kilcop House is the principal residence.

CROOKES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, and par. of Sheffield, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1½ mile N. of Sheffield.

CROOK-FARMS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Thurnham, pars. of Lancaster and Cockerham, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles S.S.W .of Lancaster. It is situated near the river Lune.

CROOKHAM, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Crondall, in the co. of Hants, 2½ miles N.E. of Odiham. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Basingstoke canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the perpet. cur. of Ewshott, £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Crondall. The church, called Christchurch, is modern.

CROOKHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Ford, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Wooler. It is situated on the river Till, and contains the hmlts. of Marden and Pillinsburn.

CROOKHAM HEATH, near Newbury, in the co. of Berks.

CROOKHAVEN, a bay and vil. in the bar. of West Carbery, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, It runs inland about 2 miles, and its measurement across is nearly the same; its average depth is 20 fathoms. It affords good anchorage and refuge in foul weather; and there is a small village of the same name near its head.

CROOKHILLS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Preston-Richard, par. of Heversham, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2½ miles N.E. of Milnthorpe.

CROOKHOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Newton, in the co. of Northumberland, 3½ miles N.W. of Wooler.

CROOK-OF-DEVON, a hmlt. in the par. of Fossaway, in the cos. of Perth and Kinross, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Kinross. The village comprises eight houses, situated at the bend of the river Devon.

CROOKS and CROOKS MOOR, hmlts. in the tnshps. of Nether-Hallam and Eccleshall Bierlow, par. of Sheffield, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

CROOKSTON, a vil. in the par. of Stow, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Stow.

CROOKSTON CASTLE, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Paisley. It is situated on the river White Cart, and was the seat of Lord Darnley whilst he was wooing Queen Mary.

CROOKSTOWN, formerly INSHIRAHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Moviddy, bar. of East Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It was forfeited by the Clancarties during the disturbances of 1641; thence it passed into the Crook family, from whom it derived its present name.

CROOM, a par. and post town in the bars. of Upper Connello, Coshma, and Pubblebrien, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles S.S.W. of Limerick, and 127 miles from Dublin by road, or 141 by the Great Southern and Western railway, on which it is a station. The surface consists of very excellent soil upon a substratum of limestone, rising to a pleasant eminence at Tory Hill. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £927, in the patron. of Edward Croker, Esq. The church is old, and nothing is known of its history. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Ballinabannogue; also four day schools and two parish schools. The town is situated upon the river Maigue, which is here crossed by a fine bridge of six arches. It contains a dispensary, corn-mills, and police station, and petty sessions are held within the town. In the vicinity are the ruins of a castle, built in the reign of King John by the O'Donovans, and rebuilt and strengthened on its forfeiture by the Fitzgeralds, who adopted in connection with it their war-cry of Crom-a-boo, the present motto of the dukes of Leinster. The old fortress, after being repeatedly taken and retaken at different periods, at length surrendered to William III., and is now the property of E. Croker, Esq., lord of the manor. At Carrigeen are the remains of a round tower. Fairs are held on the 3rd May, 22nd June, 1st September, and 8th December.

CROOM, a hmlt. in the par. of Sledmore, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles N.W. of Great Driffield.

CROOME D'ABITOT, or CROMB-OSBERN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 7 miles S.E. of Worcester, and 3½ N.E. of Upton. It is situated near the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with the rect. of Pirton, £500, in the patron. of the Earl of Coventry. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a modern stone edifice, and contains some beautiful monuments to the Coventry family. The Earl of Coventry, whose seat is here, is lord of the manor. The mansion is in the Italian style of architecture, with a portico of four Ionic pillars, supported on pediments; it was rebuilt on the site of an older edifice, and contains some valuable portraits and paintings, particularly one in the saloon of the Lord Keeper Coventry, the first baron, a descendant of John Coventry, Lord Mayor of London in 1416 and 1425.

CROOME, EARL'S, or CROMB-SIMON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles N.E. of Upton-upon-Severn, its post town, 6 from Tewkesbury, and 3 from the Defford station of the Great Western railway. The village is small. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £200, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Dunne. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £17 a year. The chief residences are Earl's Croome Court and Lovant Lodge.

CROOME HILL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles S.E. of Croome D'Abitot. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £200, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to £19 per annum.

CROPREDY, a par. in the hunds. of Banbury and Bloxham, in the co. of Oxford, 2½ miles N. of Oxford, and 4½ N.E. of Banbury. It is situated on the river Cherwell and the Oxford canal. The par. contains the chplries. of Wardington, Mollington, and Claydon, and the tnshps. of Great and Little Bourton and Coton Williamscote. A battle was fought at Cropredy Bridge in 1644, between Charles I. and the Parliamentarians, in which the former was victorious. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £264, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome building in the decorated perpendicular style of architecture, with a tower. The charities amount to £106 per annum. Here is a Dissenting place of worship, and a National school.

CROPSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Thurcaston, hund. of West Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 4 miles N.W. of Leicester. The Earl of Stamford is lord of the manor.

CROPTHORNE, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 3 miles S.E. of Pershore, its post town, and 1½ mile S. of Fladbury railway station. It is situated on the banks of the river Avon, and contains the hmlts. of Charlton and Netherton. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £85, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an old stone building in the Gothic style of architecture, and contains monuments to the Dingleys. The charities amount to £16 per annum. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. There is a free school for boys and girls. The Dean and Chapter of Worcester are lords of the manor.

CROPTON, a chplry. in the par. of Middleton, wap. of Pickering Lythe, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles N.W. of Pickering. It is situated on the river Severn, which rises under Ralph's Cross in the moors. There are traces of an old road and British tumuli. The charities amount to £34 per annum.

CROPWELL BISHOP, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 9 miles S.E. of Nottingham, its post town, and 3½ S.W. of Bingham station, on the London and North-Western railway. It lies on the Fosse Way and the Grantham canal, near the Cropwell Wolds, and is bounded on the E. by the river Smite. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £177, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ripon and the Prebendary of Oxton, alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a fine old structure, with a handsome tower and four bells. The charities amount to £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school. The tithes were commuted in 1802.

CROPWELL BUTLER, a tnshp. in the par. of Tythby, S. div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 1 mile to the N. of Cropwell Bishop. It is situated near the ancient Fosse Way. The tithes were commuted in 1787.

CROSBIE, or CROSBY, a chplry. in the par. of Dundonald, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. There was anciently a par. of the same name in the co. of Ayr, now united to Monkton.

CROSBY, a tnshp. in the pars. of Flixborough and Fredingham, N. and E. divs. of the hund. of Manley, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles E. of Crowle.

CROSBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bottesford, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles from Burton, and 10 from Glandford-Brigg, its post town.

CROSBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Leake, wap. of Allertonshire, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles S.E. of Northallerton, and 3 from Bedale, its post town.

CROSBY GARRETT, or GERARD, a par. in East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 3½ miles W. of Kirkby Stephen railway station, and 6 from Brough, its post town. It is situated on the river Eden, and is bounded on the S.W. by Crosby Fell. Part of the land is unenclosed and used for sheep-walks. The par. consists of the two detached tnshps. of Crosby Garrett and Little Musgrave, having the chplry. of Soulby, a part of the par. of Kirkby-Stephen, interposed between them. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £107, in the patron. of W. Crawford, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an old Gothic building, situated on a hill. In the village is a Baptist chapel, and Wilson's endowed school, with a revenue of £22 per annum.

CROSBY, GREAT, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Sephton, in the co. of Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Liverpool. It is a station on the Liverpool and Southport section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire line. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Mersey's mouth, and is resorted to in summer as a bathing-place. The tnshp. also contains the principal part of Waterloo, a much frequented bathing-place, Little Brighton, and Blundell Sands. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £250, in the patron. of the Rector of Sephton. The church is dedicated to St. Luke. There is a grammar school under the direction of the Company of Merchant Taylors of London, as trustees of Harrison's charity; and Halsall's foundation school for girls, also possessed of a considerable endowment, which has recently been augmented by the sale of the school lands. Harrison's grammar school has an endowment of £50 per annum, and Halsall's girls' school £18. The chief residence is Crosby House, the seat of John Myers, Esq., M.P. for the county. Crosby Channel is the main entrance to the Mersey, being three-quarters of a mile broad, with 6 to 10 fathoms water, and is distinguished by a fixed light 81 feet high, visible for 12 miles, which was erected in 1839.

CROSBY, HIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby-on-Eden, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Carlisle. It is situated near the river Eden and the Roman wall.

CROSBY, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Sephton, in the co. of Lancaster, 1 mile N. of Great Crosby. The chief residence is Crosby Hall, the seat of the Blundells, who have held the manor since the 12th century.

CROSBY, LOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby-on-Eden, in the co. of Cumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Carlisle.

CROSBY-ON-EDEN, a par. in Eskdale ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 3½ miles N.E. of Carlisle, its post town. It is situated on the Roman wall, near the river Eden, and contains Brunstock, Wolby, High and Low Crosby. The village is small. The inhabitants are engaged in the freestone quarries and in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £90, in the patron. of the bishop, who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to St. John. The charities amount to £2 per annum.

CROSBY RAVENSWORTH, a par. in West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 5½ miles N. of Orton, and 4 S.E. of the Shap station on the Carlisle railway. Penrith is its post town. The par., which is very extensive, comprising above 15,000 acres, is situated in a wild country, but the soil is good, with much limestone. It includes the celebrated mountain range of Shap Fells, and comprises the tnshps. of Crosby Ravensworth, Maulds Meaburn, Reagill, and Birkbeck-Fells. The valley in which the village is situated is very fertile, and is watered by the rivers Birkbeck and Lyvennet, a tributary of the river Eden. The latter stream is noted for a peculiar and very rich kind of trout, and has its source at a place called "Black Dub," where Charles II. with his Scottish army halted in 1641. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £150, in the patron. of the heirs of the late Hon. Colonel Howard. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a beautiful stone structure in the early English style. It was rebuilt in 1814, and has an old cross of the time of Henry I. The charities amount to £95 per annum. There is an endowed grammar and three other schools. Roman and Druidical remains have been found, including a camp, earth-works, and several tumuli. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor of the greater part of the parish, and the Hon. Lady G. Howard of the other part. The father of Addison, the poet, was born here, and Rawlinson, the antiquary, resided at Crosby-Gill Park. A fine modern mansion has been erected near the village, on the Lyvennet, by the Dent family, and is named Flass House. A horse, sheep, and cattle fair is held at Mauld's Meaburn, 1 mile from the village, on the Monday before Easter.

CROSCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Whitstone, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Shepton Mallet, and 4 from Wells. It is situated on the river Brue. It was formerly a market town, but is now a small agricultural village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £222, in the patron. of Miss Eliza Wylie. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, near which is an ancient cross. The charities amount to £32 per annum. In the vicinity is Maesbury-Castle camp. A fair is held on the 25th March.

CROSEMERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Ellesmere. It is situated near the Crose Mere, or lake, and is joined to Cockshutt.

CROSLAND, NORTH and SOUTH. See CROSSLAND, co. York.

CROSLET, a vil. in the par. of Kilbarchan, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Kilbarchan.

CROSLEY HALL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Allerton, in the par. of Bradford, West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles N.W. of Bradford. The inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and neighbouring factories.

CROSS, or NESS, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Barvas, near the Butt of Lewis, one of the Western Islands, Scotland, 50 miles N.W. of Loch Ewe. It forms part of the county of Ross, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen, who speak Gaelic.

CROSS, or ST. CROSS. See WINCHESTER, co. Hants.

CROSS, a tythg. in the par. of Portbury, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Bristol.

CROSS, a vil. in the par. of Axbridge, hund. of Winterstoke, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile W. of Axbridge.

CROSS, a vil. in the bar. of Moyarta, in the co. of Clare, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Carrigholt.

CROSS, a vil. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, in the co. of Waterford, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Youghal.

CROSS, a vil. in the par. of Trinity, Jersey, one of the Channel Islands, 4 miles N.E. of St. Helier. It is situated near Bouley Bay, and contains part of "Cæsar's Wall."

CROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 1 mile S. of Torrington.

CROSSABEG, a vil. in the par. of East Shelmaliere, in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Wexford.

CROSSAKEEL, a vil. in the par. of Kilskyre, bar. of Upper Kells, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It occupies an elevated position, 5 miles W. of Kells, and 15 N.W. of Trim. There is a police station, and petty sessions are held in the village, which contains the parish church of Kilskyre, and a school. The dispensary is within the Oldcastle Poor-law Union. Fairs are held on the 9th May, 16th August, and 15th December.

CROSSALEENY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Dundalk, in the co. of Louth, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Carlingford.

CROSS AND BURNESS, an united par. in the island of Sanda, Orkney Islands. Cross comprises the southern, and Burness the north-western peninsula of the island. This par. is in the presb. of North Isles, in the synod of Orkney, and in the patron. of the Earl of Zetland. The stipend of the minister is £210.

CROSS-ARTHURLEE, a vil. in the par. of Neilston, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Paisley. It is situated among the Lochliboside hills.

CROSSBANK, a hmlt. in the district of Knott Lanes, par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, in the co. of Lancaster, 1½ mile from Ashton-under-Lyne.

CROSSBOYNE, a par. in the bar. of Clanmorris, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile on the road from Claremorris, its post town, to Ballindine. The North-Western railway has a station at Claremorris. The soil is generally good, with some bog and limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is old, and in 1819 received the addition of a tower and vestry, the cost of which was defrayed by the late Board of First Fruits. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Carraghmore, in the parish of Tagheen; and two National schools, partly supported by subscription. The principal seats are Castlemacgarrett, the residence of Lord Oranmore; Brookhill, Mayfield, The Heath, Farmhill, and Prospect; near which last is a medicinal spring. The ruins of old Castlemacgarrett are still remaining. In the vicinity are Druidical remains, and in the churchyard are some curious old monuments.

CROSS-BROOK STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Waltham, in the co. of Herts, 2 miles from Waltham Abbey.

CROSS BUTTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Whitby, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2½ miles W. of Whitby. It is situated near the mouth of the river Esk.

CROSSBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Canonby Cross, Allerdale ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 2½ miles N.E. of Maryport.

CROSS CANONBY. See CANONBY-CROSS, Cumberland.

CROSS CRAKE, a vil. in the par. of Heversham, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2½ miles S. of Kendal. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £89, in the patron. of the Vicar of Heversham.

CROSSDONEY, a postal vil. in the par. of Kilmore, bar. of Clanmahon, in the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Bellananagh. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Killeshandra, near the river Erne. The dispensary is within the Cavan Poor-law Union. The scenery of the surrounding locality is strikingly beautiful, and numerous seats adorn the neighbourhood. Fairs are held on the 5th April, 27th May, 20th August, and 17th November.

CROSSENS, a hmlt. in the par. of North Meols, in the co. of Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Ormskirk. It is situated at the mouth of the river Ribble. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Chester.

CROSSERLOUGH, or KILDRUMFERTON, a par. in the bars. of Castlerahan, Clanmahon, and Upper Loughtee, in the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated to the N. of Lough Sheelin, and contains the vil. of Kilnaleck. The surface is hilly, and the parish is intersected by the roads from Cavan to Dublin, Castle-Pollard, and Granard. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore. The church was built in 1812, partly by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, and partly by parochial assessment. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Drumkilly. The chief residences are Kill House, Kilnacrot, and Drumroragh Lodge.

CROSSETT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bilsdale-Midcable, in the North Riding of the co. of York, near Helmslee.

CROSS-FELL, a mountain pass in the co. of Cumberland, 8 miles S.W. of Alston. It is crossed by the Maiden Way, and has a magnificent view over six counties, being near 3,000 feet above the sea-level. The "helm winds" blow for half the year, and are followed by much rain.

CROSS-FLATTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Bingley, upper div. of the wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 32 miles S.W. of York. It is situated near the river Aire, and the North Midland railway. There is also a vil. of this name in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland.

CROSSFORD, a vil. in the par. of Lesmahagow, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Lanark, and 32 from Edinburgh. There is another vil. of the same name in the par. of Dunfermline, in the co. of Fife.

CROSSGAR, a postal vil. in the par. of Kilmore, bar. of Upper Castlereagh, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Downpatrick. It is situated on the road to Saintfield. Crossgar House and Redemon are the neighbouring seats. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in each month.

CROSSGATE, a chplry. in the par. of St. Oswald, Durham city, in the co. of Durham.

CROSSGATES, a hmlt. in the par. of Cults, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Cupar.

CROSSGATES, a vil. in the pars. of Dalgety and Dunfermline, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Dunfermline, and 18 from Edinburgh. It is a station on the Dunfermline branch of the North British railway.

CROSSGATES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Scarcroft, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3¼ miles N.E. of Leeds. It is a station on the Leeds and Milford junction branch of the North-Eastern line.

CROSS HANDS, a hmlt. in the lower div. of the hund. of Grumbalds Ash, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles E. of Chipping Sodbury.

CROSSHAVEN, a vil. and harbour in the par. of Templebreedy, bar. of Kerrycurrihy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The bay lies on the S. of the entrance to the Annabuoy river. It is sheltered on all sides, and possesses every advantage for the accommodation of craft, but has no landing stage. Its average depth at low tide is 3 fathoms. It was here that Sir Francis Drake made his memorable retreat when pursued by the Spanish squadron. The village stands on the shore, and opposite it is a hill, surmounted by a cairn.

CROSSHILL, a vil. in the par. of Kirkmichael, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Maybole. The living is in the presb. of Ayr, and in the patron. of the male communicants.

CROSSHILL, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Old Monkland, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Airdrie, and 33 from Edinburgh. The village is considerable. The living is in the presb. of Hamilton, and in the patron. of the male communicants.

CROSSHILL, a vil. in the par. of Cathcart, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Glasgow.

CROSS HILLS, a vil. in the par. of Gisburn, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S. of Skipton.

CROSSHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Kilmaurs, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 2 miles from Kilmarnock, and 62 from Edinburgh.

CROSS INN, a vil. in the par. of Llandebie, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5 miles S. of Llandeilofawr. It is a station on the Garnant branch of the Llanelly and Vale of Towy railway.

CROSS ISLAND, one of the South Shetland Isles, situated in Quoendale Bay, Scotland. There is also a small island of the same name in Lough Strangford, in the co. of Down, Ireland.

CROSS KEYS, a station of the Western Valleys railway, in the co. of Monmouth, 8¾ miles from Newport.

CROSS KEYS, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Offaly, in the co. of Kildare, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Monasterivin.

CROSS KEYS, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Idle, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles N.E. of Bradford.

CROSS KEYS WASH, in the co. of Lincoln, near Sutton St. Mary's. Here King John lost his baggage crossing the ferry.

CROSSLAND, NORTH and SOUTH, a chplry. in the par. of Almondbury, West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles S.E. of Huddersfield, its post town, and 10 from Rochdale. It is situated to the E. of the river Colne, and includes the hmlt. of Maglordship. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the woollen manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Almondbury. Beaumont's charity produces about £15 per annum.

CROSS LANE, a hmlt. in the borough of Manchester, in the co. of Lancaster, 1 mile W. of Manchester. It is a station on the Manchester and Liverpool section of the London and North-Western railway.

CROSSLEE, a vil. in the par. of Houston, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Paisley. It is situated on the river Gryfe, in a hilly district abounding in stone, lime, and coal. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and in silk and cotton weaving.

CROSSMACOOL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Skreen, in the co. of Meath, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Duleek.

CROSSMAGLEN, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Fews, in the co. of Armagh, Ireland, 9 miles S. of Armagh. It is situated near Lough Maglen, and has slate-quarries. Fairs are held on the last Friday in each month.

CROSSMAHON, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kinnalmeaky, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 2 miles from Bandon. There is another village of the same name 4 miles S.E. of Macroom.

CROSSMICHAEL, a par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Crossmichael and Castlebrand. It extends 5 miles in length, with a breadth of 4 miles, and is bounded on the N. by the par. of Parton, on the E. by the Urr, on the S. by Buittle and Kelton, and on the W. by Loch Ken and the Dee. The surface is fertile, rising into eminences between the two rivers, on the banks of which are extensive meadows. The parish is divided between twenty-eight proprietors. There are several Pictish and other ancient remains. A very perfect camp, oval in form, crowns a hill near Crossmichael church. The road from Castle Douglas to New Galloway traverses the parish. The village of Crossmichael is 4 miles N.W. of Castle Douglas, and is a station on the Glasgow, South-Western, and Portpatrick railway. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright, synod of Galloway, and in the patron. of Mrs. Gaird. The stipend of the minister is £270. There is also an United Presbyterian church in the S. portion of the parish. A fair is held annually at Michaelmas.

CROSSMILL. See CORSEMILL, Renfrewshire.

CROSSMOLINA, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Tirawley, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 10 miles S.W. of Ballina, and 166 from Dublin. The surface is mountainous, with a considerable proportion of bog and waste land. The principal summits are the Bullaunamore and Triestagh mountains, which rise respectively to a height of 1,274, and 1,067 feet above sea-level. The roads from Ballina to Belmullet, and from Crossmolina to Killala, traverse the parish, which is much impoverished by absentee landlords. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with three others, £435, in the patron. of the bishop. This benefice is divided into three parts, respectively impropriate in the Vicars-Choral of Dublin Cathedral, the Precentor of Killala, and the Prebend of Errew. The church stands in the town, and was built in 1818 by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is another church in the union at Moygawnagh, 5 miles from Crossmolina, on the road to Ballycastle. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels, a Wesleyan chapel, and four others within the parish, besides numerous schools. The town is situated on the shores of Lough Conn and the banks of the river Deel, at the foot of Mount Nephen, which has an altitude of 2,840 feet. It is of modern foundation, consisting of one large street and two smaller ones, and contains police and excise stations, and a dispensary. Petty sessions are held here weekly. The Deel is crossed by a fine stone bridge. The principal seats in the vicinity are Enniscoe and Gortner Abbey. Near the church are the remains of a castle, and at Errew and Abbeytown are some ancient ruins. Abundance of good building stone is obtained from a large quarry near the town. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 23rd May, 12th September, 26th October, and 17th December.

CROSSMYLOOF, a vil. in the par. of Cathcart, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Glasgow.

CROSSNA, a vil. in the par. of Ardcarne, bar. of Boyle, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Keadue. It occupies an elevated position not far from Lough Key. There is a Roman Catholic chapel.

CROSSPATRICK, a par. in the bars. of Gorey, South Ballinacor, and Shillelagh, in the cos. of Wexford and Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Carnew. Ferns is its post town. The surface has some upland, bog and marsh, but the general quality of the soil is good, and farming has been much improved in this neighbourhood through the exertions of the Agricultural Society of Coollattin, under the patronage of Earl Fitzwilliam. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £506, in the patron. of the bishop. In union with Kilcommon it forms a prebend in Ferns' Cathedral. The church was built in 1828 by the late Board of First Fruits. It is in the later English style, and has a square tower with pinnacles. There is also a church at Kilcommon, besides three Roman Catholic chapels within the union, and two parochial schools. Some remains of the old church are to be seen near the present one.

CROSSPOOL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upper Hallam, par. of Sheffield, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles W. of Sheffield.

CROSSPOTTLE, a vil. in the bar. of Gorey, in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 2 miles from Ballycane.

CROSSRIM, a vil. in the par. of Swansea, in the co. of Glamorgan, near Swansea.

CROSSTHWAITE, a par. partly in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, and partly in Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, half a mile N.W. of Keswick, and 13 miles S.E. of Cockermouth. The Penrith, Keswick, and Cockermouth railway is at present in course of construction. This extensive par., which is 10 miles long by 10 broad, comprises the tnshps. of Braithwaite, Coledale or Portingale, Castlerigg, and Underskiddaw, and the chplries. of Borrowdale, Newlands, Thornthwaite, St. John's, Keswick, and the hmlt. of Wythburn. It also comprehends the beautiful vale of Keswick, with its handsome villas and pleasant hamlets, and the lakes of Derwentwater, and Thirlemere, including some of the most magnificent scenery of the Lake district. The river Derwent runs through the rich meadows of Borrowdale, which is well wooded up the mountain slopes on either side, sometimes to the height of 300 or 500 feet. Further up is Rosthwaite, where three vales, called Stonethwaite, Seatoller, and Seathwaite, meet; the first leads to Langdale, the second to Buttermere, and the third to Westdale. There are many rich mines of copper and lead, though the celebrated mine of plumbago, called Giller Coom, is now worked out. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the mines. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £430, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Kentigern, is an ancient fabric, roofed with slate. It contains a sculptured hexagonal font. There are also the following district churches or chapelries: St. John's, Keswick, a perpet. cur.,* val. £200, in the patron. of two trustees; Borrowdale, a perpet. cur.,* val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Crossthwaite; Grange, a perpet. cur., val. £30, in the patron. of Miss Heathcote; St. John's in the Vale, a perpet. cur., val. £63, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale and landowners alternately; Wythburn, a perpet. cur., val. £82, in the patron. of the vicar; Newlands, a perpet. cur., val. £90, in the patron. of the vicar; and Thornthwaite, a perpet. cur.,* val. £140, in the patron. of the Vicar of Crossthwaite, and the Incumbent of St. John's, Keswick. There is a grammar school with an income from endowment of £100; also National and other schools. The parochial charities amount to about £250, besides other charities, which produce £85; an unendowed schoolhouse in St. John's chapelry, and grazings in the parish for fourteen cows. There are two saline springs near the source of the Derwent.

CROSSTHWAITE-WITH-LYTH, a chplry. in the par. of Heversham, Kendal ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 4½ miles S.W. of Kendal railway station, and 7 N. of Milnthorpe. It is situated under Whitbarrow Fell, on a branch of the river Kent. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, paper-making, hoop-making, and lime-burning. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £113, in the patron. of the landowners. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, stands near the village of Church Town. It is an ancient structure. The charities amount to £234 per annum. There is an endowed grammar school, founded in 1665 by Mr. Cocke. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

CROSSURA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, near Headford.

CROSSWAYHAND LODGE, an ext. par. place in the par. of Southwick, in the co. of Northampton, 2½ miles N.W. of Oundle.

CROSSWOODHILL, a vil. in the par. of West Calder, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 7 miles S. of Mid Calder.

CROSTON, a par. in the hund. of Leyland, in the co. of Lancaster, 6 miles W. of Chorley, its post town, and 8 from Preston. It is situated on the river Yarrow, and has a station on the West section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The par. contains the tnshps. of Croston Mawdesley, Bretherton, Bispham, and Ulnes-Walton. The town was once a market town, and is still a populous place, containing about 1,500 inhabitants. In ancient times Croston was one of the richest benefices in the country, but it has at various periods been divided by parliament into six distinct parishes, namely, Croston and Hoole, separated in 1642, Chorley and Rufford in 1793, and Tarleton and Hesketh with Becconsall in 1821. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £1,050, in the patron. of the Rev. R. M. Master. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is situated on the bank of the river Yarrow, and was rebuilt in 1743, at an expense of £1,834, defrayed by a brief. It is a large building in various styles; the tower contains a clock and eight bells. The charities amount to £832 per annum. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics have chapels. There is a Free school, endowed in 1660 by the Rev. James Hiet, with about £15 per annum; also National and Sunday schools. J. R. De Trafford, and Thomas Norris, Esqs. are lords of the manor. A fair is held on the Monday before Shrove Tuesday.

CROSTON, or CROSSTONE, a chplry. in the par. of Halifax, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile W. of Halifax, its post town, and 6 from Huddersfield. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax.

CROSTWICK, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, in the co. of Norfolk, 4½ miles N.E. of Norwich. It is situated near the river Bure. The living is a discharged rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £192, with 6 acres of glebe, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is in the perpendicular style, and consists of chancel, nave, and tower. It has been recently restored, and half the windows filled with stained glass. The font is of the same date with the church, and has an octagonal bowl surrounded by figures of our Lord and seven of the apostles; on the pedestal are carved eight figures bearing the emblems of the crucifixion. Pilgrimages in ancient times were performed to the Holy Rood in this church. The ruins of the staircase leading to the loft in which it stood still remain; and the rood screen, which had been partially destroyed, was restored in 1857. The charities amount to £2 per annum. There is a National school.

CROSTWIGHT, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, in the co. of Norfolk, 3½ miles E. of North Walsham, its post town, and 13 from Norwich. The parish is small, and contains only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £166, in the patron. of M. Shephard, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with tower. The charities amount to £1 per annum.

CROUCH, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles S. of Wrotham, and 4½ N.E. of Sevenoaks. There is a place of the same name in the co. of Herts, 3 miles N.E. of Luton.

CROUCH, a small river, which rises near Billericay, in Essex, and falls into the North Sea at Foulness.

CROUCH END, a hmlt. in the par. of Hornsey, Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 4¾ miles N. of London. There is a chapel-of-ease, and a new district church has recently been erected on Crouch Hill. The hamlet is situated in a pleasant spot, and is fast increasing in population, many suburban villas and cottages having been built.

CROUCHESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishopstone, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles S. of Warminster.

CROUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of King's Sutton, in the co. of Northampton, 3½ miles S.W. of Brackley, its post town, and 2 from the Aynho station of the Great Western railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £324, in the patron. of Viscount Ashbrook. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an old structure in the Norman style, consisting of nave, side aisles, chancel, and low square tower. It contains a beautiful font. The charities amount to £3 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and school for infants.

CROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. of Chester, 4 miles N.E. of Chester, its post town. It is situated near the Mersey canal, and contains four houses.

CROULIN ISLES, a group of small islands and rocks at the mouth of Loch Carron, in the S.W. part of the co. of Ross, Scotland.

CROVIE, a vil. in the par. of Gamrie, in the co. of Banff, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Banff. It is situated on Moray Frith, and most of the inhabitants are fishermen.

CROW, a tythg. in the par. of Ringwood, in the co. of Hants, 1 mile from Ringwood. It is united with Bistern.

CROW, a vil. in the bar. of Killian, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Newtown Bellew.

CROWAN, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, in the co. of Cornwall, 5 miles N. of Helston, and 4 S. of Camborne, its post town. This par. contains tin and copper mines, and comprises several vils. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in mining operations. The surrounding country is beautifully diversified, and presents a charming view from the top of Crowan Beacon, an ancient conical heap of stones, which is most probably a cairn. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £470, with 40 acres of glebe, in the patron. of the Rev. H. M. St. Aubyn, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to Santa Crewena, is an ancient stone building, with a good tower. The interior has lately been restored. It contains several monuments of the St. Aubyn family. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have chapels. There is a girls' National school, and large boys and infant schools. A new vicarage house has been built by the present vicar in the Gothic style. The principal residence is Crowance, the ancient seat of the St. Aubyn family. Near the farm of Boscance are traces of an ancient camp, and at Buinerton are the ruins of an ancient chapel. A fair is held at Fraze once a year for cattle. The feast is kept on the first Sunday in February.

CROWBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Horton, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 2½ miles W. of Leek. It is joined to the tnshp. of Blackwood.

CROWBOROUGH BEACON, a lofty hill in the co. of Sussex, about 5 miles S.W. of Tunbridge Wells. It rises to the height of 800 feet above the sea, and commands an extensive view over Sussex and Surrey, taking in Leith-hill Tower, the Fairlight Downs, and the Weald.

CROWCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Williton and Freemanners, in the co. of Somerset, 5½ miles S.E. of Watchet, and 8 from Taunton. The West Somerset branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway has a station at Crowcombe Heathfield. The par. is situated under the Quantock hills, and contains the hmlt. of Flaxpool. It was formerly a market town and incorporated borough, enjoying various privileges, but is now only a village. A portreeve is still annually chosen at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. Near the court-house there is a spring, ebbing and flowing with the tide; and at the sides of the Quantock hills some veins of copper have been found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, and in the patron. of R. Harvey, Esq. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an old building in the perpendicular style of architecture, consisting of aisles, porch, chancel, and embattled tower, the spire surmounting which was struck down by lightning in 1725. It contains some handsome monuments to the Carew family. The charities amount to £66 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Carew's free school. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Crowcombe Heathfield is a meet for the Devon and Somerset hounds. George Henry W. Carew and Robert B. Harvey, Esqs., are lords of the manor. Fairs are held on the first Monday in May, on the Monday after the 1st August, and 31st October.

CROWDEN, a hmlt. in the wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway.

CROWDYCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Allstonefield, in the co. of Stafford, 1 mile N.E. of Longnor. It is situated in an open country on the border of Derbyshire, near the river Dove.

CROWELL, a par. in the hund. of Lewknor, in the co. of Oxford, 7 miles S. of Thame, and 4 from Tetsworth, its post town. It is situated at the foot of the Chiltern hills, near the ancient Icknield Street. The village is small. Lace and beechwood chairs are made here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £190, in the patron. of Miss Wykeham. The church, a very small building, is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to £2 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The Baroness Wenman is lady of the manor.

CROWFERAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tireragh, in the co. of Sligo, Ireland, near Easky.

CROWFIELD, a parochial chplry., connected with the par. of Coddenham, in the hund. of Bosmere, in the co. of Suffolk, 5½ miles N.E. of Needham Market, and 3½ S.W. of Debenham. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, annexed to the vic.* of Coddenham, in the patron. of the Rev. Robert Longe. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to All Saints, is a small structure. The Baptists have a chapel. Sir W. F. F. Middleton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

CROW HALL, CROW HILL, CROW PARK, &c., are names given to various seats and farms in England, Scotland, and Ireland.

CROW HOLME AND PARK, in the co. of Cumberland, 1 mile W. of Keswick. It is situated on Derwentwater, and commands fine views of the lake.

CROWHURST, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Tandridge, in the co. of Surrey, 8½ miles S.E. of Reigate, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Godstone railway station. It is situated to the W. of the Broadmead Water. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £65, in the patron. of George Rush, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. George, is in the later English style of architecture, and contains three old brasses. There is a school.

CROWHURST, a par. in the hund. of Baldslow, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 4½ miles N.W. of Hastings, and 2 S. of Battle, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £177, in the patron. of T. Papillon, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a handsome building in the early English style of architecture. It contains three brasses to the Gaynesford family. There are National schools. In the vicinity is Crowhurst Park.

CROW ISLAND, in the lower lake of Killarney, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Here is an abandoned copper-mine.

CROWLAND, or CROYLAND, a par. in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles from Peterborough, and 4½ N.E. of Deeping railway station. It is situated in the Fens, on the river Welland. The parish, which comprises near 13,000 acres, was formerly marshy, but is now well drained, and converted into rich meadows and corn-fields. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in fisheries, agriculture, dairy farming, rearing geese, and in the snaring of wild-fowl, which frequent the Fens in great numbers. The town, once a market town, chiefly consists of four streets separated by water-courses, with willows on their margin, and connected by a triangular bridge, consisting of three segments of a circle springing from three piers, but meeting in a point, across the Welland, the Nen, and a large drain called the Catwater. The workmanship of this bridge, which occupies the site of a still more ancient one, mentioned in King Ethelbald's charter, is supposed to be of the time of Edward II., and on one of the wings is a Saxon statue of King Ethelbald, evidently transferred from the ancient bridge, and attributed to the 9th century. Altogether, this singular structure may be considered the greatest curiosity of its kind in Britain. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £115, in the patron. of the Marquis of Exeter and J. Whitsed, Esq., alternately. The church, dedicated to SS. Bartholomew and Guthlac, is partly in the Norman style, with a tower in the perpendicular style. It was once part of the abbey church, and has niched figures of Ethelbald, St. Guthlac, and others, in the richly sculptured front of the early English nave, which is 144 feet long, but much dilapidated. The church contains an ancient font and a carved screen. The charities amount to £126 per annum. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a National school. Here are also the ruins of an abbey supposed to have been originally founded, in 716, for Benedictine monks, but having been several times burnt by the Danes, was rebuilt in 1112 by Abbot Joffrid. It was given by Edward VI. to the Clintons, and after remaining in ruins for two centuries, the W. front has recently been restored. Ingulph, the historian, was abbot here. A weekly market is held on Thursday, and a fair on the 4th September.

CROWLE, a par. partly in the middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, and partly in the upper div. of the hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 4½ miles E. of Worcester, and 2 N.E. of Spetchley railway station. It formerly belonged to Worcester Abbey, and the moated building called Crowle House was once the abbot's seat. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £281, in the patron. of the Rev. W. H. Woolrych. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small building partly in the Norman style. It contains a finely carved stone reading-desk, and several tablets and hatchments. The tithes were commuted in 1806. The charities amount to £18 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Dean and Chapter of Worcester are lords of the manor.

CROWLE, a par. in the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 27 miles N.W. of Lincoln, and 11 N. of Goole. It is situated on the river Don, and is a station on the South Yorkshire railway. It contains Ealand, in the Island of Axholme. Much hemp and flax is grown. The village, which is large, was formerly a market town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £850, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Duncombe. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is a handsome building in the Saxon style. There is besides a district church at Eastoft, which now forms an ecclesiastical parish of itself, Lady Strickland having built a very handsome church there, with parsonage attached, and endowed it with £150 a year. The charities amount to £61 per annum. The Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Here is a free school. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor. A market is held in the months of March, April, and May, on alternate Mondays. Fairs for cattle, &c., are held on the last Monday in May, the 11th September, and the 23rd November.

CROWLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, in the co. of Chester, 5½ miles N. of Northwich, its post town, and 8 from Altrincham. The charities amount to £4 10*s.* per annum. By the Reform Act this township is included in the parliamentary limits of the borough of Wallingford.

CROWMARSH-BATTLE, or PRESTON CROWMARSH, a hmlt. in the par. of Bensington, in the co. of Oxford, 1 mile N. of Wallingford. It is situated on the river Thames, and once belonged to Battle Abbey.

CROWMARSH GIFFARD, a par. in the hund. of Langtree, in the co. of Oxford, ¼ mile from Wallingford, its post town, and 3 from the Wallingford Road station on the Great Western railway. It is situated on the river Thames, over which is a bridge to Wallingford. At the time of the Domesday Survey it belonged to W. Giffard, and was called Craunares. In 1248 a small hospital was founded here by the Giffards. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £247, in the patron. of Lord Barrington. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is partly in the Norman style, and of great antiquity. The charities amount to £3 per annum. There is an infant day and Sunday school. In the vicinity are the remains of earthworks, thrown up by King Stephen whilst besieging the Empress Matilda in Wallingford Castle.

CROW MEOLE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Chad, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles W. of Shrewsbury.

CROWN FARM, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Lower Thorngate, in the co. of Hants, 3½ miles S.W. of Stockbridge. There is only one cottage.

CROWN POINT, two small places of this name: one in the co. of Leicester, near Melton-Mowbray; the other in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles E. of Norwich.

CROWNTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 2½ miles N.W. of Wymondham railway station, and 4 from Hingham. It is situated on the river Yare, and contains only thirteen houses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £155, in the patron. of Lord Wodehouse, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small building in the early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, and square tower. It contains a richly carved oak pulpit.

CROWTHORNE-WITH-MINETY, a hund. in the S.E. div. of the co. of Gloucester, contains the borough of Cirencester, and the pars. of Ampney Crucis, Ampney St. Mary, Ampney St. Peter, Ampney-Down, Baunton, Badgington, South Corney, Coates, Daglingworth, Driffield, Rouse-Duntisborne, Harnhill, Maisey-Hampton, Minety, Preston, Siddington, and parts of Abbots'-Duntisbourne, and Stratton, comprising 33,720 acres, exclusive of Cirencester, which is a hund. of itself.

CROWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Weaverham, hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. of Chester, 5½ miles W. of Northwich, its post town, and 5 from Warrington. It is situated on the river Weaver, near the Grand Junction canal. The charities amount to about £10 per annum. There is a chapel for Primitive Methodists. Mr. Barry's trustees are lords of the manor.

CROXALL, or CROXHALL, a par. partly in the hund. of Repton, in the co. of Derby, and partly in the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 5½ miles N. of Tamworth, and 8½ S.E. of Burton-on-Trent. It is situated on the river Meese, and is a station on the West branch of the Midland railway. The par. contains the tnshps. of Oakley and Catton. The railway viaduct here crosses the rivers Tame and Trent. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £489, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Philip, or according to others to St. John the Baptist, is an old stone structure, and contains several monuments. The tithes were commuted in 1791. There is a National school. T. Prinseps, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Croxall Hall.

CROXBY, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Caistor, its post town, 8½ N.E. of Market Rasen, and 2 from the Ulceby railway station. It is situated on the Wolds, and contains Croxby Lake. There are only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £120, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small but very ancient stone building. Here is a meet for the Brocklesby hounds. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor.

CROXDALE, a chplry. in the par. of St. Oswald, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, in the co. of Durham, 3½ miles S. of Durham, and 7 from Bishop Auckland. It is situated on the river Wear, into which the Croxdale Brook falls. The channel of this latter stream forms a picturesque dell, so deep that the sun's rays cannot clearly penetrate it; and in ancient times it was believed to be the abode of evil spirits, for which reason a cross was erected, which subsequently gave the name of Croixdale to the surrounding lands. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £120, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross. Croxdale Hall, the seat of the Salvins, is a handsome mansion situated on an eminence. From Croxdale Scar, a neighbouring cliff, is a fine prospect over the vales of Croxdale and Butterby, surrounded by the waters of the Wear.

CROXDEN WITH GREAT YATE, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 5 miles N.W. of Uttoxeter, its post town. It is situated on a small stream called the Peak, and contains Musden Grange and Calton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £92, in the patron. of the Earl of Macclesfield, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a small edifice nearly as old as the abbey. In it the heart of King John was buried. The charities amount to £5 per annum. There is an endowed National school. The ruins of Croxden Abbey, founded in the year 1176 by Berham de Verdon for Cistercian monks, are very imposing. They consist of the W. front, the S. transept, a cross, and part of the cloisters. The steel key is still preserved at Alton Towers.

CROXHALL. See CROXALL, Staffordshire.

CROXTETH PARK, an ext. par. place in the hund. of West Derby, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Prescot, and 6 from Liverpool. There is a small hamlet. Croxteth House is the seat of the Earl of Sefton, a descendant of William de Mollines, a Norman noble, who came to England with the Conqueror, and whose name is the eighteenth on the roll of Battle Abbey. Here are preserved two standards taken by Sir William Molyneux, an ancestor of the present earl, at the battle of Flodden.

CROXTON, a par. in the hund. of Longstow, in the co. of Cambridge, 3 miles N.W. of Caxton, its post town, and 12 W. of Cambridge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £185, in the patron. of G. O. Newton, Esq. The tithes were commuted in 1811. The church, dedicated to St. James, contains monuments of the Leeds family, and on the N. door a carving of the "Virgin and Child" in bold relief. The charities amount to £35 per annum. G. O. Newton, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Croxton Park.

CROXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles N.W. of Eccleshall, its post town, and 6½ W. of Stone. The village is large. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £56, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a stone building in the decorated style.

CROXTON, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles N. of Thetford, its post town and railway station. It was the site of an ancient hospital called Domus Dei. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £98, in the patron. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an old building, with round tower built of flint stone. The charities amount to £5 per annum. There is a Wesleyan chapel and a National school. The Hon. F. Baring is lord of the manor.

CROXTON, a par. in the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Glandford Brigg, its post town, and 8 from Barton. It is situated on the Wolds, under Yarborough Camp, and near the Ulceby junction of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £392, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a neat edifice. Roman coins have been found here. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor.

CROXTON, a chplry. in the par. of Fulmodeston, hund. of Gallow, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles E. of Fakenham. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The living is annexed to that of Fulmodeston. The chapel of ease is dedicated to S.. John the Baptist.

CROXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 1 mile N.W. of Middlewich, its post town, and 5 miles from Northwich. It is situated on the Grand Trunk canal and the river Dane, which bounds it on the S. and W.

CROXTON KEYRIAL, a par. in the hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 7 miles S. of Grantham, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Melton Mowbray. It is situated on the river Deven, near its source. A Premonstratentian Abbey was founded here in 1150 by William, Earl of Mortaigne, the revenue of which at the Dissolution amounted to £385. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £265, in the patron. of the Duke of Rutland. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a handsome structure, in the later English style of architecture, consisting of nave, chancel, aisles, S. porch, and square embattled tower with five bells. There are several charities, amounting in all to about £80 per annum. There is a Wesleyan chapel and a National school.

CROXTON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 7 miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 5 from the Syston station of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on a branch of the river Wreak. The village is small, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in stocking weaving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £130, in the patron. of the Duke of Rutland. The tithes were commuted in 1794. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The charities produce about £35 per annum. There are four cottages left as almshouses. Races take place annually in the month of March at Croxton Park.

CROY, a par. in the district of East Inverness, in the cos. of Inverness and Nairn, Scotland. It comprises the ancient pars. of Croy and Dalcross, which were united in the end of the 15th century. It is 21 miles in length, with a breadth in some parts of 9 miles. That part of the parish included in Strath Nairn, and through which the Nairn flows, is of great beauty: the rest, including Culloden Moor, is comparatively bleak and naked. The principal seats are those of Kilravock, Holme, Cantray, and Leys Castle. Dalcross Castle, now in ruins, was built in 1621 by Lord Lovat, and commands a very extensive view, stretching from the hill of Meallanvounie to the Ord of Caithness. In a wild district called Clava, S. of the parish church, there are many cairns and druidical circles, of which last there is a very perfect example near Leys Castle. The par. is in the presb. of Nairn and synod of Moray; patrons, the Earl of Cawdor, and Rose of Kilravock. The stipend of the minister is £239. There is also a Free Church station.

CROY, a small vil. in the par. of Cumbernauld, 4 miles S.W. of Castle Cary, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway.

CROYDE BAY, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles N.W. of Barnstaple. It is situated on the S. coast, near Baggy Point.

CROYDON, a par. and market town in the first div. of the hund. of Wallington, in the co. of Surrey. It is situated in the eastern part of the co., under Banstead Downs, 10 miles to the S. of London. The par. is large and populous, containing 30,229 inhabitants, and comprises a large part of Norwood, as also the hmlts. of Bensham, Shirley, Addiscombe, Croham, Heling, Coombe, Selsdon, Norbury, Woodside, and Waddon. It is bounded on the N. by Lambeth and Streatham; on the E. by Beckenham, Addington, and Wickham; on the S. by Sanderstead and Coulsdon; and on the W. by Mitcham and Beddington. The little river Wandle, which discharges itself into the Thames at Wandsworth, takes its rise in this parish; and the old Roman road called Ermine Street, which passed from Arundel to London, can still be traced. There are three railway stations—East, West, and New Croydon. The East Croydon station belongs jointly to the South-Eastern, and the Brighton and South Coast railway companies. The West Croydon station is chiefly for the accommodation of traffic from London to Wimbledon, the Crystal Palace, and neighbouring places; and New Croydon, from which trains run direct both to London Bridge and the Victoria stations.—This town, which is supposed to be the Noviomagus of Antonine, is called by Camden Cradelden, a corruption of its ancient name Croiden, from croie, "chalk," and dune, "a hill," referring to its situation on the edge of the large chalk basin of the Thames. It is by some supposed to have been a royal residence in the Saxon times, and at the Conquest was given to Lanfranc, Archbishop of Canterbury, whose successors in that see have ever since been lords of the manor, and formerly resided at the old palace, which stands at the E. end, near the parish church. During the baronial wars in the reign of Henry III., the Londoners defeated the king here, with great slaughter, in 1264. In 1573 Queen Elizabeth was entertained here by Archbishop Parker. The palace, having at length become dilapidated, was sold in 1780 by Act of Parliament, to Sir Abraham Pitches, for £2,520. It is now occupied as a bleaching establishment, and the chapel which was attached to it is converted into an industrial school. With the funds realised by the sale of the old palace the estate and mansion of Addington Park, 3½ miles S.E. of Croydon, were purchased, and the house rebuilt, by the late Dr. Howley.—The town consists chiefly of one main street more than a mile in length, running nearly N. and S., through which the turnpike road to Brighton and other parts of Sussex passes. There are, besides, many smaller streets, which also contain good shops; but these are generally in the older parts of the town. There are a great number of mansions and handsome villas in the suburbs. The town of Croydon is well paved and drained, and lighted with gas, with a plentiful supply of water, and its sanitary condition is well looked to by a local Board of Health. The townhall, situated in the High-street, is a handsome stone building, with clock, erected in 1809. The market-house is close by it. The new public hall and rooms of the Croydon Literary and Scientific Institution, established in 1838, are in George-street. The Union workhouse is on Duppas Hill, where the Board of Guardians meet weekly. The Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, founded in 1850 for Freemasons or their widows, is a handsome Elizabethan building of brick and stone, situated in St. James's-road. There are also a gaol, barracks for 200 men, forming a depôt for recruits of the three regiments of foot-guards, a police station, and a branch of the London and County Bank.—Croydon is the polling place for the election of members of parliament for the eastern division of the county. A County Court is held at the townhall, and within its jurisdiction are Croydon, Addington, Farleigh, Anerley, Merton, Mitcham, Beddington, Chaldon, Norwood, Mordon, Chelsham, Coulsdon, Penge, Woodmansterne, Wallingdon, Warlingham, Sanderstead, Selsdon, Shirley, and Tatsfield. Croydon is likewise a summer assize town, and petty sessions are held by the magistrates of the district every Saturday at the townhall.—The living is a vic.,* val. £725, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, situated in Church-street, is a noble structure in the Gothic style of architecture, built of stone and flint. The interior was restored in 1844. It has a lofty tower, with embattled parapet and pinnacles, and a peal of eight bells. The church consists of a spacious nave, N. and S. aisles, and chancel, 130 feet in length. The tower at the W. end and the adjacent portions are supposed to have been erected by Archbishop Chicheley, by reason of shields bearing his arms occupying the spandrils of the entrance arch. The entrance porch on the N. side bears the arms of Archbishop Courtenay, who is supposed to have erected a portion of the church in the reign of Richard II. The chantry, dedicated to St. Nicholas, now called the Bishop's chapel, was founded in 1460 by Richard Weldon and his wife. The splendid monument to Archbishop Grindall stands on the S. side of the altar; he was born in 1519, and died at Croydon Palace in 1583. There is also a monument to Archbishop Whitgift, an exact counterpart of that of his predecessor, Archbishop Grindall; he died at Lambeth Palace in 1604. There are also monuments to archbishops Sheldon, Wake, Potter, and Herring. Besides the mother church there are seven district churches:—St. James's, erected in 1829, is situated in St. James's-road, and is built of brick; it has a tower and clock. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £300, in the gift of the Vicar of Croydon. St. Peter's, situated in St. Peter's-road, South End, was erected in 1851. It is built chiefly of flint, and has a square tower. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £300, in the gift of the Vicar of Croydon. Christ Church, Broad Green, was erected in 1852, of stone and flint. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £400, in the patron. of trustees. The church of St. Andrew, erected for the poor in 1857, is a stone building. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £153, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Randolph. At Norwood, in this parish, is the church of All Saints, a stone edifice, erected in 1827, standing on Beulah-hill. It has a beautiful spire, which may be seen from a very great distance. The living is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of St. Mark's, val. £350, in the patron. of the vicar. St. Mark's church, likewise at Norwood, was built in 1852. The living is a cur. annexed to All Saints. At Shirley is the church of St. John the Evangelist, situated about 2 miles to the E. of the town of Croydon. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £70, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Baptists, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and Independents have chapels. The Roman Catholics have a church and schools at Broad Green, and the Society of Friends have a meeting-house and large schools in Park-lane. The chief schools are, Archbishop Tenison's free school, a collegiate school, and Friends' school. The charities amount to about £2,800. The hospital of the Holy Trinity, founded by Archbishop Whitgift in 1596, constructed to accommodate 39 persons, is at North End. The little almshouses, situated in Pitlake, are for 24 persons; and there are others for 7 poor persons, founded by Elys Davy in 1447, situated in Church-street.—Howard of Effingham resided here, and Barclay, who wrote the "Ship of Fools," is buried here. Gurney, the lord mayor, was a native. Roman coins of Domitian and Valentinian have been found.—Market day is Saturday; the chief trade is in corn and butter. The cattle market is held on Thursdays at the S. end of the town. A fair is held on the 5th July for cattle, and a pleasure fair on the 2nd October.

CROYDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Dunster.

CROYDON-CUM-CLAPTON, a par. in the hund. of Armingford, in the co. of Cambridge, 4½ miles S. of Caxton, and 6 N.W. of Royston. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. with the rect. of Clapton annexed, £449, in the patron. of J. F. Gape, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to All Saints. A commodious National school was built in 1858. Coprolites are found here in abundance.

CROYLAND. See CROWLAND, Lincolnshire.

CRUAGH, or CREVAGH, a par. in the bar. of Uppercross, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S. of Dublin. Tallaght is its post town. It is situated on the river Owendugher, which forms the boundary between this parish and that of Whitchurch. The surface is very mountainous, being, in fact, a portion of the South Dublin range, from which vantage ground a fine view may be obtained of the distant metropolis and bay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Tallaght, £296, in the patron. of the archbishop and the representatives of B. Brian, Esq., alternately. The church is now a ruin, but the burial-ground is still in use. An old military road commences here, which takes its solitary course to Aughavanagh, a distance of 33 miles. Cloragh and Mount Venus are the principal residences; in the grounds of the latter is a fine cromlech, 10 feet high.

CRUAGHMORE, a hill in the bar. of Cary, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It stands to the W. of the village of Ballintoy. Basalt columns occur on its summit.

CRUCKMEOLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

CRUCKTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Pontesbury, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury. The living is a cur. annexed to the second mediety of the rect. of Pontesbury. It is situated on a branch of the river Severn.

CRUDEN, or INVERCRUDEN, a par. in the district of Ellon, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is bounded by the pars. of Peterhead and Longside on the W., by the German Ocean on the E., by Slains and Logie Buchan on the S., and by Ellon on the N. It stretches 8 or 9 miles along the coast, and extends as far inland. The northern half of the coast, which is precipitous and rocky, comprises the rocky excavations called the Bullers of Buchan, through which the waves dash themselves with great fury and grandeur during storms. The Scares of Cruden, a range of sunken rocks extending some distance into the sea, occur off the southern coast. The principal landowner is the Earl of Errol, whose seat, Slains Castle, is situated on the summit of a lofty cliff overlooking the sea. Druidical remains occur a mile W. of the church. A battle was fought in the beginning of the 11th century about a mile W. of Slains Castle, between Malcolm II. and Canute, afterwards King of England and Denmark. After the battle a treaty was concluded by which the battle-field was to be consecrated as a burial-ground, a chapel to be built, and masses said for ever for those who had fallen. The Danes on their part are said to have agreed to evacuate Burg Head in Morayshire, and finally to quit the kingdom, as they did in 1014. This par. is in the presb. of Ellon and synod of Aberdeen. Pat., the Earl of Errol. The stipend of the minister is £204. There is also a Free church and an Episcopalian chapel. Fairs are held in the parish in April and June.

CRUDGINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall-Magna, in the co. of Salop, 3½ miles N.W. of Wellington. It is situated on the river Roden, near Crudgington Bridge.

CRUDWELL, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles N. of Malmesbury, its post town, and 4 from the Tetbury Road railway station. It is situated near the old Fosse Way to Cirencester, and contains the hmlts. of Chelworth, Eastcourt, Chedglow, and Murcott. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £487, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Maskelyne. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure in the early English style of architecture, and contains several monuments and a stained-glass window. The charities amount to £36 per annum. There is a National school, with a small endowment. Earl de Grey is lord of the manor. The village is a meet for the Vale of White Horse hounds.

CRUGGION. See Cadgoion, Montgomeryshire.

CRUGH, a small island off the coast of Galway, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Owney Island, and near Crugh Rock.

CRUGH LUSSA, or CRUACH LUSACH, a mountain in Knapdale, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, near Tarbert. Its name signifies "the hill of plants," from the great variety of herbage found on its slopes; and from the summit, which is near 3,000 feet above the level of the sea, is a varied prospect of land and sea, studded with islands.

CRUGLETON, a vil. in the par. of Whitehorn, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Sorby. The ruins of Crugleton Castle are situated on Wigton Bay.

CRUICETOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Kells, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Nobber, its post town. It derives its name from the Cruice family, who formerly possessed the parish. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Meath. There is no church in this parish. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Nobber. There is a school at Altmush. Black stone is quarried here. Cruicetown House is the principal residence.

CRUICK HARBOUR, on the coast of Fife, Scotland, near Inverkeithing.

CRUICK WATER, a river rising in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, and falling into the Upper Esk, at Strickathrow.

CRUM, a demesne in the bar. of Coole, in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Newtown-Butler. This beautiful spot is situated at the head of Upper Lough Erne, and is the residence of the Earl of Erne. The castle is a noble building, and the ruins of the old mansion standing near add beauty to this picturesque locality.

CRUMLIN, a post and market town in the par. of Camlin, bar. of Upper Massareene, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 11 miles N.W. of Belfast, and 2½ E. of the head of Lough Neagh. It is situated on the river Camlin, and on the road from Antrim to Moira. There is canal communication with Belfast, Antrim, and other towns. Here are Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, and Unitarian chapels; also National and Church Educational Society's schools. The parish church is at Glenavey, about 2 miles distant; the old one was destroyed in 1690 by James II.'s troops. In the town is a dispensary within the Antrim Poor-law Union, and petty sessions are held every fortnight. Here are also extensive flour-mills. The principal residences are Glendarragh House and Ben Neagh. Fairs are held on the first Monday in every month, September excepted.

CRUMLIN, a par. in the bar. of Uppercross, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Dublin, on the road from Dublin to Naas. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £176, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Patrick's, Dublin. The church was erected on the site of the old one in 1825 by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It is in the pointed style, and is connected with the old tower. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Rathfarnham and Tallaght. There is a National school for boys and girls. The town was formerly a place of fashionable resort, and is supposed to occupy the site of a heathen temple. It is a crown manor, and was burned in 1594 by Gerald Fitzgerald, the leader of the Wicklow insurgents. William III., in 1690, halted his troops here after the battle of the Boyne. Here are a police station and a dispensary within the South Dublin Poor-law Union; also extensive flour-mills and limestone quarries. The Purcells formerly held the manor. Crumlin House is the principal residence.

CRUMLIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Trevethan, in the co. of Monmouth, 3½ miles S.W. of Pontypool. It is situated on the canal which joins Brecon canal near Newport, and is a station on the Taff Vale Extension of the West Midland railway.

CRUMMOCK WATER, a lake 3 miles long by three-quarters of a mile broad, situated in the co. of Cumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Keswick, between Buttermere and Lowes water. On its western bank is Scale Force, a fine waterfall of 156 feet in one leap, and then of 44 feet over rocks of sienite. The lake is adorned with three small islands, and contains abundance of trout and char.

CRUMPLEHORN, a hmlt. in the par. of Lanteglos, in the co. of Cornwall, 6 miles S.E. of Lostwithiel.

CRUMPSALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Manchester. The village, which is situated on the river Esk, contains many good houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, and in the patron. of the bishop. There is no church, but divine service is performed in the schoolroom. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, and two at Lower Crumpsall. The principal industry is in bleaching and dying, and in the manufacture of silk and cotton. Hugh Oldham, Bishop of Exeter, and founder of the Manchester grammar school, George Clarke, and Humphrey Chetham, were born here. Crumpsall Hall was the seat of the Chethams.

CRUMSTONE ISLAND, in the co. of Northumberland, 4½ miles to the E. of Bamborough Castle, the most southerly of the Staples Islands. It is a small desolate island, and has the Callers Reef on its W. side.

CRUNDALE, or CRUNDELL, a par. in the hund. of Wye, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 5½ miles N.E. of Ashford, and 2½ N.E. of Wye station on the South-Eastern railway. The village is small. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £344, in the patron. of Sir E. Filmer, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The charities amount to £8 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Roman urns and coins have been found. Sole Street and Clantigh are places here. A fair is held on Whitsun-Monday.

CRUNWEAR, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, in the co. of Pembroke, 5½ miles S.E. of Narberth, its post town. It contains the hmlt. of Lanteague. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Elidyr.

CRUSHEEN, a vil. in the par. of Inchicronane, bar. of Upper Bunratty, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Ennis. Here is a dispensary within the Ennis Poor-law Union. Ballyline and Port are the principal seats.

CRUTCH, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of the hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 1½ mile N. of Droitwich.

CRUWYS-MORCHARD, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, in the co. of Devon, 8½ miles N. of Crediton, and 5 W. of Tiverton station on the Great Western railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £455, in the patron. of the Rev. G. S. Cruwys, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is an ancient stone structure in the decorated style, and contains a beautiful oak screen, also monuments to the Avery and Cruwy families, and stained-glass windows. It was struck by lightning in 1689, but has been successfully repaired. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The charities amount to £7 per annum. There is a National school. Way Village, Pennymoor, Cotton, and Windmill are places here.

CRUX-EASTON, a par. in the lower half of the hund. of Pastrow, in the co. of Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Kingsclere, and 6½ S. of Newbury, its post town and railway station. It is a very small place, and is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Croch Estone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £180, in the patron. of the Rev. James Bagge. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a National school. The celebrated grotto constructed by the nine sisters of the Lisle family, and celebrated by Pope, has been suffered to fall to ruins.

CRUXTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Maiden Newton, in the co. of Dorset, 7 miles N.W. of Dorchester.

CRYFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoneleigh, in the co. of Warwick, 2½ miles S.W. of Coventry.

CRYNANT, a vil. and chplry. in the par. of Cadoxton, in the co. of Glamorgan, 1 mile from Neath. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Cadoxton.

CRYSTAL PALACE. See SYDENHAM, Kent.

CUBBERLEY, or COBERLY, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 3½ miles S. of Cheltenham, its post town and railway station. It is situated near the source of the river Thames. The village is small and entirely agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £320.* The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient stone structure, and contains effigies of the Berkeley family. The Baptists have a chapel. There is a free school.

CUBBINGTON, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles N.E. of Warwick, its post town, 7 from Coventry, and 3 N.E. of Leamington station on the London and North-Western railway. It is situated to the S.E. of the river Avon. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £250, in the patron. of the Rev. M. Austis. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome stone building, containing two beautiful stained-glass windows. The charities amount to £56 per annum, including £17 left for the support of a school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There are National and infant schools. The Earl of Aylesford is lord of the manor.

CUBECK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bainbridge, par. of Aysgarth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 1½ mile S.W. of Askrigg. It is situated in Wensleydale, on the river Bainbridge.

CUBERT, or CUTHBERT, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, in the co. of Cornwall, 8 miles S.W. of St. Columb-Major, and 9 N.W. of Truro, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the coast, and is a small mining village. Kelsey Point is celebrated for its small breed of sheep. Near the village is a petrifying spring. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £180, in the patron. of the Rev. C. H. Hosken. The church is dedicated to St. Cuthbert, and contains monuments to the Hosken family and others; also a wall painting of the saint to whom it is dedicated. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Here is a parochial school for boys and girls, and a Sunday-school. James Theodore Hosken, Esq., is lord of the manor. At Holywell Beach a fair is held annually.

CUBLEY, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles S. of Ashborne, its post town, and 6 from the Uttoxeter station of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on a branch of the river Dove. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. with the rect. of Marston-Montgomery annexed, £523, in the patron. of the Right Hon. Baron Greene. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a handsome building in the Norman style, with lofty tower and four bells. There are parish and Sunday schools. Cubley Gorse is a meet for the Hoar-Cross hounds. A market was formerly held here.

CUBLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, in the co. of Bucks, 6½ miles N.E. of Aylesbury, and 2 E. of Whitchurch. Its situation commands a beautiful and extensive view. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £289, in the patron. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, consists of nave, chancel, and tower. The charities are a share of those of Whitchurch.

CUBLINGTON, UPPER and LOWER, two hmlts. in the co. of Hereford, 7 miles W. of Hereford.

CUBY, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, in the co. of Cornwall, 1 mile from Tregony, its post town, and 6 from Truro. It adjoins the parish of Tregony, and formerly belonged to the Pomeroys, who had a castle here, of which no traces remain. The rocks are mica slate The village is small. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Tregony, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Keby, is an ancient structure, and near it is a holy well. Newton, Tregonyhayn, Polglaze, Treluking, Bohagoe, Furdar, Rosevallen, Mid-Gargas, Carvath, and Govily are places here.

CUCH, or KEACH, a river on the N.E. border of the co. of Pembroke, runs 10 miles N. to the river Teivi.

CUCHULLIN, a group of hypersthene rocks on the S. side of the Isle of Skye, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland. The highest point, at Scuir-na-Gillean, is 3,200 feet; and in a deep glen is Loch Coruisk.

CUCKFIELD, a par. and market town in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles from Hayward's Heath station on the Brighton and South Coast railway, and 9½ N.E. of Horsham. It is a petty sessions town, and a polling-place for the county elections. The town is situated on an eminence, nearly in the centre of the county, and the houses are well built of brick. The pathways are laid with bricks of red clay, which is found in the vicinity, as is also a stratum of peculiarly white pipe-clay. The water is supplied from springs. The Poor-law Commissioners have erected a workhouse for Cuckfield Poor-law Union, which comprises 15 parishes, extending over 92 square miles. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £613, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a fine building in the early English style; it contains tombs of the Burrell family, and an old brass. There is also a district church, dedicated to St. Mark, at Staplefield Common, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £60, in the patron. of the Vicar of Cuckfield. The charities amount to £41 per annum. There is a free grammar school, founded and endowed in 1528. The Baptists and Independents have each a chapel. Lord Abergavenny and Warden Sergison, Esq., of Cuckfield Park, are lords of the manor. A weekly market is held on Friday, and fairs on the Thursday in Whitsun-week and on the 16th September.

CUCKLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Norton-Ferris, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles E. of Wincanton, its post town and railway station, and 11 from Sherborne. It contains the tnshp. of Clapton-Forum. The village was once a market town, but is much decayed. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the rects. of Stoke-Trister and Bayford, £609, in the patron. of William Phelips, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, in the early English style, consisting of nave, transept, aisles, chancel, porch, tower, and spire. The charities amount to £29 per annum. There is an endowed school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. An annual fair is held on Ascension Day.

CUCKMERE, a river in the co. of Sussex, which takes its rise in the Downs, near Heathfield, and after a course of 18 miles falls into the sea near Beachey Head.

CUCKNEY-NORTON, a par. in the Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 4½ miles S. of Worksop. It is situated under Cuckney Hill, and contains the tnshps. and hndts. of Langwith, Holbeck, Norton, Milnthorpe, and Bonbusk. The inhabitants are employed in the cotton and stuff mills. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £193, in the patron. of Earl Manvers. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The tithes were commuted in 1839. One mile to the N. of the village is Welbeck Abbey, the seat of the Duke of Portland. A market was formerly held here.

CUCKOLD'S HAVEN, in the co. of Stafford, 2½ miles N. of Abbot's Bromley.

CUCKOLD'S POINT, a bank, or shoal, on the S. side of the river Thames, between Limehouse and Greenwich.

CUDDESDEN, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles from Wheatley, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Oxford. It is situated on the river Thame, and contains the hmlts. of Denton, Chippinghurst, and Wheatley. After the crown resumed possession of Gloucester Hall, the first residence appropriated to the bishops of Oxford, there was no episcopal palace until Dr. Bancroft, with the aid of King Charles I. and Archbishop Laud, erected Cuddesden Palace, which was not completed till 1635. A few years later, during the Civil War, it was burnt by Colonel William Legge, the royalist governor of Oxford, fearing lest it should fall into the hands of the parliamentary forces. It then remained in ruins till 1679, when Dr. Fell rebuilt it on its former foundations. The present building is a plain but commodious mansion, situated on the southern limb of Shotover, and commands extensive views over the valley of the Thame. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is partly in the Norman style. It contains tombs of several prelates; amongst which one to Bishop Bancroft, with an epitaph by Bishop Louth to the memory of his daughter. There is a district church at Wheatley, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £250, also in the patron. of the bishop. There is a theological college, founded by Dr. Wilberforce, the present prelate, and a foundation school at Wheatley, with an endowment of £45 per annum. The parochial charities produce about £50, exclusive of the school endowment. Cuddesden gives name to a deanery, in the archdeac. and dioc. of Oxford. The Earl of Macclesfield is lord of the manor.

CUDDINGTON, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Copthorne, in the co. of Surrey, 1 mile N.E. of Ewell, its post town, and 13 miles from London by road, or 17½ by the Epsom and Leatherhead branch of the Brighton and South Coast railway, which has a station at Ewell, as also has the London and South-Western line. The village is small, but several new villas have recently been built. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, which was dedicated to St. Mary, has long been in ruins. In the vicinity is Nonsuch Park, where formerly stood the favourite palace of Queen Elizabeth and the Stuarts. E. R. Northey, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CUDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, in the co. of Buckingham, 4 miles S.W. of Aylesbury, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Thame. The village is small, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in the stone-quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient building in the early English style, consisting of nave, chancel, three aisles, and square embattled tower. The charities amount to £11 per annum. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel. There is a National school CUDDINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Weaverham, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. of Chester, 4½ miles S.W. of Northwich.

CUDDINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. of Chester, 2½ miles W. of Malpas, and 12 from Chester, its post town.

CUDHAM, or COWDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 5½ miles S.E. of Bromley, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Farnborough, at which latter place both the London and South-Western and the South-Eastern railways have stations. The village, which is small, was once a market town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £306, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient flint and brick structure, and contains a brass of 1503. The charities amount to £5 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school for both sexes. T. Lightfoot, Esq., is lord of the manor. Horsted, Aperfield, Cackets, Noreds, Newbarn, Skidhall, and Bombast are places here.

CUDWORTH, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles from Ilminster, its post town, and 3½ N.E. of Chard Road station on the London, Yeovil, and Exeter branch of the London and South-Western railway. There are only a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £50, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small stone structure, consisting of chancel, nave, and turret. J. T. B. Notley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CUDWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Royston, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles N.E. of Barnsley, its post town, and 7 from Wakefield. It is near the North Midland railway.

CUERDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Blackburn, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 2½ miles E. of Preston, its post town. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Ribble, and W of the Derwent. Cuerdale Lodge is the principal residence.

CUERDEN, a tnshp. in the par. and hund of Leyland, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Chorley, and 3 S.E. of Preston. The London and North-Western and the Lancashire and Yorkshire railways have stations at Leyland. The village is small. Cuerden Hall, the seat of Robert Townley Parker, Esq., is an elegant building.

CUERDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Prescot, hund. of West Derby, in the co. of Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Warrington, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Mersey, near the Sankey canal.

CUFFABOUTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Carriden, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Borness.

CUFFS, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunster, in the co. of Somerset, joined to Kitswall.

CUGLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Newent, hund. of Botloe, in the co. of Gloucester, 8 miles N.W. of Gloucester. It is situated on the verge of Dean Forest, near the Hereford canal.

CUILCAGH, two mountains of this name: one in the par. of Tullyhaw, in the co. of Cavan, Ireland; the other in the co. of Fermanagh.

CUILLOGHAN, a lough in the co. of Cavan, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Ballyconnell.

CUILMORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Athlone, in the co. of Roscommon, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Athlone.

CULAG, a vil. in the par. of Assynt, in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland. It is situated on Culag Water, which falls into Loch Inver.

CULBOCKIE, a vil. in the par. of Urquhart and Logie-Wester, in the co. of Ross, Scotland, 2 miles E. of Dingwall. Fairs are held here in April, July, October, and December.

CULBONE, called also KILNER, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles W. of Minehead, and 3 from Porlock. The village, consisting of only seven houses, is situated in a delightfully sheltered spot, near the coast of Porlock Bay. The cliffs behind the village rise to the height of 1,200 feet, over which a small stream falls down to the sea, forming a pleasing cascade. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, in the patron. of the Earl of Lovelace. The church, dedicated to St. Culbone, is a very old stone edifice, measuring 33 feet long by 12 feet wide, and is supposed to be the smallest in the kingdom, consisting of nave, chancel, porch, and spire. Warner graphically describes it as "the Lilliputian church of Culbone, situated in as extraordinary a spot, as man, in his whimsicality, ever fixed on as a place of worship." It is built in a cove on the cliffs, 400 feet high, containing about half an acre of tolerably level ground, surrounded by almost perpendicular cliffs. The Earl of Lovelace is lord of the manor.

CULCABOCK, a vil. in the par. and co. of Inverness, Scotland, situated about a mile S.E. of the town of Inverness.

CULCHETH, a tnshp. in the par. of Winwick, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles S. of Leigh. The village, which is large, contains the Union poorhouse. The charities produce about £50 a year.

CULCHETH, a hmlt. in the par. of Newton, in the co. of Lancaster.

CULDAFF, a par. in the bar. of Inishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Carndonagh, and 6 N.W. of Moville. It lies along the shores of the Atlantic, between the points Malin and Innishowen. The surface is somewhat boggy, with a soil of various quality. The parish is bisected by the intrusion of a strip of the parish of Cloncha. Limestone is abundant. Clonkeen, Carthage, Crucknanionan, and Croagh are the principal mountains, with Squire Carn, which rises 1,058 feet above the sea-level. Cod and salmon used formerly to be taken here in large quantities; in Lough Moneyderragh char is taken in abundance. The river Culdaff takes its rise from Lough Crucknanionan, and falls into the bay, which is a spacious opening lying between Glengad and Dunmore. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £459, in the patron. of the Marquis of Donegal. The church is a neat edifice in the early English style with a square tower of later erection. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Bogan, and in the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is partly united to that of Cloncha. There is a parish school for boys, three Sunday and several day schools. The village, sometimes called Milltown, stands on the E. bank of the river. The dispensary is within the Carndonagh Poor-law Union. The principal residences are Grouse Hall and Culdaff House. Fairs are held on the 10th February, May, August, and November.

CULECUDDEN. See CULLICUDDEN, Cromarty.

CULFEIGHTRIM, or CARY, a par. in the bar. of Cary, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 1 mile from Ballycastle, its post town. It is situated near the watering-place, Cushenden. The surface is very mountainous, the highest ground being on the Knocklade hills, which rise to a height of 1,820 feet above the level of the sea. Freestone is quarried to a large extent, and at Ballycastle is an extensive coal-mine, which has become exhausted and abandoned. The old road to the Giant's Causeway crossed the parish, and passed over the Cary mountains, but a more direct way has been recently constructed over a viaduct. The coast is remarkable for the wildness and grandeur of its scenery; Murlock Bay, Tor, Fair Head, Drimnakill Hill, and Glendun offer an unbounded field for antiquarian, artist, and geologist. Fine specimens of columnar basalt occur at Fair Head, within whose loftiest crags the eagle builds her nest. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £262, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was rebuilt in 1830, by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It is in the early English style, and is a neat structure. There are two Roman Catholic chapels in this parish, which gives name to a Roman Catholic union, including the Grange of Innispollan. There are five National schools, and a village school at Cushenden. A sanguinary battle took place here, in which MacQuellan was defeated by Macdonnell in 1569. The valley of Glenshesk was the principal scene of this struggle, and the cairn of Shane O'Dennis O'Nial, who was slain in the action, is near Cushenden. At Tor are the ruins of a large fortification, and at Cushenden Bay, of Cary Castle.

CULFORD, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, in the co. of Suffolk, 4½ miles N.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. It is situated on the river Lark, and formerly belonged to Bury Abbey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. with the rects.* of Ingham and Timworth, £549, in the patron. of R. B. De Beauvoir, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, consists of chancel, nave, and tower. It was built in 1591, and contains tombs of the Bacon family. Here are Culford, Fornham, St. Genevive, and Hengrave parks. The Rev. E. R. Benyon, M.A., is lord of the manor.

CULGAITH, a chplry. in the par. of Kirkland, ward of Leath, in the co. of Cumberland, 6½ miles E. of Penrith, its post town, and 1 mile N. of Temple Sowerby station on the Eden Valley railway. It is bounded on the W. by the river Eden, and on the S. by the river Tees. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkland. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small stone edifice.

CULGROAT, a vil. in the par. of Stoneykirk, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 23 miles W. of Wigton. It is situated between Luce Bay and the Irish Sea.

CULHAM, a par. in the hund. of Dorchester, in the co. of Oxford, 1 mile S.E. of Abingdon, its post town, and near the Abingdon Road station of the Great Western railway. The parish is bounded on the S., W., and N.W. by the river Thames. Near the village is a bridge over the Thames, and a farmhouse, once the seat of the abbots of Abingdon, to whom the manor belonged. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is in the early English style. The charities amount to £41 per annum. Here is a training college for schoolmasters, a handsome building, the erection of which cost nearly £20,000, and is capable of containing 100 students. Sir George Pechell is lord of the manor.

CULHAM, UPPER, a tythg. in the hund. of Binfield. in the co. of Berks, 2 miles E. of Henley-on-Thames.

CULLAGH, a bog in the bar. of Moycarnon, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is bordered by the river Suck, and is about 2½ miles long.

CULLAHILL, a vil. in the bar. of Clarmallagh, in Queen's County, 4 miles S.W. of Durrow.

CULLEN, a par. in the co. of Banff, Scotland. It contains a town of its own name, and is bounded on the N. by the bay of Cullen, on the E. by Fordyce, on the S. by Deskford, and on the W. by Rathven. Part of Rathven, 3 miles long by 2 broad, is annexed quoad sacra to this parish. The surface rises gradually from the bold cliffs on the sea-coast to the conical hill called the Bin of Cullen, which has an elevation of 1,070 feet, and serves as a landmark to mariners. The soil is fertile, well-drained and cultivated, and the climate is dry and very salubrious, by reason of the hills on the S. and W. attracting the vapours from the sea. The barony of Seafield, anciently called Ogilvie, gives title to the Earl of Seafield, the proprietor of the whole parish, whose seat, Cullen House, is beautifully situated on the N. of Cullen Water, near the town of Cullen. The gardens, pleasure-grounds, and plantations surrounding it are very beautiful, and command extensive views. They have been subsequently enlarged by the removal of the old town of Cullen. Near the mouth of Cullen Water, at a place called the Bauds of Cullen, a bloody battle, known as the Battle of the Bauds, is said to have been fought in 960 with the Danes, in which they were routed, and Indulfus, King of the Scots, was slain. The herring and other fisheries are largely prosecuted. This par. is in the presb. of Fordyce, and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the Earl of Seafield. The stipend of the minister is £156. There is a chapel-of-ease, called Seafield church, in the Rathven district, which is also in the patron. of the earl. There is a Free church in Cullen. This town is a burgh of considerable antiquity, having had privileges granted it by Robert I. Like Banff, it was at one time a constabulary under the Earl of Findlater, as hereditary constable. It is now governed by a provost and 12 councillors. Cullen unites with Elgin, Banff, Kintore, Peterhead, Inverury, and Macduff, in sending a member to parliament. The population in 1861 was 1818, inhabiting 338 houses. The children at school at the same census were 374. The town stands on the road from Banff to Elgin, near the head of Cullen Bay, 14 miles W. of Banff, and 58 N.W. of Aberdeen. It was anciently called Invercullen, and is now divided into two parts; the Fishertown, or Seatown, situated on low ground, to the W. of the new town, which is built on higher ground. The new town is regularly planned and laid out, having been begun in 1822, when the old town was removed to make room for the improvements at Cullen House. The harbour is convenient, and has a depth of 12 feet near the mouth at spring tides, and of 8½ feet at neap tides. The trade in fish is extensive, and large quantities of cod, ling, skate, and haddocks are cured and taken to Montrose, Dundee, and Leith in the Cullen boats. The Edinburgh and Inverness steamers call at Cullen. Fairs for cattle and horses are held in January, May, September, and November.

CULLEN, a par. in the bar. of Kinalea, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Kinsale. Crosshaven is its post town. It is situated near the sea-coast, and Derryleeve Hill takes up a considerable portion of the surface. The soil is good, and might be managed with greater advantage. The little stream Ringabella traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Templebready, £90, in the patron. of the Dean of Cork. The nearest church is at Ballymartle, to which place Cullen is attached in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Here is a small private day school for boys and girls. There are some remains of the old church standing. Glynney is the principal seat.

CULLEN, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Millstreet. Kanturk is its nearest post town. It is situated on the river Blackwater, and the surface is boggy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Drumtariffe, £580, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Drumtariffe, but the Roman Catholic chapel is at Cullen. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is united to Drumtariffe and Millstreet. There are four hedge-schools. In the vicinity are the ruins of an old castle, built by the O'Kiefs, of a nunnery, and of the ancient church. Near Keale have been found relics indicative of a battle having been fought here.

CULLEN, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Tipperary. Oola is its post town. It extends along the western boundary of the barony. The parish consists of good soil, and is traversed by the road from Tipperary to Limerick. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emly, val. with three others, £556, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a plain ancient edifice. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Lattin. There is a parish school for boys and girls, also a hedge-school. The village has a police station, and was formerly a market town. Fairs are held on the 29th October, and in May or June, as appointed.

CULLENAGH, a bar. in Queen's County, Ireland, contains the pars. of Ballyroan, Dysartgallen, Kilcolmanbeack, and parts of Abbeyleix, Clonenagh, Fossy or Timahoe, Kilcolmanbane, and Rosconnell, comprising 44,095 acres.

CULLENAGH, a bog in the bar. of Maryborough, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is near 3 miles long, and its area is 1,524 acres. The rivers Barrow and Nore on either side carry off its superfluous waters. In the vicinity is a mountain of the same name.

CULLENSTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Bantry, in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Clonroche.

CULLENSWOOD, a vil. in the par. of St. Peter, bar. of Uppercross, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, a little over a mile S.E. of Dublin. A chapel-of-ease was erected here in 1826 by Lord Mount-Sandford. It was here that 500 settlers from Bristol were put to death by a body of Irish on Easter Monday, 1209. It is supposed that the phrase "Black Monday" originates from this incident.

CULLENWAINE, a par. partly in the bar. of Clonlisk, in King's County, and partly in the bar. of Ikerrin, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Limerick, and contains the post town of Moneygall. Much bog occurs within the limits of the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Templeharry, £240, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Moneygall, united to that of Dunkerrin. There is a free school for girls, a school supported by the rector, and one private school. The chief seats in the neighbourhood are Greenhills, Silverhills, and Rathmay. A fair is held on the 20th August and 11th November.

CULLERCOATES, a tnshp. in the par. of Tynemouth, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles N. of Shields, and three-quarters of a mile from Tynemouth. The village, which is small, is included within the boundaries of the borough of Tynemouth. It is situated on the coast, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen, excepting in the summer season, when many visitors resort to it as a watering-place. There are several new houses, and a terrace has been erected upon a cliff overlooking the sea, for the accommodation of visitors. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £220, in the patron. of the Duke of Northumberland. The church has been recently built. There is a place of worship used by the Independents and Primitive Methodists jointly.

CULLICUDDEN, an ancient par. now united with Kirkmichael, and forming the W. part of the par. of Resolis, in the cos. of Cromarty and Ross, Scotland. It was a separate parish until shortly after 1688.

CULLIFORD-TREE, a hund. in the Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, contains the pars. of Buckland-Ripers, Broadway, West Knighton, Radipole, Osmington, Whitcombe, West Stafford, Winterbourne-Monckton, Winterbourne-Herringstone, and parts of Winterbourne-Cerne and Winterbourne-Chickerell, comprising 11,920 acres.

CULLIN, a lough in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, near Foxford. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad.

CULLINGWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Bingley, upper div. of the wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles from Bingley. The village is small, and the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen trade. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

CULLINGWORTH GATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Wilsden, par. of Bradford, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N.W. of Bradford. It is situated on the river Aire.

CULLODEN, an estate in the N. of the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Inverness. It is memorable as containing Culloden Moor, now partly cultivated, but formerly a bleak, dreary, and wild waste, on which, on the 16th of April, 1746, the army of Prince Charles Edward, the son of the Pretender to the crown of Great Britain, was totally defeated by the royal troops under the Duke of Cumberland. Prince Charles drew up his army about 1½ mile S. of Culloden House. The locality is well indicated by the green graves of the slain, and by an obelisk erected in 1850. By this battle the hopes of the House of Stuart were completely annihilated. Culloden House stands on the border of the moor. Prince Charles slept in it the night before the battle. It is the seat of the ancient family of Forbes, and the owner of it in 1746 was Duncan Forbes, Lord President of the Court of Session, whose advice previously given to the government, if it had been followed, might have prevented the rebellion, and whose influence in the Highlands was greatly instrumental in suppressing it.

CULLOHILL, a vil. in the par. of Aughmacart, bar. of Upper Ossory, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Here are remains of an old castle. Fairs are held on the 27th May and 2nd October.

CULLOMPTON, or COLLUMPTON, a market town and par. in the hund. of Hayridge, in the co. of Devon, 10½ miles N.E. of Exeter, and 7 N. of Tiverton. It is situated on the river Culme and the Great Western railway, on which it has a station. It contains Mutterton, Langford, and Ponsford, and in the Saxon times belonged to King Alfred. At the Conquest it was given by William I. to Battle Abbey, in Sussex. The town received a charter from Edward I. conferring on it the privilege of a market and fairs, which was confirmed by his successor. Its situation in a valley, surrounded by an expanse of level country, gives it a specially pleasing appearance. It consists of about 800 houses, some of them old, arranged in one principal street, which is indifferently paved, but well supplied with water, and contains a bank. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of woollen cloth, kerseymere, and serge, and in the paper-mills and tanneries. The parishioners annually appoint six constables, three for the town, and three for the rest of the parish. Cullompton is a polling-place for the northern division of the county, and a petty sessions town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £400, in the patron. of Mrs. Chave. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a stone structure in the perpendicular style of architecture, with fine carved oak roof, and contains a beautiful screen and rood-loft, also a handsome chapel. The charities amount to £223 per annum. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Unitarians, and Independents have each a chapel. Here is a National school. The Black Down hounds have a meet here. W. C. Grant, Esq., is lord of the manor. A cattle market is held on the first Saturday in every month, excepting May and December, when a fair is held, commencing the first Wednesday in each of these months.

CULLOW, a locality near Kirriemuir, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, where fairs are held on the last Friday of April, and on the Monday of October before the fair of Kirriemuir.

CULLYBRACKEY, a post vil. in the par. of Ahoghill, bar. of Lower Toome, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Ballymena. It is an improving place, situated on the river Maine. There are bleach-grounds and dye-works.

CULLYHANNA, a post vil. in the par. of Creggan, bar. of Upper Fews, in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland.

CULM-DAVY, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Hemyock, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles N.E. of Culmstock. It is situated on the river Culme, and has a small chapel.

CULME, a river in the co. of Devon, rises in the Blackdown Hills, and runs 25 miles to the river Ex, near Exeter. It is a hunt for the East Devon otter-hounds.

CULMINGTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 4½ miles N. of Ludlow, its post town, and 10 from Bishop's Castle. It is situated on the river Corve, and contains Burley, Seifton, and Bache. The village is small. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £800, in the patron. of W. J. Clement, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure. The charities amount to £1 per annum. Near here is a Roman camp. George Hood, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CULMORE, a townland and postal vil. within the libs. and co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, near Newtown Limavady, and about 5 miles E. of Londonderry. It is situated on the W. of Lough Foyle, and has a station on the Belfast and Coleraine railway. Culmore Fort is supposed to have been first built in the 16th century; it underwent considerable alterations in the first quarter of the 17th century, and in the memorable siege of Londonderry it was regarded as a point of much importance, when it was reduced by James II. During these times the church, which is falling into ruins, was used as an hospital for the attacking party.

CULMSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Hemyock, in the co. of Devon, 6½ miles N.E. of Cullompton, and the same distance from Wellington, its post town. It is situated on the river Culme, about 4 miles distant from the Tiverton Junction station of the Great Western railway. The village is considerable, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen mills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £250, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and contains a stone screen. The charities amount to £13 per annum. Fairs are held on the 21st May and 1st October.

CULPHO, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, in the co. of Suffolk, 4½ miles N.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and 4 W. of Woodbridge station on the East Suffolk branch of the Great Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £55, in the patron. of T. B. Gurdon, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is a plain building, consisting of nave and tower. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. T. B. Gurdon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CULREACH, a vil. in the par. of Inch, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Glenluce. It is situated on the river Ryan.

CULREACH, a vil. in the par. of Whitehorn, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Whitehorn.

CULROSS, a par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It contains a royal burgh of its own name, and also the vils. of Blairburn and Low-valleyfield, in the detached district of Perthshire. It is bounded on the S. by the Firth of Forth, on the W. by Tulliallan, on the N. by Clackmannan and Saline, and on the E. by Torryburn. The outline of the parish is square, each side being about 4 miles in length. The surface is elevated and without any great inequalities. The soil is fertile and in some places rich. Potter's clay, lime-stone, and ironstone have been found. The collieries, which were formerly worked extensively by the monks of Culross Abbey, and after 1575 by Sir George Bruce, of Blairhall, are no longer profitable. One pit, which was drowned by the sea in 1625, extended a mile below the sea at high water. The landed property of the parish is divided amongst nine proprietors. The modern mansion of Castle Hill, near the Firth, occupies the site of Dunamarle Castle, the possession of the Macduffs, Thanes of Fife, where Lady Macduff and her children were murdered by order of Macbeth: other historians refer this incident to Cupar Castle. Blair Castle and Valleyfield House are modern residences. The Stirling and Dunfermline railway traverses the parish, and there is a station at East Grange. This par. is in the presb. of Dunfermline and synod of Fife. The charge is collegiate, and under the patron. of Lady Keith and Miss Preston, of Valleyfield. The stipend of the first minister is £156, and of the second minister, £117. Besides the parish church, which is very ancient, there is a Free church. There are several benefactions in this parish for aged and indigent persons. The town of Culross stands on the Firth, 22 miles W.N.W. of Edinburgh, and 4 miles E. of Kincardine. It is pleasantly situated amidst gardens, on the slope of a declivity, as seen from the sea, but a closer inspection shows it to be mean and decayed. It was formerly a place of great resort, both from the neighbouring monastery (founded in 1217 by Malcolm, Thane of Fife, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary), and subsequently as being a seat of commerce. Besides the above-mentioned extensive coal trade, it manufactured 100 tons of salt a week, and in both of these articles a large foreign trade was carried on prior to the Union. The inhabitants are now chiefly occupied in weaving linen for the Dunfermline manufacturers, and muslins for those of Glasgow. Culross was made a royal burgh in 1588, by James VI. It is governed by a provost and nine councillors, and joins with Dunfermline, Inverkeithing, Queensferry, and Stirling, in sending one member to parliament. The population of the burgh in 1851 was 605, which had decreased in 1861 to 517, though the houses had increased in the same period from 110 to 117. The number of children at school between the ages of five and fifteen were 107.

CULROY, a vil. in the par. of Maybole, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It is situated 3½ miles N. of the town of Maybole.

CULSALMOND, a par. in the district of Garioch, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is bounded by Drumblade, Forgue, Auchterless, Rayne, Oyne, and Insch. It extends 4 miles southward, with a breadth of 3 miles. The surface is drained by the Urie, and is generally level, excepting the small hills of Corsdow and Culsalmond. The soil is fertile, and there are quarries of fine blue slate. The road from Huntly to Inverary traverses the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch, synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of Sir W. Forbes, Bart. The stipend of the minister is £166. There is a Free church, a Congregational chapel, and an Episcopalian chapel.

CULTER, a par. in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is bounded on the S.E. by the co. of Peebles, and on the other sides by the pars. of Biggar, Symington, Lamington, and Crawford. Its length from N. to S. is 8 miles, with an average breadth of 4 miles. The surface to the S. rises into hills of considerable elevation, the chief of which, the Fell, is 2,330 feet above the sea; while towards the N. the surface is partly level and partly undulating, and is fertile and well cultivated. The remains of antiquity consist of circular mounds or moats, which seem to have been used as places of safety. The village of Culter stands on the road from Edinburgh to Dumfries, which traverses the parish, and has a station on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway. It is 3 miles S. of Biggar, and 17 S.W. of Peebles. This par. is in the presb. of Biggar, synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The pats. are Baillie of Lamington, and Dickson of Kilbucho. The stipend of the minister is £217. There is also a Free church.

CULTER, or LEUCHAR, a river of Aberdeenshire, Scotland. It rises in Loch Skene, and joins the Dee below Peterculter.

CULTHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Whitburn, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 20 miles from Edinburgh.

CULTRAGH, a lough, in the co. of Cavan, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Stradone.

CULTS, a par. in the district of Cupar, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It is situated in the centre of the co. and contains the vils. of Pitlessie, Cults-mill, Crossgates, Hospital-mill, and Walton. It extends little more than 2 miles northwards, with a breadth of 1½ mile. The surface is flat, sloping from the south northwards to the Eden, which forms the northern boundary. The soil is light in the northern parts, with clay in the southern. The eastern part is well wooded. Crawford Castle, the seat of the Earl of Glasgow, the principal landowner, is a magnificent Gothic edifice. Limestone and sandstone are extensively quarried. The weaving of linen employs many of the inhabitants. The Edinburgh and Northern railway passes within easy distance. This par. is in the presb. of Cupar, synod of Fife, and in the patron. of the University of St. Andrew's. The stipend of the minister is £162. There is an United Presbyterian church in Pitlessie, and a Free church for Cults and Kettle. Sir David Wilkie, the painter, was born here, his father being minister of the parish. The noble family of Lindsay-Crawford was connected with this and the neighbouring parish of Ceres from the 14th century, when they exchanged Dunnottar Castle for the Fifeshire property, then belonging to the Keiths. Lady Mary Lindsay-Crawford, who died in 1833, was the last direct descendant of the family. James Lindsay, seventh Earl of Balcarres, had the caridom of Crawford adjudged to him in 1848, by the House of Lords.

CULVENNAN, a vil. in the par. of Kirkcowan, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 9 miles N.E. of Glenluce.

CULVER CLIFFS, in the co. of Hants, at the east end of the Isle of Wight. They rise 400 feet high, commanding a fine view of the sea. In the reign of Elizabeth these cliffs were the haunt of hawks and eagles. Samphire is collected on the beach.

CULVERLANDS, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Farnham, in the co. of Surrey, 3½ miles S.E. of Farnham. It is situated on the river Wey, and is united with Telford.

CULVERLEY, an ext. par. place, in the Southampton div. of the lib. of Dibden, in the co. of Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Southampton.

CULVERSTONE-GREEN, a hmlt. in the pars. of Meopham and Ash, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles S. of Gravesend.

CULVERTHORPE, a chplry. in the par. of Haydor, wap. of Aswardhurn, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles S.W. of Sleaford, and 6 from Grantham. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the vic.* of Haydor and cur. of Kelby, £600, in the patron. of J. A. Houblon, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. Culverthorpe Hall, the seat of the Rev. C. Monkhouse, M.A., is a commodious and handsome building. J. A. Houblon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CULWORTH, a par. in the hund. of King's Sutton, in the co. of Northampton, 7 miles N.E. of Banbury, its post town, and 5 from the Cropredy station on the Great Western railway. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £528, in the patron. of W. Wilson, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient building of stone in several styles of architecture, consisting of nave, side aisles, chancel, and S. porch; it contains a handsome monument to the D'Anvers family, with several others. The charities amount to £122 per annum. The Baptists and Moravians have chapels. There is an endowed free school, and an infants' school. G. H. Crutchley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

CULZEAN CASTLE, in the par. of Kirkoswald, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Maybole. It was built by Earl Cassilis towards the close of the 18th century, on a rock 100 feet high, after designs by Adams, and is now the seat of the Marquis of Ailsa. Beneath the castle are extensive caves, famed in story as the Fairies' haunt.

CUMBER, or LOWER CUMBER, a par. in the bar. of Tirkeeran, in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Londonderry, its post town. It is situated on the road from Londonderry to Dungiven. The surface is very mountainous and boggy, and several streams take their course through the interior; the principal of which are the Faughan, rising in Upper Cumber, and Burntallaght, with its fine fall, known as the Niss. Several handsome bridges facilitate the intercourse of the district. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £196, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1795. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is partly taken with Glendermot, and partly with Upper Cumber, and has a chapel at Mullaghbuoy. At Breakfield is a Presbyterian meeting-house. There are schools for boys and girls at Killaloo and Fawney, supported by the rector, and some others are within the parish, one of which was founded and endowed by the Grocers' Company. Lower Cumber was detached from Upper in 1794, and belongs chiefly to the Irish Society. The principal seats are Oaks, Oaks Lodge, The Cross, and the Glebe House. There are Druidical remains at Slaght-manus and Mullaghbuoy; and at Listress is a curious artificial cave or grotto.

CUMBER, or UPPER CUMBER, a par. in the bars. of Tirkeeran and Lower Strabane, in the cos. of Londonderry and Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 9 miles S.E. of Londonderry. Claudy is its post town. The surface is very mountainous, rising to a height of 2,236 feet above the sea-level, at Mount Sawel, part of the Sperrin range. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £1,225, in the patron. of the bishop. It forms the corps of a prebend in Derry Cathedral. The church, erected in 1757, is a commodious structure, and has a small tower. In 1831 the district of Learmount was founded, and eight townlands were detached from this parish for the purpose. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Gortscreagan and Claudy, where is also a meeting-house for Presbyterians. In the Roman Catholic arrangement a part of the parish is united to Banagher and a part to Lower Cumber. Here are several schools, both parochial and private, two of which are endowed by the Fishmongers' Company. The seats are Learmount and Cumber House. There is much valuable timber in the grounds of the former.

CUMBERLAND, the extreme N.W. co. of England, bounded on the N. by Dumfriesshire and Roxburghshire, on the E. by Northumberland and Durham, on the S.E. by Westmoreland, Lancashire, and the estuary of the Dudden, and on the W. by the Irish Sea and the Solway Frith. Its greatest length from S.W. to N.E. is 74 miles, and its breadth 34 miles. It contains 1,565 square miles, or 1,001,273 acres, being about 215 miles in circuit. It lies between 54° 11′ and 55° 12′ N. lat., and between 2° 17′ and 3° 37′ W. long. In form it is an irregular rhomboid, with the acute angles at the N. and S. extremities. During the Roman occupation of this island, Cumberland was inhabited by the Voluntii and the Brigantes, a brave and independent race, who gave very great trouble to the invaders. Ostorius Scapula, and Didius, who succeeded him, A.D. 55, defeated them several times, but they again revolted during the reign of Vespasian, under Venutius, the principal British leader after the capture of Caractacus. This revolt was quelled by Petilius Cerealis, but the country was not entirely subdued till Hadrian's expedition in A.D. 121, when he built the "Picts' Wall," to protect them and the other British tribes from the incessant forays of the Picts and Caledonians. This wall, which connected a few forts built about 40 years previously by Agricola, was rebuilt in 210 by Severus, who added a stone wall close to it, the former one being merely a mound of earth. Traces of it are seen in many places, from its commencement at Bowness, on the Solway Frith, to the point where it leaves the county near the Rose Hill station. There are also many remains of Roman camps and stations, especially at Old Carlisle, Old Penrith, Maryport, Bewcastle, Salkeld, and Lazonby; the two latter were connected by a road. On the withdrawal of the Romans, the whole country was devastated by the Scots and Picts, and during the early Saxon period by the Danes. At that time it formed part of the kingdom of Northumbria, but retained the right of having a separate ruler. In 945, Edmund I. granted it to Malcolm, King of Scotland, but at the Norman Conquest it was considered as part of England, although, owing to the repeated raids of its northern neighbours, it was so poor that William I. remitted all the taxes, and the county is not rated in Domesday Book. Henry I. granted it to Ranulph de Meschines, Earl of Chester, on condition of his defending the borders; and in a conference at York (1237) Henry III. assigned lands to the value of £200 to the Scots, in satisfaction of all their claims on the county, but a large tract was still considered as debatable ground, and was subject to the alternate ravages of the Scots and English. Edward I. died at Burgh-by-Sands, while passing through the county on his way to Scotland. During the contest between the house of Stuart and the parliament, Cumberland took the royalist side, and also espoused the cause of the Pretender in 1715. In 1745, the city of Carlisle surrendered to Charles Edward, and being retaken by the Duke of Cumberland, the leaders in the movement were severely punished by him.—The scenery of the whole of this county is very beautiful, and affords considerable variety. The northern portion, around Carlisle, is generally flat or undulating, the soil consisting principally of dry loam, suitable for the cultivation of grain and turnips; but as the S. is approached the country becomes more and more rugged and barren, and instead of corn and turnip fields, and pasture-lands surrounded by hedges, nothing is seen but short green turf, with grey rocks cropping out here and there, and where enclosure is attempted, the only fences are "stone dikes," that is, walls of loose stones, about 5 feet high. In the S.W. portion are the highest mountains, and some of the largest and most beautiful lakes and waterfalls in England. There the soil is frequently boggy, alternating with mossy gravel, covered to a large extent with heather. On the sides of the smaller hills, however, there is a fair proportion of good, dry, brown loam, very suitable for cultivation. The more elevated districts are used mostly for pasturage. The cattle are of both the long and short horned and the Galloway breeds; the sheep chiefly belong to the native class, called "Herdwicks," of a rather small size, with speckled faces and legs, and short coarse wool. Excepting a few of the rams, they are all polled. Some of the farmers in these parts have, within the last few years, turned their attention to the cultivation of the high lands, and the moors in the lowland districts, and many acres have been reclaimed, which before would grow no crops. Much of the produce is exported from Whitehaven, Workington, Port Carlisle, and Maryport. It consists chiefly of cattle, sheep, poultry, potatoes, grain, butter, and bacon. The dairy produce is not very abundant, as the dairies are all on a small scale, but it is of a very high quality, and always fetches a good price. Many of the farms belong to the occupiers, and in some cases have been for several generations in the same families. The owners of such farms are called "Estatesmen," or sometimes by the Scotch name, "Lairds," and hold them under the lords of manors by customary tenure, subject to fines and heriots. The farming has been much improved since the formation of the various agricultural societies, the first of which was founded at Workington by Mr. Curwen. At Carlisle, Penrith, and Whitehaven there are horticultural societies, which are doing all in their power to encourage the cultivation of fruit and flowers.—The principal mountains are Sca Fell, 3,166 feet; Helvellyn, 3,055; Skiddaw, 3,022; Bow Fell, E. of Sca Fell, 2,911; Cross Fell, 2,901; the Pillar, 2,893; Red Pike, 2,850; Saddleback, 2,787; Grisdale Pike, 2,756; High Pike, near Hesket-Newmarket, 2,101; Causey Pike, 2,040; Black Comb, near Bootle, 1,919; and Dent Hill, near Egremont, 1,110. From Skiddaw, Sca Fell, and Helvellyn can be seen, in clear weather, the Irish Sea, the mountains of Wales and Scotland, with the Isle of Man, and the Irish coast beyond. Snow is frequently seen on these three mountains until the months of May and June. On the Cross Fell ridge a body of clouds is frequently seen half way down the fells, quite stationary. This is called by the people the "helm," and opposite to it is usually seen another cloud, called the "helm bar," in a state of agitation, caused by a partial wind. When this is dispersed, the helm also is broken up, and the wind rushes down into the valley, frequently inflicting great damage on the crops. Grouse and a few black game are to be found on all the mountains.—The principal lakes are, Ulleswater, Thirlemere, Bassenthwaite Water, Derwentwater, Buttermere, Crummock Water, Loweswater, Ennerdale, and Wastwater. Ulleswater is the largest of these, and measures 9 miles in length, by 1 mile in breadth. The others vary from 1 mile to 4 miles in length, and from half a mile to 1 mile in breadth. All are very deep; Wastwater, the deepest, being 270 feet. Ennerdale, Ulleswater, Buttermere, and Crummock Water contain char, as well as trout, pike, and perch. The three last-named species are to be found in all the tarns and lakes of the county. Chub are also to be found in Ulleswater, but in no other lake in England. The best known of the numerous mountain tarns are, Overwater, near Uldale; Tarn Wadling, near High Hesket; Talkin Tarn, in Hayton parish; Martin Tarn, in Wigton parish; Burnmoor Tarn, between Sca and Screes fells; and Styhead Tarn, near Borrowdale. These all abound in trout and eels, some containing also perch and pike. Tarn

Wadling affords plenty of fine carp. The larger lakes are visited in the winter by numerous flocks of wild ducks, geese, swans, and other fowl. The abruptness of the surface has caused many waterfalls, of which the finest are—Scale Force, near Crummock Water, which has a fall of 156 feet in one leap, and then of 44 feet over rocks of sienite; Barrow Cascade, 124 feet; Lodore, near Keswick, 100; Sour-Milk Ghyll, near Buttermere, 90; Airy Force, near Ullswater, 80; and the Nunnery Cascade, Croglin, 60. There are a great number of rivers of various sizes in this county. The largest is the Eden, about 35 miles in length. It rises in the Ravenstonedale fells, on the borders of Yorkshire and Westmoreland, and unites with the Eamont about 9 miles from its parting with Ullswater; it then flows right across the county, and falls into the Solway Frith. It passes Eden Hall, the seat of the Musgrave family, Kirkoswald, Nunnery Park, Armathwaite, Corby Castle, Warwick Bridge, Carlisle, and Grinsdale. Near its mouth is the monument erected to King Edward I. The Roman Wall crosses the river a short distance below Carlisle. The scenery along the banks is of great beauty, throughout the whole of its course, and it abounds in trout and salmon. It receives several smaller streams: the Caldew, which rises S. of Skiddaw, and passes by Hesket-Newmarket, Sebergham, Rose Castle, and Dalston, and, after a course of 24 miles, joins the Eden at Carlisle. This river is remarkable from the fact of its flowing from Haltcliff Bridge to Sebergham, a distance of about 4 miles, in a subterranean passage. The Peteril rises near Greystock Park, and enters the Eden a little N. of Carlisle, running the whole way nearly parallel to the road from Penrith. The Irthing forms, for some 12 miles, the boundary between Cumberland and Northumberland, entering the former county near Gilsland Spa, and passing Upper and Nether Denton, Naworth Castle, Lanercost, or Leonard Cost, Irthington, and Edmond Castle, reaches the Eden near Holmgate. The Esk rises in Scotland, and enters Cumberland at its point of junction with the Liddel, which river divides the two kingdoms of England and Scotland for about 8 miles. It then flows by Kirk Andrews, Netherby, and Longtown, and receives the Line near its entrance into the Solway Frith at Rockcliff Marsh. The Line is formed by the union of two streams—the Black and White Line—which rise on the borders of Scotland, in the Christenbury Crags. The Sark is for about 6 miles the border-line between Cumberland and Scotland, near Solway Moss. The Wampool and the Waver form one estuary of considerable size. The former flows from the Brocklebank Fells, past Old Carlisle and Wigton. The town of Kirkbride is close to its mouth. The Waver rises in the same neighbourhood, and takes a similar course. The Ellen reaches the sea near Maryport, after a course of about 18 miles, passing on its way Ireby, Bolton, Aspatria, Ellenborough, and Netherhall. The Cocker forms the lakes of Buttermere and Crummockwater, and at Cockermouth receives the Derwent, which rises in Borrowdale, and flows through Derwentwater, and Bassenthwaite Water. The united streams join the sea at Workington. The Greta has its source in a tarn on Saddleback, and flowing in a very circuitous direction, passes Threlkeld, and joins the Derwent at Keswick. The Irt, which flows through Wastdale, was once celebrated for the beauty of the pearls found in its waters. The Dudden has its source at Wrynose Fell, and for about 20 miles is the boundary between Cumberland and Lancashire. There is a second Esk, which flows from near Sea Fell to join the sea at Ravenglass. The Tees for a short distance divides Cumberland from Westmoreland and Durham. There are many smaller streams, among them the Croglin, Nent, Mure, End, Carn, and others. During the last five years salmon have been very much on the increase, and this season (1863) many large "takes" have been made in the Solway, Eden, and Derwent. In the Eden the season commences on the 1st January; in the Solway and Esk on the 10th March, closing in all three on the 25th September. In the Derwent, however, the limits are the 10th February and 10th October. As in the other western counties, showers are very frequent and copious, more so in the southern division of the county, where the mountains collect the clouds and cause them to discharge the rain which they hold over the valleys. There is least rain in April, and most from July to September. At Carlisle the annual mean quantity of rain is 30 inches, at Wigton 34 inches, at Whitehaven 50 inches, and at Keswick 68 inches. The cold in winter is very severe, the snow remaining till quite the end of spring upon the mountains; but in spite of this and of the dampness, it seems a very healthy county, and instances of remarkable longevity are not uncommon.—The minerals of this county are numerous. It belongs to the red marl district, which runs by the western base of the range of hills extending from the Tweed to Derbyshire. The most common formation is white and red sandstone, the latter predominating. A strip of carboniferous limestone, bordered by another of coal, runs across from Penrith to Ireby, thence to Cockermouth, and the coal extends to Maryport and Whitehaven. At Carlisle these two minerals are again found, the intermediate space being sandstone. The mountainous districts consist principally of granite, sienite, greenstone, hypersthene, sandstone, limestone, and slate. Granite of the grey variety is found near Skiddaw, and in the beds of the Caldew and Greta. Various coloured marbles are met with: at Lip Stainton and Dacre, brown; at Kirkoswald, blue; at Cross Fell, green; and in the Peteril, yellow. At Ambroth Fell, near Keswick, and in St. John's Vale, red porphyry is found, and the same stone occurs at Borrowdale, Eskdale, Patterdale, Sea Fell, and Helvellyn, associated with grey slate and hornstone. The public roads near Newbiggin are repaired with greenstone, found at Barrock. At the former place, and at Coat Hill, near Carlisle, there are extensive gypsum quarries. Near Berrier, and on the N. bank of the Derwent, basaltic rock is noticed. In several parts of the county there are traces of the action of glaciers, or torrents, for boulders are frequently found belonging to formations which only occur at a great distance from their present situation; for instance, fragments of the rocks in Lunerdale and the vale of the Cocker are found on the W. coast, and boulders from the Dumfries granite in the eastern parts. The mineral productions are very valuable, including coal, lead, silver, iron, copper, and plumbago, and afford work to a large number of hands. Limestone is burnt in large quantities for exportation.—There are 28 collieries in the county, of which 12 are near Maryport, 8 near Workington, and 4 near Whitehaven. There are also 2 near Wigton, 1 at Aspatria, and 1 at Harrington. At Whitehaven the principal entrance to the mines is by a long passage hewn in the rock, at the foot of a hill, with galleries intersecting it. The King-pit, the deepest in the mine, runs under the sea to a depth of 960 feet, the water above being deep enough to allow a passage to ships of a considerable size. At Workington the pits are not so deep, being usually from 240 to 500 feet. Iron-ore is also very plentiful near Whitehaven. There are 18 mines in the vicinity; the most noted being Cleator, near Egremont, where the band of ore lies at the depth of about 70 feet, and is from 24 to 25 feet thick. This mine supplies the Carron Foundry in Scotland. Near Alston there are more than 40 lead-mines, most of them belong to Greenwich Hospital, to which they were granted on the attainder and execution of their former owner, the Earl of Derwentwater, in 1716. Lead has been also discovered between Saddleback and Skiddaw, at Newlands and Thornthwaite, and near Buttermere. Silver is frequently found in the same locality, and though formerly neglected, is now worked to great profit; the largest yield is usually from Roughton Gill. Copper is worked at Hesket, Wythebarn, and Caldbeck. At Giller Coom, in Borrowdale, was the richest graphite or plumbago mine in the world, but it is now almost exhausted. A vein of gold was discovered near Newlands by a foreigner, in the time of Elizabeth, but was never worked, owing to a lawsuit between the queen and the Earl of Northumberland, the lord of the manor. A few precious stones, as chalcedony, garnets, jasper, cornelian, opal, and agate, are found occasionally among the rocks, especially those of the Sca Fell and Helvellyn range.—Cumberland is divided into five wards or hundreds: Eskdale, Cumberland, Leath, Allerdale-above-Derwent, and Allerdale-below-Derwent. The first three, with the city of Carlisle, form the division called East Cumberland; the latter that of West Cumberland; each division returning two members to the House of Commons. There are three parliamentary boroughs, Carlisle and Cockermouth, which return two members each, and Whitehaven, which returns one. The parishes number 106, of which several contain over 10,000 acres; St. Bees, 73,620 acres, being one of the largest parishes in England. There are 18 market towns: Carlisle, where the assizes, and Easter and Midsummer sessions, are held; Cockermouth and Penrith, where the Epiphany and Michaelmas sessions are held; Whitehaven, Wigton, Alston, Bootle, Brampton, Longtown, Aspatria, Egremont, Hesket-Newmarket, Ireby, Keswick, Kirkoswald, Maryport, Ravenglass, and Workington. Of these the first six, with Keswick, have new County Courts, and the first nine Poor-law Unions. The polling-places are, for the eastern division, Carlisle, where the elections take place, Wigton, Alston, Brampton, Longtown, Hesket-Newmarket, Kirkoswald, Dalston, and Penrith; for the western division, Cockermouth, where the elections take place, Bootle, Aspatria, Egremont, and Keswick. The local government is administered by a lord-lieutenant, 12 deputy-lieutenants, a sheriff, and about 85 magistrates. The county is included in the Northern circuit, and is chiefly in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle, in the province of York, excepting a few parishes in the diocese of Chester, and the parish of Alston in that of Durham. There are three rural deaneries—Penrith, Wigton, and Carlisle—and over 160 churches and chapels belonging to the Church. According to the census of 1861, the county contained 40,532 inhabited houses, and 205,276 persons, showing an increase in population of 9,784 persons since 1851. As has been already stated, most of the population are engaged in agriculture and mining; next to those occupations the most important is the cotton manufacture, carried on principally at Carlisle. There are also several mills on the Caldew. Coarse linen and sailcloth are also produced at Whitehaven, and woollen-cloth at Keswick. The paper and earthenware manufactures are carried on, but not to any great extent. At Whitehaven there are a few ship-building yards.—Some of the antiquities, as the Roman walls, have already been mentioned while sketching the history of the county. In addition to these, many objects of interest have been turned up. There are three Druidical temples still standing: one near Keswick, a circle of fifty granite stones, about 8 feet high; one near Cumwhitton, called "Gray Yauds," a circle of 52 yards diameter, containing 88 stones not more than 4 feet high; and a third near Little Salkeld, called "Long Meg and her Daughters," a circle about 150 yards in diameter, the largest stone being 17 feet in height. There are also two or three circles, at Black Comb; a barrow and a rocking-stone at Souden Head; an old Danish obelisk near Bewcastle; and inscriptions at Netherby, Ellenborough, and other places. On the Scotch borders there are many martello towers, or Peel Houses, as they are locally called, of three or four stories high, with one room on each floor. They were built as watch-towers and places of refuge during a raid, and most of them are very ancient. There are several fine specimens of monastic houses in the county. The Augustine priory at Carlisle was founded at a very early time, and destroyed by the Danes during the Saxon period, but was rebuilt on a much larger scale by William II. The same king also founded a Benedictine nunnery at Armathwaite. Ralph de Meschines founded two houses, a Benedictine monastery at Wetheral, and a Cistercian abbey at Calder, near Egremont. His son William rebuilt the Benedictine house at St. Bees (Bega), which, like most of the early churches in the northern counties, had been burnt by the Danes. Part of this building is now used as a school of Divinity. At Holme Cultram was a Cistercian abbey, founded by Henry, the son of David King of Scotland, A.D. 1150. At Lanercost and Penrith were Austin priories, the former founded by Robert, Lord of Gillesland, in 1169, the latter during the reign of Edward II. Several of the parish churches are of very ancient date; those at Bridekirk and Dearham are remarkable for the antiquity of their fonts; the churchyard at the latter place contains an old sculptured cross. Aspatria, Torpenhow, and Kirklinton present good specimens of the Norman style. Brigham church, dedicated to St. Bridget, contains some very handsome windows. The church at Cockermouth was one of the finest in the county, but was unfortunately destroyed by fire in 1850. Penrith church was rebuilt in 1722, but the old tower is still standing. It is chiefly remarkable for the portraits of Richard Plantagenet and his wife in stained glass, and for the grave of Ewain, the giant, supposed to be of the 6th century. At Newton-Arlosh, Burgh-by-Sands, and Great Salkeld, the church towers are fortified, to serve as places of refuge. As might be expected in such an unquiet country, castles are very frequent, among which we may mention Naworth Castle, the old seat of the lords of Gilsland, built in the reign of Edward III., and famous as being the residence of Lord William Howard, or "Belted Will;" Kirkoswald and Dacre, both of which belonged to the Dacre family; Wulstey, where the famous Michael Scott resided; Rockcliffe, the property of the Radcliffes; Millom, Egremont, Cockermouth, and others.—The principal seats of the nobility and gentry are the following:—Whitehaven Castle, of the Earl of Lonsdale; Gowbarrow Park, of the Duke of Norfolk; Rose Castle, of the Bishop of Carlisle; Naworth Castle, of the Earl of Carlisle; Muncaster Castle, of Lord Muncaster; Armathwaite Hall, of Vane, Bart.; Crofton Place, of Brisco, Bart.; Hensingham Hall, of Senhouse, Bart.; Netherby, of Graham, Bart.; Edenhall, of the Musgrave family, to whom belongs the celebrated drinking-cup, called the "Luck of Edenhall;" Workington, where Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, landed in 1568; Greystock, Nunnery, Lamplugh, Newbiggin, Ireton, &c. &c.—There are four lines of rail, which meet at Carlisle:—The Lancaster and Carlisle, which enters the county near Penrith, and leaving it at Gretna, is continued under the name of the Caledonian; the Newcastle and Carlisle, which passes through Wetheral, Brampton, and Haltwhistle; the Maryport and Carlisle, which passes Wigton and Aspatria, and proceeds from Maryport along the coast by Workington and Whitehaven to Morecambe Bay, where it crosses the Dudden at Lady Hall. There are two branches to this line, one from Whitehaven to Egremont, another from Workington to Cockermouth. The latter branch, when completed, will connect Cockermouth, Keswick, and Penrith. The fourth line is from Carlisle to Port Carlisle and Silloth, the junction being at Drumburgh. The turnpike road from London to Glasgow and Edinburgh enters the county near Penrith, passing through Carlisle and Longtown. This, and the road from Carlisle through Brampton to Newcastle, are the old mail-coach roads. The coach-road from Whitehaven to Penrith takes a circuitous route, as it passes Cockermouth and Keswick, the whole distance being 44 miles. The only canal in the county is from Carlisle to Bowness and Port Carlisle, available for vessels of 80 tons burthen, the distance being about 11¼ miles.

CUMBERLAND FORT, in the co. of Hampshire, near Portsmouth. It is situated at the mouth of Langston harbour, commanding the entrance to Spithead.

CUMBERLAND LODGE, a mansion in Windsor Park, in the co. of Berks, so named after the Duke of Cumberland, the victor at Culloden, to whose memory a pillar has been erected close by.

CUMBERLAND WARD, in the co. of Cumberland, contains the pars. of Beaumont, Bowness, Aikton, Dalston, Grimsdale, Burgh-by-Sands, Kirk Bampton, Kirk Bridge, Kirk-Andrews-on-Eden, Rockcliffe, Orton, Thursby, Sebergham, and Wigton, with parts of St. Cuthbert, Bromfield, Stanwix, Warwick, Wetheral, and St. Mary, comprising 94,830 acres.

CUMBERNAULD, a par. in the detached part of the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland. It contains a small town of its own name, and also the vil. of Condorat. It extends 8 miles from E. to W., with a breadth of 3 or 4 miles. The surface is for the most part fertile, and limestone, freestone, ironstone and coal, are largely worked. The wall of Antoninus, and the Forth and Clyde canal, skirt the parish, and the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, and the Greenhill fork of the Caledonian railway, pass through it. This par. is in the presb. of Glasgow and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. Pat. the Viscountess of Hawarden, of Cumbernauld House. The stipend of the minister is £294. There is a Free church and an United Presbyterian church. In this district was to be found, in the end of the 16th century, the remainder of the ancient Caledonian forest, and the last remaining specimens of the white wild ox. The town of Cumbernauld is pleasantly situated in a valley in the centre, of the parish, 13 miles S. of Stirling, and the same distance to the N.E. of Glasgow. Many of the inhabitants are weavers. A cattle market is held here on the second Thursday of May.

CUMBERWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 9 miles N.E. of Spilsby, and 3½ S.E. of Alford, its post town and railway station. The parish is of small extent, and contains only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the rect.* of Anderby £548, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a neat building. The charities amount to £2 per annum. There are chapels for Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, and Reformed Wesleyans. Catchmill, Grantloft, and Helsey are places here.

CUMBERWORTH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the pars. of Silkstone and High Hoyland, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles S.E. of Huddersfield, and 5 E. of Holmfirth. It contains the hmlt. of Scissett. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring collieries and ironworks. The living is a don. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £148, in the patron. of W. B. Beaumont, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient Norman structure. The charities amount to £4 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. There is a National school.

CUMBERWORTH-HALF, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Burton, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles S.E. of Huddersfield. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in manufactures.

CUMBRAY, a par. in the district and co. of Bute, Scotland. It comprises the islands of Great and Little Cumbray, and contains the town of Millport and the village of Newton. The two islands lie in a line, and the larger is to the N. of the smaller. They are situated in the Firth of Clyde, between the island of Bute and the coast of Ayrshire. The total area of the parish is 5,000 acres, of which 3,000 are arable. The landowners are the Earl of Glasgow and the Marquis of Bute. This par. is in the presb. of Greenock and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of the Earl of Glasgow. The stipend of the minister is £159. There are Free and Episcopalian churches, and a Baptist chapel; also an Episcopalian collegiate church, built in 1851, near the Priory, a seat of the Earl of Glasgow, and founded for a provost, a canon, and five honorary canons.

CUMBRIA, an ancient British principality including the greater part of Cumberland, and stretching northward to Strathclyde, Galloway, Kyle, Carrick, and Cunningham. It existed until the 10th century, when it was presented, as a fief of the English crown, to Malcolm, Prince of Scotland.

CUMDIVOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalston, ward of Cumberland, in the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles S.W. of Carlisle, and 7 from Wigton.

CUMINESTOWN, a postal vil. in the par. of Monquhitter, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is situated on the road from Ellon to Banff, 6 miles N.W. of New Deer. Cumine of Auchry founded it in 1763. Here is an Episcopal chapel. Fairs are held in February, April, August, October, and December.

CUMLODDEN, a par. in the district of Inverary, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It was constituted in 1853 by the junction of the eastern part of the par. of Glassary, and an adjoining part of the par. of Inverary. It is situated on the W. coast of Loch Fine. It is in the presb. of Inverary and synod of Argyle. Pats. the Duke of Argyle and Sir A. J. Campbell, Bart.

CUMMER, or KILMACREEN, a par. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Tuam, on the road to Galway. Moylough is its post town. The surface is flat and uninteresting, broken only by the numerous turloughs, which, marsh-like, can be navigated during winter, and are used as pasture lands in the summer. The par. contains the vil. of Ballinphuil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £658, in the patron. of the Bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Curraun, united to that of Belclare. Here are three public and two private schools. The principal residences are Ballybanagher, Ballinderry, Waterville, Currofin, Ardstraw, and Annagh. There are ruins of an ancient fortification, with five chambers pretty perfect; also remains of Ballinderry Castle.

CUMMERAGH, or MONAVOULAGH, a chain of mountains, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, extending across the middle of the co. between Clonmel and Carrick-on-Suir. Several lakes on the summit of these mountains lend much to their picturesque appearance. Among the solitude of these hills General Blakeney passed the greater portion of his days.

CUMMERSDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary, city of Carlisle, in the co. of Cumberland, 2½ miles S.W. of Carlisle. It is pleasantly situated on the river Caldew, and has a station on the Maryport and Carlisle railway, where trains stop on Saturdays. An extensive trade is carried on in flour. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in calico and furniture printing, and in cotton spinning.

CUMMERTREES, a par. in the district of Annandale, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and also the vils. of Powfoot and Kelhead. It is bounded on the S. by the Solway Firth, and on the other sides by the pars. of Annan, Hoddam, St. Mungo, Dalton, and Ruthwell. It extends near 5 miles in length from E. to W., with a breadth of 4½ miles. The surface is for the most part flat, but the soil, as regards fertility and the labour necessary to be bestowed on it, is very various. The coast is flat, the only feature being Queensberry Bay, which affords shelter for small vessels during N.W. winds. Fish of various sorts are sometimes taken in large quantities, and the vast expanse of sand, stretching 7 miles across the Firth to Cumberland, presents a grand sight when the advancing tide rushes along with a roaring sound and with elevated crest, to reassert its dominion over the shallow Firth. There is a mineral spring at Cummertrees Mill, and the climate, though moist, is very salubrious. Limestone and sandstone are abundant and are quarried. The greater part of the parish belongs to the Marquis of Queensberry, who has a beautiful seat called Kinmount. There is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, which traverses the parish. The village of Cummertrees, remarkable for its beauty, is situated about 4 miles W. of Annan. Hoddam Castle is situated near the river Annan, at the northern boundary of the parish. It is remarkable for the thickness of its walls; and was built by the powerful family of Herries in the 15th century, and commands a beautiful view. A short distance to the S. of Hoddam Castle, on a hill which is the highest ground in the parish, is the Tower of Repentance. This building is square, 25 feet in height, and commands a view of 30 miles radius. Watch-fires anciently burned upon its summit, to give warning of invasion from England. This par. is in the presb. of Annan and synod of Dumfries, in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £158, with 24 (Scotch) acres of glebe. There are three schools.

CUMMINGSTON, or PORT CUMMING, a small vil. in the par. of Duffus, in the co. of Moray, Scotland. It is situated a little E. of Burghead.

CUMMOCK, a vil. in the par. of Mearns, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Neilson.

CUMNER, or CUMNOR, a par. in the hund. of Hormer, in the co. of Berks, 5½ miles N.W. of Abingdon. It is situated on the river Thames, near the Great Western railway. The parish is of large extent and hilly. It is divided into ten tythgs., and formerly belonged to the Abbots of Abingdon, whose lands can still be traced by the remains of the crosses which marked the boundaries. The village or town is built on the brow of a hill, commanding extensive views over the counties of Oxford and Gloucester. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, in the patron. of the Earl of Abingdon. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, consists of nave, aisle, chancel, a chapel on the south side, and square tower; it contains a fine altar tomb to the memory of Anthony Forster, and an old chain bible. A new school-house was built and opened in June, 1861, by Mr. Spencer, then vicar. The charities amount to £81 per annum. Cumnor Hall, the ancient seat of the Abbots of Abingdon, was the scene of the murder of Amy Robsart, Countess of Leicester, by Varney, at the instigation of her husband; the favourite of Queen Elizabeth. The Hall is now entirely demolished. The Earl of Abingdon is lord of the manor.

CUMNOCK, a town in the par. of Old Cumnock, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It stands at the junction of Glasnock Water with the Lugar, 16 miles E. of Ayr, and is situated in a hollow. The viaduct of the Glasgow and South-Western railway, which crosses the Lugar a quarter of a mile above the town, presents a very magnificent and romantic appearance. It is 170 feet in height, and has 14 arches, 9 of which have a span of 50 feet. Plans have been prepared for a new church to be erected in the town. Various branches of industry give employment to the inhabitants, among which may be mentioned iron-works, weaving, the making of threshing machines; a pottery, at which a brown ware of superior quality is made; and wooden snuff and other boxes and articles, which last have rendered the name of Cumnock famous, from their delicate construction and elegant finish. This trade in wooden articles was, however, so profitable that it has left the town. Twenty-five years ago a solid foot of wood, value 3s., could be manufactured into boxes worth £100. This town was made a burgh of barony in 1509 by James IV. Sheriff's courts are held in it four times a year, and petty sessions for eight parishes. Fairs for various purposes are held in the months of January, February, March, June, July, October, November, and December.

CUMNOCK, NEW, a par. in the district of Kyle, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 67 miles from Edinburgh, and 55 from Glasgow by the Glasgow and South-Western railway, which has a station in the village. It is situated at the head of the rivers Nith and Aften, and is 12 miles long by 8 broad. The surface is hilly, and beautifully diversified with three lakes, which afford excellent fishing. Aften Water, celebrated by Burns, rises under Black Larghill, and runs through Glen Aften to the river Nith. Besides the vil. of New Cumnock—which is a considerable place, with two banks, a church, Free church, &c.—the par. contains the hmlts. of Aften-Bridgend, Mansfield, and Pathhead. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the working of lead, lime, coal, and graphite, all of which are found in this par.; the coal, however, is of inferior quality, called glance coal. The par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and in the patron. of the Marquis of Bute. The minister's stipend is £200.

CUMNOCK, OLD, a par. in the district of Kyle, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 62 miles from Edinburgh, and 49½ from Glasgow by the Glasgow and South-Western railway, which has a station here. It is situated on Lugar Water, near Aird's Moss. The par. is 10 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the town of Cumnock, noted for the manufacture of plane-tree snuff-boxes. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in working stone, lime, coal, and lead, which are found in great abundance. The Marquis of Bute takes the title of baron from Terrenzean Castle, a fine ruin in this parish. At Borland, a seat of the Hamilton family, are the ruins of the old church. Plans have been prepared for a new parish church, to be built on the old site, by Maitland Wardrop, Esq., of Edinburgh. The par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and in the patron. of the Marquis of Bute. The minister's stipend is £218. Fairs for the sale of horses, cattle, pigs, &c., are held weekly during the months of January, February, November, and December; and monthly in March, June, July, and October.

CUMREW, a par. in the ward of Eskdale, in the co. of Cumberland, 6½ miles from Brampton, and 11 from Carlisle, its post town. It is situated on the river Gelt, and contains the tnshps. of Cumrew Inside and Outside. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £81, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat structure. At Newbiggin, in the par. of Clogin, is a day school belonging to this place. Ancient urns and pottery have been found under Cumrew Fells, and in Cardunneth Cairn. In the vicinity are the ruins of Dunwalloght Castle, a seat of the Dacres. Brackenwaite and Alby Field are places here.

CUMWHINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wetheral, ward of Cumberland, in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Carlisle.

CUMWHITTON, a par. in the ward of Eskdale, in the co. of Cumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Brampton, and 8 from Carlisle. It includes the tnshp. of Cumwhitton, High and Low Northsceugh, Moorthwaite, and the hmlts. of Hornsby Gate and Hornsby. The village is pleasantly situated near the river Eden, in the midst of fine scenery. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £102, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an old stone building. There are two day schools, one of which is endowed, and a Sunday-school. Near here are remains of a Druidical temple, called the "Gray Yauds."

CUNDALL, a par. in the waps. of Hallikeld and Birdforth, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N.E. of Boroughbridge, its post town, and 6 from Ripon. It is situated on the western bank of the Swale, and includes the tnshps. of Cundall and Leckby, and Fawdington, with the chplry. of Norton-le-Clay. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. with the perpet. cur. of Norton-le-Clay, £59, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints. The charities amount to £34 per annum.

CUNNINGHAM, a vil. in the par. of Kirkcowan, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Wigton.

CUNNINGHAME, a district in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It is the most northern portion of the co., being bounded on the W. by the Firth of Clyde, on the N. and N.E. by the co. of Renfrew, on the E. by the co. of Lanark, and on the S. by the river Irvine, which separates it from the district of Kyle. Its length from N.W. to S.E. is 25 miles, with an extreme breadth of 13 miles. It contains the pars. of Ardrossan, Dreghorn, Dalry, Beith, Fenwick, Irvine, Kilbirnie, Kilmarnock, West Kilbride, Kilmaurs, Kilwinning, Largs, Loudoun, Stevenston, Stewarton, and part of Dunlop. The surface presents a pleasant mixture of hill and dale, and is watered by many streams, the chief of which are the Irvine, the Rye, the Garnock, and the Caaf. Coal, limestone, and freestone abound. For a hundred years past this district has been celebrated for the excellence of its dairy produce, and cheese of superior quality has been recently produced. This district was formerly a bailiewick, under the Earl of Eglinton. Some of the chief families, such as those of Eglinton, Glencairn, and Loudon, took a prominent part in Scottish affairs. The De Morvilles largely endowed the celebrated abbey of Kilwinning, and at one time owned the greater part of the district.

CUNNINGSBURGH, a par. in the mainland of Shetland, Scotland. It is situated to the S. of the parish of Lerwick, and is included quoad sacra in Dunrossness.

CUNSALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Cheddleton, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles from Cheddleton, and 3¼ N.W. of Cheadle.

CUNSCOUGH, a chplry. in the par. of Halsall, in the co. of Lancaster, 3 miles S. of Ormskirk. It is united with the tnshp. of Melling.

CUPAR, a district in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 17 miles long by 10 broad. It includes the pars. of Balmerino, Kilmany, Logie, Dairsie, Ceres, Cults, Cupar-Fife, Monimail, Moonzie, Creich, Flisk, Newburgh, Aldie, Dunbog, Collessie, Auchtermuchty, Strathmiglo, Kettle, Falkland, and parts of Abernethy and Arngask. It is bounded on the N. by the Firth of Tay, and includes southwards that part of the county which is drained by the Eden.

CUPAR-ANGUS, or COUPAR-ANGUS, a par. in the district and cos. of Forfar and Eastern Perth, Scotland. It is situated in the centre of Strathmore, and extends 5 miles from N.E. to S.W., with a breadth of from 1½ mile to 2½ miles. The river Isla bounds it on the N.W. It includes the vils. of Balbrogie, Washington, and Longleys. The population, of which about five-sixths are in Perthshire, has remained stationary for many years past. The low-lying lands are clay, but the upper gravel. The lands bordering on the Isla are protected from its frequent inundations by embankments. This par. is in the presb. of Meigle, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister averages £260. The parish church, rebuilt in 1869, is a handsome structure. There are five places of worship besides the Established church, viz. United Presbyterian, Free, Episcopalian, United Original Secession, and Evangelical Union. The town of Cupar-Angus stands on the road from Perth to Aberdeen, 5 miles S.S.E. of Blairgowrie, and 13 N.E. of Perth. The larger part of the town, situated on the right bank of a tributary of the Isla, is in the county of Perth, and that on the left bank in Forfar. The manufacture of coarse linen fabrics, and a tannery, give employment to the inhabitants. Here is a station of the Scottish Midland railway. In the neighbourhood is the site of a Roman camp, supposed to have been formed by Agricola, in the centre of which Malcolm IV. founded an abbey for Cistercian monks in 1164. James VI. converted the lands of this monastery into a lordship in 1606, which was afterwards held by Lord Balmerino, who was attainted in 1745. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held in March, May, July, and November.

CUPAR-FIFE, a par. in the district of Cupar, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It is situated in the centre of the co., and is bounded by Moonzie, Monimail, Cults, Ceres, Kemback, Dairsie, and Kilmany. It contains the royal burgh of Cupar-Fife, and the vils. of Glaidney and Springfield. It extends about 5 miles in length by the same in breadth. Two-thirds of the parish are situated on the N. of the Eden, which flows through it. Sandstone and greenstone are quarried, and the weaving of coarse linens gives employment to many of the inhabitants. There are stations at Cupar and Springfield on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee section of the North British railway. The principal mansions are Kilmaron House, situated 1½ mile N.W. of the town, Springfield House, Wemyss-hall, Ferrybank, and Tarvit House. On the E. is Carslogie House, long the seat of the Clephanes; and 2 miles to the southward, on Tarvit Hill, is the ancient tower of the Scots of Scotstarvit, who were anciently in league with the Clephanes for mutual protection. The Mote Hill, on the N. of the burgh, is pointed out by tradition as the place where the Justiciary of Fife held his courts in ancient times. The view from Tarvit Hill, or Wemyss-hall Hill, its modern name, is on all sides suggestive of historical reminiscences. It includes Falkland Castle on the S.W. and the Mount to the N.; this last is an eminence marked by a lofty monument on the top, and was once the possession of "Sir David Lindsay of the Mount" (Lord Lyon, king-at-arms), who there, in the 16th century, wrote the satires which contributed to bring about the Reformation. On Tarvit Hill was stationed the army of Mary of Guise, the Queen Regent, and there she signed the treaty with the opposing host, under the Lords of the Congregation, which gained time for the latter, and ultimately led to the establishment of Presbyterianism.—This par., which has a population of 6,750, is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Fife. The church is a large building, erected in 1785 on the site of an older one built in 1415, the spire of which is still standing. The charge is collegiate, the first minister having a stipend of £300, with manse and glebe, the second £250. A second Established church, called St. Michael's, was built about 30 years ago; and still more recently a church and manse for the village of Springfield, which is about to be erected into a new parish. There are two United Presbyterian churches, a Free church, an Episcopalian church, and a Baptist chapel. The Madras Academy, a scholastic institution, conducted by six male and one female teacher, and founded by bequest of Dr. Bell, on the Madras system, is under the management of Dr. Bell's trustees. Two burgh schools had existed here since the time of Charles I., which were in 1823 superseded by an academy, now in its turn supplanted by the Madras Academy. The town of Cupar-Fife, a royal burgh and the capital of the county, is situated in the centre of the parish, on the N. of the Eden, 10 miles W. of St. Andrew's, and 32 N.N.E. of Edinburgh. The royal burgh, according to the census of 1861, contained 877 houses, inhabited by a population of 5,029, against 5,686 in 1851, showing a decrease in the decennial period of 657. The principal streets are Bonnygate and St. Catherine-street, running E. and W., and Crossgate, running N. and S. The town-house, surmounted by a cupola and belfry, stands at the junction of Crossgate and St. Catherine-street. Opposite the town-house is the new corn exchange, a large building capable of holding 1,000 persons, with a lofty and handsome spire. The county building, with its very handsome hall, adorned with pictures by Wilkie and others, is in St Catherine-street. To the N.E. is the county prison. The Dundee and Edinburgh branch of the North British railway has a station here. The town contains many well-built houses, inhabited by legal practitioners and members of banking establishments. There are several spinning-mills in the neighbourhood, and a considerable trade is done in the weaving of coarse linens. Many useful works, of superior typography, have issued from its printing establishments. There are branches of the British Linen, National, City of Glasgow, Royal Bank of Scotland, Commercial, and Clydesdale banks; also an extensive public library, lawyers' library, mechanics' institution, female asylum, horticultural, agricultural, and philharmonic societies, besides various charitable and religious institutions.—Two newspapers are published here: the Fifeshire Journal, every Thursday; and the Fife Herald, on the same day.—The earliest charter of the burgh was granted in 1363 by David II. The government now consists of a provost, 3 bailies, and 11 councillors. This town joins with St. Andrew's, Kilrenny, Crail, Pittenweem, and East and West Anstruther, in sending a member to parliament. In ancient times the Macduffs, thanes of Fife, had a castle here, and at a later date "Mysteries," or theatrical performances, were exhibited on the Castle-hill.—There is a weekly corn market held on Thursday. Fairs for cattle and agricultural produce are held on the first Thursday of every month, and fairs for hiring servants in August and November.

CUPAR GRANGE, a vil. in the par. of Bendothry, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 58 miles from Edinburgh.

CUPERNHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Romsey, in the co. of Hants, 2 miles from Romsey.

CUPSTON, a hill in the co. of Somerset, E. of Ilfracombe Harbour, about 180 feet high, with a flag-staff on its summit.

CURBAN, a lough in the co. of Fermanagh, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Maguire's Bridge.

CURBAR, a tnshp. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles N.E. of Bakewell. It is situated on the river Derwent. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

CURBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Chad, Lichfield, N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Lichfield, its post town. It is joined with Elmhurst.

CURBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Witney, hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles S.W. of Witney, its post town, and 6 from Oxford. It is situated under Curbridge Down, and contains a tract of common.

CURBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's Waltham, in the co. of Hants, 2 miles S.W. of Bishop's Waltham.

CURDWORTH, a par. in the Birmingham div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 2½ miles N.W. of Coleshill, and 7 from Birmingham. The Midland West branch railway has a station at Water Orton, about 1½ mile distant from the village of Curdworth, and another at the hamlet of Minworth. It is situated on the Birmingham and Fazeley canal, and contains the hmlt. of Minworth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £320, in the patron. of B. No l, Esq., two turns, and the Right Hon. C. B. Adderley and the Rev. W. Wakefield, each one turn, alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an old stone edifice in the early English style of architecture. There is a Wesleyan chapel, and an infant school. In the hmlt. of Minworth is an Independent chapel. This parish has a contingent interest in £23 per annum, connected with Lea, Marston, and other parishes.

CURGARFF. See CORGARF, co. Aberdeen.

CURGIE, a small port in the par. of Kirkmaiden, on the W. side of Luce Bay, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland.

CURLAND, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles S.E. of Taunton, its post town and railway station. The parish is small, and contains only a few scattered houses. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, annexed to the rect.* of Curry-Mallet. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a very small building. The Rector of Curry-Mallet is lord of the manor. There is an endowed school for girls. The boys attend a school in the adjoining parish of Staple-Fitzpaine.

CURLEW MOUNTAINS, a lofty range running from N. to S. in the cos. of Sligo and Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Their summits command an imposing view. Large masses of lime and sandstone occur on their sides.

CURRACLONE, a par. in the bar. of Stradbally, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Stradbally, its post town. It lies near the river Barrow. The soil is clayey, with a limestone bottom. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £177, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the expense of the parish in 1804. The principal seats are Ballymans, Brockly Park, and Ballykilcavin.

CURRAGH, the great racecourse of Ireland, in the bar. of East Offaly, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Kildare. Its length is about 6 miles, and its breadth 2 miles. It is the property of the crown, and George IV. when visiting Ireland honoured the Curragh meeting with his presence. Curragh has been the scene of more than one skirmish, the most notable of which was that in which Lord Montemarisco fell in 1234, during the insurrection headed by the Earl of Pembroke. Some mounds still visible are supposed to be the graves of fallen warriors. There are several other small places of this name; one near Kells, in the co. of Meath, another near Killarney, in the co. of Kerry, and a third near Carlow, in Queen's County.

CURRAGHALEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Athlone, in the co. of Roscommon, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Athlone.

CURRAGHANOLOMA, a vil. in the bar. of Condons, in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Kilworth.

CURRAGHBOY, the name of several hmlts. in Ireland: one in the bar. of Athlone in the co. of Roscommon; another in the bar. of Gowran, in the co. of Kilkenny; and a third near Ahascragh, in the co. of Galway.

CURRAGHCLADY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Mohill, in the co. of Leitrim, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Drumond.

CURRAGHCLONY, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, in the co. of Tipperary, Ireland, 9 miles E. of Clogheen.

CURRAGHEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. and co. of Cork, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Cork.

CURRAGHGRAGUE, a vil. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Enniscorthy.

CURRAGHMARTIN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Iverk, in the co. of Kilkenny, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Mullinavat.

CURRAGHMORE, a seat of the Marquis of Waterford, in the par. of Clonegane, bar. of Upperthird, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It extends over 4,000 acres. The spot is very woody and picturesque. Contiguous to the present mansion, which is a noble building erected in 1700, are the ruins of the ancient castle, and "the murrain stone."

CURRAGHMORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tiaquin, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Glennamaddy.

CURRAGHMORE, a bog in the bar. of Athlone, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1½ mile N.W. of Athlone. Its area is 2,647 acres.

CURRAGHMULMURRY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Glennamaddy.

CURRAGHROE MOUNTAINS, in the bar. of Omagh, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. They occur on the western boundary of the barony, between the streams Derg and Mourne.

CURRAGLASS. See CURRYGLASS, Ireland.

CURRAN, a vil. in the par. of Maghera, bar. of Loughinsholin, in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated on the river Moyola, and is surrounded by bogs. Fairs are held on the 23rd June and 22nd November.

CURRANAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Ballymoe.

CURRANE, a lough on the boundary line between the bars. of Iveragh and Dunkerrin, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Ballinskellig's Bay. Its circumference is about 8 miles. In it are several islands, upon one of which are the ruins of a church. The Finglasha falls into this lough, and the river Currane carries its superfluous waters to the adjacent bay. Currane is a noted spot for salmon fishing. Sir Robert Reading is proprietor of these waters.

CURRANS, a par. and vil. in the bars. of Magunihy and Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Castle Island. Milltown, in Kerry, is its post town. It is situated on the river Maine. The surface is mountainous and boggy, and the soil inferior. The living is divided into sections by the river. The Magunihy section is united to Kiltallagh, in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £410, in the patron. of the crown. The Trughanacmy portion is part of the benefice of Ballymacelligot, in the same dioc., val. £371, in the patron. of William Crosbie, Esq. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, and a hedge school. The village stands on the S. bank of the Maine. Riverville and Currans House are the chief seats of the neighbourhood. Fairs are held on the 21st August and 29th October.

CURRAUNBEG, a hmlt. in the bar. of Erris, in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, 9 miles N.E. of Belmullet.

CURREEL, a small lough on the coast of Galway, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Bertraghboy Bay.

CURRIE, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Currie, Balerno, and Hermiston, and is bounded by Ratho, Kirknewton, Mid Calder, Penicuick, Corstorphine, and Colinton. It extends 8 miles in length in a north-westerly direction, with a breadth of 4½ miles. The surface descends from a height of 900 feet among the Pentland hills, to a large extent of level plain. The soil of the higher grounds is poor, while that of the lowlands is rich and highly cultivated. The Water of Leith flows through the whole parish. Sandstone of excellent quality is largely quarried. The chief landowners are Sir William Gibson Craig, Bart., of Riccarton, Lord Rosebery, of Buteland, Lord Morton, Lord Aberdour, and Scott of Malleny. In the parish are several flour-mills, paper-mills, and a large manufactory of yarn and sail-cloth. Among the antiquities is Lennox Tower, elevated above the Water of Leith, traditionally said to have been the residence of Mary Queen of Scots in her youth, and subsequently to have been a seat of the Regent Morton; also on the opposite side of the river the ruins of the mansion of the Skenes of Currie Hill. The remains of two Roman stations are visible, the one on Ravelrig Hill, the other farther E., which adds to the probability of the name of the parish being a corruption of the name Coria, given to the district by the Romans. The Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, the Caledonian railway, the Union canal, and the road from Edinburgh to Lanark, traverse the parish. The village of Currie stands on the N. bank of the Leith Water, 5½ miles S.W. of Edinburgh, by the Caledonian railway, on which it is a station. This par. is in the presb. of Edinburgh, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of Sir W. Gibson Craig, Bart. The stipend of the minister is £264. There is a Free church for Colintonand and Currie, and an United Presbyterian church at Balerno.

CURRIN, a par. in the bars. of Coole and Dartree, in the cos. of Fermanagh and Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Newtown Bellew. Drum is its post town. The surface is flat and boggy, but the soil good, with numerous lakes. The roads from Clones to Cavan and Dublin traverse the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Clogher, and in the patron. of the Incumbent of Currin. The church, which is situated in the village of Scotshouse, is a well-built edifice, erected in 1813 by the late Board of First Fruits. There is a chapel-of-ease at Drum, two Roman Catholic chapels, and a Presbyterian meeting-house. There are two National and several day schools within the parochial limits. The principal residences are Hill-town House, Kellyfargey, Scot's House, and some others. A fair is held on the 6th May.

CURROHILL, an ext. par. place in the par. of Clonmaney, in the co. of Donegal, Ireland. It anciently formed part of the demesnes of Templemore Abbey.

CURRY. See CURY, co. Cornwall.

CURRY, a hmlt. in the par. of Achonry, bar. of Leyny, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Tobercurry its post town. The Roman Catholic par., which bears its name, is in the dioc. of Achonry. Fairs are held on Ascension Day, Corpus Christi, and the 9th August.

CURRY, EAST, a tythg. in the par. of St. Gregory Stoke, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Taunton.

CURRYGLASS, a vil. in the par. of Mogeely, bar. of Kinnataloon, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2½ miles W. of Tallow. It is situated on the river Bride. Curryglass House is the principal residence.

CURRYGUIN, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, in the co. of Tipperary, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Nenagh.

CURRYKIPPANE, a par. in the bar. and co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Cork city. Ballincollig is its post town. It is beautifully situated on the rivers Lee and Awnbeg. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Carrigrohane, £697, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There is a military chapel, and a Roman Catholic chapel united to North chapel, Cork. There is a day school for boys and girls. In the vicinity are many handsome residences.

CURRY-LOAD, a tythg. in the par. of St. Gregory Stoke, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles from East Curry, and 6 N.E. of Taunton.

CURRY-MALLETT, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles S.E. of Taunton, and 5½ S.W. of Langport. It is situated on the river Ile, and was once a market town. In the Norman times it belonged to the Mallets and Pointzes, from the former of whom it takes its name. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the cur. of Curland, £392, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone edifice in the perpendicular style, consisting of nave, transept, chancel, S. porch, and tower. The charities amount to £1 per annum. The Baptists have a chapel. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The manor belongs to the duchy of Cornwall.

CURRY, NORTH, a hund. in the co. of Somerset; contains the pars. of West Hatch, St. Gregory Stoke, North Curry, Thurlbear, and Thorne Falcon, comprising 12,940 acres.

CURRY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of the same name, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Taunton. It is situated near the river Tone and the Great Western railway, which has a station at Taunton. It contains the chplries. of Stoke St. Gregory and West Hatch, and the tythgs. of Knapp, Lillesdon, and Wrantage, with the hmlt. of Newport, formerly a borough, but now an insignificant place. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £325, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. There is a district church at West Hatch, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £65, also in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Roman coins were found here in 1748, and in the Saxon times it was a royal borough. A fair is held on the first Tuesday in September for bullocks, sheep, and toys.

CURRY RIVELL, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Langport station, and 5 N.W. of South Petherton. It is situated to the S. of the river Parret. Burton Pynsent was once the seat of Earl Chatham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the cur. of Weston, £316, in the patron. of William Speke, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a handsome stone edifice in the early English style, and consists of nave, chancel, porch, and tower, with clock and five bells. The charities amount to £28 per annum. There is a day school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. There are blue lias and limestone quarries. Arundel Yoe, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the first two Mondays in August.

CURTHWAITE, a station on the Maryport and Carlisle railway, 7¼ miles from Carlisle.

CURWEN'S ISLAND, or BELLE ISLE, in the co. of Westmoreland, situated in the middle of Windermere, and commands beautiful views of the lake. The island is well wooded, and there is an elegant mansion. It was sold about 12 years ago by the Curwens of Workington to a merchant of Liverpool.

CURY, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, in the co. of Cornwall, 5 miles S.E. of Helston, and 12 from Falmouth. It is situated near the Lizard and Goonhilly Downs. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £549, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Rogers. The church, dedicated to St. Ninian, is an ancient stone building in the pointed style, with Norman arch and carvings. The tithes were commuted in 1839. There are chapels for the Association Wesleyans and Wesleyans; also a National school for both sexes. S. Davey, Esq., is lord of the manor. Roman coins have been found at Trevissick.

CUSHENDALL, or NEWTOWNGLENS, a post and market town in the par. of Layde, bar. of Lower Glenarm, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 31 miles N. of Belfast. It is situated on the river Glenegan, and contains the house of correction, the parish church, a market-house, and a dispensary, which last is within the Ballycastle Poor-law Union. This neat little town affords excellent accommodation to tourists to the Giant's Causeway by the old coast road. Its situation on Cushendall Bay is extremely imposing. The surrounding heights, composed of masses of basalt, with their verdant slopes, render it one of the most pleasant and interesting spots in the N. of Ireland. Ossian, the poet, is alleged to have been born here. There are police and coastguard stations, and petty sessions are held in the town. Fairs are held on the 14th February, 17th March, 14th May, 29th June, 14th August, 29th September, 14th November, and 22nd December.

CUSHENDUN, a vil. in the bars. of Carey and Lower Glenarm, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Cushendall. It is situated on the river Dun, on the small bay bearing its name. Its inhabitants are nearly all fishermen, and in the season it is frequented as a bathing-place. Here is a coastguard station, and a dispensary within the Ballycastle Poor-law Union. A convenient pier has recently been formed. Cushendun House is in the vicinity. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in February and every alternate month.

CUSHINA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Philipstown, in King's County, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Portarlington. It is situated on the Cushina Brook, which falls into the river Barrow.

CUSHINSTOWN, or CULLINSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Duleek, its post town. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Slane. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Duleek, £232, in the patron. of the Marquis of Drogheda. There is a day school for boys and girls.

CUSHKINNY, a bay in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It indents the S. coast of Great Island. On its W. side is a battery, near which are barracks.

CUSHNIE, a par. in the district of Alford, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. This par. was in 1798 annexed to the neighbouring par. of Leochel. See LEOCHEL-CUSHNIE.

CUSHRUSH, an island in Lough Nilly, in the co. of Fermanagh, Ireland.

CUSOP, a par. in the hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, in the co. of Hereford, 1 mile S.E. of Hay, its post town, and 12 miles from Kington. It is situated on the borders of Brecknockshire, and contains only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £203, in the patron. of the Earl of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure. The charities amount to £1 per annum. Trevadoc, Ty-coch, Pen-yr-hen-llan, Redley, Dollas Mill, Tyllyshope, Nant-y-glas-dwr, and Llydiart-y-wain are places here.

CUSWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Sprotbrough, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2½ miles W. of Doncaster.

CUTCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles from Dunster, and 8 from Dulverton. It is situated on Cutcombe Ford, under Dunkery Beacon, which latter is the highest point in Somersetshire, rising 1,696 feet above the sea-level. The village is small, and the population wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £214, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient structure in the early English style of architecture, consisting of nave, aisles, porch, and tower. There is an endowed school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Hon. P. P. Bouverie is lord of the manor, and has a pretty shooting-box here called Raleigh's Cottage.

CUTHBERT, ST., the name of several pars. in the cities of Edinburgh, Carlisle, York, Wells, and the borough of Bedford, CUTHILL, or CUTTLE, a suburb of the town of Prestonpans, in the co. of Haddington, Scotland.

CUTLER HEIGHT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Tong, par. of Birstall, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles S.E. of Bradford. The inhabitants are engaged in the woollen and rope manufactures.

CUTLER SHOAL, outside Harwich, off the coast of Essex, to the S.E. of Bawdsey.

CUTSDEAN, a chplry. in the par. of Bredon, upper div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 4 miles E. of Winchcombe, and 7 from Moreton-in-the-Marsh. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Bredon. The charities produce £8 per annum.

CUTSLOW, a vil. in the par. of Woolvercott, in the co. of Oxford, 3 miles N. of Oxford.

CUTTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Brampton, hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles N. of Chesterfield.

CUTTLEBUCK, a vil. in the par. of Kirkliston, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland.

CUTTLEHILL, a vil. in the par. of Dalgety, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Dunfermline, and 19 from Edinburgh.

CUTTLEHURST, a vil. in the tnshp. of West Clayton, par. of High Hogland, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles N.W. of Barnsley. It is situated near the North Midland railway.

CUTTLESTONE, a hund. in the middle div. of the co. of Stafford; it is separated into two divs., E. and W.: the E. contains the pars. of Brewood, Baswick, Castle-Church, Cannock, Shareshill, Riogely, Teddesley-Hay, and parts of Penkridge, Bushbury, and Wolverhampton; the W. the pars. of Blymhill, Bradley, Church Eaton, Forton, Gnosal, Haughton, Lapley, Norbury, Weston-under-Lizard, and parts of Penkridge and Sheriff-Hales, comprising together about 105,500 acres.

CUXHAM, a par. in the hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, 1½ mile N.W. of Watlington, and 5 miles S.W. of Tetsworth. The parish is very small, containing only 520 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £275, in the patron. of Merton College, Oxford, The church, dedicated to the Holy Rood, is an old stone structure in the Norman style, consisting of nave, chancel, square tower, and porch. It contains some brasses and several monuments. There are day and Sunday schools. The Warden and Fellows of Merton College, Oxford, are lords of the manor CUXTON, a par. in the hund. of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Strood, and 3 from Rochester. It is situated on the river Medway, and has a station on the North Kent railway. The village is very small, and a considerable part of the parish is planted in hops. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val, £346, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an old edifice. Rancombe, Worn's Place; and Upper and Lower Bush are places here.

CUXWOLD, a par. in the hund. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles E. of Caistor, and 8 from Great Grimsby. Brigg is its post town. It is pleasantly situated amongst the Wolds. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £306, in the patron. of H. Thorold, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure.

CWM, a par. in the hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, 2 miles N.E. of St. Asaph. It contains the tnshps. of Cwm-Isglan and Uchglan. It is situated in a pleasant valley, as its name, Cwm, or Coombe, signifies. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the iron-works. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £300, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Valacinian. The charities amount to £17 per annum.

CWM, a tnshp. in the par. of Nannerch, in the co. of Flint, 5 miles N.W. of Mold.

CWM, a vil. in the par. of Penmark, in the co. of Glamorgan, 4½ miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

CWM, a tnshp. in the par. of Meifod, in the co. of Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Welshpool.

CWM AFON, a mining vil. in the hund. of Neath, in the co. of Glamorgan, 3 miles N.E. of Aberafon. It is a station on the Eastern Valleys section of the Monmouthshire railway, and has a tramway of about 4 miles down to the port. This country, which extends along the bank of the Afon, is rich in coal and black-band iron-stone. At this village are the extensive tin, copper, and iron works belonging to the Copper Miners' Company.

CWMAMMAN, a chplry. in the par. of Llandilo-fawr, in the co. of Carmarthen, 15 miles N.E. of Carmarthen. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1841. Near here is the new marble bridge over the river Towey.

CWMARLES, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-ar-Arth, in the co. of Carmarthen, 8 miles E. of Newcastle-Emlyn.

CWMBAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, in the co. of Carmarthen, 4 miles N.W. of Llandilo-fawr.

CWMBRAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanvihangel-Llantarnam, hund. of Lower Usk, in the co. of Monmouth, 4 miles N. of Newport. It is a station on the Eastern Valleys section of the Monmouthshire railway.

CWMBREETH, a tnshp. in the par. of Cefnllys, in the co. of Radnor, 7 miles W. of Radnor.

CWMCARVEN, or CWMCARVAN, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, in the co. of Monmouth, 3½ miles S.W. of Monmouth. It is situated on a branch of the river Trothy. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the rect.* of Mitchel-Troy, £398, in the patron. of the Duke of Beaufort. The parochial charities amount to £8 per annum, derived from the rents of the church lands.

CWMCAWLWYD, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilo-fawr, in the co. of Carmarthen, 4 miles from Llandilo-fawr, and 15 N.E. of Carmarthen.

CWMCEIWYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanymowddwy, in the co. of Merioneth, 4 miles N.E. of Dinas-Mowddwy.

CWMCERWYN HILL, in the co. of Pembroke, is the highest point of the Precelley range. It is 1,754 feet high, and is crossed by the Flemish Way, a Roman road leading to St. David's.

CWMCOTHY, a hmlt. in the par. of Conwil-Cayo, in the co. of Carmarthen, 6 miles N.W. of Llandovery. It is situated near the head of the river Cothy.

CWMCYCH, a vil. in the par. of Kilrhedin, in the co. of Carmarthen, 3 miles S.W. of Newcastle-Emlyn.

CWMDARE, a hmlt. in the par. of Aberdare, in the co. of Glamorgan, 5 miles S.W. of Merthyr-Tydvil. It is situated on the rivers Cynon and Dâr, and is included within the limits of the borough of Merthyr-Tydvil.

CWMDU, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangonoyd, hund. of Newcastle, in the co. of Glamorgan, 5½ miles E. of Aberafon. It is situated on a branch of the river Llynvi. The inhabitants are engaged in the iron-works and collieries.

CWMFORGAN, a vil. in the par. of Kilrhedin, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5 miles S.W. of Newcastle-Emlyn.

CWMGAIST, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanbister, in the co. of Radnor, 9 miles N.W. of Knighton.

CWMGILLA, a tnshp. in the par. of Knighton, in the co. of Radnor, 3 miles S.W. of Knighton. It is situated near the river Teme.

CWMGORON, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle-Caer-einion, in the co. of Montgomery, near Welshpool, within the limits of which borough it is included.

CWMGWILI, a hmlt. in the co. of Carmarthen, 3 miles N. of Carmarthen. It is situated on the river Gwili, in a fine valley. Here are extensive slate-quarries.

CWM-HESIAN, a hmlt. in the co. of Merioneth, 7 miles N. of Dolgelly. It is situated near the river Cayne. Here are zinc and lead mines, also traces of gold and silver.

CWM-HIR. See ABBEY-CWM-HIR, co. Radnor.

CWMLECHWEDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbister, in the co. of Radnor, 11 miles N.W. of Knighton.

CWMLLECH, a tnshp. in the par. of Pennant, in the co. of Montgomery, 8 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

CWMMWR, a tnshp. in the par. of Hirnant, in the co. of Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

CWMPENANNER, a tnshp. in the par. of Cerrig-y-Druidion, in the co. of Denbigh, 11 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

CWMRHEIDOL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandabarn-Fawr, hund. of Genour, in the co. of Cardigan, 1 mile from Aberystwith. It is situated on the river Rheidol. There are lead-mines.

CWM-SYMLOG, a silver and lead-mine in the co. of Cardigan, which in the reign of James I. yielded 10 oz. of silver and 13 cwt. of lead to a ton of ore. It was by the successful working of this mine that Sir H. Myddleton accumulated the fortune which he expended in cutting the New River.

CWM-TOYDDWR, a par. in the hund. of Rhayader, in the co. of Radnor, 3 miles from Rhayader, its post-town, and 3 from St. Harmon's. It is situated in a delightful spot among the hills at the point where the river Elan joins the Wye, and contains the tnshps. of Dyffryn-Elan and Dyffryn-Gwy. The par. is of large extent, being 10 miles long by 4 broad, and has traces of lead and slate. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £95, in the patron. of the bishop. Price's school has an endowment of £50 per annum. The parochial charities amount to about £19 per annum.

CWMTWRCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Conwil-Cayo, in the co. of Carmarthen, 6 miles N.W. of Llandovery. It is situated at the junction of the rivers Twrch and Cothi.

CWMYGIED, a vil. in the par. of Ystradgynlais, in the co. of Brecon, 7 miles N.E. of Neath.

CWMYOY, a par. partly in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, in the co. of Monmouth, and partly in the hund. of Ewyaslacy, in the co. of Hereford, 5½ miles N. of Abergavenny, and 3 from the nearest station of the West Midland railway. It is situated on the river Honthy, near a branch of the river Monnow, and contains Fwthog and Bwlch-Trewyn. The country is hilly and picturesque. The parish is separated into upper and lower divisions, and extends along the borders of Herefordshire. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £200, in the patron. of John Williams, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. A National school was built in 1858. There are remains of an abbey founded in 1108 by Hugh de Lacy, who dedicated it to St. John the Baptist, and gave it to the Canons Regular of the Order of St. Augustine. It afterwards took the name of Llantony Abbey, and considerably declined, so that its revenues amounted only to £100 at the time of the Dissolution. The ruins, which stand near the centre of the parish, are in a tolerable state of preservation.

CWMYSGIFAROWG, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangathen, in the co. of Carmarthen, 3 miles W. of Llandilo-Fawr.

CWMYSTWITH, a lead-mine in the co. of Cardigan, 4 miles S.E. of the Devil's Bridge.

CWRT, or COURT, the prefix to the names of many mansions in Wales.

CYDBLWYF, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanina, hund. of Moyddyn, in the co. of Cardigan, 8½ miles S.W. of Aberaeron.

CYDPLWYDD, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandefeilog, in the co. of Carmarthen, 2 miles N. of Kidwelly.

CYDWNFA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel, in the co. of Montgomery, 3 miles S.W. of Llanfyllin.

CYFARTHFA, a chplry. and vil. in the par. of Merthyr-Tydvil, in the co. of Glamorgan, 2 miles from Merthyr-Tydvil. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and the bishop alternately. Here are extensive iron and coal works, employing about 5,000 persons. Cyfarthfa Park is the seat of William Crawshay, Esq., the great iron-master.

CYFFIC, or KYFFIG, a par. in the hund. of Dewlys, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5¼ miles N.E. of Narberth. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St David's, val. £86, in the patron. of the Vicar of Laugharne.

CYFFIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangadfan, in the co. of Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Llanfair.

CYFFTY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanykil, in the co. of Merioneth, 2 miles S.W. of Bala.

CYFNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanarmon in the co. of Denbigh, 4 miles E. of Ruthin. It is situated on the river Alen.

CYFOETH-Y-BRENIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Geneur-Glynn, hund. of Geneur-Glynn, in the co. of Cardigan, 4½ miles N. of Aberystwith, its post town, and 4 from Eskynald. It contains the vil. of Borth. There are copper and lead mines. The sands on the coast stretch for nearly 3 miles to the mouth of the river Dovey.

CYFRONYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Pool, hund. of Cawrse, in the co. of Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Welshpool, and 3 from Llanfair. It is situated on the river Banw, and comprises seven houses.

CYLCH-BYCHAN, a hmlt. in the par. of St. David's, hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke, 1 mile from St. David's, and 2 miles from Whitchurch. It contains Caryarchell and Hendr-Draw.

CYLCH-GWYLOD-Y-WLAD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. David's, hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke. It includes the island of Ramsey.

CYLCH-MAWR, a hmlt. in the par. of St. David's, hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke.

CYLCH-Y-DRE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. David's, hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke.

CYLYCUM. See Cilycwm, co. Carmarthen.

CYMMAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Hope, in the co. of Flint, 1½ mile S.W. of Caergwrle.

CYMMER, a vil. in the par. of Llantrisaint, in the co. of Glamorgan, near Llantrisaint.

CYMMER, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangar, in the co. of Merioneth, near Corwen.

CYMMO, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandysilio, in the co. of Denbigh, 2½ miles N.W. of Llangollen.

CYMRYD, a tnshp. in the par. of Gyffin, hund. of Isaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, 1 mile from Conway.

CYNFALFACH and CYNFALFAWR, tnshps. in the par. of Towyn, in the co. of Merioneth, near Towyn.

CYNFELL, a river of Merionethshire, in North Wales, famous for its salmon and trout fishing. It is crossed by a bridge, and after passing over two falls, joins the Dwyrhyd, near Festiniog.

CYNHINFA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangyniew, in the co. of Montgomery.

CYNLAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanderfel, in the co. of Merioneth, 3½ miles E. of Bala.

CYNLLWYD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwychyllyn, in the co. of Merioneth, 3 miles S.W. of Bala. It contains the vil. of Pandy.

CYNNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfairtalhaiarn, in the co. of Denbigh, 3½ miles S.W. of Abergele.

CYNNILLFAWR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanddarog, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5 miles S.E. of Carmarthen. It is situated on the Gwendraeth Vach river.

CYNNILL MAWR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Geneur-Glynn, hund. of Geneur-Glynn, in the co. of Cardigan, 5½ miles N.E. of Aberystwith, its post town, and 2 from Llanfihangel. It is situated on the river Leri. In the village is a school for both sexes, endowed with £5 per annum.

CYNON, a hmlt. in the par. of Merthyr-Tydvil, in the co. of Glamorgan, near Merthyr-Tydvil. It is situated at the junction of the rivers Cynon and Tâf, where the Cardiff canal crosses.

CYNON-CAPEL, a chplry. in the par. of Llandysilio-Gogo, in the co. of Cardigan, 6 miles S.W. of Aberaeron. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £75, in the patron. of the vicar.

CYNWIL-GAIO. See Conwil Cayo, Carmarthenshire.

CYNWYD-FAWR and CYNWYD-FECHAN, tnshps. in the par. of Gwyddelwern, in the co. of Merioneth, 3 miles N. of Corwen.

CYRCHYNEN, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asaph, in the co. of Denbigh, 2 miles from St. Asaph.

CYRN-Y-BRAIN HILL, in the co. of Denbigh, 5 miles N. of Llangollen, about 1,850 feet high.

CYRUS, ST., or ECCLESCRAIG, a par. in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland. It is bounded on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the co. of Forfar, and on the W. and N. by the pars. of Marykirk, Garvock, and Benholme. It is 5 miles in length, with a breadth of 3¼ miles. It contains the vils. of St. Cyrus, Roadside, Burnside, Lochside, Milton, Whitehill, and Tangleha. The surface consists of a number of hills, rising to the height of 500 or 600 feet, and separated from one another by romantic vales, the streams of which run into the sea or the North Esk, which forms the southern boundary. The coast-line is partly bold and rocky, and partly flat. The soil is various in quality, but that of the arable lands is for the most part rich. Sandstone is quarried. The principal landowners are Porteous of Laurieston, Fordyce of Woodston, Grant of Mount Cyrus, the Earl of Kintore, and others. The chief mansions are Laurieston, Mount Cyrus, Bridgeton, and Kirkside. The road from Montrose to Aberdeen traverses the parish, and there is easy access by the Scottish North-Eastern railway. The village of Cyrus is situated 5½ miles N. of Montrose. This par. is in the presb. of Fordoun, and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £248. The parish church is a very handsome structure, built in 1854. There is also a Free church, with a large attendance.

D

DAALVIL LOCH, in the S.E. portion of Skye, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland.

DACORUM, a hund. in the W. div. of the co. of Hertford, contains the pars. of Berkhampstead, Aldbury, Flamstead, Bushey, Harpenden, Great and Little Gaddesden, Kensworth, Hemel-Hempstead, Mimms, King's Langley, Puttenham, Shenley, Wigginton, Wheathampstead, and Tring, with parts of Amersham, Caddington, Aldenham, and Studham, comprising 78,160 acres.

DACRE, a par. in the ward of Leath, in the E. div. of the co. of Cumberland, 4½ miles S.W. of Penrith, and 2 from Lake Ulleswater. It is situated on the river Dacre and the Carlisle railway. The par. contains the tnshps. of Dacre, Great Blencowe, Stainton, Newbiggin, and Soulby. In the year 930, Constantine, King of Scotland, and Eugenius, King of Cumberland, did homage to King Athelstan at this place. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £120, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an old structure in the Norman style. It is said to have been built from the ruins of an ancient monastery, and contains several tombs and effigies of the Dacres. The charities amount to £235 per annum. There are National and Sunday schools; the former has an endowment of £150 per annum. The small tithes of the tnshps. of Dacre and Soulby were commuted for land in 1806. W. Hasell, Esq., of Dalemain, is lord of the manor. Dacre gives the title of baron to the Brands, of Hoo. In the vicinity is the old seat of the Dacres, with its four square towers, now converted into a farmhouse.

DACRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripon, lower div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles S.E. of Pateley Bridge, and 10 S.W. of Ripon. It is situated on the river Nidd. A considerable linen manufacture is carried on here, and there are several lead-mines in the vicinity. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a stone edifice, erected in 1837, and contains 500 sittings, 400 of which are free. The charities amount to £12 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel and schools. There is also an endowed school for both sexes. The Rev. Henry Ingleby is lord of the manor.

DADFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Stowe, in the co. of Bucks, 3½ miles N.W. of Buckingham.

DADLINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Hinckley, hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 3½ miles S. of Market Bosworth, and 3½ N. of Hinckley. It is situated on the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal. The village is small, and mostly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Hinckley. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small ancient structure. The Independents have a chapel, and there is a school in connection with the National Society. Mrs. Grundy is lady of the manor.

DAER, or DAIRE, a head of the river Clyde, South Lanark, which runs under the Lowthers, 10 miles north, to the river Clyde, at Elvanfoot, and from which the Earl of Selkirk derives his title of baron.

DAFF, a vil. in the par. of Innerkip, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Greenock.

DAGENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Becontree, in the co. of Essex, 3½ miles S.W. of Romford station, and 14½ from London. It is situated on the river Thames, which in 1707 made a breach, overflowed above 1,000 acres of rich land, and washed 120 acres into the river, forming a sand-bank half-way across its bed. The embankment was made good by Captain Perry, eleven years after, at a cost of £40,000. The land is chiefly arable, except about 1,000 acres, which are in wood and common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £855, in the patron. of the Rev. T. L. Fanshawe. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient brick and stone edifice. Among the monuments is one to Sir Richard Alibon, knight, and a brass to Judge Urswyk and wife. The charities amount to £463 per annum, including the impropriation belonging to Brentwood school, and an endowment for education left by William Ford, Esq., in 1828. The Wesleyans and Wesleyan Reformers have chapels. There are National and infant schools. Dagenham Park is the seat of Sir Thomas Neave, Bart.

DAGLINGWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Crowthorne, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles N.W. of Cirencester. It is situated on Ermine Street, and formerly belonged to Godstow Nunnery. At the time of the Conquest it was not a distinct parish, but an extensive common in the manor of Stratton. The soil is generally light, and there are quarries of building stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £266, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, built about the year 1500, is a stone edifice in the Norman style, with a square tower containing four bells. It is supposed to have been dedicated to the Holy Rood, there being a very ancient stone crucifix above the E. window in the chancel. There is also an ancient stone cross in the churchyard. There is a school with a small endowment left by Jeremiah Hancock. Lord Bathurst is lord of the manor. A tesselated pavement was discovered some years ago, near the Roman road which passed through the parish.

DAGNALL, or DAGNOLL, a hmlt. in the par. of Eddlesborough, in the co. of Buckingham, 3½ miles E. of Ivinghoe.

DAGWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Newton, in the hund. of Stow, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles N. of Stowmarket.

DAILLY, a par. in the district of Carrick, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and extends from N.E. to S.W. about 7 miles, with a breadth of 5 miles. It is bounded by the river Girvan, Barr, Straiton, Kirkmichael, and Kirkoswald. The surface abounds in natural beauties, and rises on both sides of the Girvan Water, which intersects the whole length of the parish, into hills of considerable elevation. The lowlands near the river are fertile, well cultivated and wooded, and the uplands, though not so productive, afford pasturage, and have been partly reclaimed. Coal, limestone, and freestone abound, and the two former are largely worked. The principal proprietors are the Duchess de Coigny, of Bargany, Sir John Andrew Cathcart, Bart., of Carleton, Sir James Fergusson, Bart., of Kilkerran, and the Right Hon. T. F. Kennedy, of Dunure. The parish is traversed along its length by the road from Ayr to Stranraer, on which road the village of Dailly stands, 6 miles E. of Girvan. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £348. In 1653 an extensive portion of this parish was detached to form the par. of Barr, to the southward, part of the parish of Kirkoswald being at the same time, however, added to Dailly. Ailsa Craig, in the Firth of Clyde, off the coast, is included in this parish, although no other part of the parish touches the sea-coast. There is also a Free church.

DAIRSIE, a par. in the district of Cupar, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It includes the vil. of Osnaburgh. Its length and breadth are about 2½ miles; it is bounded on the S. by the Eden, on the W. by Cupar-Fife, and on other quarters by Logie, Luchars, Kemback, and Kilmany. The soil is fertile and well cultivated. The mansions are Craigfoodie, Newmill, and Pitormie. The parish church and the bridge of three arches across the Eden were built by Archbishop Spottiswood, when proprietor of Dairsie. He is said to have written his "Church History" in a castle, the remains of which still exist near the church. That castle was formerly a place of considerable strength, and a parliament was holden in it in 1555. The population is partly employed in weaving linens. There is a station on the Dundee fork of the Edinburgh and Northern railway, which traverses the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Cupar, and synod of Fife, and in the patron. of Captain Macdonald of Sandside. The minister has a stipend of £251. There is also a Free church.

DAIRY COATES, a tnshp. in the par. of Ferriby, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6½ miles W. of Hull.

DAISY HILL, a hmlt. in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, near Augher.

DAISY HILL, a hmlt. and chplry. in the tnshp. of Manningham, in the West Riding of the co. of York, near Bradford. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, and in the patron. of the vicar.

DALAROSSIE, or DALFERGUSSIE, i.e. "Fergus's Valley," a district in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, formerly a vic., now united to the par. of Moy.

DALARUIN, a vil. in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is situated near Campbeltown, and derives its name from Dalruadhain, the seat of the first Scottish kingdom under Fergus.

DALAVICH, an ancient par. now united to Kilchrenan, in the district of Lorn, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland.

DALBEATTIE, a small town in the par. of Urr, in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It stands near the confluence of Dalbeattie Burn with Urr Water, 5 miles S.E. of Castle Douglas. It dates from 1780, and owes its prosperity to the various mills established on the burn. Here are a quoad sacra church, a Free church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. Fairs are held here in April and October.

DALBURY-WITH-LEES, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Burton-on-Trent, the same distance S.W. of Derby, and 3½ N. of Egginton station. The line of railroad from Derby to Manchester passes through this parish, which is well wooded. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £206, in the patron. of Mrs. Eliza Cotton. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure. The chancel has recently been rebuilt, and contains a stained-glass window, said to be 600 years old. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge. The charities amount to £18 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes.

DALBWBA, a vil. in the par. of Nantcwnlle, in the co. of Cardigan, 5 miles N. of Lampeter.

DALBY, a tnshp. and district par. in the Isle of Man, 3 miles S. of Peel. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. James. Dalby Point, which is surrounded by reefs, is near.

DALBY MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 3 miles S.W. of Melton Mowbray, its post town and railway station, and 15 N.W. of Leicester. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £209, in the patron. of Sir R. Burdett, Bart., who is lord of the manor and impropriator of the great tithes, which have been commuted for £49 7*s.* 6*d.* The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is a very old structure, with a tower which contains five bells. It is in a dilapidated state, the steeple having fallen in 1658, and has so remained ever since. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, which was built in 1846, also a free school.

DALBY-PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 4½ miles S.E. of Melton Mowbray, its post town and railway station. The village is very small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £263, in the patron. of E. B. Hartopp, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a handsome modern structure. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. Dalby Hall is the seat of E. B. Hartopp, Esq.; his family have resided here since the reign of Elizabeth. In the neighbourhood is a chalybeate spring. Here is a meet for the Cottesmore hounds.

DALBY-ON-THE-WOLDS, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 7 miles N.W. of Melton-Mowbray and 5 N. of the Kirby railway station. The village is supplied with water, conveyed by pipes from springs at the distance of 1½ mile. In the reign of Henry II. a preceptory of Knights Hospitallers was founded here by Robert le Bossu, Earl of Leicester, the revenue of which at the Dissolution amounted to £91 2s. 8d. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £40, in the patron. of the rector, the Rev. W. G. Sayer, who is lord of the manor. The church was built by the present incumbent in 1835, at a cost of £5,000. It is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and is a handsome building, with square embattled tower and four bells. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Six-Hills, built in 1837. The charities amount to £9. There are National and infant schools, supported by the rector. This place is noted for its Stilton cheese, and for a fine chalybeate spring.

DALBY-WITH-DEXTHORPE, a par. in the Wold div. of the wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3½ miles N. of Spilsby, and 4½ N.W. of Burgh railway station. There are only a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £79, in the patron. of Lord Monson. The church, a small ancient structure, contains several monuments and effigies of the Llanden family. The charities amount to £7 per annum. A glebe in the parish of Toynton All Saints, valued at £27 10s., and land in Wildmore Fen, valued at £12, are attached to the living. J. W. Preston, Esq., is lord of the manor. The chief residence is Dalby Hall.

DALBY-WITH-SKEWSBY, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 9½ miles W. of Malton, and 14 N.E. of York. It is situated on the Howardian range of hills, and contains Witherham and Skewsby. The village is small, and the parish contains 50 acres of woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £245, in the patron. of the Rev. J. S. Hall. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure, in the Norman style of architecture, with an arched roof of stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260. The charities amount to £5 per annum. W. Ewbank, Esq., is lord of the manor. Here is a meet for the Simington hounds.

DALCARLINCH, a vil. in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Duttril.

DALCHRAY, a vil. in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Inveraven. It is situated on the river Spey.

DALCROSS, or DALUS, a par. in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Inverness. It is joined to Croy. Dalcross Castle is an ancient tower of the clan Chattan, near Culloden Moor.

DALCOURY, a vil. in the par. of Creich, in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of Loch Shin.

DALDERBY, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2¾ miles S. of Horncastle, its post town. It is situated on the Horncastle canal and the river Bain. There is no village, only five cottages. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, annexed to the rect. of Scrivelsby. The church, which is now in ruins, was dedicated to St. Martin.

DALE, a par. in the hund. of Roose, in the co. of Pembroke, 10 miles S.W. of Haverfordwest. It is a peninsula, and forms the eastern coast of Milford Haven. Two lighthouses were erected on the southern point of Dale in the reign of Queen Anne, who gave her name to Queen Anne's Head. It was formerly a borough and market town. The trade is still considerable. The Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII., was joined in the neighbourhood of this town by Rhys-ap-Thomas, previous to the battle of Bosworth Field. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £65, in the patron. of J. P. L. A. Phillips, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. James.

DALE ABBEY, a chplry. in the hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles N.E. of Derby. At Deepdale are remains of an abbey of Premonstratensian Canons, founded in Henry II.'s reign by Serlo-de-Grendon, and refounded at Stanley by Geoffrey-de-Saucemere, or Salicosa Mara, in 1204, in honour of the Virgin Mary; at the Dissolution its revenue was estimated at £144 12s. The chapel still stands. In 1729 a silver dish, bearing the date 405, was found at Risley, supposed to have been brought from Bourges, in France. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, and in the patron. of trustees. The church is a small structure. There is a chapel for Wesleyans. Earl Stanhope is lord of the manor.

DALE HEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Arkengarth Dale, wap. of West Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles S.W. of Barnard Castle.

DALE TOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawnby, in the wap. of Bridforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 6½ miles N.W. of Helmsley, and 10 N.E. of Thirsk. It is situated on the river Rye. There is a school with a small endowment.

DALENESS, a vil. in the co. of Nairn, Scotland, 13 miles S. of Nairn.

DALES-GREEN, a vil. in the par. of Wolstanton, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles from Burslem.

DALESWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Mansfield, N. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 2 miles W. of Mansfield. It is situated near the river Maun and Sherwood Forest.

DALGAIN, a par. in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, now united with Sorn.

DALGARNOCK, or DALGERNO, a suppressed par. in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland. It was united to the par. of Closeburn in the 17th century.

DALGARVAN, a vil. in the par. of Kilwinning, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It is situated 2 miles N. of the town of Kilwinning, near the Glasgow and Ayr railway.

DALGETY, a par. in the district of Dunfermline, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It contains the vils. of St. David's and Fordel-Square, together with part of the vil. of Crossgates. It is bounded on the S. by the Firth of Forth, and on other sides by the pars. of Inverkeithing, Dunfermline, Aberdour, Beath, and Auchtertool. It extends southwards about 5 miles, with a breadth of nearly 2 miles. Much of the surface is under tillage, the soil being for the most part a deep strong loam. The small loch at Otterston, about a mile from the coast, is much admired for its wooded banks. Donibristle House, a seat of the Earl of Moray, was, in 1592, the scene of the murder of "the Bonnie Earl," who was popularly believed to have excited the jealousy of James VI. from his intimacy with Anne of Denmark. The old parish church is very ancient, the older portions being believed to date from the 14th century. The chief seats are Donibristle, Fordel House, and Cockairney. The proprietors are the Earl of Moray, Henderson of Fordel, and Mowbray of Otterston. The population is employed in agriculture, salt-works, and principally in the Fordel colliery, the coal of which, esteemed of superior quality, is carried a distance of 5 miles by rail to St. David's, from whence it is exported. There is a station at Crossgates on the Dunfermline branch of the Edinburgh and Northern railway. This par. is in the presb. of Dunfermline, and synod of Fife, and in the patron. of the Earl of Moray. The minister has a stipend of £227. The new parish church, a handsome Gothic building, was built in 1830, and stands near the road from Aberdour to Inverkeithing. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Mossgreen.

DALGINROSS, a vil. in the par. of Comrie, in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It is situated on the river Earne, near Comrie, and is the site of a Roman camp of 16 acres, supposed to be the Victoria of Agricola, who encamped here after defeating Galgacus.

DALGUISE, a vil. in the par. of Little Dunkeld, in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It stands on the right bank of the Tay, 5 miles N.W. of Dunkeld. The mansion of Dalguise is situated near the road from Perth to Taymouth. There is a Free church in the village.

DALHAM, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles S. of Kennet railway station, and 5 S.E. of Newmarket. It contains Dunstall Green. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £419, in the patron. of the Rev. Sir R. Affleck, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents, under an Enclosure Act, in 1816. Sir Robert Affleck, Bart., is lord of the manor, and resides at Dalham Hall, formerly the seat of the Stuteville family. It was built about 1705 by the then Bishop of Ely. There is a school, conducted on the National system.

DALHOUSIE, or DALWOLSIE, a vil. in the par. of Cockpen, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Dalkeith. It is a station on the North British railway. Dalhousie Castle, the seat of the Marquis of Dalhousie, has stood many sieges, but has been greatly modernised.

DALINTOBER, a vil. at the head of Campbelton Loch, Kintyre, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is a thriving place, being a suburb of the town of Campbelton.

DALJARROCK, a vil. in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 6 miles S. of Girvan. It is situated on the river Stinchar.

DALKEITH, a par. in the E. district of the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It contains a post town of its own name, and also the vils. of Lugton and Whitehill. It extends 3½ miles in length, with a breadth of 2½ miles, and is bounded by Lasswade, Newbottle, Inveresk, Cranston, Newton, and Liberton. It is traversed by the North Esk and South Esk in a north-easterly direction. The soil is fertile, and laid out in cornfields, gardens, and orchards. The greater part of the parish belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch. There is a station at Eskbank on the Hawick branch of the North British railway, now the main line, called Waverley Route, to Carlisle and London, besides the branch leading to the town of Dalkeith. Dalkeith Park, containing the palace of the Duke of Buccleuch, is situated in the north-eastern part of the parish. The park contains about 1,000 acres, which are laid out in woods, walks, and carriage-drives. Here the two Esks meet, and their windings and wooded banks add greatly to the attractiveness of the locality. The palace stands in the upper part of the park, near the North Esk. It was built towards the beginning of the last century. The old castle of Dalkeith, on the site of which the palace stands, was anciently a place of considerable strength, being erected on a lofty rock, accessible only on the E. side. The noble family of Morton lived in it for some centuries, and in 1547, after the battle of Pinkie, it surrendered to the English, not having sufficient provisions for the large number of men who had fled to it. On that occasion the Earl of Morton, afterwards Regent of Scotland, and Sir David Hume, of Wedderburn, were made prisoners. In 1642 the Buccleuch family purchased the estate of Dalkeith from the Earl of Morton. Charles I. visited Dalkeith Castle in 1633, and General Monk resided in it when in Scotland. George IV. honoured the palace with his presence in 1822, and Queen Victoria held a brilliant levee here in 1842.—The par. of Dalkeith is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and is in the patron. of the Duke of Buccleuch. Originally the parsonage was part of the deanery of Restalrig, and seems to have been constituted a distinct parish in 1592. The barony of Lugton was annexed to it in 1633. The minister has a stipend of £370, including glebe. The parish church was renewed in 1853, after its old Gothic model, at a cost of nearly £6,000, and is now a commodious building and fine specimen of its kind. A new church, built in 1840 by the Duke of Buccleuch, was constituted a quoad sacra parish in 1853 under the name of the West Church. The latter church is in the form of a cross, surmounted by a spire. There are also an Episcopal chapel, a Free church, three United Presbyterian churches, an Independent chapel, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The parish school, otherwise known as the grammar school, has long borne a high character among Scottish seminaries; beside the usual branches of a classical education, French, German, Italian, and mathe[illegible]ics are taught.—The town of Dalkeith stands between the two Esks, 4 miles S. of Musselburgh, and 6 S.E. of Edinburgh. The ground slopes rapidly to the North Esk, and more gradually to the South Esk. The neighbourhood is beautiful in the extreme, including the parks of Dalkeith Palace, Woodburn House, and Newbottle Abbey; while the town is surrounded with gardens and orchards. The town is well built, the principal streets being the High-street and the Back-street, the former extending about two-thirds of a mile in length. The largest corn market for oats in the kingdom is held here every Thursday. There are about 1,000 carts of grain exposed on a full market day in winter. A spacious covered market-place, with a hall, has recently been erected at a cost of £3,000. The shopkeepers of Dalkeith contend successfully with those of Edinburgh in supplying the wants of the inhabitants of the S. and W. of the county. During the summer Dalkeith is a favourite resort of parties of pleasure from Edinburgh.—The town is a burgh of barony, and is governed by a baron-bailie under the Duke of Buccleuch, whose family acquired the baronial right in 1642. Before that the baronial right belonged to the family of Graham, and subsequently to that of Douglas. The jurisdiction of the baron-bailie is limited to the imposition of small fines, imprisonment for one night, and to granting warrants at the instance of landlords for the recovery of rent by the sale of their tenants' furniture. The sheriff of the county attends to the more serious matters, and since 1759 certain self-elected statutory trustees, holding office for life, attend to all local police matters, such as paving, lighting, and cleaning the streets, and the supply of water, raising a revenue of about £1,000 for these purposes.—Among the distinguished natives or inhabitants of the town may be mentioned Dr. Pitcairn, Principal Robertson, Lord Melville, Lord Loughborough, and Dr. Hope.—Population of the town in 1851, 5,086; in 1861, 5,396. Houses in 1851, 462; in 1861, 624.—Fairs for cattle and horses are held on the first Thursday of May after Rutherglen, and on the third Tuesday of October; and hiring fairs are held on the first Thursday of April and the second Thursday of October.—Eskbank, situated about half a mile W. of Dalkeith, a place formerly but little known, is now thickly studded over with comfortable villas.

DALKEY, a par. and post town in the bar. of Rathdown, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Kingstown and Bray branch of the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford line. The parish is situated just beyond the eastern extremity of Dublin Harbour. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, united with Monkstown, and in the patron. of trustees. The ruins of the church also remain. There is a National school. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is united to Kingstown. The village was formerly a place of some importance, being a market town and seaport, defended by seven castles, of which three are still remaining. It is a police and coastguard station. Dalkey Common is an extensive tract, reaching down to the beach. It is notorious in connection with an old song called "Kilruddery Hunt," written by Mr. Fleming nearly a century ago. There is a large granite quarry, and an abandoned lead-mine opposite Dalkey Island. This island is separated from the mainland by a narrow channel, and contains a martello tower and some church ruins. It was here that the ceremony of crowning the mock King of Dalkey and Emperor of the Muglins was performed in June. The Dalkey Gazette gave a full account of these doings. A large cromlech on the common was destroyed, for the sake of the granite blocks of which it was constructed, during the formation of Kingstown Harbour. It is here that the atmospheric railway was tried. There are numerous pleasant villas and residences, commanding delightful sea-views; among the principal are Sorrento, Braganza Lodge, and Shamrock Lodge.

DALLAS, or DOLLAS, a par. with a vil. of the same name, in the co. of Elgin, Scotland. It is bounded by Elgin, Birnie, Rothes, Knockando, Edenkillie, and Rafford. It has a length from E. to W. of about 12 miles, with an extreme breadth from N. to S. of 9 miles. It forms a valley surrounded by hills, and drained by the Lossie. The name Dallas seems to be derived from the Gaelic Dale-Uisk, "the water valley," a great part of the plain S. of the hill of Melundy appearing formerly to have been a lake. The estate of Craigmill, which belongs to this parish, is isolated in the southern end of the valley of the parish of Rafford. From the plain above mentioned, inexhaustible supplies of peat can be obtained. Freestone and slates are largely quarried. There is good fishing in the Lossie for trout during the summer, and for white trout and a few small salmon in September and October. The landowners are the Earl of Fife, Cumming of Altyre, and Grant of Wester Elches. The chief antiquity is Torcastle, the ruined stronghold of the Cummings. The village of Dallas is situated on the W. road from Elgin to Knockando, 9 miles S.E. of Forres, and 12 S.S.W. of Elgin. The eastern district of the parish is called Kelles. This par. is in the presb. of Forres and synod of Moray, and in the patron. of Gordon Cumming, of Altyre. In 1657, when Altyre was annexed to the parish of Rafford (which formerly belonged to Dallas), Kelles, and part of the parish of Elgin were annexed to Dallas. The minister has a stipend of £158. The church was built in 1794. There is also a Free church.

DALLICOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Claverley, Bridgnorth div. of the hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, 1½ mile N.W. of Claverley, and 2½ miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

DALLIGAN RIVULET, in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It runs 7 miles S. to Clonea Bay.

DALLIGHTIE, a par. joined to Daviot, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland.

DALLINGHOE, or DALINGHOO, EARLS', a par. partly in the hund. of Wilford, and partly in that of Loes, in the co. of Suffolk, 2¼ miles W. of Wickham Market, and 4 N. of Woodbridge. The village is small and wholly agricultural. It acquired the affix of Earls' from the circumstance that the chief manor formerly belonged to the earls of Norfolk. The handsome manor-house, erected by Sir William Churchill, was burnt down in 1729. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £384, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Walford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to £41 per annum. A. Arcedeckne and J. Wood, Esqs., are lords of the manor. There is a parochial school, chiefly supported by the rector.

DALLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle Grove, in the co. of Northampton, 1½ mile N.W. of Northampton. It is situated on a branch of the river Nen, which bounds it on the N. and N.E. The parish is of small extent, and is nearly half occupied by a fine plantation of firs. The manufacture of shoes is carried on to a small extent; the rest of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £100, in the patron. of J. Reddall, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains several monuments to the Rainsford and Jekyll families, who formerly held the manor. The charities amount to £28. There is a National school and four almshouses, built and endowed by Sir R. Rainsford. J. Reddall, Esq., is lord of the manor.

DALLINGTON, a par. partly in the hund. of Netherfield, and partly in that of Foxearle, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 6½ miles N.W. of Battle, and 5½ S.W. of Robertsbridge railway station. It was once a part of the Great Forest, and is situated on the road from Battle to Uckfield. The district abounds with iron-ore, and several blast-furnaces were formerly erected here for smelting the ore, but have long been discontinued for want of fuel, the timber being now too valuable to use for this purpose. This village was the birthplace of the eminent barrister and statesman Sir Joseph Jekyll. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £182, in the patron. of the Earl of Ashburnham. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, or as others say to St. Margaret, is a handsome structure, with a square embattled tower, surmounted with a spire. There is a National school. The Earl of Ashburnham is lord of the manor.

DALLOW GILL, or DALLAGHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Masham, wap. of East Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 12 miles W. of Ripon, near Dallow Moor. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £73, in the patron. of the Vicar of Masham.

DALLUA RIVULET, in the bar. of Duhallow, co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is about 15 miles in length, and falls into the river Allow, near Kanturk.

DALMAHOY, a hmlt. in the par. of Rattio, co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Currie, near Dalmahoy Crags. It was formerly a prebend to Holyrood. Dalmahoy House is the seat of the Earl of Morton.

DALMALLY, a vil. in the par. of Glenorchy, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is situated near the head of Loch Awe, 16 miles N.N.E. of Inverary. A fair is held on the Friday of October after Kilmichael.

DALMARNOCK, a hmlt. 3 miles N. of Inver, in the par. of Little Dunkeld, in the co. of Perth, Scotland.

DALMEAN, a place near Dalnacardoch, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, at the junction of the rivers Ender and Garry.

DALMELLINGTON, a par. in the district of Kyle, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It contains the town of Dalmellington and the vils. of Waterside and Craigmark, and is bounded on the N. by Ochiltree, on the E. by New Cumnock, on the S.E. by the co. of Kirkcudbright, on the S.W. by the river Doon, and on the W. by Dalrymple. It extends 10 miles in length, with an average breadth of 3 miles. The surface is level along the Doon; to the N. and E. of which it rises into mountain ridges. Through one of these passes, called the Glen of Ness, the river Doon emerges from its picturesque mountain cradle, Loch Doon. The soil is rich and loamy near the Doon, and in other parts moorland and gravelly. Coal of excellent quality is worked, and sandstone, limestone, and ironstone abound. The greater part of the parish is the property of the Hon. F. Macadam Cathcart, of Craigengillan. In 1847 the Dalmellington Iron Company erected extensive works, and also the vils. of Waterside and Craigmark. The roads from Ayr to Dumfries, and from Dalmellington to New Cumnock traverse the parish. A railway for conveying the mineral produce has been constructed to Ayr. A Roman road, from the counties of Dumfries and Kirkcudbright, formerly traversed the parish in the direction of Ayr. In the uplands there were at one time three large cairns; one of them, 100 yards in circumference, covering large masses of human bones. Many traditions, respecting the sufferings of the Covenanters under the Stuarts, abound in the district. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £158. There are two preaching stations at Waterside and Craigmark belonging to the Establishment, and endowed by the Dalmellington Iron Company. There is also a Free church for Dalmellington and Carsphairn. The town of Dalmellington is an ancient burgh of barony, and stands, surrounded by hills, 1 mile N. of the Doon. Fairs are held on the day before Ash-Wednesday, Hallowe'en, and the first Friday after Whit-Sunday (all old style).

DALMENY, a par. in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland. It consists of two detached portions, the larger for the most part surrounding the town of Queensferry, except on the N. side, and being bounded by the Firth of Forth, Cramond, Edinburghshire, Kirkliston, and Abercorn. It has an extreme length from E. to W. of 5 miles, with an extreme breadth of 3 miles. The other portion is situated 2 miles S.W. of the former, and is bounded by Ecclesmachan, Kirkliston, and Abercorn. Its greatest length is nearly 2 miles, with a breadth of 1 mile. This more southern portion, is called Auldcathie, and constituted a separate parish before the Reformation. The surface of the larger portion is elevated in the centre, with a slope to the S., and a steeper declivity towards the Forth. From the eastern wooded hills, called Mons, Dundas, and Craigie, a splendid panorama, extending from the Lammermuir range on the E. to Ben Lomond on the W., is spread out before the spectator. The chief seats are Dalmeny Park, Craigie Hall, and Dundas Castle. The whole parish is well cultivated and planted, and the soil is rich and productive. Freestone of excellent quality is found on the coast. Limestone and ironstone also occur. On the shore, at the W. end. of Queensferry, are the remains of a monastery of Carmelite friars; and further westward, on a high sea-bank, remains, supposed to be those of a Roman out-look, together with silver medals of Mark Antony, have been discovered. The parish church seems, from its architecture, to be Saxon. The church of Warthwick, near Carlisle, built before the Conquest, strikingly resembles it, but is inferior in decoration. Queen Victoria and Prince Albert visited Dalmeny Park, in their progress through Edinburgh, in 1842. Inch-Garvey, an island in the Firth of Forth, belongs to this parish. The village of Dalmeny, consisting of about a dozen cottages, is situated in the centre of the larger portion of the parish, overlooking the Forth. There is also a hamlet of Craigie. This par. is in the presb. of Linlithgow, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the Earl of Roseberry. The minister has a stipend of £264. The territory within the burgh of South Queensferry was in 1636 detached from Dalmeny, and formed into a separate parish.

DALMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Old Kilpatrick, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland. It is situated 3 miles N.W. of Renfrew-ferry, and half a mile from the Clyde. Paper of all sorts, to the value of £40,000 a year, is here produced. Its harbour, called Dalmuir Shore, is half a mile distant on the Clyde, and has soda-works.

DALMULLIN, a hmlt. in the district of Kyle, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. There was formerly a Gilbertine Friary here, founded by Walter Stuart as a cell to Paisley.

DALNACARDOCH INN, a hmlt. in the par. of Blair Atholl, in the co. of Perth, 99 miles from Edinburgh, and 9 W. of Blair Atholl. It is situated on the river Garry.

DALPOOL, a hmlt. in the par. of Thurstaston, hund. of Wirrall, in the S. div. of the co. of Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Parkgate.

DALRIADA, the name given to the original principality of the Scots, and afterwards known as Argyleshire. Still earlier this name was given to a principality on the N.E. of Ireland, from which the Scots are said originally to have come. Among much uncertainty there is reason to believe that a colony of the Dalriads of Ulster, settled in Argyleshire, were driven back to Ireland on the Romans leaving Scotland; and that subsequently to that period, about 503, a new colony of the Dalriads, under the leadership of three brothers, named Lorn, Fergus, and Angus, settled in the promontory of Cantire.

DALRIE, a vil. in the par. of Killin, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, near Tyndrum. A battle was fought here between Bruce and the Lord of Lorn.

DALROY, a vil. in the co. of Nairn, Scotland, 11 miles S.W. of Nairn. It is situated on the river Nairn.

DALRY, a par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and is bounded by the cos. of Ayr and Dumfries, and the pars. of Carsphairn, Kells, and Balmaclellan. It has an extreme length of 14 miles, with an extreme breadth of 7½ miles. The river Ken bounds it on the N.W., W., and S., and with the exception of the finely wooded valley of that stream, the surface is for the most part hilly and pastoral, and rises into high mountains on the N. and E.; Black Larg, the northern termination, attaining an elevation of 2,900 feet above the sea. Numerous small streams rise among the hills, and the lochs of Lochinvar, Troston, Knockman, and Knocksting are much frequented by fishers on account of the excellent trout which they contain. Salmon, trout, and pike abound in the Ken. Salmon, however, except in floods, cannot ascend farther than to a cascade at Earlston, which they are seen making ineffectual efforts to ascend. In Lochinvar are the ruins of a castle, anciently belonging to the Gordons of Lochinvar, more recently viscounts of Kenmure. This parish, like the neighbouring mountain districts, retains many traditions respecting the persecutions of the Covenanters under the Stuarts. In the N.W. corner of the churchyard of Dalry are buried Major Stuart of Ardoch, and John Grierson, who were shot by Graham of Claverhouse in 1684. The principal landowners, besides others, are Forbes of Callendar and Oswald of Auchencruive. The village of Dalry, also called the Clachan of Dalry and St. John's Town of Dalry, is situated near the river Ken, at the southern angle of the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright, and synod of Galloway, and in the patron. of Forbes of Callendar. The church was formerly dedicated to St. John the Apostle. Prior to 1640, when the parish of Carsphairn was established, Dalry included the extensive district lying between the Ken and the Deugh. The church was rebuilt in 1831, at an expense of £1,400, in the form of a cross; and the manse in 1829, at a cost of £1,100. In the church are marble tablets to the Kenmure family. The stipend is 17 chalders—half oatmeal and half barley—and varies yearly. The average of seven years preceding 1863 has been £280. There is an United Presbyterian church in the village, and a Free church about a mile to the east of it, both of which derive some benefit from the "Ferguson Bequest Fund." There are two parochial schools, the one at Corseglass, the other at Stroanfreggan. There is also a grammar school, about half a mile from the village, maintained by an endowment of £50, arising from £1,133 vested in Consols, arising from 10 acres of land.

DALRY, a par. in the district of Cunninghame, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It contains a town of its own name, and is bounded by Kilbirnie, Beith, Kilwinning, Ardrossan, West Kilbride, and Largs. It extends about 10 miles from N. to S., with a breadth varying from 1½ mile to 9 miles. The surface consists chiefly of four valleys with their intervening heights, and is watered by the Rye, the Caaf, and the Garnock. The uplands towards the N. attain considerable elevation, Baidland Hill, between the Caaf and the Rye, having a height of 950 feet, and Carwinning Hill, eastward of the Rye, rising 640 feet above sea-level. Ironstone of very rich quality is abundant, and is largely smelted by the Ayrshire, Glengarnock, Eglinton, and Blair iron companies. Limestone and coal are also largely worked. The land is divided among numerous proprietors, the chief of them being Blair of Blair and the Earl of Glasgow. The Glasgow and South-Western railway intersects the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Irvine, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of Blair of Blair. The minister has a stipend of £232. There are in the town and barony of Kersland two other places of worship connected with the Established Church: also a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. Prior to the Reformation, the church of Dalry belonged to the monastery of Kilwinning, and was served by a vicar. The town of Dalry is situated on the right or W. bank of the Garnock, between the confluences of the Rye and the Caaf with that river. It is 16 miles from Paisley, 14 from Kilmarnock, and 9 from Saltcoats. It dates its origin from the beginning of the 17th century, and has since attained considerable prosperity, the principal manufacture being weaving. Population in 1851, 2,706; in 1861, 4,232. Houses in 1851, 240; in 1861, 347.

DALRY, a locality in the par. of St. Cuthbert's, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It is situated 1 mile S.W. of Edinburgh, and the vils. of Easter and Wester Dalry, now undistinguishable as separate communities, formerly occupied its site.

DALRY, WESTER, a vil. in the co. of Edinburgh, 1 mile W. of Edinburgh.

DALRYMPLE, a par. in the district of Kyle, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and is bounded by the pars. of Ayr, Colyton, Dalmellington, Straiton, Kirkmichael, and Maybole. It measures 7 miles from E. to W., with an average breadth of 2 miles. The surface is undulating, and is generally cultivated, and the higher elevations command extensive views. The river Doon, which bounds it on the S. and W., flows between wooded banks and fertile haughs. The Marquis of Ailsa receives more than half the rental, and Oswald of Auchencruive nearly a fourth. Skeldon and Hollybush are the principal mansions. At the former are six oaks, believed to be 300 years old. This parish was anciently traversed by the Roman road between the firths of Solway and Clyde. The Dalrymples, the ancient proprietors of the barony of Dalrymple, held it until the reign of Robert II., when it was acquired by John Kennedy, of Dunmore, in whose family it continued till the reign of Charles II. The Dalrymples, who played an important part in the history of their country, are now represented by the noble family of Stair. The Dalmellington and Ayr railway traverses the parish. The village of Dalrymple is pleasantly situated on the Doon, where that river has a considerable bend, about halfway between Ayr and Maybole. It is much admired by strangers for its neatness. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of about £270. There is also a Free Church preaching station.

DALSCOT, or DARLSCOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Pattishall, hund. of Towcester, in the co. of Northampton, 3½ miles N.E. of Towcester.

DALSERF, a par. in the Middle Ward district of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It contains the town of Larkhall and the vils. of Dalserf, Rosebank, and Millheugh. It extends about 6½ miles in length, between the Clyde on the N.E., and the Avon on the S.W., and has an extreme breadth of 4½ miles. The roads from Glasgow to Carlisle, from Glasgow to Lanark, and from Edinburgh to Ayr traverse the parish, as does also the Lesmahago railway; while the Caledonian railway is easily accessible. The soil is fertile and well cultivated. This parish is in the centre of the luxuriant orchards of Clydesdale. This cultivation, though of great antiquity, is not on the increase, owing to the modern facilities for the importation of fruit from other countries. Coal abounds and is largely worked. Ironstone is known to be abundant on the Avon, and quarries of an excellent freestone are in full activity near the Clyde. The Duke of Hamilton, and Hamilton of Dalserf and Millburn are the principal proprietors. Weaving, lace-making, and mining are the chief employments. The village of Dalserf is pleasantly situated near the Clyde, among gardens, 7 miles S.E. of Hamilton. This par. is in the presb. of Hamilton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of the Duke of Hamilton. The minister has a stipend of £265. The parish church was built in 1655. There is a chapel-of-ease at Larkhall, where also there is an United Presbyterian church. This parish was anciently known as the chapelry of Machan, and belonged to the ancient parish of Cadzow, near Hamilton. It was made the barony of Machan in the 14th century.

DALSHOLM, a vil. in the par. of New Kilpatrick, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland.

DALSTON, a par. in the ward of Cumberland, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles S.W. of Carlisle by the Maryport and Carlisle railway, which has a station here. It is situated on the river Caldew, which, after receiving its tributaries—the Raugh and the Ives—gives name to the Vale of Caldew, through which it flows. Dalston par. comprises the tnshps. of Buckabank, Cumdivock, Hawkesdale, Dalston, Ivegill, and Raughton. It is conjectured that the Roman wall from Carlisle to Bowness was built from stone dug from the large freestone quarries of Shawk in the parish of Dalston. Traces of Roman encampments and of a Druidical circle are in the vicinity. It was the Saxon Daegstan. Rose Castle has been the principal residence of the bishops of Carlisle from the reign of Henry III. It was burnt by Robert Bruce. General Lambert took it by storm from the king's forces, and being afterwards converted into a royalist prison, it was burnt by Major Cholmley's orders. It has since been rebuilt, and now retains but little of the original castellated form. There are two cotton-mills in the parish, and an iron and plating forge for the manufacture of agricultural implements. The village is extensive and well built, and at the eastern extremity, where a customary market is held on Friday, was an ancient stone cross, raised on a flight of steps, and bearing several coats of arms. It is a polling-place for the eastern division of the county. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £283, with some acres of glebe, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and has a bell gable. A new cemetery adjoins the churchyard. There is also a district church at Ivegill, or Highhead, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £80, in the patron. of the vicar. The charities amount to £56 per annum, including rent of land. Paley was Vicar of Dalston for nearly twenty years, from 1774 to 1793. There is an endowed grammar school; and a National school and Wesleyan chapel at Dalston Green. Dalston Hall, the ancient seat of the Dalstons, is now converted into a farmhouse.

DALSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hackney, Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 2½ miles N.E. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated on the North London railway, extending from the village of Hackney towards Kingsland. It has greatly increased of late years, and has some old mansions and numerous neat houses of modern erection. Here is the German hospital, which was founded in 1846; and also a refuge for the destitute, at Dalston House, removed hither from Hackney-road. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £350, in the patron. of the Rector of St. John's, Hackney. The church is dedicated to St. Philip. It was erected in 1841, at a cost of £5,700, and can accommodate 1,000 persons. The School of Industry, in Dalston-lane, was erected by subscription in 1837.

DALSWINTON, a vil. and an estate in the par. of Kirkmahoe, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland. The vil. stands near the Nith, 7½ miles N.N.W. of Dumfries. The estate comprises about 5,000 imperial acres, or about one-third of the parish. It belonged anciently to the Comyns, and afterwards to the Stewarts and Maxwells, passing in the latter part of last century into the hands of Patrick Miller, Esq., who erected an elegant mansion on the site of the ruined castle of the Comyns. It was on a lake here that Miller, in 1788, launched the first steamboat ever attempted.

DALTON, a par. in the district of Annandale, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and is bounded by Lochmaben, Dryfesdale, St. Mungo, Cummertrees, Ruthwell, and Mousewald. Its shape is for the most part that of a parallelogram, stretching 6 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a breadth of about 2½ miles. The surface in the northern portion is hilly, the remainder being flat. The river Annan forms the northern boundary for some 3 miles, and abounds in salmon, and the fish called herling, which is supposed to be peculiar to the rivers which flow into the Solway Firth. On Almagill Hill—an eminence in the N. of the parish, rising some 500 feet above the sea—is an old circular camp, from which a good view is obtained of the greater part of the vale of the Annan, which anciently belonged to the royal family of Bruce. The principal mansions are Dormont House on the Annan, and Rammerscales at the north-eastern angle of the parish. The roads from Dumfries and Lochmaben to Annan traverse the parish, and there is besides easy access to the Caledonian and South-Western railways. The village of Dalton is situated 9 miles E. of Dumfries, and 6 N.W. Annan. This par. is in the presb. of Lochmaben, and synod of Dumfries, and in the patron. of the trustees of Sandeman of Kirkwood. The minister has a stipend of £172. The present par. includes the old pars. of Meikle Dalton and Little Dalton, which were united shortly after the Reformation. Between 1609 and 1633 they were united to Mousewald.

DALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Burton-in-Kendal, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. of Lancaster, 9 miles N.W. of Lancaster, and 1½ mile S.E. of Burton-in-Kendal, near the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. Fairs are held on the 6th June and 23rd October for cattle, horses, and pedlery.

DALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, in the co. of Lancaster, 5½ miles W. of Wigan, and 1½ mile from Newburgh railway station. There is a National school for both sexes. The land is equally divided between pasture and arable, with 50 acres of woodland. The village is considerable.

DALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Newburn, E. div. of Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 9½ miles N.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 4½ N. of Newburn. The chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone structure. There is also a day school.

DALTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hexham, in the S. div. of Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Hexham.

DALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Ravensworth, wap. of West Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2½ miles N.W. of Kirkby-Ravensworth, and 6 N.W. of Richmond. It is situated on Watling Street and the Richmond branch of the North-Eastern railway. There is a chapel of ease, and an endowed school. At Castle-Steads, within this township, are traces of a summer camp of the Romans, situated above the conflux of two rivulets.

DALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Topcliffe, wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4½ miles S. of Thirsk, and 1½ mile W. of Sessay station. It is situated on a branch of the river Codbeck. There are chapels for the Primitive Methodists and Wealeyans.

DALTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Rotherham, S. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles E. of Rotherham. It contains Dalby-Magna, Dalby-Parva, and Dalby-Brook. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £200, in the patron. of G. S. Foljambe, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

DALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Heaton, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles E. of Huddersfield. It is situated on a branch of the river Calder, and contains Dalton Green, Dalton Fold, Mould Green, and Bradley Mills. This village, which is very populous, has recently become a centre of the woollen trade, consisting of all kinds of fancy goods. There is a chapel of ease to Kirk-Heaton. The tithes were commuted in 1799. There is also a place of worship for the Swedenborgians. In the vicinity are several handsome residences, occupied by wealthy manufacturers. Rawthorpe Hall has been divided into several dwelling-houses.

DALTON, a vil. in the par. of Cambuslang, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland.

DALTON-IN-FURNESS, a par., tnshp., and market town in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the N. div. of the co. of Lancaster, 16 miles N.W. of Lancaster, and 5 S.W. of Ulverstone. It is situated near Furness Abbey and Morecombe Bay, and was the capital of Furness. The par. contains the tnshps. and hmlts. of Dalton-in-Furness, Ireleth, Rampside, and Walney Island. The town, which consists principally of one long street, has a station on the Whitehaven and Furness Junction railway. It has recently been much improved, and many of the old houses have been rebuilt. The market-place is situated at the western end of the town. The remains of a Roman road have been discovered, which has led some antiquaries to believe it a place of very early date, but the erection of Furness Abbey by King Stephen was the cause of its first rise into importance. To this abbey Stephen granted many valuable privileges. Lambert Simnel, the pretended Earl of Warwick, landed here in the reign of Henry VII. Several engagements took place in the neighbourhood during the parliamentary war. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £170, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built by the abbots in the reign of Edward III., but rebuilt in 1825. There are also the perpet. curs. of Ireleth, val. £100, Rampside, val. £105, and Walney, val. £90, all in the patron. of the vicar; and the perpet. cur. of Barrow, val. £140, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. There is a Wesleyan chapel and a free school. The charities amount to £407 per annum. In the vicinity are excellent iron-mines and large iron-works. The lord of the manor holds a court-leet twice in the year; and in the castle, built in the reign of Edward III., courts of liberty are held. This castle is a massive quadrilateral building of three stages, having the principal entrance on the S. side. It is supposed to cover the site of the ancient fort of Agricola. From a neighbouring mound the beacon on High Haume may be seen. In 1631 the plague carried off about 500 persons in Dalton and the Isle of Walney. George Romney, the eminent painter, was born here in 1734; his picture, the "Death of General Wolfe," with which he came to London, gained the second prize in the Exhibition, and sold for a large sum. A hunt was established here in 1703, but has long been given up. About a mile and a half to the S. of the town is the sequestered vale of Bekang's Gill, where formerly stood Furness Abbey, the site of which is now called the Deer Park, and is enclosed with a stone wall, part of the ruins having been cleared from the rubbish which formerly concealed their features, by the late Earl of Burlington. Market day is Saturday, and fairs are held on the 28th April, 6th June, and 23rd October.

DALTON-LE-DALE, a par. in the N. div. of the ward of Easington, in the co. of Durham, 2½ miles S.W. of Seaham Harbour station, and 6½ S.W. of Sunderland. It is situated near the coast, and contains the tnshps. of Cold Hesleton, Dawdon, Dalton-le-Dale, and East Morton. The village is considerable. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £201, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is partly in the early English style, with a Roman doorway, now closed. There is also a district church at Seaham Harbour, dedicated to St. John, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £340, in the patron. of the Marquis of Londonderry. The charities amount to £50 per annum. The townships of Cold Hesleton and East Morton, in this parish, are entitled to a share in the rents of Laystock estate, under the bequest of Henry Smith; the former receives £33, and the latter £16 per annum.

DALTON, NORTH, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles S.W. of Great Driffield. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £75, in the patron. of James Walker, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

DALTON PIERCY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hart, N.E. div. of the ward of Stockton, in the co. of Durham, 9 miles N. of Stockton-upon-Tees.

DALTON, SOUTH, a par. in the Hunsley Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles N.W. of Beverley, and 5 from North Dalton. The living is a rect.* of the dioc. of York, val. £450, in the patron. of Lord Hotham. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. In 1822 the tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents, under the Enclosure Act.

DALTON-UPON-TEES, a tnshp. in the par. of Croft, wap. of East Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4½ miles S. of Darlington, and 1 mile from Croft station on the Great Northern railway. The Dean and Chapter of York are lords of the manor.

DALVAULT, a vil. in the par. of Bonhill, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, 1 mile N. of Ardach.

DALVEY, a vil. in the par. of Dyke, in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Forres.

DALWHINNIE, a place in Badenoch, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 103 miles from Edinburgh, and 50 S. of Inverness. It is situated under the Grampians, and is a stage on the highland road, in Glen Truim, at the head of Loch Ericht.

DALWOOD, a chplry. in the par. of Stockland, lib. of Fordington, in the Dorchester div. of the co. of Devon, 3½ miles N.W. of Axminster. It is situated on the river Cory, and until recently formed part of the co. of Dorset. The living is a cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, annexed to the vic. of Stockland. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. A fair for cattle is held on the Wednesday after the 24th August.

DALYSBRIDGE, a vil. in the bar. of Clanmahon, in the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Oldcastle. It is situated on the eastern boundary of the barony, near Lough Sheelin, and on the road from Oldcastle to Killishandra.

DALYSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Trim, in the bar. of Lower Moyfenrath, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland.

DALZIEL, a par. in the Middle Ward district of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It contains the town of Motherwell and the vil. of Windmillhill. It is bounded by the pars. of Hamilton, Bothwell, Shotts, and Cambusnethan, and is situated for the most part between the South Calder on the N. and the Clyde on the S. It is about 4 miles long by 3 broad; but its outline is very irregular, owing to part of the parish lying on the S. of the Clyde, and the main portion separating two parts of the parish of Hamilton. The surface is for the most part even, rising gently from the South Calder and the Clyde. The soil is principally a heavy clay, and a large part of it, near the Clyde, is devoted to orchard grounds, the produce of which is equal to that of any of the neighbouring parishes. Coal is extensively worked, and excellent flag-stones are quarried at Craigneuk. Clay-slate also occurs, and there is a large malleable iron-work. The principal landowners are Lord Belhaven, Hamilton of Dalziel, and others. The roads from Glasgow to Lanark, and from Hamilton to Edinburgh, traverse the parish. There is a station near Motherwell, at the junction of the main western fork of the Caledonian railway with the Clydesdale Junction railway. The greater part of the Dalziel estate was purchased in 1647 by Hamilton of Boggs, the ancestor of the present possessor, from the Earl of Carnwath, one of the Dalziels, the principal family anciently connected with the parish. In this parish are found not a few remains of the Romans; the great western Roman road called Watling Street having formerly traversed it from E. to W. A bridge of a single arch over the South Calder, and evidently of great antiquity, is attributed to them; and there were recently observable, besides the now obliterated road aforesaid, an encampment near the Calder, and another on an eminence commanding one of the most beautiful views in Clydesdale. The mansion of Dalziel, built in 1649 by Hamilton of Boggs, is situated in a glen, through which the burn of Dalziel flows. Attached to it is a tower, or peel house, of great antiquity, 50 feet in height, of no great width, and with walls 8 feet thick. This par. is in the presb. of Hamilton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of Hamilton of Dalziel. The minister has a stipend of £156. There is also a Free Church, and three schools connected with public works and the parish.

DAMAGE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Braunton, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Ilfracombe.

DAMARELL, SYDENHAM. See SYDENHAM DAMARELL, co. Devon.

DAMERHAM, NORTH, a hund. in the N.W. div. of the co. of Wilts, contains the pars. of Kington-St. Michael, Grittleton, Nettleton, and part of Christian-Malford, comprising 10,520 acres.

DAMERHAM, SOUTH, a hund. in the co. of Wilts, contains the pars. of South Damerham, Longbridge, Compton, Chamberlayne, Monkton Deverill, and Martin, comprising 17,080 acres.

DAMERHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of the same name, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles W. of Fordingbridge. The village is situated on the road to Shaftesbury, near a branch of the river Avon. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £280, in the patron. of the Earl of Chichester. The church is dedicated to St. George. The Baptists and Independents have chapels. There are schools, chiefly supported by the vicar.

DAMHEAD, or JAMETSON, a vil. in the par. of Bonhill, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland.

DAMHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Arngask, partly in the co. of Kinross, and partly in that of Fife, Scotland. It is situated in a vale of the Ochil hills, at the meeting point of the co. of Perth with the two cos. mentioned above. It is traversed by the road from Edinburgh to Perth. Fairs are held here in April, May, August, and October.

DAMHEAD OF THEEK, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Ninian's, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland. It is situated in the carse of Stirling, half-way between the town of St. Ninian's and the village of Airth.

DAMIAN-IN-THE-BLEAN. See BLEAN, Kent.

DAMSA, or DAMSAY, one of the Orkney Islands, forming part of the par. of Firth, Scotland. It is a beautiful little island, in the Bay of Firth, less than a mile in circumference, and now used for pasturing sheep.

DAN, a lake in the bar. of Ballincor, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, 6 miles N.W. of Rathdrum. It is formed by the widening of tributary streams which join the Avonmore. Trout and char abound.

DANBURY, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, 5½ miles W. of Maldon, and 5 E. of Chelmsford. It is situated under Dane Hill camp, and contains Runsell and Bicnacre. Danbury signifies the town or castle of the Danes, traces of which are still visible on the summit of the hill, measuring 680 yards in circumference, and the glacis nearly 30 feet deep on the S. side. In Domesday it is mentioned as in the possession of Geoffrey de Mandeville; it afterwards belonged to the St. Cleres, Veres, Greys of Wilton, Darcys, and others. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £435, in the patron. of Sir B. W. Bridges, Bart., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was struck by lightning in 1402, and again in 1750, when the upper part of the spire fell, which has been replaced by a wooden one. The tower contains a peal of five bells, and commands a remarkably fine panoramic view of the surrounding country. In the interior of the church are several monuments, and in the walls are niches containing effigies of three Knights Templars, curiously carved in wood. The charities amount to £44 per annum. The register commences in 1673. There are National schools, and a chapel for Wesleyans. Elm Green, Runsell, Bicnacre, and Gibcrack are places here. Danbury Place, late the seat of the Round family, is now converted into the palace of the bishops of Rochester. It was recently purchased by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, with the surrounding estate, at a cost of £24,700, and given to the see of Rochester in lieu of the palace at Bromley, Kent, which is no longer within that bishopric. Danbury is a meet for the Essex Union hounds. There is an annual fair for toys on the 29th May.

DANBY, a par. in the E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles S.E. of Guisbrough, and 11 from Stokesley. It is situated on the moors, near the river Esk, and contains Ainthorpe, and Castleton, its post town. The par. is very extensive, comprising 14,000 acres, 400 of which are woodland, besides a large tract of moor and waste. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £96, in the patron. of Viscount Downe. The church, the dedication of which is unknown, is an old stone edifice, in the early English style. The chapel-of-ease at Glaisdale was rebuilt about the commencement of the present century. The charities amount to £27 per annum. There is a handsome National school, built of stone, in the Gothic style, by the Viscount Downe, who is lord of the manor. It has an endowment of £6 per annum. There are chalybeate and mineral springs. Danby Castle is the seat of Viscount Downe. Danby-upon-Yore is the seat of the Scropes, an old and influential family. On a neighbouring hill are the ruins of Danby Castle.

DANBY, or DANBY-ON-YORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Steward, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles E. of Middleham.

DANBY-WISKE, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of East Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N.W. of Northallerton railway station, and 9 N.E. of Bedale. It is situated on the river Wiske, near the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. with the perpet. cur. of Yafforth, £490, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Cust. The church is a stone edifice. The charities amount to £2 per annum. There is a Wesleyan chapel.

DANDDYFRYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Towyn, in the co. of Merioneth, near Towyn.

DANDELION, a hmlt. in the Isle of Thanet, in the co. of Kent, 1 mile W.S.W. of Margate. It is a picturesque spot, and a favourite resort of the visitors from Margate. The ruins of the ancient seat of Dent-de-Lyon, which has been corrupted to Dandelion, may still be seen. It belonged to the Petits in 1445, and ultimately came into the possession of Lord Holland.

DANE BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Great Budworth, in the co. of Chester, near Northwich. It is situated on the river Dane, near its junction with the Weaver. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

DANEBURY HILL, a circular camp, in the co. of Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Stockbridge, said to be, together with the barrows in the neighbourhood, the work of King Cnut. It measures 680 yards in circumference.

DANE COURT, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles S.E. of Margate. There is also another Dane Court in the same county, 5 miles W. of Deal.

DANE END, or MUNDANE FREWEL, a hmlt. in the pars. of Great and Little Mundane, in the co. of Hertford, 5 miles N. of Ware. There are traces of camps and tumuli here.

DANEHILL, a chplry. and vil. in the par. of Fletching, hund. of Rushmonden, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 6 miles N.E. of Cuckfield. The living is a cur.* annexed to the vic. of Fletching. It is situated near the river Ouse.

DANEHILL HORSTED, a hund. in the rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, contains the pars. of Selmeston, Horsted-Keynes, and Tarring Neville, comprising 8,650 acres.

DANE PITTS, a camp of about half an acre, at Ripple, in the co. of Kent. This, with another very near, is supposed to have been made by Julius Cæsar.

DANE RIVER, situated on the borders of Derby and Cheshire, whence it rises, and runs 30 miles W. to the river Weaver at Northwich.

DANESCASTLE, a post vil. in the par. of Carrick, bar. of Bargy, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Taghmon. It is so called from the neighbouring ruin, and is supposed to be of early Norman origin. The place affords conveniences for sea-bathing, and is much frequented during the season. There are Roman Catholic chapels and schools, and a dispensary.

DANESFORT, or DUNFERT, a par. in the bar. of Shillelogher, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Kilkenny. Bennet's Bridge is its post town. It is situated on the W. side of the valley of the Nore. The soil is good, on a substratum of limestone. The road from Kilkenny to Knocktopher traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Burnchurch, £700, in the patron. of the crown. There are Roman Catholic chapels here and at Bennet's Bridge, which are united to those of Grange, Kells, and Ladyswell. There is a National school at Bennet's Bridge, besides two other day schools. Danesfort House is the principal residence. An ancient castle formerly stood here, and there are some remains of Danish fortifications.

DANESHALT, or DUNSHELT, a vil. in the par. of Auchtermuchty, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It is situated 1 mile S. of the town of Auchtermuchty, and 2½ miles N. of Falkland. It is said to have been the first haltingplace of the Danes after their defeat on Falkland Moor.

DANES MOOR, or DUNS MOOR, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles N.E. of Banbury. Here the Yorkists, under the Earl of Pembroke, were defeated in 1469; and Charles I. quartered here before the battle of Edgehill, in 1642.

DANESTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Duleek and Skreen, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Duleek. Navan is its post town. It is situated on the river Nannywater and the road from Dublin to Slane. The soil is various in quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Kentstown, £307, in the patron. of the crown and Lord Dunsany.

DANE STREET, a vil. in the hund. of Chart, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 5 miles N. of Ashford, and near Chilham.

DANGAN, or DANGANBEG, a small post town in the par. of Killererin, bar. of Tiaquin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 23 miles N. of Galway. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Westport, near Horse-leap Lake.

DANGAN, a demesne in the par. of Laracor, bar. of Moyfenrath, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Trim. This once beautiful seat belonged to the Wellesleys. The early days of Richard Marquis Wellesley were spent here, and Arthur Duke of Wellington was born in the mansion, which has since been burnt down. The whole of this property was sold to Mr. Burroughs.

DANGAN, OLD, a vil. in the par. of Kilmacow, bar. of Iverk, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Waterford. It is situated on a small stream falling into the Suir. Here are large flour-mills.

DANGAN, a bog in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Galway. It lies by the side of Lough Corrib, and extends over about 1,200 acres (Irish). It is traversed by three branches of the Galway river.

DANGANDARGAN, a par. in the bars. of Clanwilliam and Middlethird, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Cashel. Golden is its post town. It lies on the E. of the Suir valley, and on the road from Golden to Clonmel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Attrassel, £674, in the patron. of the bishop.

DANGANDONOVAN, DINGINDONOVAN, or DANION, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Castlemartyr. Killeagh is its post town. The surface is mountainous, and the soil of medium quality. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne. The church is in ruins. Glengarra and Ballyre are the principal residences. Here are some interesting ruins of a castle founded by the Geraldines in 1396. It was surrendered by Earl Desmond to Captain Raleigh, held for a short time by M'Carty, and eventually destroyed by fire. Fairs are held on the 2nd February, 1st April, and 5th August.

DANGANMORE, an ancient castle in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated near Knocktopher, and gave the title of baron to the Comerfords.

DANGRY, one of the principal peaks of the Fews range of hills, in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It stands near Newtown Hamilton, and rises above 1,000 feet above the sea level.

DANIEL'S, ST., a hmlt. in the hund. of Castlemartin, in the co. of Pembroke, 1 mile S.W. of Pembroke. There is another hmlt. of the same name in the co. of Hertford.

DANIELTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, near to Melrose.

DANION. See DANGANDONOVAN, co. Cork.

DANNABY, or DENABY, a tnshp. in the par. of Mexborough, S. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles S.W. of Doncaster. It is situated on the Dearne canal and the river Don.

DANSEY, a hmlt. in the pars. of Amport and Appleshaw, in the co. of Hants, 3 miles W. of Andover.

DANSON PARK, in the par. of Bexley, co. of Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Woolwich. It was formerly the property of Archbishop Parker; and was afterwards laid out by Brown for the Boyds, who erected the house which now stands there.

DANTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Humbleton, in the middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles N.E. of Hull. The Hon. A. Coventry is lord of the manor.

DANTSEY. See DAUNTSEY, co. Wilts.

DAN-Y-GRAIG and Y-PARK, in the co. of Brecon. It is situated near Llangattock and the vale of Clydach.

DAN-Y-GRAIG, in the co. of Glamorgan, 1½ mile E. of Swansea. Here is a lunatic asylum for Glamorgan, Pembroke, Cardigan, and Carmarthen.

DAPHNE, a hmlt. in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Wexford.

DARBY END, a vil. in the par. of Dudley, in the co. of Worcester, near Dudley.

DARBY'S GARDEN, a small island lying in the Lower Lake of Killarney, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Glenagh-point.

DARBY'S HOLE, a cave close to Beachy Head, in the co. of Sussex. The object for which it was made was to afford a shelter to shipwrecked people. The idea was conceived and carried out by a clergyman, and six others have since been constructed by the committee of Lloyd's.

DARCY LEVER. See LEVER DARCY, co. Lancaster.

DARENTH, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 2½ miles S.E. of Dartford, and 1 mile from the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. It is situated on the river Darenth, which abounds with trout. The manor was given in A.D. 940 to the abbots of Canterbury, and in 1196 was exchanged with Rochester Abbey for Lambeth. Vestiges of the cell dedicated to St. Margaret still exist. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £339, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a small edifice, partly Saxon, and contains a curiously-carved font. The charities amount to £22 per annum. There is also a Wesleyan chapel and a National school.

DARESBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, in the co. of Chester, 5 miles N.E. of Frodsham. It is a station on the Manchester, Warrington, and Chester section of the Birkenhead railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £175, in the patron. of G. Greenall, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The charities amount to £49 per annum. There is an endowed school. The executors of the late S. Chadwick, Esq., are lords of the manor. The Cheshire hounds meet here.

DARFIELD, a par. partly in the wap. of Staincross and partly in the N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles W. of Doncaster, and 3½ S.E. of Barnsley. It has a station on the North Midland railway, and at Ardley in this parish is a station on the Barnsley branch of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire line. The rivers Dearne and Dove, and the Dearne and Dove canal, intersect the parish. On the banks of the two first are several large corn-mills and extensive bleaching grounds for linen and yarn. The whole district is rich in mineral wealth, and there is an extensive colliery called Darfield Main. The village, which is populous, contains several establishments for smelting iron ore, and foundry for castings. The woollen manufacture is also carried on to some extent. The living is divided into two moieties. The first moiety is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £1,500, in the patron. of the Rev. H. Cooke. The second moiety is a vic.,* val. £220, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The parish church, situated on an eminence, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower. It contains many interesting monuments. There are besides, the following district churches:—Ardsley, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £120, in the patron. of the vicar. Worsbrough, a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the patron. of the rector. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is in the early English style. Also Worsbrough St. Thomas, a perpet. cur. in the patron. of the crown and the Archbishop of York alternately. The church has been recently built. There are besides chapels-of-ease at Wombwell and Houghton. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £71 per annum. There is an almshouse for four widows, founded by the Saville family.

DARFOULD, a hmlt. in the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 2½ miles S.W. of Worksop. It is situated near the river Ryton and Sherwood Forest.

DARGIE, a vil. in the Invergowrie district of the par. of Liff and Benvie, in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It is situated about 3 miles W. of Dundee, and although surrounded by the co. of Forfar, belongs to that of Perth.

DARGLE, a picturesque ravine in the half bar. of Rathdown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is overhung by wooded declivities on either side. Dargle rivulet rises near Crokans Pond Mountain, and, at Powerscourt, runs over a fall of 300 feet, and through Dargle Glen 10 miles to the sea near Bray.

DARK LANE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Longwood, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles W. of Huddersfield.

DARLASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stone, S. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles N.W. of Stone. It is situated on the river Trent, and was the seat of Wulfhere, King of Mercia.

DARLASTON, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 2½ miles S.W. of Walsall, 2 E. of Bilston, and 1 mile N.W. of Wednesbury. It has a station on the Birmingham and Wolverhampton section of the London and North-Western railway. This parish is mentioned in Saxon history as the place where Wulfhere, King of Mercia, had his palace, the ruins of which still exist at Burybank, fortified with a double vallum and intrenchments about 250 yards in diameter. Near to it is a barrow. The village, which is situated in the midst of a rich mining and manufacturing district, is lighted with gas from the extensive works at West Bromwich, about 4 miles distant. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £266, in the patron. of Simeon's Trust. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a plain brick structure. The charities amount to £6 per annum. There is also a district church, dedicated to St. George, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Independents; also, National and Sunday schools.

DARLEITH, a vil. in the par. of Bonhill, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Dumbarton.

DARLETON. See DARLTON, co. Nottingham.

DARLESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Prees, Whitchurch div. of the hund. of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles S. of Whitchurch.

DARLEY, a par. in the hunds. of High Peake and Wirksworth, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles S.E. from Bakewell, and 5½ N.W. of Matlock, its post town. It has a station on the Buxton branch of the Midland railway. The parish is situated on the river Derwent, and contains the tnshps. of Wensley, Snitterton, and Griff Grange, and the hmlt. of Darley Dale. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £431, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, with a handsome tower: amongst its monuments is one to John of Darley, who was killed in the crusades. In the churchyard is a very old yew tree, which shows nearly 44 rings per inch. At Cross Green, South Darley, is a district church dedicated to St. Mary. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £94, in the patron. of the rector. A priory was built here in the reign of Henry II. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is an endowed school in the village, and a National school, with a small endowment, at Darley Dale. Flax-spinning is carried on extensively. Staunton Woodhouse is the seat of the Duke of Rutland, who is lord of the manor. Fairs for cattle and sheep are held on the adjacent moors on the 13th May and 27th October.

DARLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hampsthwaite, lower div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5½ miles W. of Ripley, and 4 from Pateley Bridge. It is situated on the river Nidd. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Society of Friends, and Primitive Methodists. There is also a school for both sexes. The township is united with Menwith.

DARLEY ABBEY, a chplry. in the par. of St. Alkmund, hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, in the co. of Derby, 1 mile N. of Derby. It is situated on the river Derwent, near the Leeds railway. There are traces of a small Austin abbey founded by the abbots of St. Helen's in the reign of Henry I., and given to the West family, from which the place takes the suffix to its name. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of T. W. Evans, Esq. The church is a modern structure, erected and endowed by the late Walter Evans, Esq., in which is a monument to the founder and his wife. There are also schools, erected by Mrs. Evans at a cost of about £3,000. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of paper, and in cotton spinning.

DARLINGSCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Tredington, upper div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 2½ miles N.W. of Shipston-on-Stour.

DARLINGSHAUGH, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland. It forms a suburb to Galashiels, and is contiguous to the Selkirkshire portion of that town.

DARLINGTON, a suburb of the town of Stewarton, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It was originally called Templehouse, and is sometimes called Deanston, after William Deans, who introduced the woollen and carpet manufactures into the district.

DARLINGTON, a ward in the co. of Durham, separated into three divs. The N.W. div. contains the pars. of Escombe, Brancepeth, Witton-le-Wear, Stanhope, Wolsingham, and parts of Lanchester and St. Andrew Auckland, comprising 145,430 acres; the S.E. div., the pars. of Coniscliffe, Aycliffe, Darlington, Merrington, Highington, Witworth, and parts of Gainford, St. Andrew Auckland, St. Oswold, and Haughton-le-Skerne, comprising 56,450 acres; the S.W. div., the pars. of Middleton-in-Teesdale, Cockfield, Staindrop, Winston, and part of Gainford, comprising 80,600 acres.

DARLINGTON, or DARNTON, a market town and par. in the S.E. div. of the ward of Darlington, in the co. of Durham, 236½ miles N.N.W. of London by road, and 18 S. of Durham. It has stations on the North-Eastern, Stockton and Darlington, Great Northern, South Durham, and Midland lines. The parish is situated on the banks of the rivers Skerne and Tees, comprising the market town of Darlington, and the tnshps. of Archdeacon-Newton, Blackwell, and Cockerton. The town is of great antiquity, and was given, with its dependencies, in King Ethelred's reign, to St. Cuthbert, patron of the see of Durham. In 1164 Hugh de Pudsey, Bishop of Durham, erected an episcopal palace here, in which many of his successors afterwards resided. Darlington was a borough by prescription, and enjoyed some privileges under the bishops of Durham, to whom it belonged.—The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the mills for spinning wool, flax, and cotton, in the iron works of the South Durham Iron Company, and in extensive tanneries, breweries, and maltings.—It is a polling place for the southern division of the county, and a petty sessions town. It is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water. The population in 1851 was 11,228, with 1,921 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 15,781, with 2,683 inhabited houses.—The town, rising gradually from the river Skerne, consists of several good streets, most of the houses being modern. The public buildings include an elegant townhall, in the Italian style, built in 1808; a mechanics' institute, erected in 1843 at a cost of £2,400; a dispensary; extensive gas-works; the new market and clock-tower, erected in 1863; a joint-stock banking company, and a savings-bank.—The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the Duke of Cleveland. The church, which is dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower and a spire 180 feet high, also six bells, on which the clock rings a tune every fourth hour. It has carved stone walls, monuments of the Allan family, and had formerly four chauntries. The parish register commences in 1590. There are two other churches: one dedicated to the Holy Trinity, a cur.* of the val. of £212, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Durham: it has accommodation for 1,000 persons; the other, dedicated to St. John, is a cur.* of the val. of £160, in the patron. of the crown and the bishop alternately; it was consecrated in 185-, the foundation stone having been laid in 1847 by George Hudson, then M.P. and Lord Mayor of York. This church has a tower with five bells, and has some fine stained-glass windows. The Roman Catholics, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, and the Society of Friends have places of worship here. There is a cemetery about a mile from the town; the portion allotted for members of the Established Church having been consecrated by the Bishop of Durham in April, 1858. Queen Elizabeth's free grammar school was founded 15th June, 1563, by letters patent. Its revenue amounts to £247 per annum. A new school was built in 1813, and an upper story added in 1846. There is also Mrs. Calverley's blue-coat school. The principal bridge across the Skerne is close to the parish church; it is three-arched, with stone parapet, and was erected in 1768 at a cost of £1,000. Another stone bridge crosses the Cockerbeck in Norgate.—The county court is held once a month in the police court.—The public baths were erected in 1850, and the People's Park, which is about a mile from the town, was formed in 1853, under the auspices of the Local Board of Health, and contains about twenty acres of land. A subscription library was established here in 1825, and now contains upwards of 4,000 volumes. The Darlington and Stockton Times is published every Saturday.—The charities, which are numerous, amount to a considerable sum annually.—There are four circular pits at Oxen-y-field, called the Hell Kettles. They are always full, being unaffected by the tide of the river Tees, with which they are on a level; the water will not mix either with milk or soap, and never freezes. The railway, constructed in 1821-25 from Witton Park Colliery to Stockton, was the first public railway in England upon which locomotive steam-engines were used: its original cost was £125,000 for 24 miles, the line passing within half a mile of Darlington.—The Duke of Cleveland derives his title of earl from Darlington. Blackwall Grange was the seat of George Allan, the antiquary; it still belongs to the Allan family.—Market days are Monday and Friday. Fairs are held every alternate Monday for cattle, also the first Monday in March, Easter Monday, Whit Monday, 10th November, and the second Monday after that day.

DARLISTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Prees, Whitchurch div. of the hund. of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 4½ miles N.E of Wem. It is situated on the river Tern.

DARLSCOT. See DALSCOT.

DARLTON, or DARLETON, a par. in the South Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles S.E. of Retford, and 3 N.E. of Tuxford. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the vic. of Durham and cur. of Ragnall, £252, in the patron. of the prebend. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a Gothic structure, in good repair. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school.

DARMSDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Barking, hund. of Bosmere, in the co. of Suffolk, 1½ mile S. of Needham Market station, and 6½ miles from Ipswich. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the rect.* of Barking, £840, in the patron. of the Earl of Ashburnham, who is lord of the manor.

DARNALL, a chplry. in the par. of Sheffield, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles E. of Sheffield. It is joined to Attercliffe. The village is situated on the road from Sheffield to Worksop, and most of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of cutlery, quarrying stone, or in the collieries. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £150, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1841, at the cost of £2,500. There are National schools, and almshouses for poor widows, built by S. Staniforth, Esq. Darnall Hall, built by the Staniforths, was afterwards a seat of the dukes of Norfolk.

DARNHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitegate, or New Church, first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. of Chester, 4½ miles S.W. of Middlewich. It is situated on a small stream called Ashbrook, near the Newton railway. T. G. Corbet, Esq., is lord of the manor.

DARNICK, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland. It is situated near Melrose, and has an ancient tower of the 15th century.

DAROWEN, a par. in the hund. of Machynlleth, in the co. of Montgomery, 5½ miles N.E. of Machynlleth. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Twymyn and Dovey, and contains Noddfa and Caerseddfan. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £155, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Tudyr. The charities amount to £8 per annum.

DARRAGH, or GLENROE, a par. in the bar. of Coshlea, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Kilfinane, and 8 miles S.E. of Kilmalloch, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Kilfinane, £241, in the patron. of the Earl of Cork. There is no church, but a small day school. Darragh House and Ballynacorty House are the principal seats. A new road was recently cut from Limerick to Michelstown. There are vestiges of a large oak forest, from which the parish derives its name. There are also remains of a churchyard and hospital.

DARRAS HALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ponteland, W. div. of Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles S. of Ponteland, and 6½ N.W. of Newcastle.

DARRINGTON, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3½ miles S.E. of Pontefract, near the railway line, and contains the tnshps. of Darrington, Stapleton, and Darrington Leys. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £512, in the patron. of the Archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Luke and All Saints. The charities amount to £8 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a National school. The Right Hon. Thomas Estcourt, M.P., is lord of the manor.

DARRYNANE, late the residence of Daniel O'Connel, in the bar. of Dunkerrin, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It stands on the coast, 4½ miles S. of Waterville. In the vicinity are some monastic remains, and a monument of the O'Connels.

DARSELLS, a hmlt. in the co. of Hertford, 2 miles S.E. of Buntingford.

DARSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 5½ miles N.E. of Saxmundham, and 2 from Yoxford. Part of the parish is clay, the remainder a rich loam, with some hills in the southern portion. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £101, in the patron. of the Earl of Stradbroke. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a Gothic structure, and has a brass of Anne Bedinfield, 1641. The charities amount to £28 per annum. There is a day and Sunday-school. Darsham Hall is the seat of the family of Purvis.

DART RIVER, rises in Dartmoor Forest, at Cranmeer, in the co. of Devon, and runs 30 miles S.E. to the sea at Dartmouth. It is so called from its swiftness, and has on its banks some fine scenery.

DARTFORD HUNDRED. See AXTON, Kent.

DARTFORD, a par., market and petty sessions town, in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 17 miles from London, and 7 miles from Gravesend. It has a station on the North-Kent railway. The town is pleasantly situated in a valley between two hills, on the river Darenth, from which it derives its name. In Domesday it is written Tarentefort. It gives the title of viscount to the Earl of Jersey. Dartford is mentioned in history as the place where Isabella, sister of Henry III., was married by proxy, in 1235, to the German emperor, Frederick II. Edward III., on his return from France, held a tournament here, and in 1355 he founded a nunnery to commemorate the victory of Cressy and the surrender of Calais. A portion of this nunnery, which was afterwards used as a palace by Henry VIII. and Queen Elizabeth, still remains, and is now occupied as a farmhouse. It was in this town that Wat Tyler slew the tax-gatherer, and raised insurrection. Christopher Waid was burnt at the stake at Dartford-Brent in 1555; to his memory a memorial has been erected in the old burial-ground. In 1590 Godfrey Box, a native of Brabant, first introduced into England in this town the process of rolling and slitting iron; and here it was that Sir John Spielman, a German, in the same century introduced the first paper-mill and planted the first limes. To his memory a fine monument has been erected in the parish church. Richard Trevethick, the inventor of the locomotive steam-engine, died and was buried here. The manufacturing trade of Dartford is considerable. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the powder, paper, silk-printing, and corn mills. The "Ettrick Forest Paper Mill" has been erected here, and an extensive tannery has been some years in full operation, belonging to Messrs. Hepburn, of Southwark. Other manufactories are about to be established on the creek. There are likewise manufactories for type-printing machines, for Bank of England note and paper moulds, and other printing works. The town is lighted with gas, and consists of one wide street, from which two smaller ones diverge at right angles. There is a bridge over the Darent, which is navigable up to the town for boats, and on the banks of the river are numerous mills. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £534, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester, but until recently in that of Rochester. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a handsome structure in the Gothic style of architecture, with Norman tower. It contains several old brasses, wall paintings, monuments, and effigies. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists have each a chapel here. A new cemetery has lately been formed on the East Hill. The workhouse will contain 500 inmates. A new county court has recently been erected. There is a free grammar school, endowed with £50 per annum: the National schools have an endowment of about £52 per annum; there are also the Spittell almshouses. The total income of all the charities, including the schools, is £567. Traces of the Roman Watling Street appear on the

S. side of the high-road, on Dartford-Brent. The Poor-law Union contains twenty-one parishes. A corn market is held here every Saturday, and a cattle market the first Tuesday in each month. A fair is held on the 2nd August.

DARTINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles N. of Totnes. It is situated on the Bristol and Exeter railway, and the river Dart, and contains Venton, Week, Staple, and Brooking. The manor-house was originally given by William the Conqueror to William de Falaise, and was the principal residence of Richard II.'s half brother, John Duke of Exeter. It is situated on an eminence, and was formerly much larger than at present. In Elizabeth's time it descended to the family of Champernowne, formerly of Modbury. The village, which is small, is situated near the intersection of the roads from Totnes to Plymouth and to Ashburton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £924, in the patron. of H. Champernowne, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient building, and contains a beautiful carved pulpit, temp. Henry I., a screen, and several monuments to the Champernowne and other famils. At Brooking is a chapel-of-ease, and a school-house at Shinner's Bridge. The hall is an extensive and fine old building, and has some fine paintings. Longcause, Allerton, Cobberton, Folley, Billamy, Staverton Bridge, Lownard, Puddowin, Droridge, Hood, Belleigh, Cott, and Barton are places here.

DARTMOOR FOREST, a quarter in the par. of Lidford, hund. of Lifton, in the co. of Devon, 5½ miles N.E. of Tavistock. It comprises 53,900 acres, and is part of the Great Moor between Oakhampton, Tavistock, and Moreton Hampstead, belonging to the duchy of Cornwall. It consists of high rugged peaks, in height from 1,200 to 2,050 feet, on some of which are Druidical circles, and on others beacons. Copper, iron, tin, and other minerals are found and worked here. A few dwarf trees, the only remains of King John's Forest, may be seen. The stannary parliament is held at Crockerne. At the top of Brent Tor is an old church. The railway goes to Plymouth. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Exeter. Mr. Morgan's hounds meet here; also Mr. Newton's, and the Forest harriers. A fair is held at Two Bridges on the first Wednesday after the 16th August.

DARTMOUTH, or CLIFTON DARTMOUTH HARDNESS, a par., seaport, petty sessions, and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Coleridge, in the co. of Devon, 25 miles S. of Exeter. It is pleasantly situated on an acclivity at the mouth of the river Dart, and contains Townstal, Norton, and Oldmill. The manor of Dartmouth was granted by William the Conqueror to Judhael de Totnais, but subsequently became vested in the corporation. It was at this port that the Crusaders embarked for the Holy Land in 1190. Dartmouth was destroyed by fire by the French in the reigns of Richard I. and Henry IV., but on their landing a third time, in 1404, they were intercepted and slain by the peasants. Both the contending parties warmly contested this place during the parliamentary war; it was garrisoned by Prince Maurice and stormed by Fairfax in 1646.—It is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councilmen, with a recorder; and from the reign of Edward III. to the passing of the Reform Bill returned two members to parliament; it now returns but one member.—The Newfoundland fisheries first gave importance to the trade of Dartmouth, and they are still carried on to a great extent. The harbour is famed for its security, and is capable of containing 500 vessels. The largest ship in the royal navy could anchor 4 miles up the Dart. The entrance to the harbour is guarded by a fortified castle, opposite Kingswear old castle. A few years back a government commission gave the preference to Dartmouth as a foreign mail-packet station, though Southampton still retains the privilege. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the fisheries, in ship-building, rope-making, and the coasting trade.—St. Petrox light, 49 feet high, and visible 7 miles, was erected in 1837. There are two quays: the New Quay, or New Ground, a commodious landing-place, with a fine promenade, lined with trees and faced with handsome shops; and Bearscove Quay, on which the custom-house is built. Steamboats ply to and from Totnes every day. On the western shore of the river are several large yards for ship-building. The limits of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs are co-extensive, comprising 799 houses, inhabited by a population of 4,508 in 1851, which in 1861 had decreased to 4,444, though the houses had increased to 825. The streets rise gradually from the water, and have the appearance of terraces, interspersed with gardens, at different elevations. Some of the houses are very old, and adorned with carvings. The scenery in the neighbourhood is very beautiful. The Keep is a new castellated stone building, and there are other recently erected and handsome houses. The castle is surrounded by rocky cliffs, and the spring-tide all but reaches to the walls of the fortifications. There is a fort, or block-house, towards the channel, which, in 1856, was fitted up as a summer residence.—Warfleet, about three-quarters of a mile out of the town, is a picturesque valley, where a large brewery and corn-mill have been built. Paradise Fort, mentioned by General Fairfax, used to stand to the N. of Warfleet, but it has lately been removed to make room for a marine villa.—The living, Townstal with St. Saviour's annexed, is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with the cur. of St. Saviour, £135, in the patron. of Sir H. P. Seale, Bart. The church, which is dedicated to St. Clement, is an ancient stone structure in the early English style, with square tower and four bells. The parish church of St. Saviour, or Mayor's Church, as sometimes called, was erected in the 13th century, as a chapel of ease to Townstal. It is a stone structure, with square tower and eight bells; the internal workmanship is very beautiful. There is a stone pulpit, and a wooden screen supposed to be the finest in England. A western window and doorway were added about 1853. The altar-piece, "Christ raising the Widow's Son," was painted by Brockedon, a native of Totnes. There are brasses of Sir J. Hawley (the founder of the chancel) and family, in 1389. There is also the church of St. Petrox, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120, in the patron. of the Rector of Stoke Fleming. It is an old stone edifice, and stands on an eminence behind the castle, a mile S. of the town. A chapel-of-ease, in the Higher-street, was erected in 1831 at a cost of about £2,000, raised by subscription. The Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, Independents, and Plymouth Brethren have each a chapel.—A floating bridge was opened in 1831 across the river at Sand Quay, some 1,650 feet broad; and convenient for persons going to Exeter, Brixham, &c. Adjoining the New Quay are four ancient houses with rich exterior carvings of the 17th century, one is used as an assembly-room, and for lectures and concerts. A railway, connecting Dartmouth with Torquay and Exeter, is now in rapid progress. There are also a bank and a prison. A market-house was erected in 1829, and there are National schools for 400 children. The charities amount to £94 per annum.—Sir H. P. Seale, Bart., is lord of the manor. Dartmouth gives the title of earl to the Legges, of Dartmouth House.—A regatta is held in August. A market is held weekly on Friday, for the sale of provisions, and one on the Monday before the third Wednesday in each month for cattle.

DARTON, a par. in the wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles S.W. of Wakefield, and 3¾ N.W. of Barnsley. It is situated on the Dearne and Dove canal, and contains the tnshps. of Fexborough and Barugh, and the vils. of Mapplewell, Darton, and Staincross, the last giving name to the wap. In the village of Mapplewell the inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving, and in the manufacture of nails and vitriol, and near Darton are large collieries and quarries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of T. W. Beaumont, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone building in the Gothic style, and contains a marble monument to John Silvester. There is a district church at Gawber, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £45, in the patron. of the bishop. The Wesleyans, New Connexion Methodists, and Nonconformists have places of worship in the parish. The charities amount to £273 per annum. There is a free school, originally endowed by George Beaumont in 1688, for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The other charities amount to about £50 per annum.

DARTRY, a bar. in the co. of Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The bar. of Monaghan forms its N. and N.E. boundary, that of Cremorne its eastern; the co. of Cavan lies on the S., and that of Fermanagh on the W. It is nearly 9 miles square, comprising 59,610 acres. The river Fin passes through its western portion, and the Cootehill through its eastern. It contains the pars. of Ematris, Killevan, and Aghabog, and parts of Clones, Drummully, and Currin, and the vil. of Newbliss.

DARVEL, DERVAL, or DERVILLE, a vil. in the par. of Loudon, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It originally belonged to the Knights Templars in 1362, and stands on the right bank of Irvine Water, on the road from Kilmarnock to Strathaven. The chief branch of industry is hand-loom weaving. Here is a Reformed Presbyterian church and two schools, one belonging to the Establishment, the other to the Free Church.

DARVER, or DERVER, a par. in the bar. of Louth, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3½ miles N.W. of Castle Bellingham. Louth is its post town. The soil is very rich and well cultivated. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £180, in the patron. of the Primate. The parish has no church. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Dromiskin. There is a school supported by the National Board. Darver Castle is the adjacent seat; near it are the ruins of the old church.

DARWEN, LOWER, a tnshp. in the par. of Blackburn, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. of Lancaster, 2½ miles S.E. of Blackburn. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar. A chapel was erected by the Parliamentary Commissioners in 1829, at the cost of £5,500.

DARWEN, OVER, a tnshp. and chplry. in the above par. and co., 4½ miles S.E. from Blackburn, and 7 from Haslingden. It is situated near the head of the river Darwen, which rises near Rumbles Moor. There are collieries, slate-quarries, print-works, and bleach-grounds. The village is lighted with gas, under the provisions of an Act passed in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur., formerly in the dioc. of Chester, now in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £200, in the patron. of the Vicar of Blackburn. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a handsome building, erected in 1829. A church dedicated to the Holy Trinity has also been erected. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £74, in the patron. of the Vicar of Blackburn. There are chapels for Wesleyans and others. Fairs are held on the first Thursdays in October and May for cattle and horses, and a pleasure fair on Holy Thursday.

DARWENT RIVER. See DERWENT RIVER.

DASSETT, AVON. See AVON DASSETT, co. Warwick.

DASSETT BURTON. See BURTON DASSETT, co. Warwick.

DASSETT PARVA, a hmlt. in the par. of Burton Dassett, hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles N.E. of Kington.

DATCHET, a par. in the hund. of Stoke, in the co. of Bucks, 2 miles S.E. of Eton, and 1½ mile E. of Windsor, on the South-Western railway, which has a station here. It is situated on the eastern bank of the Thames, which separates it from Windsor, and commands a fine view of the Thames from the bridge. Shakspeare has made Datchet Mead the scene of Falstaff's punishment in the "Merry Wives of Windsor." The village is charmingly situated in a district of great fertility, and in the vicinity are several elegant residences. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £125, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a brass to R. Hanbury. The charities amount to £119 per annum, of which above half is the rent of the Bridge estate, bequeathed in 1644 by Robert Barker for the erection and maintenance of a bridge across the Hollow-way. Here is a Baptist chapel. Near the Albert bridge are the remains of an old monastery. Ditton Park is the residence of Lady Montague.

DATCHWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Broadwater, in the co. of Herts, 5½ miles N.W. of Hertford, and 2½ N.E. of Welwyn station. The village, which is small, is situated on the great road from London to York. The soil is chiefly gravel alternating with clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £382, in the patron. of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice of flint and stone. The charities amount to £2 per annum. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £475. Here is a National school. Bragbury End, Bulls Green, Hook's Cross, and Burnham Green, are places here.

DAUBHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Bolton-le-Moors, hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles from Bolton, and 10 N.W. of Manchester. It is a station on the Bolton and Kenyon junction of the London and North-Western railway.

DAUNTSEY, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 4½ miles S.E. of Malmesbury, and 6 W. of Wootton-Bassett station. It is situated on the river Avon, and comprises some of the richest meadow-land in England. At the Norman Conquest, Dauntsey belonged to Malmesbury Abbey, whence it came to the Dauntseys, Straddlings, and Danvers families, and through the crown to the great Earl of Peterborough. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £344, in the patron. of the Rev. W. E. Elwell. The church is dedicated to St. James. The interior is handsomely embellished with richly-carved oak and some curious remains of ancient stained glass. It contains some old brasses and several monuments—one to the Earl of Peterborough and one to the Earl of Danby. There is an almshouse, endowed with £50 per annum by the Earl of Danby in 1667. The other charities amount to £21 per annum. It gave the title of baron to the son of James II.

DAURUS, a fishing vil. in the bar. of Boylagh, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It lies on the side of Daurus Creek, 4 miles N.W. of Ardara. Daurus headland is the termination of the promontory running up the side of Lochrusmore Bay. Here is a coastguard station.

DAVENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 2½ miles S.W. of Northwich, and 5 N.E. of Middlewich. It is situated on the river Daven or Dane, near the Grand Junction canal, and comprises the tnshps. of Bostock, Davenham, Eaton, Leftwich, Moulton, Newhall, Rudheath, Shipbrook, Shurlach, Stanthorne, Wharton, and Whatcroft. The name of this parish is derived from its position on the river Daven. Rudheath was the scene of an action between the royalists and parliamentarians in 1643. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £727, in the patron. of James F. France, Esq. There is a district church at Wharton, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of the rector; and at Dane Bridge, also, a perpet. cur.,* val. £160, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Wilifred. There are two schools partly supported by endowments. The charities amount to £87 per annum. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. Bostock Hall is the seat of J. F. France, Esq. A fair is held on the 8th May.

DAVENHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 2 miles from Northwich, and 4 from Middlewich. It is situated on the river Daven or Dane.

DAVENPORT, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, in the co. of Chester, 4½ miles N.W. of Congleton, the ancient seat of the Davenports. It is situated on the river Daven or Dane.

DAVENTRY, or DAINTREE, a par. and market town, with separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the hund. of Fawsley, in the co. of Northampton, 13 miles from Northampton, and 4 from Weedon. It is supposed to derive its name from the words Dwy-avon-tre, or "town of the two rivers," from its situation between the source of the river Leam and the river Nen. From the common pronunciation of the word Daintree, there is a tradition that the town was built originally by the Danes. Certain it is, that at Danes' or Borough Hill, about half a mile from the town, there are traces of perhaps the largest encampment in England. Near the north-eastern extremity of this encampment, the Roman military way called Watling Street passes, but the camp itself is of more recent date. The town was of considerable importance at the Conquest, and was given by the Conqueror to his niece, Judith, wife of Waltheof, the great Earl of Northumberland. It belonged to Robert Fitzwalter in the reign of King John, and ultimately came to the Finches. Before the battle of Naseby, in 1645, it was occupied by the king on his march to relieve Oxford. Hugh de Leycestre, in 1090, founded a priory, which was granted by Henry VIII. to Cardinal Wolsey.—The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of shoes, whips, and stockings. They are obliged, by a singular custom, to "bake their bread at a public oven, and grind their malt at a public mill," unless exempted by fees. The borough is exempt from contribution to the county, and from serving on its juries. King John granted the first charter to Daventry, and it is now governed under the new Act by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councilmen. The common seal bears the date 1593, with the impress of a Dane and a tree. It is a polling place for the southern division of the county, and a sessions town. The population in 1851 was 4,430, which in 1861 had decreased to 4,124.—The town, which is situated in a gentle hollow surrounded by hills, has a clean appearance, and is well paved, lighted with gas, and supplied with water from springs only equalled in purity by those of Malvern. The borough sessions are held at the townhall. The gaol is built on the site of the priory. There are two banks, a county court, and waterworks. The Grand Junction canal passes through a tunnel, upwards of 2,000 yards long, to the N. of the town. The poor-law commissioners have recently erected a workhouse, to accommodate 300 inmates. The union of Daventry comprises 28 parishes, and extends over an area of 95 miles.—The living is a perpet. cur.° in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £344, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross, and has a tower and spire, in which is a clock with musical chimes, and a fine peal of bells. There is a recently built chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. James, in connection with the parish church. The charities amount to £446 per annum. The Wesleyans and Independents have chapels. There is a free Latin grammar school, founded in 1660, and a National school. R. T. Clark, Esq., is lord of the manor. The manor-house at Ashby St. Ledger's was for centuries the residence of the Catesby family. Naseby is an object of historic interest in the neighbourhood.—Before railways were in existence, as many as eighty mail and stage coaches passed daily through Daventry, once the great thoroughfare to the north-western parts of England. John Smith, said by Walpole to be the best engraver in mezzotinto, was born here. It gives the title of baron to the Finches, earls of Winchelsea. At the foot of the hills, in the vicinity, are some ancient ruins known as the Burnt Walls, and at a short distance other ruins called John of Gaunt's Castle.—A market for provisions is held weekly on Wednesday, and thirteen fairs during the year, the principal of which are those in Easter week and the beginning of October, which last two days.

DAVID'S, ST., or LLANVAES, a par. in the hund. of Devynnock, union of Brecon, in the co. of Brecon, South Wales. It is situated 1 mile from Brecon, where the river Tarrell joins the river Usk. The parish is in two divisions: the upper being in the hunds. of Devynnock and Penkelly, the lower in the hund. of Merthyr. The part called Llanvaes is a suburb of Brecon, separated only from it by the river Usk. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Brecon.

DAVID'S, ST., a par. and city in the hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke, 20 miles from Pembroke, and 16 from Haverfordwest. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Bychan, Gwyhed-y-Vlad, Mawr and Y-dre, consisting chiefly of a number of cottages in the midst of ruins. It was the Welsh Mynyw, and Roman Menevia, or Menapia, at the terminus of the two great roads Via Julia and Via Flandrica, or Ffordd Fleming. It is almost as much isolated now as in the Roman days, one omnibus twice a week to Haverfordwest "being the only connecting-link between the ancient city of St. David's and modern civilisation." Remains of the Roman town are supposed to have been discovered about 2 miles N.W. of the present city, under the sands of Whitesand Bay.—The earliest mention in history is towards the close of the 5th century, when St. David, who succeeded Dubritius in the Archbishopric of South Wales, transferred the see from the ancient city of Caerleon to the wilds of Menevia, and attracted thither many distinguished pupils by his learning and piety, which became widely renowned after the famous synod at Llanddewi-Brefi, in which by his preaching he checked the spread of the Pelagian heresy then on the increase. Between the years 808 and 1087 the town and cathedral are said to have been burnt and pillaged no less than five times by the Danes, Saxons, and Normans. William the Conqueror, Henry I., and Edward I. visited the shrine of St. David, which forms part of the present cathedral, being situated between the third arch from the E., on the N. side of the presbytery. It is certainly of great antiquity, and part of the stone is worn away by the fingers or lips of the numerous pilgrims. Henry VIII. determined upon removing the see to Carmarthen, but altered his intention when he heard that his grandfather, Edmund Earl of Richmond, was buried there.—The modern city of St. David's is a mere village, consisting of one principal street, and two cross ones, at the junction of which stands an ancient cross, but its principal attractions are its grand old cathedral, and the ruins of its once famous college. The ground on which the cathedral is built, with the houses of the resident ecclesiastics, the cemetery, and gardens, were formerly surrounded by a wall, about a mile in diameter, and situated in a deep dell, so that only the upper part of the tower of the cathedral is visible from the village. The usual entrance into this close is that leading from the S.E., through a gateway, above which is an octagonal tower, 60 feet high, where the records were formerly kept, and the consistory court held; but the more imposing view is obtained from the N.E., which takes in the ruins of St. Mary's Chapel and the chapterhouse. The cathedral itself is a venerable Gothic structure, originally built in 1176 by Bishop Peter de Leia, but subsequently much altered; a large portion of the choir and transepts having been crushed by the fall of the original tower, and at another time a part of the structure having been destroyed by an earthquake. The external portion of the building most admired is the W. front, restored at the end of the last century, with modern antique flying buttresses and massive pinnacles; also the nave and aisles, of which the roof has been lowered. The Lady Chapel and chantries on either side of the choir are quite in ruins. The general design of the building is cruciform, being 290 feet from E. to W., and the transepts 120 feet, with the addition of three chapels of inferior height. In the interior some careful restorations have recently been effected by Mr. Butterfield. The most interesting objects in the cathedral are Bishop Morgan's throne, a piece of exquisite workmanship; a fine decorated stone screen and rood-loft, the work of Bishop Gower; also Bishop Vaughan's beautiful Tudor chapel and monument; besides carved stalls, painted tiles, and many antique monuments, including one to the father of Henry VII., and the before-mentioned shrine of St. David. The decoration of the nave is in the transition style, between Romanesque and Gothic. At a short distance from the cathedral is St. Mary's College, founded in 1365 by John of Gaunt, and refounded in 1377 by Bishop Houghton. The greater part of the building is a complete ruin, but the elegant tower and chapel are still standing. The palace, built by Bishop Gower, is now a heap of ruins.—The diocese of St. David's, anterior to the year 1844, extended into the counties of Carmarthen, Pembroke, Brecon, Radnor, Glamorgan, Cardigan, Montgomery, Monmouth, and Hereford; but by an Order in Council, of the 31st January, 1844, that part of the deanery of Brecon in Monmouthshire was annexed to Llandaff; and by another order of 1st September, 1846, those parts of the parishes of Llangattock and Llangemdier in the diocese of St. David's were transferred to Llandaff. Attached to the cathedral of St. David's are the bishop, who is quasi decanus, the precentor, treasurer, chancellor, and the archdeacons of St. David's, Brecon, Carmarthen, and Cardigan, besides 8 prebendaries, and 6 canons cursal, being in all 22. The bishop's income is £4,500, with patronage of 99 livings.—St David's, besides being a cathedral city, is a parish, with its own minister and schools. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £110, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a foundation school, known as Bishop Morgan's grammar school. The charities amount to £340 per annum, including that of Dr. Jones for apprenticing boys.—In the vicinity are numerous cromlechs and Druidical remains; and at Newgale Sands the remains of a submerged forest are met with. Giraldus Cambrensis, who lies buried in the cathedral, relates that in his days "trunks of trees appeared standing in the midst of the sea, with very black earth, and several old blocks like ebony; so that it did not appear like the sea-shore, but rather resembled a grove." Carausius, a Roman general, Asser, the friend of King Alfred, and Fenton, the author, were born in St. David's. It includes some of the most eminent ecclesiastics among its bishops, and it reckons 126 bishops in succession, which is longer than in any other diocese.—Fairs are held on the 12th March and 5th August.

DAVID'S, ST., a vil. in the par. of Dalgety, in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It stands on the Firth of Forth, half-way between Inverkeithing and Aberdour. About 70,000 tons of coals, the produce of the Fordel colliery, are exported from this place, at which vessels under 500 tons burthen can lade in safety.

DAVID'S, ST., a vil. in the par. of Madderty, in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It is quite of recent date, and stands on the estate of Craig of Madderty, having superseded the ancient village of that name.

DAVID'S, ST., HEAD, the most westerly point of Wales, 3 miles from St. David's. It is the old Octapitarum, or Octo-petrarum, and is supposed to have been so called from a group of eight surrounding rocks.

DAVIDSON'S-MAINS, or MUTTONHOLE, a vil. in the par. of Cramond, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It stands on the road from Edinburgh to Cramond, 2½ miles S.W. of Granton.

DAVIDSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, in the co. of Cornwall, 3¼ miles N.E. of Camelford, and 14 W. of Stratton. This parish, which is fertile and pleasantly undulating, is watered by the Inny, which takes its rise near the church. Petty sessions for the division are held once a month at the village of Hollworthy, in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £192, in the patron. of the Prince of Wales. The church, dedicated to St. David, is an ancient stone structure. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £166, and the vicarial for one of £240; besides which there are 18 acres of glebe. The charities amount to £1 per annum. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is lord of the manor. There are several barrows in this parish. Treseat, Treslay, Trevivian Handall, Tredwen, Treglasta, Tremail, Trebleary, Trehane, Trelay, Treworra, Butterwell, Colcade, Hendraburnick, Penhole, Abbotshendra, Halwell, Halworthy, Churchtown, and Trewinnow, are places here.

DAVIDSTOWN, a par. in the bars. of Narragh and Reban East, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Kilcullenbridge, its post town. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Athy. The highest ground is 574 feet above sea-level, on Bull Hill. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Kilcullen, £375, in the patron. of the Chancellor of Christ Church. Public worship is, at certain seasons, held within the Calverstown schoolroom; two schools at this latter place are supported by Erasmus Smith's charity.

DAVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, half a mile N.W. of Faversham, and 6½ miles W. of Whitstable. It is close to Davington Hill, where there are still remains of the Benedictine nunnery, founded in 1153 by Fulk de Newnham. It is supposed to have been a Roman station, and Roman coins, urns, &c., have been found. There is a large powder-mill. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £100, in the patron. of T. Willement, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is partly in the Norman style of architecture, with a fine doorway, and once formed part of the Benedictine nunnery.

DAVINGTON HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Preston, hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 1 mile from Davington, as above.

DAVIOT, a par. in the district of Garioch, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is bounded by Fyvie, Old Meldrum, Bourtie, Chapel of Garioch, and Rayne. It is 3½ miles in length, by 2 in breadth, excluding its quoad sacra limits in the pars. of Chapel of Garioch and Fyvie, added to it in the last century, with the addition of which it extends 5 miles in length and 4 in breadth. The surface is undulating, generally fertile, and slopes to the S. and S.E. Out of about 4,100 acres, the area of the parish, only 150 are moorland or waste. There are five landowners. There is a manufactory for carding and spinning wool. There are two Druidical temples, one of them being in the churchyard. The village of Daviot stands 19 miles N.W. of Aberdeen. The turnpike-road, connecting the two branches of the great road from Aberdeen to Inverness, traverses the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch, and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown. It was formerly a parsonage in the dioc. of Aberdeen, having been given in alms to the bishop by Malcolm Canmore. The minister has a stipend of £159.

DAVIOT AND DUNLICHITY, an united par. in the district of East Inverness, in the cos. of Inverness and Nairn, Scotland. It extends nearly due N. and S., on both sides of the river Nairn, with a length of about 23 miles, and a breadth of from 2 to 4 miles. It is bounded on the N. by Croy, on the E. by Moy, on the S. by Kingussie, and on the W. by Dores. The surface is extremely wild, being bounded on the S. by part of the Monadhleagh mountains, on the W. by a chain attaining an altitude of about 1,500 feet, and on the N. by the ridge of Drummossie Moor, where it has an altitude of some 800 feet. The lakes of Ruthven and Dundelchach form part of the western boundary, and those of Coire and Clachan are situated in the interior. About 4,000 acres are under tillage, 1,500 are waste land or pasture, and 3,100 are underwood. In the valleys there are extensive peat mosses. Limestone, containing lead-ore, has been found near the Mains of Daviot, on the Nairn, and an extensive bed of marl in the Moss of Tordarroch. The road from Perth to Inverness crosses the S. end of the parish, from which there is a branch road extending 13 miles westward to Inverfarigag pier on Loch Ness. This par. is in the presb. of Inverness, and synod of Moray, and in the patron. of the crown and the Earl of Cawdor. The minister has a stipend of £187. The two parishes were united in 1618, but, notwithstanding, still retain their respective churches, glebes, and parish schools. The church of Daviot stands 4 miles from the N. end of the parish, and that of Dunlichity 7 miles S.

of it, and 12 miles from the S. end of the parish. Service is performed alternately in the two churches every Sunday. There is also a Free church, with a large attendance.

DAVY GATE, an ext. par. place in the city of York.

DAW, or DHAW, a river, rising above Cowbridge, in the co. of Glamorgan, and after a course of 10 miles, falling into the Bristol Channel at Aberthaw.

DAWDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalton-le-Dale, N. div. of the ward of Easington, in the co. of Durham, 6½ miles S.E. of Sunderland. The population of this place has vastly increased, chiefly owing to the construction of the new harbour.

DAWES GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles S.W. of Reigate. It is situated near the river Mole.

DAWES HEATH, a hmlt. in the par. of Thundersley, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles from Raleigh, and 2 from the South Benfleet station on the Southend railway.

DAW GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Dewsbury, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles N.W. of Wakefield.

DAWICKBANK, a hmlt. in the par. of Stobo, in the co. of Peebles, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Broughton.

DAWICK, EAST AND WEST, hmlts. in the par. of Drummelzier, in the co. of Peebles, Scotland. They are situated on the river Tweed, near Dawickbank, and up to 1742 formed a separate parish. There are two beacon towers.

DAWLEY, a hmlt. in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles S.E. of Uxbridge. It is called Dallega in Domesday, and was the seat of the Bennets and of Lord Bolingbroke.

DAWLEY MAGNA, a par. in the Wellington div. of the hund. of South Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 3½ miles S.E. of Wellington, its post town, and 4 W. of Shifnal. It is situated on the Severn canal, under the Wrekin, and contains the tnshps. of Dalby Parva and Malinslee. There are coal-pits, and lime, iron, and tile works. In connection with these several works are numerous branch railways. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of R. Phillips, Esq., and others. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a fine stone edifice. There is a district church at Little Dawley, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately; and at Malinslee also a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the patron. of the Perpetual Curate of Great Dawley. The charities amount to £10 per annum. There are Baptist, Wesleyan, Primitive, and New Connexion Methodist chapels; also two National schools. R. A. Slaney, Esq., is lord of the manor. A market is held every Saturday.

DAWLISH, a par. in the hund. of Exminster, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles S.E. of Chudleigh, and 3 N. of Teignmouth. It is a station on the South Devon railway. The par. contains the hmlts. of Middlewood, Cockwood, and Westwood. It is the Doelis of Domesday. It is much resorted to as a watering-place, besides being a fishing and coastguard station. The village, which contains several handsome terraces, is situated in a delightful valley, opening to the coast of the English Channel on the E., and bounded by a line of hills on the W. It belonged at the time of the Norman Survey to the bishop of the diocese, but now belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The new road from Exeter to Torbay passes through the village, affording facility of communication with Teignmouth. Over the stream called Dawlish Water are a bridge for carriages and two foot bridges, the banks being laid out in shrubberies and walks. The scenery in the vicinity is very beautiful. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £440, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The rent-charge in lieu of the great tithes, now transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, is £360. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a handsome structure with a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles. It was enlarged and beautified in 1824 at the cost of £4,000. The endowed charities amount to £7 11s. per annum. There is a chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Mark; and another chapel at Cofton. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Plymouth Brethren have chapels. There is a National school and two other schools. Peter Richard Hoare, Esq., is lord of the manor. A pleasure fair is held on Easter Monday, and a regatta in August.

DAWSON GROVE, a demesne in the bar. of Dartry, in the co. of Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is the property of Viscount Cremorne, and is situated on the Coothill lakes, contiguous to the demesnes of Bellamont Forest, Dromore Park, and Freamount. Within the grounds of this demesne is a mausoleum to Lady Jane Dawson.

DAW STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Maplestead, in the co. of Essex, 1 mile N.E. of Halstead, and not far from the road to Haverhill and Sudbury.

DAY, or ST. DYE, a chplry. in the par. of Gwennap, hund. of Kerrier, in the co. of Cornwall, 2 miles E. of Redruth, and 7 W. of Truro. It is joined to Gwennap, and is a large mining village, neatly built. It is supplied with water brought from the distance of three-quarters of a mile by iron pipes. The living is a cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Gwennap. The chapel is a neat edifice, with tower and spire. It was erected in 1828 by a grant from the Parliamentary Commissioners. There was formerly a chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, which has been demolished. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Bryanites have chapels. A fair is held on Tuesday after the 29th July, and a large market for provisions on Saturday.

DAYBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Basford, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles N. of Nottingham.

DAY HILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Milwich, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Stone.

DAY HILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Sandon, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Stafford. It is situated near the Grand Trunk canal and the river Trent.

DAYLESFORD, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 2¼ miles E. of Stow-on-the-Wold. Tanner says, that Ethelbald, King of Mercia, gave this place, A.D. 718, to one Begia, that a monastery might be built. Duke Ælfgar gave it to the monks of Evesham in the time of Edward the Confessor. It was exempted from the interdict in the reign of John. The parish is of small extent, but extremely fertile. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £152, in the patron. of Mrs. Hastings. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is one of the oldest buildings in England; but the stones were readjusted in 1816 by Mr. Hastings, who took down the whole of the structure but two arches, and rebuilt it of the old materials. Warren Hastings was born at Daylesford House, one room in which is full of carved ivory furniture. It has been the property of the Hastings family for centuries. The cultivation of cinquefoil was introduced here in 1650, prior to its cultivation in any other part of the kingdom.

DAYWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Whittington, in the co. of Shropshire, 3 miles N.E. of Oswestry.

DAZARD, a hmlt. in the hund. of Stratton, in the co. of Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. of Stratton. It is situated near Dazard Point, to the S. of Widemouth Bay.

DEACON BROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Cawthorne, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles N.W. of Barnsley.

DEADMAN'S GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Checkley, in the co. of Stafford, 3½ miles S.E. of Cheadle.

DEADWIN-CLOUGH, a vil. in the chplry. of Newchurch-in-Rossendale, in the co. of Lancaster, 2½ miles N.E. of Haslingden.

DEAL, a par., market town, seaport, and municipal borough, in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St Augustine, in the E. div. of the co. of Kent. It is distant from London 102 miles by the South-Eastern railway, or 74 by road, and 18 miles E.S.E. of Canterbury. It is situated in 51° 14′ N. lat., and 1° 23′ E. long. Near this spot Julius Cæsar is believed to have landed on his first invasion of Britain, in 55 B.C., but no mention is made of any town existing here till several centuries after the Romans had quitted Britain, unless the Dola of Nennius be, as Camden supposes, the same as Deal, which is spelled Dela by Leland. In 1229 it was annexed to the Cinque Ports as a member of Sandwich, and so continued until 1699, when it was made independent. The town has grown to its present size within the last two centuries. In Henry VIII.'s time Leland speaks of it as merely "a little fisher village;" and owing to its insignificance very few events of historical importance have taken place there. Perkin Warbeck effected a landing in 1495, and was defeated at Deal by the Sandwich trained-bands. Anne of Cleves landed here 27th December, 1539, and spent the afternoon in the castle, which was then newly built, before continuing her journey to Dover. In 1648 Prince Charles attacked the town of Deal, his fleet being stationed in the Downs; but the attempt was frustrated by Colonel Rich, with a body of parliamentary troops. In 1692 the shock of an earthquake was felt in the neighbourhood. Colonel Hutchinson was confined in Sandown Castle after the Restoration, and died there in September, 1664.—There is a considerable trade in provisions and other necessaries with the ships stationed in the Downs. Of the pilots licensed by the Cinque Ports nearly sixty belong to Deal.—The town is divided into Upper and Lower, the latter being inhabited principally by the maritime and trading population, and consisting of three streets parallel with the shore. Other streets run up towards Shoulden and Great and Little Mougeham, forming Middle or Upper Deal. The houses here are mostly detached or semi-detached, and belong to the better classes. On the S. side of the town is the detached suburb of Walmer, with its extensive barracks for infantry and cavalry, and many handsome villas inhabited by resident gentry. The town of Deal is well paved and lighted, under the superintendence of the Pavement Commissioners, and is copiously supplied with water. At each end stands a castle, both of them built by Henry VIII. in 1539 as a defence against the French. Deal Castle, at the S. end of the town, consists of a round tower, surrounded by four bastions, and a battery facing the sea. Sandown, the other castle, stands to the N.E. of the town; it is, however, now sold, and is being entirely pulled down. Walmer Castle, the residence of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, is about a mile S. from Deal, standing close to the shore. It is an ancient fortified structure. The Duke of Wellington died here in 1852. The townhall stands in Lower-street, and contains portraits of William III., William IV., and of Mrs. Carter, a native of the town. The custom house is in the same street. The other public buildings are the barracks, a public library and reading-room, the pilot house, National Provincial Bank of England, savings-bank, and baths. There is also a handsome esplanade facing the sea. The sea-bathing is very good, and attracts a large number of visitors in the summer months. There is no harbour, but the tract of sea called the Downs, between the shore and the Goodwin Sands, affords a safe anchorage to vessels of all sizes. Off the town there is a sandbank known as Deal Bank, with only 12 feet of water in some parts, and wrecks upon these sands are not unfrequent.—Deal was created a borough by charter of William III., and returns two members to the House of Commons, in conjunction with Sandwich. The municipal government is in the hands of a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors. There are courts of record, of general sessions of the peace, and for recovery of small debts under £50. The municipal borough contained in 1851, 1,465 inhabited houses, with a population of 7,067. In 1861 the numbers were, of houses, 1,589; of persons, 7,531.—The parish is in the archdeaconry and diocese of Canterbury, and contains three churches. St. Leonard's, the parish church, is a spacious building, with a tower at the W. end. It contains a brass to the memory of Thomas Boys, dated 1562. The living is a rect.,* val. £429, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. St. George's is a perpet. cur., in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was commenced in 1707. St. Andrew's is a handsome structure, and was completed in the year 1850. The living is a perpet. cur., in the same patron. There is an Independent chapel in Lower-street, a Wesleyan chapel in Duke-street; also places of worship for the Unitarians, Baptists, Roman Catholics, Primitive Methodists, and Calvinists. The National schools educate about 200 boys and girls. There are besides parochial schools, and one in connection with the Wesleyan Methodists. There is a Boatmen's Benevolent Society. The pilots subscribe to a fund from which their widows receive a small annuity. Mrs. Elizabeth Carter, the translator of "Epictetus," and the antiquarian, Boys, were born in this town. The family of Boys has resided here for some centuries.—A newspaper, called the Deal and Walmer Telegram, is published in the town on Saturdays. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday, and fairs are held twice in the year, on the 6th and 7th April, and the 12th and 13th October.

DEAN, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 4½ miles S.W. of Cockermouth, and 5½ S.E. of Workington. It is situated on the Marrow, a branch of the river Derwent, here abounding in trout, and contains the tnshps. of Dean, Branthwaite, and Ullock. The population are chiefly engaged in the working of coal, limestone, and iron-ore, and in the quarries, which produce a good variety of red and white freestone, and a black stone called cat-scalp. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £318, in the patron. of the Rev. S. Sherwen. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an old structure, The tithes were commuted for land, under an Enclosure Act, in 1809, and the glebe lands comprise 650 acres, of which the greater portion is very unproductive. A free grammar-school was founded in 1596 by John Fox, which has an endowment of £10 per annum, paid by the Goldsmiths' Company. The charities amount to £14 per annum. There is a parochial school. General Wyndham is lord of the manor.

DEAN, a hund. in the rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, contains the par. of Patcham, comprising 4,170 acres.

DEAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishops Waltham, in the co. of Hants, 1 mile N.E. of Bishops Waltham.

DEAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Spelsbury, hund. of Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford, 3 miles S.E. of Chipping Norton.

DEANE, a par. in the hund. of Salford, in the co. of Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Great Bolton. It is situated in the midst of an extensive manufacturing district, and contains Haliwell, Little Hulton, Smithills Chapel, Westhoughton, Horwich, Farmworth, and five other tnshps., several of which have their own churches and schools. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the large cotton establishments and in the bleach-grounds. The collieries are also extensively worked. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £213, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has recently been enlarged. The charities amount to £510 per annum. There are National and endowed schools. George Marsh, the Protestant martyr, was a native of this place.

DEANE, a par. in the hund. of Overton, in the Kingsclere div. of the co. of Hants, 5½ miles S.W. of Basingstoke. It is a station on the South-Western railway. This parish formerly included that of Ashe, which was separated and formed into a distinct parish about the middle of the 17th century. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The soil is a strong clayey loam, on a substratum of chalk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £336, in the patron. of W. Beach, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints. It was rebuilt in 1830, at a cost of £7,000, and contains several monuments, also a painting of Christ on the Cross, over the altar. The windows are of stained glass. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £308, with 56 acres of glebe.

DEAN, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Thorngate, Romsey div. of the co. of Hants, 6½ miles N.W. of Romsey, and 9 from Salisbury. The Salisbury and Southampton canal passes near the village. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, annexed to the rect.* of Mottisfont, and in the patron. of the Rev. Paulet St. John. The charities amount to £2 per annum. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £205; the glebe contains four acres.

DEAN, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 7¼ miles N.E. of Chichester, and 8 S.E. of Midhurst. The village is beautifully situated in a narrow picturesque vale. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £86, in the patron. of the Rev. T. W. Cogan. The church is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower rising from the centre.

DEAN, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Willingdon, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 10 miles S.E. of Lewis, and 4½ E. of Seaford. It is situated near Beachey Head, about 3 miles W. from Eastbourne. There is a lighthouse, occupying the summit of a lofty cliff, beneath which is an extensive cavern, known as Darby's Cave. The village, which is small, is situated in a secluded valley on the South Downs, and contains an agricultural college. The living is a vic. in the archdeac. of Lewes, and dioc. of Chichester, val. with Friston annexed, £276, in the patron. of the Bishop and the Dean and Chapter of Chichester alternately. Scattered over the neighbouring Downs are numerous barrows and military intrenchments.

DEANE BOTTOM, a hmlt. in the par. of Horton-Kirby, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 2½ miles S. of Dartford, and 2½ S.E. of Speedgate.

DEANEBURNHAUGH, a vil. of modern date in the par. of Roberton, partly in the co. of Roxburgh, and partly in that of Selkirk, Scotland.

DEAN FOREST, an ext. par. place in the hund. of St. Briavel's, in the co. of Gloucester. It is situated between the rivers Severn and Wye, extending 20 miles in length from N. to S., and 10 miles in breadth from E. to W. It was anciently still more extensive, comprising the towns of Tudenham and Wollaston, and the village of Alvington, situated on the margin of the Severn. It is a rich mining district, containing Coleford and other places, inhabited chiefly by miners, and is divided into the walks of Denby, Herbert, Little Dean, Speech House, Worcester, and York. It belongs to the crown, and comprises 23,015 acres, 11,000 of which are enclosed for timber. The mines produce an abundance of iron and coal. It is governed by a lord warden, who is constable of St. Briavel's Castle, 6 deputies, 4 verderers, a conservator, and chief forester, all which offices are vested by inheritance in the Wyndham family; there are besides 8 foresters, and a gaveller to collect the dues; also a steward of the swainmote, whose duty it is to preside at the swainmote and miners' courts. There are four chplries. within the precincts of the forest, all in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, and each of the val. of £150, three of which are in the patron. of the crown, and the other in that of the bishop. The churches are Christ Church, Holy Trinity, St. John's, and St. Paul's. The Cinderford Iron, the Parkend and Bilson, and the Coleford Coal and Iron are the principal works; there are also the Futtrill and the "Strip-and-at-it" collieries, and the Lydbrook and Ruardbrook tin and rolling mills. To prevent encroachments upon each other in the coal and iron works, frequent courts are held at the Speech House, which is situated in the centre of the forest; at these courts the particular laws and customs of the forest are enforced by the steward, assisted by a jury of miners. Until recently the inhabitants were exempt from all rates and taxes, and have still free liberty of pasturage and fuel, with the privilege of sinking mines, the sixth part of the produce being reserved to the crown. Pursuant to an Act passed in the 66th year of George III. new roads have been opened in various directions through the forest, which is also intersected by several tramways, communicating with the Severn and the Wye.

DEANHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, N.E. div. of the ward of Tindale, in the co. of Northumberland, 9 miles S.W. of Morpeth.

DEAN HEAD, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles W. of Huddersfield.

DEAN HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Sandbach, hund. of Nantwich, in the co. of Chester, 1 mile S.E. of Sandbach.

DEAN HOUSE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Honley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles S. of Huddersfield.

DEANLANE, a district in the par. of Handley, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles N.W. of Cranborne, adjoining Newton.

DEAN LANGLANDS, a vil. in the par. of Wilton, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland.

DEAN, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of St. Briavel's, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Newnham. The village is situated on the verge of Dean Forest, and was formerly a market town. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the iron and coal mines, and in making nails. The living is a perpet cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £90, in the patron. of the Corporation of Gloucester. The church has some handsome stained windows. The charities amount to £39. There is a house of correction, and a market cross, the latter surmounted by a pinnacle, with niches and statues. Fairs are held on Whit-Monday and the 26th November.

DEAN, LITTLE WALK, an ext. par. place in Dean Forest, hund. of St. Briavel's, in the co. of Gloucester.

DEAN, MITCHELL. See MITCHELL DEAN, co. Gloucester.

DEAN, NETHER, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, in the co. of Bedford, 9 miles N. of St. Neot's, and 12 N. of Bedford. It includes the hmlt. of Upper Dean. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £125, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is in the Norman style, consisting of chancel, nave, square tower, and spire, and has a beautiful carved oak roof, and a brass to Canon Parker. The charities amount to £60 per annum. There is a free school, founded by Joseph Neale in 1702. At Nether Dean there is a Wesleyan chapel. By the Act 40 George III., the tithes of this and of the adjoining parish of Over Dean were commuted for land and a money payment. Lord St. John is lord of the manor.

DEAN-PRIOR, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, in the co. of Devon, 3½ miles S.W. of Ashburton, and 4½ N.W. of Totnes. The village is small. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £282, in the patron of Lord Churston. The church is dedicated to St George the Martyr. The charities amount to £16 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Forest harriers meet at Dean Moors.

DEAN PRIORS. See PRIORS DEAN, Hampshire.

DEAN ROW, a quarter in the chplry. of Hayden, par. of Warden, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Allendale, and 8 W. of Hexham. Here are remains of Stayard-le-Peel Tower, which Edward Duke of York, in 1386, granted to the Friars Eremites of Hexham.

DEAN ROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Wilmslow, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. of Chester, 6 miles N.N.W. of Macclesfield. The Unitarians have a place of worship here.

DEAN SAND, on the N.E. side of Spithead, in the co. of Hants. It extends 4 miles from Southsea Castle, and is well buoyed.

DEANS-BIGGIN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, in the co. of Westmoreland, near Kirkby-Lonsdale.

DEAN SCALES, a vil. in the tnshp. of Ullock, par. of Dean, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles S.W. of Cockermouth. The manufacture of linen thread is carried on here.

DEANSHOLD, a tythg. in the par. of Godalming, in the co. of Surrey, near Godalming. It is situated in the valley of the Wey, which is here navigable.

DEAN SMALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wendover, hund. of Aylesbury, in the co. of Buckingham, 1 mile S. of Wendover. It is situated under the Chiltern hills, on the Wendover canal.

DEAN STONE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Buckingham, 2 miles E.N.E. of Beaconsfield.

DEANSTON, a vil. in the par. of Kilmadock, in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Teith, 1 mile W. of Doune, with which it is connected by a bridge. It is chiefly known for the extensive cotton-works established here in 1785; and also as being coupled with the name of James Smith, the inventor, agriculturist, and philanthropist, who spent the best portion of his life here.

DEAN, THE, a suburb of Edinburgh, Scotland, formerly a hmlt. on the Water of Leith. It is remarkable for the magnificent bridge of four arches, and 447 feet in length, by which the road to Queensferry is here carried across the ravine through which the Water of Leith flows.

DEANTHORPE, a vil. in the par. of South Collingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 3½ miles N.E. of Newark.

DEAN UPPER, a hmlt. in the par. of Nether Dean, hund. of Stodden, in the co. of Bedford, 4 miles W. of Kimbolton.

DEAN, WEST, or more generally called WEST DEAN, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 5 miles N.N.E. of Chichester, and 7 S.E. of Midhurst. It is pleasantly situated at the base of the Downs, on the river Lavant, and contains the tythg. of Chilgrove. Binderton is sometimes considered a tythg. of West Dean, but it is a distinct chplry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £166, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a cruciform structure, and contains several mural monuments to the Selsey and Lewknor families. There is a free school for both sexes. The manor-house was originally built in the reign of James I., but was rebuilt by Lord Selsey about 1804. On the neighbouring Downs several Roman sepulchral urns have been found.

DEAN, WEST, a par. partly in the hund. of Alderbury, in the co. of Wilts, and partly in the hund. of Lower Thorngate, in the co. of Hants, 7 miles S.W. of Stockbridge. It contains East Grimstead. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. with East Grimstead, in Wilts, £446, in the patron. of the Rev. H. Glossop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has tombs of the Evelyns, of Dean House, which is now in ruins, and a curious monument, with copper doors, dated 1669, to the Right Hon. R. Pierpoint, whose effigy in marble represents him undergoing the surgical operation under which he died. There is a chapel-of-ease at East Grimstead, in this parish. The foundations of a Roman villa were discovered here in 1740.

DEAN, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Willingdon, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 7½ miles S.W. of Lewes, and 2½ E. by N. of Seaford. It is situated between the English Channel and the river Cuckmere, over which is a bridge communicating with the Seaford road, and in the same part of the parish is a causeway formed across the marsh. This par. includes the chplry. of Excette, which anciently formed a distinct parish. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated in a picturesque vale at the foot of the Downs. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £102, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an embattled tower, surmounted by a low spire.

DEARGARTH, a cascade formed by the river Greta, in the co. of Cumberland, near Keswick. It is situated on the S.E. side of Thirlemere.

DEARHAM, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles N.W. of Cockermouth, and 14 W. of Wigton. It has a station on the Maryport and Carlisle railway, and contains Ellenborough and Ewanrigg. There are extensive collieries, the coal from which is shipped at Maryport; also a manufactory for earthenware. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £85, in the patron. of J. Christian, Esq. The church was much altered by repairs in 1814. It contains a carved Saxon font, and in the churchyard is a sculptured cross. The charities amount to £32 per annum. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. There are parochial and three Sunday schools. A Roman camp is traceable in the vicinity. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

DEARNBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Arncliffe, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles N.E. of Settle.

DEARNE RIVER, rises near Denby, in the West Riding of the co. of York, and runs 25 miles E. to the river Don, near Conisborough.

DEARNESS. See DEERNESS, Orkney Islands.

DEBACH, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, in the co. of Suffolk, 3½ miles N. of Woodbridge, and 8 from Ipswich. The village, which is very small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the rect.* of Boulge, £300, in the patron. of H. W. Field, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The charities amount to £40 per annum. There is a National school. The Rev. S. Pryer is lord of the manor.

DEBDALE, a hmlt. in the wap. of North Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 1 mile N.W. of Mansfield. It is situated near Sherwood Forest, on the river Maun.

